PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," SATURDAY, AUGUST 1. 1891 PRICE TWO CENTS.

"The News" for the Summer.

Parties leaving town for the Summer may have THE NEWS mailed to them without extra charge. The address will be changed as often as desired.

—The Plainfield Bicycle Club will go on a "run" to Flemington next Sunday.

—The city Common Council will hold its regular monthly meeting next Monday evening.

David Linbarger of Plainfield called on friends in town Wednesday.—Bound Brook Chronicle.

—The Borough Council will hold its regular August meeting next Friday evening at eight o'clock.

—The Crescents of this city and the Corinthians of New York are contesting a game of base ball this afternoon.

—The residents of Bound Brook are arranging for a carnival to be held soon on the Raritan river at that place.

—The Northside Gun Club of Mountain avenue will hold a "shoot" and old fashioned "down East" clam bake next Saturday.

—The Plainfield Water Supply Company will soon begin to dig up the streets of the borough for the purpose of laying water mains.

—The members of the Plainfield Gesang and Turning Society have about completed the arrangements for the proper observance of Labor Day.

—The First Presbyterian, Park Avenue Baptist and Congregational Sunday-schools will go on their annual excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove, next Friday.

—The members of Branch No. 8 Emerald Beneficial Society tendered their friends a reception in the T. A. B. Hall last evening. A large crowd was present as dancing was a feature of the occasion. Everybody apparently enjoyed themselves.

—There were 200 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreets's during the week, against 252 in the preceding week and 181, 213, 180 and 140 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 6,117 against 6,300 in 1890.

A Serious Runaway.

At about half-past ten o'clock this morning, a horse belonging to a farmer named Cory at Dunellen became frightened at the cars on Plainfield avenue and ran away. In turning into Front street the wagon to which it was attached collided with a telegraph pole and Mr. Cory was thrown out and his shoulder dislocated. The horse was caught near Grant avenue.

Line of March.

The following will be the line of march for the Emancipation Day parade:

Park avenue to Front street to Elm, to Manning avenue, to Somerset street, to Prospect place, to Grove street, to Rockview avenue, to Mercer, to Willow, to Washington, to Prospect place, to Grove street, to Front, to Park avenue, to Eighth street, to Crescent avenue, to Broadway and thence to the Rink.

—If you are after shoes this evening you make no mistake if you call on Doane & VanArsdale. Read their advertisement.

COMER MUST BE TRIED.

The Minister Who Made Love to a Farmer's Wife May Be Deposed.

Rev. George Vickery Comer, the Methodist minister at Amwell, who made love to Farmer George W. Tappan's wife at South Plainfield during last Winter, and for whom the farmer says his wife deserted him about a month ago, taking with her all the household goods and despoiling the barns of the hay and cows, was summoned before President Elder Brice at New Brunswick on Tuesday and asked to explain his part in that domestic episode.

Comer immediately posed as persecuted and greatly abused man. He denied having made love to Mrs. Tappan, but when the letter which he wrote to her in April, addressing her as his "dearest pet" and urging her to meet him at the house of Frank Breese, at Metuchen, on April 27, was produced by the elder, he said it was written to his wife. Certain disrespectful allusions in his wife which he had forgotten that he wrote, was sufficient to throw him into a series of contradictory statements.

The hearing was only a preliminary one, and ended by the Elder holding him for examination by a special committee of the Newark Conference, which will look into the case. Certain of Tappan's neighbors, the wife of Comer, from whom he secured a letter of separation on the ground that he was already married and had left a wife in England, and Tappan himself will be summoned before the committee, and the evidence is likely to prove of a very racy character. Tappan's wife has not returned to her husband's house, and Comer's wife is nursing a babe and caring for a two-year-old child, with no financial aid from him.—New York Press.

Base Ball.

I told you so—11-2, 10-2, 9-3—but hold it, we are anticipating. Now, honestly, laying all jokes aside, wasn't it great? The idea of going down to Plainfield and literally wiping up the diamond with their pets—it is almost too good to be true. The Democrat is beginning to think about the advisability of starting a popular fund to defray amounts for each and every individual member of the West End team, so that future generations can point them out with pride to their children and say, "look, boys and girls, those are the men who beat much lauded Plainfield Crescent League.

It is a positive outrage that the management of the Crescents should allow such disgraceful actions as took place on the field last Saturday. Harkins, who has never acted in any other than a gentlemanly manner, was jeered and hissed at by a gang of loafers which comprised the Plainfield crowd. These are strong terms but your reporter was on the grounds and saw the whole affair. He also noticed a number of Plainfield's society people, who, if they would have felt so inclined, could have stopped this disgraceful conduct; but no—if anything, they tried to out-do their neighbors. Not being an active member of the West End A. A., I may be allowed to say why they can always preserve order on their own grounds, but it is true nevertheless that they do, and if the "Colorado of the East" would get a few points from our boys, I think there would be no more trouble on this score. But as Mark Twain has it "Nuff ced" on this point.

It was a grand game, even if a little one-sided, although from the time Carby got his base on balls in the first inning to ten Holly struck out in the last, there was always something for the West End backers to yell about. How we did hit the ball—twelve hits, one of them being for two bases. Every man on the team played ball as if for his life, with a vim and a will. You could see no easy stooping to pick up a grounder; then a smile and then, overconfident, a throw about ten feet over the first baseman's head. No, it was run in for the ball, an invaluable part of a second baseman himself, and then the ball was lined over like a shot, straight into our midget's hands on first base. —Somerville Democrat.

New Jersey Publishers in Session.

The New Jersey State Publishers' Union held a meeting at Asbury, N. J., yesterday in the Seaside Assembly grounds. President T. W. Morrison, of THE EVENING NEWS, was in the chair. Secretary J. M. Sinnerson, of Belvidere, read the names of a number of new applicants for membership, who were duly elected. The editorial and the two acts of the Legislature passed last March gives the German press of the State great privileges in the matter of legal advertising and discriminates against English newspapers. They also say that the acts have passed aims to deprive many legitimate and long established newspapers of legal and real estate advertising. They say both acts form novel and dangerous precedents and were passed without full consideration by the members. Resolutions were offered that as these acts were not legally enacted, according to the minutes of the legislature, that the publishers take steps to have the laws set aside by the Supreme Court, and that a committee be authorized to secure legal advice on the question. They believe that the act passed in 1888 which regulates the publication of the laws should be so amended that neither political nor personal reasons can intervene to deprive any entitled to it by reason of circulation and standing, from such publication. They adjourned to meet in New York at 2 p. m., Monday, September 7.

—Rogers Bros. are going to continue the cut prices for one week longer, and you should see the bargains they can give you.

ANOTHER CURE FOR MOSQUITO BITES.

To alleviate the trouble arising from mosquito bites smear the effected parts with a moist piece of soap, allowing the lather to dry into the skin. All itching and pain will be removed thereby in ten minutes.

SIX WEEKS MORE OF SUMMER.

We are now rapidly nearing on to Fall. The longest day in the year is past, the first six months of the year are gone, and we are going down on the other side of the hill. Katy-dids were heard last Tuesday. The popular belief is that they are heard six weeks before frost.

TO ABOLISH MILEAGE BOOKS.

The Reading, Central and Pennsylvania Railroads are considering a movement to abolish mileage books. All passengers will be carried at a uniform rate of two cents a mile, instead of discriminating in favor of the mileage book man.

JUST WHAT WE HAVE ALWAYS SAID.

The only safe way is to do business with the reputable home merchants, who are here to make good any defects in their wares in case they are found. Besides, if you are interested in the welfare of yourself and the town, this is the only way to do.—Warren Republican.

CAUGHT ONCE MORE!

The Plainfield Press has no right to use a communication which appeared in The Democrat last week as coming from the editor of this journal. The communication was signed and came to this office from a West End man, who asked us to publish it. The Press puts words in our mouth not uttered by us.—Somerset Democrat.

PLEASURE AT CHIMNEY ROCK.

The Picnic grounds at Chimney Rock are occupied nearly every day by pleasure parties. Last week parties from this city, New Brunswick and Somerville were there. Wednesday of this week the Y. P. S. C. E. of Millstone had a day there. William Haelig, the proprietor, is a gentleman who uses every endeavor to please those who come. There are all kinds of amusements, including bowling alleys.

A LAKE PLAINFIELDERS ARE INTERESTED IN.

The fact is that until the rain of last Saturday, the water of Lake Hopatcong, N. J., had been steadily falling in consequence of the unusually dry season, and it reached a lower point than before in any season during the past ten years. The filling of the streams and springs which supply the lake will soon cause it to rise to its former hight. But in any event the great body of the lake is all right, and there is room for steamers and craft of all size and unlimited facilities for enjoyment.—Dover Era.

PENSION LETTERS.

The new ruling of the post office department in regard to the delivery of pension letters is of interest to a large number of residents of this vicinity. It is very explicit and directs that letters addressed to a pensioner must not be delivered to any person in whose care it may be addressed, and under no circumstances must the letters of pensioners sent from the pension office, or from any United States pension agency, be delivered to any attorney, claim agent, broker or other person. This is done to avoid if possible the perpetration of fraud, which has been frequent of late years in the pension department.

Post Offices in New Jersey.

The Post Office Guide for July announces the following changes for New Jersey: Established—Audubon, Camden; Bassett, Gloucester; Blue Anchor, Camden; Far Hills, Somerset; Glen Moore, Mercer; Hawworth, Bergen; Lincroft, Monmouth; Maple, Burlington; Normandock, Sussex; Pentauken, Camden; Pompton Lakes, Passaic; Roycefield, Somerset; Stanwick, Burlington; South Bound Brook, Somerset; Vail, Warren. Names changed—Bloomington, Somerset, to South Bound Brook; Moore, Mercer, to Glen Moore; Roysfield, Somerset, to Roycefield. Site changed—New Foundland, Passaic, to Monk's county. Discontinued—Applegarth, Middlesex; Wawayanda, Sussex.

—The Character Sketch in the forthcoming August number of the Review of Reviews deal with His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales in a very direct manner. Mr. W. T. Stead, the writer of the sketch, has unquestionably earned his reputation for being the most outspoken and fearless journalist in England. This latest article, brief advance extracts from which were given to the news associations and have appeared in the newspapers of both England and America, is a political discussion of the greatest importance. It is unnecessary to say that it is full of live interest. The article is prefaced with a remarkable collection of cartoons from the comic papers of the whole world, dealing with the Prince of Wales and the recent scandals in which he has been involved. The portrait of the Prince forms a fine frontispiece to this number of the magazine.

ELECTRIC INTELLIGENCE.

The Edison Lamp Suit.—Electric Novelties.

There seems to be a diversity of opinion as to the ultimate result of the decision of Judge Wallace, in favor of the Edison General-Electric Company in the manner of incandescent lamps, some averring that it will make no material difference with their manufacture or in price to the consumer, while others believe that the decision will create a giant monopoly. Everybody agrees that the case will be taken to a higher court for adjudication. Should the verdict of Judge Wallace be sustained, there would seem to be no question that the Edison people had it in their power to exercise absolute control of this very necessary article, if they felt so disposed, without regard to the public or to manufacturers. "Under these circumstances," says a leading electrical paper, "it might be eminently wise policy on the part of the Edison company to permit its competitors to continue business under an equitable royalty, at the same time fixing the price of lamps to the consumer at a remunerative figure, thus compelling future competition to be conducted on a basis of quality rather than of price. Such a course, while it could not fail to be exceedingly profitable to the Edison company, would not only be less detrimental to the business interests of the community than a more arbitrary plan, but would obviously be of positive and direct advantage to the consumer."

ELECTRICITY IN WAR.

The Patrick Electric Torpedo was successfully tried at the Newport torpedo station last Saturday. The machine is about forty feet long, and carries about 500 pounds of gun cotton, the feature of this torpedo over those generally used being that its movements are controlled electrically by an operator on shore. In the operating station is a primary or storage battery, as the case may be, and the electric current is conveyed to the mechanism in the torpedo by means of a cable. Two small flags, which will serve to determine the position of the machine, are the only portions visible when it is in motion. At the trial the torpedo was started in the water, after which its course was changed to the north, and again toward the shore, in all of which movements it was guided with perfect ease by the operator. The torpedo is designed exclusively for harbor defenses.

IT DOES THE WORK OF 12N MEN.

A new form of type setting machine has been invented by a Chicago man, which, among other improvements, obtains its power for making an impression with the type from an electric motor. The peculiarity of this machine is that the impression is made by the type on card-board sheets prepared for this purpose and which costs but little more than ordinary paper. Into the matrix thus formed the melted type metal is poured, making the plate. At a recent test one of these machines performed the work of eight skilled compositors.

A FRENCHMAN'S INVENTION.

A thermo-electrical battery has been invented by a Frenchman, which consists of a cylindrical stove, around the central flue of which are grouped several hundred thermo-electric elements. A small stove thus equipped, and burning but a few ounces of coal, will, it is said, generate sufficient electricity to run twenty-five 100-candle power lamps.

SURPRISING DEEP-SEA FISH.

A fishing vessel at San Diego, Cal., has been equipped with an electric plant to be employed in fishing. The scheme is to lower an incandescent lamp into the sea, and when it is lighted the brilliancy will attract all the fish to the meshes. This had been tested by experiment, and a heavy catch was secured in a very short time and with but little trouble.

State Notes.

The body of Freddy Radal, the ten-year-old son of William Radale, of 27 Clark place, Jersey City, was found in the Hackensack River Thursday near the spot where he was drowned last Sunday.

The Board of Freeholders of Burlington county have decided to send all tramps captured to the almshouse to do work. As a result these institutions of the road have become suddenly scarce in that immediate vicinity.

The continued heavy surf has eaten into the bluff in front of the Rowland House at Long Branch. A strip three feet wide toppled into the ocean Thursday morning. The new break will cause the guard fence to be placed further in the road.

A heavy storm passed over Bridgeton Thursday morning. The streets were flooded and cellars in the lower portion of the town were filled with water. The rolling mills of the Cumberland Nail and Iron Company's works were compelled to shut down on account of the water filling the pits and putting out the fires.

There is some question as to the right of Rev. William Vanflora, of 327 Kaign avenue, Camden, to perform the marriage ceremony. There is said to be no record of his ordination in the New Jersey Methodist Conference. He declares that he was ordained by Bishop Warren in New Brunswick some years ago, but has lost his ordination papers.

—The theatrical season in Plainfield will be opened as elsewhere advertised by W. S. Cleveland Consolidated Minstrels. When they played recently in Victoria, B. C., they were visited by the officers and their families, of men-of-war ships, anchored in the harbor. The officers were in uniform, and ladies in full dress, and it was one of the swell affairs of the season. They pronounced it the best Minstrel entertainment they had ever seen.

—There will be a vocal and instrumental concert at the Elkwood this evening, as advertised in another column.

An Italian Injured.

While a gang of workmen were laying pipes for the water works in Central avenue, yesterday afternoon, a heavy rock 22 hit the man known as No. 35, who was walking in front of him, with a pick-axe driving the point into his body. The wounded Italian was taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital.

The man who hurt was arrested. He insisted that the act was an accident. He said the trench was crowded and the man in front of him had, without warning, backed directly under the descending pick.

The authorities investigated the matter and ascertained that it was an accident and the fellow was discharged from custody.

Firemen to Meet.

The fourteenth annual meeting of the Firemen's State Association will be held at Atlantic City on Wednesday, September 2d, and continuing to October 1. Morning sessions have been arranged for this convention, so that no possible interference will occur with the various races, drills and exhibitions of the tournament, which takes place on September 29, 30 and October 1.

The meeting of the State Association will naturally invite a large delegation of visitors from all parts of the State, which, added to the attractions of the tournament, should insure the presence of a large number of people.

Injured by a Fall.

Mr. H. M. Harkins of Peace street, North Plainfield, met with a painful accident Thursday evening. He was ascending a flight of stairs in his residence when he missed his footing and was precipitated to the bottom. His left knee was badly sprained, and he was more or less injured about the body.

Gambling and the Law.

Under the above head Justice "Sir James Fitzjames Stephen, Bart.," discusses in The Nineteenth Century the legal aspects of the baccarat scandal. One of the most delicate points to be settled is whether gambling is morally wrong or not. On this point, many persons, both in Europe and America, will be found to learn that it is not forbidden in the Ten Commandments. Sir James says, too, man might keep both in letter and spirit every one of the Ten Commandments and yet be devoted to gambling and pass his time in the wanton indulgence of cruelty to animals"—a statement which is truly shocking.

As to whether gambling is morally wrong, Sir James writes:

The principle appears to me to be perfectly simple and, however difficult to apply, it is that gambling, like any other thing, is a question of degree. A bet for one man is unobjectionable if it is a matter of shillings, for another man it may be of no harm if it is a matter of pounds, but questions of degree of this sort, more than any other matters of things be decided by the people whom they actually affect —a man must decide for himself how much he can afford to lose, and if he loses he will not exceed his limit, but, though this may be a guide to the amount of his bet, it can hardly determine its legal quality.

The inference, therefore, must be that if a man bets no more than he can afford to lose, he is not guilty of a moral wrong. In this view of the case, too, a prince of Wales might not be committing a wrong in gambling, while if one of his subjects who was a poor clerk bet exactly the same amount the subject would be guilty of a great wrong.

It has been decided by British courts that money lost by gambling cannot be legally collected by the one to whom it is owing. A law to this effect was passed in 1845. But other bets not prejudicial to public morality or decency were still left to stand good in the way of collection. Justice Stephen would have all betting debts made noncollectible by law, left to the honor of the individual. Then people would bet at their own risk. He would also have the betting agent wiped out completely. He says:

Parliament will not have done what it practically can to prevent gambling and betting until it has condemned it in general terms, which it would be perfectly easy to do by repealing that law gambling is a practice opposed to the public interests, it is hereby declared to be illegal, and all bets, whether made by agents or between principals, and all contracts ancillary to gambling, shall be void, and if made by an agent the principal may revoke his authority to pay the bet at any time whatever.

How Not to Rest.

That picturesque writer, man and physician, Dr. William A. Hammond, declares there is no such thing as rest or restfulness in the American nature. All must be whirr, hustle, bang, fizz and business—getting richer, whether a man is in the bosom of his city home in winter or at the seaside with his family in summer. balls, theaters, dinners and reading dressing are the same at both places. There is merely a change of scene.

Brain workers rest when they change their kind of labor for physical tasks, and vice versa, but in any case the American is incapable of self amusement. He must always be with people, overistangly with people. He requires constantly to be entertained, like a baby, and is bored unspeakably at the idea of going alone or with one congenial companion to the mountains or to the seashore. Even in a restful room, if he sits down to rock to and fro and smoke a cigar, the first thing he does is to turn on all the lights. A day in which he cannot read in his newspaper all the crimes and scandal that have occurred throughout the world in twenty-four hours is to him a day lost.

With wealthy women it is still worse. They will not even read newspapers. "How many so called society women did any one ever see who could take a paper pad and pencil and go into the fields and sketch from nature? And yet there is scarcely a well bred English woman who cannot do this and do it well."

Really, are Americans as bad as this?

A four track underground railway is the plan of rapid transit recommended by the special commission appointed to consider the matter in New York. If built it will pass under the streets from the Battery to Harlem. The population of New York has increased so rapidly that there will be full swing for such a road in addition to the elevated roads already worked beyond their capacity. The underground road can really dispatch trains rapidly. It does so in London, and the New York commission have decided that they cannot do better than to try the London plan. The underground road will be much more agreeable to property owners along the route of it.

The largest of all the summer assemblies has been the Christian Endeavor convention at Minneapolis. It numbered sometimes audiences of 10,000 persons and the society is already a membership of over a million. On the way to the convension some of the members wore badges inscribed, "New York, Our Choice for 1892." Does this delicately imply that New York is regarded as a field that especially needs the labors of good Christian Endeavor people?

RUMORED RESIGNATIONS

The Air Is Fairly Filled with Reports.

THE NOBLE STORY IS DISCREDITED.

It Is Alleged that the Postmaster General, Attorney General Miller, Secretary Proctor and Superintendent of the Census Porter Will Also Resign.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The air is literally full of resignation rumors. Secretary Noble's alleged departure from the cabinet is denied, but late reports are that not only he but Secretary Proctor, Postmaster General Wanamaker, Attorney General Miller and Superintendent of the Census Porter are soon to step down. Secretary Tracy, just before he left for Bar Harbor last night, said that it seemed to him that the stories printed about Secretary Noble's resignation were but a renewal of the rumors that have been circulating about the secretary for several months. Dispatches from Cape May state that Private Secretary Halford says Secretary Noble has not resigned nor intimated to the president that such was his intention.

An official of the interior department, who bears very close personal and business relations to Secretary Noble, said today that some months ago when it was rumored that Mr. Noble would resign from the cabinet, he and another official of the department went to Mr. Noble and informed him that if he intended to resign they would like to be informed of the fact before he placed his resignation, as in the hands of the president, as both officials did not care to remain in the department if he was out of it. The latter said he had no intention of resigning and that if he should decide to take such action he would give them an intimation of his intention. "Mr. Noble has said nothing to me about resigning," said the official today, "and as he is an honorable man and has given me his word that I should know of any intended resignation on his part, I believe the story that he has resigned has no foundation."

SECRETARY NOBLE.

The Rumor About Proctor.

The rumor about Secretary Proctor is to the effect that he will probably resign and go to the senate in place of Edmunds. It is also alleged that Attorney General Miller and Secretary Noble will probably go on the new appellate court bench. Land Commissioner Carter is slated to succeed Mr. Miller.

Porter Will Not Resign.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 1.—United States Census Commissioner Robert P. Porter joined his family at his cottage here last night. When interviewed he emphatically denied that he was about to resign his position. He said he would resign when he completed his last report of the census and that he would not resign before. He also said that the officials in the census department believe that Secretary Noble has offered his resignation.

General Bussey Denies It.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—General Cyrus Bussey, assistant secretary of the interior, is here on his way to the Grand Army encampment at Detroit. He said: "I have never heard from Secretary Noble that he has resigned or intends to resign, and I do not believe there is anything in it whatever. I am free to say that he has no such intention."

Appraiser Cooper Alarmed.

The resignation of Collector Erhardt seems likely to be followed by a series of political surprises. Close upon the heels of Erhardt's resignation comes the report that Special Treasury Agent Wilbur is likely to be appointed assistant appraiser for the port of New York.

Appraiser Cooper thinks the report may be true. As Wilbur is his enemy he would regard the move as a menace to himself. Mr. Cooper declares that if President Harrison makes such a move he will share John Sherman's fate. "Sherman," Cooper says, "once interfered in politics in the state of New York by removing the collector and surveyor. By so doing he lost the presidency. History has a habit of repeating itself."

Dr. Worcester Succeeds Dr. Van Dyke

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The Union Theological seminary has elected Rev. Dr. John Hopkins Worcester, pastor of the Sixth Presbyterian church of Chicago, to succeed the late Dr. Van Dyke in the professorship of systematic theology. Dr. Worcester was graduated from the seminary in 1871. At Detroit he made a speech in behalf of Dr. Briggs.

A Liquor Case Causes Trouble.

AUGUSTA, Me., Aug. 1.—A short time ago John Thorndike, a constable, fined Thorndike in a liquor case, with the result that Thorndike was sent to jail. Thorndike made a brutal assault upon Ware last night, cutting his head, breaking his wrist and injuring him internally. Thorndike was arrested.

Two Children Killed by Lightning.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Aug. 1.—During a thunderstorm at Dry Run four children—Harper Hunt and Annie Gardner and a colored boy—took refuge in a barn. The barn was struck by lightning, killing Harvey and Annie Skinner and stunning the other children. The building caught fire and was destroyed.

Attached by Its Treasurer.

BOSTON, Aug. 1.—Of the attachments placed upon the Suffolk Manufacturing company, South Boston, $150,000 is represented by an attachment on the part of Charles Hollins, the company's treasurer, for money advanced. He says the company has $462,000 in assets against $24,000 of liabilities.

Rev. W. C. Jason Horsewhipped.

ORANGE, N. J., Aug. 1.—Rev. W. C. Jason, pastor of St. John's colored Methodist Episcopal church, was publicly horsewhipped by Miss Adaline Brown, one of his parishioners. The alleged cause of the affair is the pastor's coldness toward Miss Brown, who loves him.

Allerton Lowers the Record.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Aug. 1.—Allerton was sent to beat his record of 2:13 yesterday and succeeded in his effort, although the first half, against the wind, took 1:08¼. The same colt increased his speed in the last half and passed under the wire in 2:12¾.

ONE KILLED AND MANY HURT.

Fatal Wreck on an Ohio Railroad Near Bellaire.

BELLAIRE, O., Aug. 1.—As about noon Friday passenger train No. 4 on the Bellaire, Zanesville and Cincinnati narrow railroad jumped the track near this place. Two well filled coaches were thrown on their sides and dragged some distance. There were ninety passengers on the train which was running at a rapid rate of speed in an effort to make up lost time. As the train reached a curve the cars were noticed to jar violently. Somebody shouted to the passengers to keep their seats, but instead the frightened people rushed at once became panic stricken. Many of them reached the platform when the cars jumped the rails and turned over.

Those persons were thrown into the ditch, a screaming mass of men, women and children. The shock was frightful. Assistance was soon at hand, and when all were taken out it was found that several ten persons had been badly injured, at least five of them seriously, and one has since died. The most seriously injured are:

John Morris, baggage master, hurt internally, badly bruised about head; will die. Charles McElroy, leg broken and hurt internally. Mrs. Jane McElroy, head hurt and back badly sprained. John Irwin, of Bethel, O., head and arms crushed. G. P. Wilcox, of York, Pa., head badly injured.

A YOUNG GIRL'S VENGEANCE.

She Shoots Dead the Fiance Who Married Another Woman.

GELWOOD, Fla., Aug. 1.—A C. Jones, a section foreman on the Florida Central and Peninsular railroad, was shot and instantly killed last night by Miss Myra Fancher, who is only sixteen years of age. For about a year Jones had paid attention to Miss Fancher, and it was generally understood that they were engaged to be married.

Two months ago he discarded her and married another. Last night Miss Fancher laid in wait for him on the street, and when he approached she blew out his brains with a bullet from a revolver. She was arrested, but public sympathy is entirely on her side. Jones had been criminally intimate with her under promise of marriage.

The President's Itinerary.

CAPE MAY, N. J., Aug. 1.—The following is the president's itinerary for his Vermont trip: Leave Cape May on Tuesday, Aug. 18, at 9 a. m. Reach Jersey City at 1:30 or 2 p. m. Jersey City via West Shore to Bennington, via Albany, at 8 or 9 p. m. Bennington on Wednesday, Aug. 19. Leave Bennington on Thursday morning for Mount McGregor. Mount McGregor on Thursday and Friday the 20th and 21st. Reach Saratoga for dinner on Friday evening at about 7 p. m., remaining at Saratoga until Tuesday, Aug. 25. Leave Saratoga for Vermont on Tuesday, via Burlington, to St. Albans on Wednesday, the 26th. Leave St. Albans via Montpelier to St. Johnsbury Thursday. Leave St. Johnsbury on the 27th via White river and Bellows Falls to Proctor. Leave on Saturday, Aug. 29, for home via the Hudson River railroad, where he will visit the secretary of war, reaching Cape May in the evening.

The Bank of America's Affairs.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 1.—The first account of Lawrence and William M. Smith, assignee of the Bank of America, shows receipts amounting to $118,047.78 and expenditures $1,469.78, leaving a balance of $44,618.58 for distribution among an army of about 4,000 depositors. The assignee will press suit against the stock holders of the bank for sums for which they are liable under the law.

Off for Detroit.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 1.—The Florida delegation of G. A. R. men, about 200 strong, left here last night on a special train to attend the national encampment at Detroit, Mich. They will take with them Florida products and specimens with which to decorate the auditorium of the encampment hall at Detroit. The delegation will number about 300 when it reaches Detroit on Sunday night.

Captain Andrews All Right.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 1.—Captain Andrews and his little boat, the Mermaid, have been heard from. On July 24 the captain was alive and sanguine that he would yet reach England in safety, although he had been out from Boston thirty days and was still over 3,000 miles from his destination. The steamer Thomas Morgan, of the steamship Sobrano, on July 24 sighted Andrews' boat.

Goodyear's Big Purchase.

BUFFALO, Aug. 1.—Mr. Frank H. Goodyear, of this city, has added to his already large possessions in the Sinnemahoning valley, in northwestern Pennsylvania, by the purchase of a block of 5,000 acres of timber land. The price paid was about $150,000. The former owner was A. E. Canfield, of Williamsport, Pa.

Pennsylvania Steel Company's Strike.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 1.—Many applications for work were made at the Pennsylvania Steel works. Two hundred applicants were taken, but no work will be given until it is seen if there is anything against them. The company will not make steel rails at Steelton hereafter, but will transfer that industry to Sparrows Point, Md.

A Chinaman to Fight John L.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 1.—Lee Bin Nam, a noted Chinese pugilist, reached the city last night on his way from New York to San Francisco. The Herald says Lee Bin Nam will probably challenge John L. Sullivan to fight. He is 5 feet 8 inches in height and weighs about 200 pounds.

Two Bankers Indicted.

SUSQUEHANNA, Pa., Aug. 1.—The grand jury of Susquehanna county found eight true bills against Daniel Summers and Tracy Hayden, of the defunct bank of Summers & Hayden, of New Milford, on the charge of embezzlement.

A Big Bank in Trouble.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—The Journal of Finance's London cablegram says that a financial house having important Italian connections is in trouble, and will probably go down unless it obtains an extension on its $30,000,000 liabilities.

Still Persecuting the Jews.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Acting Secretary of State Wharton asserted positively today that the department had no information respecting the alleged suspension of the edict against the Jews by the Russian government.

SEARLES' STRANGE RISE

How a Poor Man Captured Over $30,000,000.

LOVED BY MARK HOPKINS' WIDOW.

He Was Once a House Decorator in New York and Today He Is One of the Richest Men in America, the Land of Many Millionaires.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—There may be no contest after all over the $30,000,000 that Mrs. Mark Hopkins-Searles left to her husband. One of the Searles executors who was seen by a reporter and questioned as to the clause in the will relating to the lady's adopted son, Timothy Hopkins, said that Mrs. Hopkins-Searles transferred a very considerable amount of property to her adopted son in her lifetime, and that she was so well provided for then that there was no occasion for making any provision for him in her will. It was believed that if young Hopkins had been disinherited he would have contested the will. Hopkins is now on his way from Japan to San Francisco, where he will arrive.

Timothy Hopkins was born in Maine about thirty years ago. His parentage was humble, his father's name being Nelson. His father went to California when the boy was an infant and was given employment by Mark Hopkins. Later Nelson died, leaving the youngster in the world. It arrived she found that her husband had been drowned while she was en route. As Mr. and Mrs. Hopkins were childless they adopted the boy. The death of her husband Mrs. Hopkins adopted Timothy legally just before he reached the age of twenty-one years. He was given a good education. Later he married a niece of his late mother by adoption.

Searles' Romantic Story.

Some men are born rich, some men get rich and some men have riches thrust upon them. To the last class belongs Edward F. Searles. Just how many millions his fortune amounts to he hasn't probably yet found out himself. It has been computed all the way from $25,000,000 to $70,000,000. A conservative estimate, which probably is not far wide of the mark, places it at $30,000,000. Anyhow, it is quite enough to put Mr. Searles in the very front rank among the rich men of America.

He Is a Handsome Man.

Mr. Searles is about fifty years old. He is a singularly handsome and well preserved man, of medium height and splendid build, with delicate and well molded features. His type is of the esthetic. He was born at Methuen, Mass., where his wife, at that time probably the richest woman in America, died last Saturday. Books interested him much more than turnips, potatoes and things of that sort. After having a good but not collegiate education he went to Boston and took up "business" as a means of livelihood, meanwhile absorbing all the culture he could get.

Gentlemanly and unassuming, but with manners as highly polished as the finest piece of mahogany in the establishment, he made a success as a salesman.

Not Simply a Salesman.

His fame reached New York, and a big furniture firm secured his services. They paid him a very steep salary, too. He was a born decorator, and he was well up in all the fads and theories of decorative art, and was very adept at giving points and suggestions to rich patrons.

In those days he was described as a confirmed bachelor. He had no pronounced vices. Moderation was his motto in all things. His hobby was fine old specially classical music. His favorite instrument was the organ, on which he performed very well. In 1881 he went to California. Up to that time he had done nothing to distinguish himself. In fact, without any disparagement of Mr. Searles' manifold merits, it may be said that he never did anything to distinguish himself until he married Mrs. Hopkins, old Mark Hopkins' rich widow.

Not the Two Husbands.

Just when and where he met Mrs. Hopkins contemporaneous history fails to record. Even in California they are very much mixed about that important event.

But to appreciate the impression he must have made on Mrs. Hopkins' thoroughly matured but still tender heart, something must be understood about her own previous history and what manner of man her first husband had been. Like Mr. Searles Mark Hopkins was born in New England and came of prime old New England stock. But there the similarity between the two men ended. "Uncle Mark" never had a chance to absorb any Boston culture. He was a tough Yankee, hard grained, close fisted sort of a man. He was thirty-five years of age when he sailed for California in 1849. But before that he had found time to marry his first wife, a pretty first cousin, Mary Frances Sherwood, who was then teaching school and never dreamed that she would one day become one of the richest women in the world.

How Hopkins Made His Fortune.

Mark kept a grocery in Sacramento. At the end of four years he sold out, and with a snug little pile returned east and married his cousin. He returned to California with her in 1855 and started in to make his pile. A big one. He formed a partnership with Collis P. Huntington, and when the Central Pacific railroad was completed it was estimated that he was worth over $25,000,000. But he always remained the same tough fibered, cross grained sort of man.

She Had More Culture.

His wife had much more culture. When her husband began to get rich she found time to get more accomplishments and art furniture. Her husband at length decided to build a house commensurate with his fortune. It cost $1,250,000. But before the inside of it was all fitted and ready for occupancy Mrs. Hopkins died. That was in 1878 and he was then sixty-six years old, his wife being several years his junior.

And They Were Married.

The interior fixings of the big San Francisco house had not been finished when Mr. Searles made Mrs. Hopkins' acquaintance. In every respect he presented a striking contrast to the late Mr. Hopkins. He was delicate, refined, handsome, polished and cultured. He knew about houses and decorating. He was the sort of man she had read about in novels. Mrs. Hopkins was many years his senior. That made it easy for her to fall in love with him first. He fell in love with her later.

To keep him always by her, it is said, she gave him employment. He helped to put the finishing touches on the San Francisco house, and took a hand in superintending the decorations of the Great Barrington palace. Just when Mr. Searles made his declaration of affection nobody but himself probably knows. The marriage took place on Nov. 8, 1887, at Trinity chapel, New York. It was a very quiet wedding. The adopted son, Timothy, was very much opposed to the match. That is the reason, probably, why Mrs. Hopkins left him out of her will.

NOT DEAD, BUT ARRESTED.

A Bold Plot to Prevent Insurance Companies Paying $50,000 Supposed.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 1.—Requisition papers have been granted by Governor Jones for D. B. Whilden, who has been arrested at Portland, Or., at the request of the New York Life Insurance company. Whilden, who had $40,000 insurance on his life, disappeared in March, 1890, and was supposed to have been drowned in the Warrior river. The insurance company resisted the claim and put detectives at work on the case.

Whilden was heard of at Tacoma on July 17, and on July 24 he was arrested at Portland. Five insurance companies are interested, and suits against four of them for $50,000 have been brought by Whilden's wife, are now pending in the Birmingham courts.

ONE SEAL PRIZE SEIZED.

The Rush Has Captured the British Schooner C. H. Marvin.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The following telegram has been received at the navy department from San Francisco: "Commander Tillman reports from Dunalaska, July 13, the following telegram: 'The Thetis arrived at Sand Point, June 29; came here July 3; went to Pribyloff; re-San Francisco, where they will transfers. The Nymph arrived 7th, Mohican 8th, Alert 9th. The Mohican and Nymph go to Pribyloff today, Thetis tomorrow, Alert for Bering sea to cruise until fall.

"The Rush warned four vessels and seized a British schooner, the E. B. Marvin. The Marvin will be sent to Victoria by the British government. The Thetis telegram is dated San Francisco and is from Commander Cotton, of the Thetis.

They Fought with Clubs and Bottles.

NEW YORK, Aug. 1.—A family quarrel took place in the saloon of James Liddy, the well known lightweight pugilist, at Elizabeth, N. J., which is fraught with result in the death of William McAdams, Liddy's brother-in-law. McAdams remonstrated with Liddy for ill treating his (Liddy's) wife. A general fight followed between McAdams, Jimmy Liddy, John Liddy and James Finlan. All were armed with clubs and bottles. McAdams was clubbed into insensibility. Jim Liddy and Finlan surrendered to the police.

The State of Uncle Sam's Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The treasury surplus yesterday aggregated $57,018,504. The reduction in the public debt during July will be about $4,500,000. Custom receipts, $15,000,000; internal revenue receipts, $14,500,000, and miscellaneous receipts about $4,000,000. This with $5,500,000 of repayments will swell the receipts of the month to $43,000,000, against which there will be $35,500,000 of expenditures, including $13,600,000 for pensions.

Mr. Cleveland's Red Top Profits.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—John E. Beall, a real estate expert, testified before the Rock Creek Park commission today that President Cleveland bought his "Red Top" property for $26,000 and sold it for $140,000 realizing $114,000 profit. Mr. Cleveland, he said, had no capital to invest in that section of suburban property, it having begun some time previous when the site for the naval observatory was selected there.

The Rothschilds Desert the Czar.

LONDON, Aug. 1.—Messrs. C. J. Hambro & Son have been appointed bankers to the Russian government. This means, apparently, that the Rothschilds and the Russian government have finally broken with one another. The Rothschilds have been the Russian government's bankers for many years. Their withdrawal is attributed to the action of the Russian government against the Jews.

The Cramps Will Build Cruiser No. 13.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—Secretary Tracy has decided not to award the contract for the cruiser No. 13 to Charles H. Bath, of Bath Iron works, the lowest bidder, because the Bath works would have to sub-let the contract for machinery, could not complete the vessel in two years, and because the first is "new and inexperienced." Messrs. Cramp having reduced their bid $55,000, will be awarded the contract at $2,650,000.

To Fight at New Orleans.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 1.—The directors of the Olympic club, of New Orleans, announce that a match has been made for a featherweight fight between Johnnie Griffin and Johnnie Van Heest. The men will fight at 122 pounds for a purse of $5,000. Jack Dempsey, Jimmy Carroll and Billy Myer have also been matched for a fight in the middle of November for a purse of $5,000.

From Toledo to Liverpool.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 1.—A company with a capital of $2,500,000 has been organized in Toledo to establish a line of steamers direct from Toledo to Liverpool. Toledo flour mills will ship two-thirds of their output of 4,000 barrels per day to Liverpool by water. Colonel H. C. Reynolds, of Toledo, will be president of the company.

Gherardi Calls Upon Blaine.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 1.—Admiral Gherardi, commander of the North Atlantic squadron, came ashore from the flagship Philadelphia, which, accompanied by the Petrel, arrived at 12 o'clock. The admiral paid his respects to Secretary Blaine. The ships will remain several weeks for drill and target practice.

Nickel Steel Plates a Success.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The navy ordnance department has made a very careful test of the nickel steel armor plates and obtained satisfactory results. Ten three inch plates will be used on the upper layer of the protected deck of the cruiser New York and on cruiser No. 12.

The Pottsville Strike.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 1.—William Welsh, president of the Amalgamated Association of Iron and Steel Workers, says that the Pottsville strike had been recognized by the general convention and that the men intended to hold out for the eastern scale.

Stabbed Him in the Back.

BOSTON, Aug. 1.—As the result of a quarrel at the boarding house between George Katchner and his wife, Barbara, the latter stabbed her husband in the back with a carving knife, inflicting a probably fatal wound. The woman is under arrest.

Stabbed Her with a Chisel.

WOONSOCKET, R. I., Aug. 1.—William Fleming, aged nineteen, has been arrested in Cranston for stabbing little Gertie White with a chisel in Johnstown. The girl will probably die.

Gas Fueled His Troubles.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 1.—Joseph Snyder, who attempted suicide by turning on the gas in his room in the Bristol hotel, is dead.

This Date in History—Aug. 1.

1498—Columbus discovered the island of Trinidad.

1798—Battle of the Nile; Lord Nelson destroyed the French fleet; Louis Antoine, count de Saint of the French Republic L'Orient, fought to the last, and when he fell his son, 10 years old, was blown up with the ship, a fitting occasion for Mrs. Hemans' "The boy stood on the burning deck."

1801—Jonathan Edwards, the younger son of the famous writer of the "Will" and "Predestination," died; his sister Esther was the wife of Aaron Burr.

1838—Emancipation Day in the British Indies; all slaves of British subjects were freed, which established the precedent in the United States, and charges that the abolitionists were "bribed by English gold."

1866—General Rivas arrested and shot, and peace restored in San Salvador.

How to Drink Milk.

New milk does not agree with everybody. Doctors recommend an admixture of lime water and various other things to render it acceptable to weak stomachs. But all of these plans are injudicious. No matter how weak the stomach may be, milk can be taken without unpleasant result and with impunity by adhering to the following directions. Sip it, and mix the milk with the saliva of the mouth before swallowing. This will cause it to rapidly and easily assimilate with the acids of the stomach.

THE TREATY WITH SPAIN

Many American Products on the Free List.

THEY GO TO CUBA AND PORTO RICO.

President Harrison Makes an Important Proclamation—What the Islands Will Send Uncle Sam in Return for His Goods and the Products of His Country.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 1.—The merchants of the United States will begin on Sept. 1 to enjoy a part of the advantages of the reciprocity arrangement with Spain regarding trade with Cuba and Porto Rico. Just what these advantages are is set forth fully in a proclamation of the president, revealing the terms of the new arrangement. A portion of it will not take effect until July 1, 1892, when the notice required of Spain for the abrogation of her old treaties will have been sufficient.

A Simple Arrangement.

The arrangement is very simple on the part of the United States, for it follows the mandate of the third section of the McKinley tariff bill, making free of duty sugar, hides, tea and coffee. The United States could make no further concessions without new legislation. The Spanish government pleaded for a modification of the tobacco duties of the McKinley tariff bill, but Secretary Blaine would give no stronger assurance than that the subject should have the careful consideration of the president and be made the subject of a separate communication.

The advantages gained by this country on Sept. 1 are limited for the most part to raw materials and to products partially advanced in manufacture rather than to manufactured goods.

The Goods Admitted Free.

The leading articles which go at once upon the free list when exported from the United States to Cuba and Porto Rico are salted meats, lard, woods in natural state and partly manufactured, wagons and carts, raw petroleum and coal. The United States is already the leader in the exportation of most of these articles to the Spanish West Indies.

This trade is likely to be somewhat increased by the remission of existing duties.

Wages Makers Happy.

The United States has sent nearly all the manufactures of wood into Cuba during recent years, the shipments of boards reaching a value in 1890 of $433,282, and of hogsheads and barrels of $816,180. The duties on woods have not been heavy, and placing them on the free list will probably not much increase the volume of trade. The duties on wagons and carts have, however, been higher, and their abrogation is likely to help our manufacturers.

Other Advantages.

The abolition of the duty on crude petroleum will probably mean a great deal to the oil companies. Our exports of bituminous coal last year reached a value of $681,116, and are likely to increase with an abolition of the duty. The essential advantage of the treaty is the reduction which goes into effect on Jan. 1 to one dollar per 100 kilogrammes on refined sugar. This duty has been about $4.50 per 100 kilogrammes, and the reduction means that we shall at least acquire most of the trade of Spain, which amounted in 1887 to $987,912.

A reduction of 25 per cent. in the rate of duty takes effect at once upon butter and cheese, refined petroleum and boots and shoes. This may enable our manufacturers to wrest from Spain a portion of her export trade to Cuba of $2,569,156 in manufactures of leather.

The Permanent Schedule.

The permanent schedule to take effect after Spain has terminated her other treaties on July 1, 1892, adds numerous minor articles to the free list, but the principal articles of importance are iron and steel and many of their manufactures.

The present duty on steel plates and bars is about four dollars per 100 kilogrammes, and on pig iron about twenty-five cents per 100 kilogrammes. The duty on agricultural tools is a trifle more than two dollars per 100 kilogrammes.

The duty on flour is not different in the permanent schedule from the temporary one. Carriages, cars and other vehicles are to pay only 1 per cent. in place of the duties, running as high as $185 each, which now prevail. Reductions of 50 per cent. and 30 per cent. on steam manufactures offer an opportunity to our merchants to make headway against their British, French and German competitors, almost they will be able in some cases to take advantage of.

The reduction of 25 per cent. on manufactures of cotton means a discrimination in favor of $3.50 where the duties are $4 per 100 kilogrammes.

Thanks to Ex-Minister Foster.

The concessions in regard to manufactured goods are numerous and favorable because of the skill and persistence of ex-Minister Foster at Madrid, but practical experience only can demonstrate whether the concessions of 25 per cent. and 50 per cent. on different articles are sufficient to enable our manufacturers to compete with European conditions of labor and production.

Wheat Rates to Europe.

CHICAGO, Aug. 1.—The cost of carrying the great wheat of the west to European markets is likely to be very large. There is a veritable boom in grain freights by water, and it cost 13.58 cents Thursday to carry a bushel of wheat from Chicago to Liverpool as against 13.6 cents on Tuesday.

No New Trial for Sawtelle.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 1.—Judge Carpenter has delivered an exhaustive opinion upon the exceptions taken by the defense during the trial of Isaac Sawtelle for the murder of his brother Hiram. All the objections are, overruled, and Sawtelle will not get a new trial.

Alliance Storemen Sued.

CHARLESTON, Aug. 1.—A Farmers' Alliance store in Spartanburg county failed some time ago. The creditors, Allison, Nixon & Goldsborough, of Baltimore, have entered suit in the United States court for $2,925 against individual members of the Alliance.

Frenchmen Honored by the Czar.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 1.—The czar has conferred the grand cordon of St. Anne on Admiral Gervais, and decorated thirty-two other French officers.

Six Miners Killed.

BERLIN, Aug. 1.—An explosion in the Karlsgluck coal pit, Westphalia, caused the death of six miners.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

GLOWWORMS.

The Fireflies of the Tropics and Some of the Uses Made of Them.

The seat of light in the glowworm is in the tail, and proceeds from three luminous ones in the last segment of the abdomen. The male has only two of these, and the light proceeding from them is comparatively small. During favorable weather the light glows steadily, but at other times is not constant. The fireflies of the tropics—these composing the genus lampyris—vary to the extent that while certain species control their light others are without this power, says The Cornhill Magazine. The larva of the glowworm is capable of emitting light, but not to be compared to that of the developed insect. Both in the mature and immature forms lampyris noctiluca plays a useful part in the economy of nature. To the agriculturist and fruit grower it is a special friend. Its diet consists almost wholly of small shelled snails, and it comes upon the scene just when these farm and garden pests are most troublesome.

By the native ladies of the tropics fireflies are often studded in their coiled and braided hair, and perform somewhat the same office in the disposition of more civilized belles. Spanish ladies and those of the West Indies inclose fireflies in bags of lace or gauze and wear them amid their hair or disposed about their persons. The luminosity of the modest English insect is far outshone by several of its congeners. Some of these are used in various ways for illumination, and it is said that the brilliancy of the light is such that the smallest print can be read by that proceeding from the chromic spots alone when a single insect is moved along the lines. In the Spanish establishments fireflies are frequently used in a curious way when traveling at night. The natives tie an insect to each great toe, and on fishing and hunting expeditions make torches of them by fastening several together. The same people have a summer festival at which the performances of the young people are covered with fireflies, and, being mounted on fine horses similarly ornamented, the latter gallop through the dusk, the whole producing the effect of a large moving light.

Sallies Indulged in by Preachers.

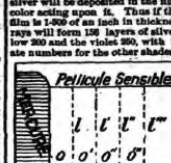
The sallies indulged in by eminent preachers to awake sleepers would fill a volume. Here are two of the best: Dr. South, preaching before Charles II, and perceiving that several of the worldly court circle were about napping, stopped and smiled loudly at Lord Rochester by name. "My lord, my lord, I am sorry to interrupt your repose, but I must beg of you not to snore quite so loud, lest you awaken his majesty."

But perhaps for dry and pungent humor and keen satire Dean Swift's famous sermon on "Mutual Subjection" in which he takes the Eutychus episode in Acts for his text, has never been equaled. "I have chosen," so he begins his sermon, "these words with design a possible to disturb some part of this audience of half an hour's sleep, for the convenience and exercise thereof this place at this season of the day is very much celebrated." He thus im-

PHOTOGRAPHY IN COLORS.

A Remarkable Discovery from a Scientific Standpoint.

A noteworthy step has been made toward the solution of the problem of photographing in colors by M. Lippman, of Paris, who has succeeded in reproducing upon an ordinary gelatine dry plate an image of the solar spectrum in its natural colors. The process can be easily understood by any one with the aid of the accompanying illustrations from nature and the descriptions of the same by Popular Science News.



CUT II.

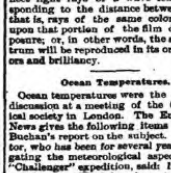
CUT I.

The sensitive plate used must be prepared so that the film of gelatine emulsion shall be very thin and smooth, and free from the slightly granular texture of the ordinary films. The sensitive film should be simply opalescent, and not of the creamy opacity of the films used in ordinary photography. Otherwise the plate does not differ from those in general use, and the emulsion consists of the usual bromide of silver.

In the first cut, Fig. 1, F is a plate of ordinary glass; C is a piece of hard rubber shaped like a horseshoe magnet, or the letter U; G is the photographic plate, the sensitive surface being turned inward. The whole arrangement is fastened together with clamps, and the cell thus formed is filled with mercury (M). All being in readiness, an "image of the solar spectrum is thrown upon the sensitive plate, and the plate exposed to its influence for a period varying from thirty minutes to two hours. The plate is then removed and developed, fixed and dried in the usual manner, when it is found that a perfect image of the spectrum—Cut 1, Fig. 2—has been reproduced upon the plate, all the colors being shown in their natural shades and brilliancy. Curiously enough, if the image is viewed by transmitted light, the colors are reversed, being replaced by the complementary ones—that is, the green appears red, the red green, etc.

In Cut 2 is much exaggerated section of the gelatine film given, which will aid in the comprehension of the theory.

A light wave of any color—say red—passes through the glass (verre) and the sensitive film to the mercury, where it is reflected back again, meeting in the sensitive film other similar waves on their way to the reflecting mercurial surfaces. These incident and reflected waves interfere with each other, producing in the film alternate layers, as it were, of light (l) and darkness (o), just as two musical notes of nearly the same pitch when sounded together produce alternations of sound and silence known as beats. Now just where the layer of light is produced in the film the bromide of silver is acted upon, and, when developed, a layer of metallic silver is formed. As the wave length of each color is different, a different number of layers of silver will be deposited in the film for each color acting upon it. Thus if the gelatine film is 1-800 of an inch in thickness, the red rays will lay down 128 layers of silver, the yellow 200 and the violet 350, with intermediate numbers for the other shades.



CUT II.

Now when the plate is developed and finished it would seem that these microscopical layers of metallic silver will only reflect light rays of a wave length corresponding to the distance between them—that is, rays of the same color as acted upon that portion of the film during exposure; or, in other words, the solar spectrum will be reproduced in its original colors and brilliancy.

Ocean Temperatures.

Ocean temperatures were the subject of discussion at a meeting of the Geographical society in London. The Engineering News gives the following items from Dr. Buchan's report on the subject: The doctor, who has been for several years investigating the meteorological aspects of the "Challenger" expedition, said: In the expedition referred, hourly or two hourly observations were taken of the atmosphere and surface temperatures, and other observations were made of sea temperatures at various depths. The result shows that the diurnal range of temperature at the surface of the open sea is a little less than 1 deg. F.; while the temperature of the air over the sea was about three times greater than that of the water surface, with greater diurnal variations. As to thunderstorms, it was found that on land the maximum number occurred at mid afternoon, when the air temperature was highest. On the open sea 70 per cent. of these storms occurred when the temperature was lowest.

A New Industry.

The new industry recently introduced into Kent, England, for the curing of hops by a special process, with a view to their admixture with tea, is exciting considerable interest. The machinery for the process consists of a circular oven, and a patent tea roller driven by an 8-horse power steam engine. The hops, after being allowed a certain time to wither, are put in a great pan into the upper, from which they gradually work down on the roller, working on a plain surface of polished teak wood. After the hops are sufficiently rolled, which takes about seven minutes, they are spread upon a series of open wire trays, in a layer about two inches thick, and placed in a drying machine or sirocco. When they come out of the oven they present either a light or dark brown appearance. The next process is to cut the new dry, crisp hops for mixture with tea, or they are ground for mixture with coffee and cocoa.

A PORTABLE WATER FILTER.

A Handy Little Contrivance that May Be Carried in the Pocket or Satchel.

Railroad water has often been used, not a few travelers will be glad to know of a convenient portable filter that can be carried in the pocket or traveling satchel, and seems to act as a perfect cleanser. Such a one, which is also convenient for a variety of uses, is described by Popular Science News as follows:

For filtering ordinary hydrant water it is immersed in a vessel containing the water, and enough suction made on the tube to make a siphon action, and, by allowing the vessel to remain under the hydrant, an unlimited supply can be obtained, though of course in not a large stream. It can be used by dropping it in spring or other water, and by suction a fair drinking stream can be obtained.

A rather wide mouthed bottle containing an ounce or two is the best. A piece of glass tubing sufficiently long to reach the bottom and extend to the top or above about one-half an inch. A piece of black rubber tubing such as used on nursing bottles is drawn over the end at the mouth of the bottle. Absorbent cotton is then tightly packed around the glass tube, which rests on the bottom of the bottle. Pack the bottle to the top. If desired, when about half full, a layer of charcoal can be put in and the cotton packing continued. A small package of cotton will last a long while for repacking, as only the top layers of cotton need be removed and replaced by new for a considerable period. About two feet of rubber tubing is all that is necessary. The variations that can be made are obvious. A much larger one, containing cotton, gravel and charcoal, has been in use successfully for several months. It is, first of all, clean, for we can see when it becomes foul: its portability is unquestioned and its ease of renewing is quite apparent.

College Men with Big Heads.

Mr. Francis Galton is quoted as authority for the following conclusions in regard to the size of the brain in university students:

Although it is pretty well ascertained that in the masses of the population the brain ceases to grow after the age of nineteen, or even earlier, it is by no means so with university students.

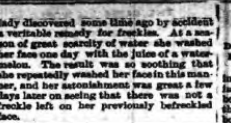
That men who have obtained high honors have had, on the average, considerably larger brains than others at the age of nineteen.

That they have, on the average, larger brains than others, but not to the same extent, at the age of twenty-three.

Consequently, high honor men are presumably as a class both more precocious and more gifted throughout than others. We must therefore look upon eminent university success as largely due to a fortunate combination of these two helpful conditions.

A Freckle Remedy.

The story is told that a South American lady discovered some little ago by accident a veritable remedy for freckles. At a season of great scarcity of water she washed her face one day with the juice of a watermelon. The result was so soothing that she was fondly wont to wet her face in this manner, and her astonishment was great a few days later on seeing that there was not a freckle left on her previously befreckled face.



COUNTRY VISITING.

The Duties of Hostess and Guest—The Charm of an American Country House.

No one possessed of his senses would invite a person to his country house for the purpose of making him unhappy. As least so one would say at first thought. But it is an obvious fact, according to Mrs. Sherwood, who is authority on manners and social usages, that very many guests are invited to the country houses of their friends and are made extremely miserable while there. They have to rise at unusual hours, eat when they are not hungry, drive or walk or play tennis when they would prefer doing anything else, and they are obliged to give up those hours which are precious to them for other duties or pleasures; so that many people have an experience of visiting are apt to say, "No more of the slavery of visiting for me, if you please!"

"A lady guest," says Mrs. Sherwood, "is apt to be a slave, from the fact that, as yet, the American hostess has not learned that the truest hospitality is to let her guest alone and to allow her to enjoy herself in her own way. A thoroughly well bred guest makes no trouble in a house; she has the instinct of a lady and is careful that no plan of her hostess shall be disarranged by her presence. She mentions all her separate invitations, desires to know when her hostess wishes to her presence, if the carriage can take her hither and yon, or if she may be allowed to hire a carriage.

"The charm of an American country house is, generally, that it is a home and sacred to home duties. A model guest never infringes for one moment on the rights of the master of the house. She never spoils his dinner or his drive by being late; she never sends him back to bring her parasol; she never abuses his friends or the family dog; she is careful to abstain from disagreeable topics; she joins his whist table, if she knows how to play; but she ought never to be obliged to rise an hour earlier than her wont because he wishes to take an early train for town. These early morning perfunctory breakfasts are not times for conversation and they ruin the day for many bad sleepers.

"There is no office in the world which should be filled with such punctilious devotion, propriety and self respect as that of hostess. If a lady ever allows her guest to feel that she is a cause of inconvenience, she violates the first rule of hospitality. If she fail in any one of the obligations as hostess to a guest whom she has invited, she shows herself to be ill bred and ignorant of the first principles of politeness. She might better invite twelve people to dinner and positively ask them to dine on the pavement than ignore or withdraw from a written and accepted invitation."

SEASONABLE NEEDLEWORK.

Delicately Colored Designs on Linen, Plastic Tablecloths and Floor Cushions.

Summer fancies in needlework are shown in somecharming self colored designs. For instance, a tablecloth will have the pretty border delicately tinged with forms woven, thrown up with a few deeper shades; a sideboard slip will bear a fine pattern wrought in shades of one blue silks.

Finger bowl doilies are shown in dainty colorings and artistic designs. A large water lily embroidered in white and gold, a pansy or a rose of a size adapted for use, beautifully embroidered and then cut out, makes quite as pretty an ornament for the table as the most fastidious could desire.

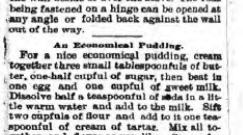
For plenic or out-of-door table cover checked grass toweling in squares of different colors may be finished with a border in cross stitch done in red marking cotton. This is worked over canvas basted on the toweling, while a fringe of the same may be knotted on the edges. A monogram or design of fruit or flowers will be appropriate to fill in the corners. If the toweling is not as wide as desired by joining two breadths, then feather stitching the seam and stripping the canvas with lines of feather stitch, to keep it gain in width and ornamental qualities as well.

Very new and taking in toilet cushion covers are those made of linen floor ones, the four corners of which fold over the cushion and may be pinned down in the center with a fancy pin. In each of the corners is a tiny spray of flowers worked in colored silks or linen floss.

Denim in dark blue or brown couched with a geometrical pattern in white cord and tassels, makes a pretty floor cushion, and has no serviceable as it is good looking.

Kitchen Conveniences.

Two handy homemade contrivances for the kitchen are illustrated in The Farm Journal. Steps made like those in the cut have repeatedly are convenient for reaching the upper shelves of the pantry.



HOMEMADE STEPS AND RACK.

A handy rack for drying the dish towels and other small articles during rainy weather can be made by nailing a block to the wall beside or over the stove. The rods being fastened on a hinge can be opened at any angle or folded back against the wall out of the way.

An Economical Pudding.

For a nice economical pudding, cream together the yolks of two eggs with half of butter, one-half cupful of sugar, then beat in one egg and one cupful of sweet milk. Have ready a teaspoonful of soda in a little warm water and add to the milk. Sift two cupfuls of flour and add to it one teaspoonful of cream of tartar. Mix all together and flavor as you like. Steam for half an hour and serve with cream and sugar.

Joseph M. Cook, 27 Harwich street, Boston, Mass., says: "I have used your Dr. David Kennedy's Favorite Remedy and find it a most excellent medicine for the cure of Salt Rheum."—ADV.

FELL BACKWARDS FIFTY FEET.

A Lineman Drops from a Telegraph Pole and is Frightfully Injured.

William Keegan, a lineman of the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company, and who was formerly employed in this city, met with a fatal accident yesterday at Elizabeth.

He was on the top of a fifty foot pole at the corner of East Jersey and Division streets, cutting slack in the fire-alarm wire to straighten up the pole, and while making a connection the pin broke, sending him backward headlong to the stone pavement below.

As his body shot downward it just grazed another workman, Charles Bangs, who was on a cross-arm some feet beneath. Edward Emmet was also on the pole. Keegan turned two somersaults in the air, broke five wires in his fall and struck the pavement with a shock that could be heard some distance.

The horrified people who witnessed the occurrence rushed to the spot and found the man insensible, the blood oozing from his mouth and ears. He was taken to the City Hospital, where it was found that his spine was fractured, three ribs were broken and one rib was driven into the lung. He also had concussion and hemorrhage of the brain.

It was decided that there was no hope of saving his life. The Rev. Father Von Seslgam, of St. Michael's church was summoned, the man being a Catholic, and the priest administered the last rites of the church.

Keegan was twenty-three years old, weighed 213 pounds, was unmarried, and a native of New York, his home being at No. 229 East Eightieth street. He is the youngest member of the family, which consists of three sons and a mother. He was her principal support.

INJURED BY THE CARS.

A Brakeman on a Freight Train Badly Mangled.

A brakeman in the employ of the Central Railroad met with a fatal accident at Bound Brook this morning. He was walking on top of a car on the fast freight train which passes through this city shortly after nine o'clock, when he missed his footing and fell under the wheels. Both legs were badly mangled and he died a few hours after.

He was brought to the Muhlenberg Hospital in this city where he was made as comfortable as possible.

Mrs. Waldron, the matron at the hospital, says he cannot possibly survive his injuries and that his death is only the question of a few hours.

The man is unconscious and it is impossible to ascertain his name.

Mr. John Long of Elizabeth was the conductor on the train in which the unfortunate man was injured.

Later—The injured brakeman died at 2.45.

—The City Common Council will meet in regular session this evening at eight o'clock.

—A hop was given at Hotel Netherwood this evening. A party of Plainfielders attended, and enjoyed a very pleasant evening.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission Chapel will hold a meeting in the parlors of the chapel to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—Cleveland's widely advertised, and well-known minstrels, will be at Music Hall, this evening. It is the first company to appear in "Plainfield's theatre" under the new management.

—A theatre party of fifty Netherwood Hotel guests will be present to-night at Cleveland's minstrel performance. The sale of reserved seats has been unusually large, and a full house is anticipated.

—Prof. Garno's Vocal and Instrumental Concert Company will appear at the Elkwood to-night and every evening this week giving an entire change of programme each evening. See advertisement in another column.

—A new and interesting advertisement from that enterprising firm—the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association—appears in another column to-day. The business this company has built up in such a short time shows strongly the result of advertising well and wisely.

"Jersey King" Dead.

The brown pacing gelding, "Jersey King," so well known as the pet roadhorse of Mr. C. H. Shepard, of Regent street, North Plainfield, dropped dead in harness on the 27th, ult., while being driven by his trainer, Mr. Peter C. Osborn, of New Market, and the trainer was considerably bruised by being thrown to the ground. The horse was entered in the 2.30 class of the meeting at Independence, Iowa, for a purse of $3,000. He was thought by many horsemen to have more natural speed than any horse known as he had shown a 2.07 gait unconditioned, and as a colt the same season he was broken to harness paced a whole mile to a full-spring road-wagon in 2.23.

A THRILLING RIDE.

RACING AGAINST TIME BETWEEN WASHINGTON AND NEW YORK.

Getting Down to a Mile in 44 Seconds.—Too Fast to Photograph.—A Newspaper Reporter's Novel Journey.

How many people are aware that the fastest scheduled train in the world runs between Washington and Jersey City every day? The train is the Baltimore and Ohio New York and Washington limited, and it uses the tracks of the Central Railroad of New Jersey and Philadelphia Reading between Jersey City and Philadelphia. The latter roads furnish the locomotives on this part of the line.

A Sun reporter with a detective camera took a ride one Sunday recently on the north-bound limited train of the Royal Blue line. He sat in the engineer's cab the entire distance from Washington to Jersey City. In many respects it was a phenomenal trip. He had often ridden beside the engineers of fast trains and enjoyed a brisk gait of 60 to 70 miles an hour, but on this trip the enjoyment vanished after passing the 70-mile point, and a sense of anxiety took the place of it, which increased in proportion to the rate of speed. At 80 miles an hour a feeling that something was going to happen stole over him, for he thought the iron steed was straining every muscle and was going it for all she was worth. He was satisfied to stop at that gait, but the engineer did a little better.

One of the pictures the reporter took with his detective camera represents a flagman's shanty ten feet away, taken while the train was rushing by at eighty miles an hour on the Jersey Central. The shutter worked in one-fortieth of a second, but that did not begin to be fast enough to catch a good image. The shanty appears to be spread out in the picture, so does the fence alongside, and where the flagman stood in front waving his flag there is a mere shadow The landscape in the distance is fairly clear, and if the lens had been focussed at 300 feet instead of ten the scenery would have come out still more distinctly. An object 100 feet or more away may be photographed from a fast train without difficulty, because it moves much less rapidly in the vision of the lens. A mile away there is practically no movement of the landscape as seen from a train. But a few feet from the lens the object seem to move nearly as fast as the lens itself, and at a speed of sixty miles an hour the locomotive, or lens, moves eighty-eight feet every second.

Another flagman's shanty, ten feet away, photographed when the train was running at seventy miles an hour, showed more distinctly than the first one, but it was not at all satisfactory. Still, the background was pretty good. The picture of Grant avenue station at Plainfield, taken twenty-five feet away, at a speed of sixty miles an hour, is an improvement on the views of the flagmen's shanties ten feet away. The reporter got a very good picture at a distance of 300 feet.

The ride was thrilling, after leaving Canton, where delays made the train 12 minutes late. It was a steady mile-a-minute gait from the moment the train left the station. Then, as the mile-posts flew past, there wasn't nearly a minute between them. Sixty-four miles south of Philadelphia she had got down to a mile in 50 seconds, without any apparent exertion.

On she whirled! not gaining merely a second each succeeding mile. She swooped along on sixty-four miles in 47 seconds and triumphantly headed for another.

Straight ahead was the bane of engineers—a sharp curve through a deep cut. It was a wild dash into the unknown. Would the engineer slacken up a bit, or would he take the chances and drop another second or two? Three sharp shrieks of warning to anybody who might chance to be ahead did not soothe the reporter's nerves. He was involuntarily holding his breath just the same, so as to be ready for the worst. What did soothe him was a series of gentle hisses, telling him that the engineer was testing the brakes and was slightly relaxing in his speed. He was merely dropping from seventy-eight to seventy-two miles an hour.

The mile was done in 51 seconds; then half a dozen more miles in from 50 to 55 seconds, under unfavorable conditions, and the train came through the busy freight yards of Aberdeen like a streak.

"Brakes! brakes!" shouted Fireman Weaver as he cast his eye around a curve where the yard seemed to be pretty well tangled up.

He didn't mean that there was anything in the way, but there might have been. It was to caution the engineer, who couldn't see the inside of the curve.

When the reporter told Weaver they had made a mile in 48 seconds the latter was a little disappointed and said they could do it in 45.

"Just wait until I tell you," he said, "and then time her."

They were within twenty-one miles of Philadelphia, when the big engine began to forge ahead again at a great rate.

"Now try it," said the fireman.

They had struck the best piece of track on the road, and they beat the previous record. Here is the time of each succeeding mile in seconds: 55, 53, 47, 46, 46. So, making eight miles in 6 minutes and 55 seconds, the best mile of the run thus far being the one in 46 seconds.

The speeding was over. It was but thirteen miles to Philadelphia, and the engineer reached the station on schedule time.

He had covered the ninety-two miles from Canton to Philadelphia in 94 minutes, without making allowance for the stop at Wilmington. This was 58.73 miles an hour, allowing two minutes for the stop at Wilmington, the 92 miles was run in 92 minutes.

A change of locomotives was quickly made at Philadelphia, and the wild race against time again resumed.

The engineer had the train "humping" along at a rate of a mile in 46 seconds before reaching Bound Brook, where the Reading connects with the Central Railroad of New Jersey. Fireman Weaver said they would reach the junction two minutes ahead of time, in other words they had made the trip in three minutes better time than the schedule. They used to change engines at Bound Brook, but since the water scoop was put in at that point, a single locomotive runs through without stop. This was the Reading's turn; so the Jersey Central didn't have a chance to display its fine engines.

"The fast time is over," said the reporter to himself. "They are ahead of the schedule, and, of course, the Reading engineer doesn't care anything about the Central."

But a Jersey Central engineer was in the cab as pilot. The Reading engineers are not quite familiar yet with the Central road way. The train slowed down passing through Bound Brook to squander a little time and fall back to the schedule. It took an easy gait to Plainfield and up the grade to Dunwood. Half a mile east was a tower guarding a sharp bend. A white moon announced that all was well beyond. Between that point and Elizabeth lay the best piece of track in New Jersey. Too bad to waste; the opportunity, thought the reporter, who had often travelled over it at a high rate of speed. The same thought was in the minds of the Reading engineer and the Jersey Central pilot. They didn't waste it.

As the limited dashed by the people about the stations in Westfield and Cranford didn't need to be told that something unusual was happening. They cheered wildly. Carriages hurried over the crossings in the distance just in the nick of time. A local train was on the fourth track ahead going in the same direction. It was puffing for all it was worth and its small drivers making great ado. The limited swooped down upon it like a bird of prey and was gone, much to the discomfort of the lesser engineer.

The locomotive seemed a thing of life and, like a splendid race horse, quivering in every limb and straining every nerve. The drivers were literally "humping" it, as it took to making the machine to pieces with its own momentum. There had been nothing like this on the Reading.

It all happened with the swiftness of a dream. The reporter held his breath as the locomotive chiselled out a mile in a clean three-quarters of a minute, and again as the next post passed the cab at forty-four seconds. Another mile in forty-five seconds, and still another in forty-five! Engine 575 had broken the record between Jersey City and Philadelphia, possibly also the record in this country. Four miles in a second less than three minutes, an average of more than eighty miles an hour!

The rest of the trip was uneventful. Both engineers were now satisfied. The train reached Bergen Point ahead of time, but the roadway beyond was being repaired and a local train blocked the limited several minutes, throwing it out of schedule a couple of minutes in reaching Jersey City. But there was still time to catch the ferry, and Washington passengers reached New York on time.—New York Sun.

BASE BALL.

The Crescents Defeat the Corinthians by a Score of 8 to 3.

The Corinthians of New York were the opponents of the Crescents in a game of base ball Saturday afternoon. The game was interesting throughout and the home team was victorious by a score of 8 to 3.

O'Niel, the celebrated pitcher, pitched for the visitors, but the Crescents did not apparently have much trouble in hitting the ball.

The game was interrupted by the rain and consequently only seven innings were played.

The score by innings was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Crescents	1	0	2	0	0	4	1	0	x—8
Corinthians	0	0	0	0	0	1	2	*	3

The West Ends of Somerville visited Westfield Saturday afternoon and played a game of ball with the Westfield Athletic club. A large number of Plainfielders witnessed the game, which was very interesting. The West Ends came out victorious by a score of 2 to 0.

The Plainfield Bicycle Club rode went Wilmington Saturday afternoon and played a game of base ball with a nine of that place. The Plainfielders won the game by a score of 4 to 3.

QUERIES FOR SMITH TO ANSWER.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—

FINALLY, one thing seems to have been lost sight of by President of the Common Council Smith. He apparently thinks that nobody has the right of criticising his public acts. A few days ago he published a strange letter in which his personal grievances were ventilated, but of his actions while filling the part of councilman he has not one word of explanation or defence. It is to his interest to know that the tax-payers do care, by that instrument traditionally associated with the tinker's trade, what personal quarrel he may have with any man, but it does care, by a great deal, about what he has done and proposes to do in office. He has the exceeding kindness to assure us that he will not run again. The president's reason for this decision as a matter of vital and legitimate interest to tax-payers.

Yet the president fails to give the reason. We are led to infer that either he cannot stand public criticism upon his public acts or else he knows that if he runs again he cannot be elected.

The matter of the water-works forms one indictment of the tax-payers against the president of the Common Council. Through circumstances that are for the present beyond our power to alter, the Plainfield Water Supply company has laid a system of piping through the streets, without permission from the city. Instead of looking this fact squarely in the face Mr. Smith and his confreres have awarded a franchise for another water-works plant to J. M. Low & Company. We do not know this Company. We do not know anything of its engineering record and financial integrity. In the absence of this information we have a right to question the Company's motive in seeking for and obtaining a franchise.

Does any sane person believe that the Low Company intends to build another system of water works, duplicating reservoir-engine plant and water mains? A dozen people, for a moment, think that if a Company were to build a town of 15,000 population will be able to support two companies? Is there in this broad land a town of 30,000, 200,000, or a million population which can and does support more than one system of water works?

There is no doubt that the Low Company expects to force the Water Supply Company into buying out its franchise. Failing that, to buy out the Supply Company itself, and failing these to combine with the Supply Company on as equal terms as possible. The Low Company takes pains to keep the tax-payers ignorant of just what it intends to do. President Smith and his confreres are guilty of criminal carelessness if they did not themselves find out what the Low Company will do before awarding a franchise. Assuming that they did find out the company's intentions they had not one particle of right to keep that information from the people.

Each and every member of the Common Council is a representative of a constituency. He must take pains to find out the wishes of his constituency, and in turn keep his constituency informed of all he does in their name and why he does it. In granting the Low Company a franchise practically in secret and giving no reason whatever for that action the president and his confrers are guilty of the grossest betrayal of a sacred trust.

What have Mr. Smith and his confreres to say? Do they deny that the granting of the franchise is the unfolding of an utterly needless expense upon the taxpayers? There will be a fight between the Supply Company and the Low Company. Does Mr. Smith dare to deny that the taxpayers will have to pay the expenses of the fight in higher taxation? Does he deny it when he is the proof? The taxpayers want the proof. Let him produce it. MADISON.

Emancipation Day Notes.

Annexed is the line of march in Plainfield of the Emancipation Day celebrators, on August 6th. Park avenue to Fifth street, to Central avenue, to Eighth street, to Crescent avenue, to Broadway, to Carleton avenue, to Putnam avenue, to Franklin place, to Fifth street, to Broadway, to Crescent Rink. The day will be one of general jollification among the colored population.

Shot by a Policeman.

John Bewdy, was shot by a policeman at Bound Brook yesterday. One bullet shattered his left leg and another struck him on the head inflicting a deep scalp wound. He was brought to this city and is being treated at the Muhlenberg Hospital.

REWARDED AT LAST.

Little Josie Loring's Runaway Match Forgiven by Her Parents.

Josie Loring, the young girl who left her stepfather and eloped with a Plainfield hackman, has become reconciled to her parents, and her husband will now be received by them, although at first they were nearly frantic over the affair.

Josie will not be seventeen years old until December. Her stepfather, Charles Loring, is a dock-builder for the Central Railroad Company. Josie's real name is Donohue. Her father died when she was but two years old, and what money he left her was appropriated by his brother, who fled to Ireland with it.

She was born in Springfield, Mass., where Daniel Donohue, her father, lived in comfortable circumstances.

Her mother came to Elizabeth from Springfield thirteen years ago and married her present husband. The family live at No. 235 Jefferson avenue, Elizabeth. Josie is very pretty and well developed for her years.

She belonged to the Sunday-school of St. John's Episcopal church and was a bright pupil in the Cherry street public school.

Six months ago she left school to go to work as a nurse girl for the family of John Beerbauer, proprietor of the City Hotel, and there she met her hackman sweetheart.

Saturday an Elizabeth Herald representative called at the home of Mr. Loring, 435 Jefferson avenue, to ascertain if possible what truth there was in the above story.

Upon knocking at the door the Herald man was greeted by Mrs. Loring, who from her manner divined at once just what he had called for.

Upon his attempting to refer to the matter Mrs. Loring said with determination: "I have nothing whatever to say on the subject at present. Suffice it to say, that Josie is decently and honorably married."

"Yes," said her questioner, "so I understand, but is there any truth in her having run away and married without the knowledge and consent of her parents."

Mrs. Loring replied that Josie did not run away from home and that she, as her mother, was not ignorant of the contemplated marriage, although she acknowledged that the girl had married against the consent of her parents. "Josie was married where she worked," said Mrs. Loring.

The Herald man was about to question her further when he begged to be excused, saying that she had already been visited by numerous other reporters and was weary of being interviewed.

THAT ELOPEMENT IN "HIGH LIFE."

The following is a sample of how the local correspondents impose on the New York papers:

[Special to the Press.]

PLAINFIELD, N. J., July 31.—Plainfield has another social sensation in the marriage of Rackman Michael Kennedy to Miss Josie Loring, a very pretty young heiress of Elizabeth.

The girl is only seventeen. Her father died when she was very young, leaving her a fortune. Her mother married again and Josie made her stepfather's name. A few weeks ago she came to Plainfield on a visit. Kennedy drove her from the station in his hack. He is handsome, and it seems to be a case of love at first sight with both of them.

During Josie's visit the couple managed to meet each other many times. The friends with whom she was staying got wind of it finally, and sent word to her stepfather, who came on from Elizabeth and took her home.

Last Tuesday the girl made her escape, however, and came on to Plainfield, where she met Kennedy at the railroad station. She told him what had been done to her, and then he suggested marriage. As quick as a flash they could take them to Dunellen, three miles west, they went, where they asked the Methodist minister to marry them. He did so, man and wife they returned to Plainfield.

The girl's people are very angry at the marriage. They cannot touch her money, however, as that is secured to her, and she seems to have the best of it. The couple have settled down in town, where the young man says he will start her husband in business as soon as she gets her money.

They Rode to Plainfield.

A very delightful "safety run" to Plainfield was made by a jolly party of ladies and gentlemen from Elizabeth and Rahway Friday. The meet was at Roselle. The following were among the riders: Miss Demarest, Mrs. Gerow, Miss Nellie Meeker, Miss Ridley, Miss Stacey, Miss Stout, Miss Simpson, Miss Blanche Tucker, Miss Williamson, Mr. Gentle, Mr. Flink, Dr. F. W. Oliver, Will Chamberlain, Dr. C. B. Holmes, Henry Carmen, Bayard Cook, Lew Williamson, and others.

Plainfield was reached at 5.30, and after partaking of cream and refreshments, the line was formed, and before starting for home a short parade was made through the principal streets.

Runaway on Somerset Street.

A horse belonging to Mr. Frank Linke became frightened on Somerset street Saturday afternoon and ran away. At the corner of Front and Somerset streets, the wagon, which contained a load of bottled beer, was overturned and the driver, a boy named Kiely was badly bruised about the body. The breaking of the whiffletree on the wagon was what frightened the animal.

A Conservative Platform.

"It outliberals the Liberals," has been said of the platform on which the English Conservative party will go before the people in the next campaign, and the remark is true. "Anything for votes" is evidently the policy of that shrewd old gentleman, Salisbury. He himself goes so far as to recommend woman suffrage, but it is likely his party will draw the line on this.

It will be remembered with what holy horror the British magazine writers alluded to the American practice of "gerrymandering." But these fine old Tories now propose to do a job of gerrymandering that would be a credit to the most audacious legislature that ever redistricted a state. The population of Ireland has steadily declined since 1845, when it was 8,295,061. It is now only 4,700,000 by the census of 1891. It has diminished nearly a million since the census of 1881. It still has, however, 102 members in the British parliament. London has about the same population, and London has only sixty members in parliament. To cut down the Irish representation according to the decline in population and give the difference to London is an imperative duty, since London, that blessed cockney city, is the stronghold of the Conservative party. Not to equalize thus would be flying in the face of Providence. In the same manner Wales will be redistricted and cut down. The Welsh, it may be remarked, incline to the Liberal side in politics.

The Conservatives announce that they will also advocate a local county government for the counties of Ireland, which will amount to a mild form of local home rule as far as it goes. Another plank in the Tory platform has a powerful leaning toward state socialism. It seems really as though the socialism which has been orated against so much for the past twenty years is to come, if it comes at all, from emperors and old fogy politicians instead of from wild eyed radicals. Emperor William and Lord Salisbury on hands in supporting a state life insurance plan for laboring people in their old age. Another measure the Conservatives will advocate will be the establishment by law of workingmen's boards of arbitration to settle labor difficulties. When it is added to these items the fact that the Conservative party has already put itself on record for free schools in Great Britain we may well wonder how the members can look at one another with straight faces.

A Costly House Boat.

Very jolly indeed will be the house boat Mr. Pierre Lorillard is now building. For him no more glare and dim of watering place hotels, with their high prices, their servants to be tipped outrageously and their staring, hustling crowds.

Mr. Lorillard has ordered to be constructed a flat bottomed, scow shaped steel hull, 96 feet long and 24½ feet beam. On this hull will be built of light pine living rooms for the family. They will be furnished in the most luxurious manner, and have ice house, kitchen and pantry attached. Next in importance comes a library and studio.

All the equipments of a summer cottage will be there, with plenty of room for officers and crew. The boat will be propelled by two engines, but is not built for speed. On the contrary, its fortunate owners can, if they choose, float leisurely forever

Being broad and flat bottomed the craft is well adapted to shallow lakes and rivers. The people living in it can stop for a week's fishing or a day's shooting, or jump over the side and take a swim at their own sweet will. This seems the ideal way for a rich man and his family to take their outing, and even poor men could imitate the plan with advantage.

The old fashioned balloon as a means of air navigation is no longer talked of. The idea has in fact been practically abandoned so far as a long distance machine is concerned, and inventors are now working on a different scheme—that of the aeroplane. By setting planes at an angle to the currents of air the machine is expected to balance itself as a bird floats poised upon its wings. Then the aeroplane will be driven through the air by a steam engine. It would be easy enough to make an airship go if some way could be devised to hold it up in the air while it was being driven forward. Dr. Arthur de Bausset proposes to do this by a method different from the aeroplane idea. He will construct a very long, airtight cylinder. By exhausting three-fourths of the air from this cylinder he expects to make it lighter than the air it displaces. He says he will build one of his ships in time for the World's fair.

The Boston Herald is moved to remark: "The fiend who employs himself in going about newspaper offices correcting the alleged mistakes of newspaper writers is one of the nuisances of the press."

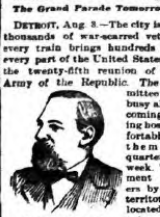
VETERANS AT DETROIT.

Thousands Will Attend the Twenty-fifth Reunion.

THE CITY HAS DONNED GALA ATTIRE

A Remarkably Interesting Programme Has Been Arranged for the Entertainment of the Veterans During the Week. The Grand Parade Tomorrow.

DETROIT, Aug. 3.—The city is filled with thousands of war-scarred veterans, and every train brings hundreds more from every part of the United States to attend the twenty-fifth reunion of the Grand Army of the Republic. The local committee were seen busy all day welcoming the incoming hosts and comfortably locating them in their quarters for the week. The department headquarters and states and territories will be located as follows:



GENERAL VEAZEY.

Arkansas, Connecticut, Illinois, Indiana, Kentucky, Maine, Ohio, Texas, Virginia, Wisconsin and District of Columbia at the Russell house. California, Iowa, Massachusetts, Michigan, New Hampshire, Pennsylvania, Rhode Island, South Dakota, Vermont and Women's Relief corps at the Hotel Cadillac.

Commander Veazey and staff will also have their headquarters at the Hotel Cadillac. Kansas, Minnesota, Missouri, Nebraska and Sons of Veterans at the Hotel Normandie. Delaware will be at the Detroit Light Infantry armory. New York at Perkins' Hotel. New Jersey at the Algers club. Georgia at 38 Clifford street.

Every Division Represented.

The registration committee have so far received notices from over 300 regimental organizations, representing forty-five of the states and territories that there will be present, and quarters have been assigned to all persons and organizations who have applied.

All branches of service in the armies of 1861-65 will be represented, and, what is most uncommon, every one of the divisions in all the armies of the north will be represented.

Already five general camps have been established, accommodations having been assigned to over 30,000 individuals, and yet the resources of the committee on accommodations are by no means exhausted.

Over 40,000 to Be Present.

It is expected that by this evening over 40,000 veterans will have been provided for, while it is known by official canvass that at least half as many more will be guests of citizens making no demand on the citizens' committee.

An idea of the probable attendance of veterans may be gained from the fact that Michigan will send 138 posts, New York 94, Ohio 47, Illinois 28, Massachusetts 14, Pennsylvania 12, Maine 4, California 4, Washington and Oregon 2, Kentucky 4, Wisconsin 9, and so on from all over the country.

In Gala Attire.

The city had made large preparations for the reunion. The triumphal arches, the decorations of public buildings, the display of business houses excel in beauty, variety and extent any similar event in this city.

The Great Parade.

The parade of the veterans on Tuesday promises to be the grandest display ever made by the Grand Army. In numbers and equipments it is expected to go beyond any which have been held in other years. The Illinois veterans have been assigned the right of line and will follow the commander-in-chief and staff. The latter department will march in the following manner: Wisconsin, Pennsylvania, Ohio, New York, Connecticut, Massachusetts, New Jersey, California, Rhode Island, New Hampshire, Vermont, Potomac, Virginia, Maryland, Nebraska, Iowa, Indiana, Colorado and Wyoming, Kansas, Delaware, Georgia, Missouri, Oregon, Kentucky, West Virginia, South Dakota, Washington and Alaska, New Mexico, Utah, Tennessee, Louisiana and Mississippi, Florida and Montana, Texas, Idaho, Arizona, Georgia, Alabama, North Dakota, Oklahoma, Indian Territory, Michigan, Naval Veterans, Sons of Veterans. The junction of Woodward and Adams avenues will be the starting point, the column moving promptly at 10:30 a. m.

The Week's Programme.

Tuesday, Aug. 4—Parade of G. A. R. naval veterans and Sons of Veterans at 10:30 a. m.; 8 p. m., reception and greeting to Commander-in-Chief Veazey and members of the G. A. R. Sons of Veterans and Women's Relief corps at the Detroit rink; 9 p. m., reception at Camp Sherman to the commander-in-chief and veterans of the G. A. R.

Wednesday, Aug. 5—10:30 a. m., fourty-fifth annual session of the national encampment of the G. A. R. at Beecher's Hall; 10:30 a. m., ninth annual convention of the Women's Relief corps at the Church of the Messiah; in the evening there will be a grand naval and pyrotechnic display. There will also be complete at this rink, at the exposition buildings and at the Central Methodist Episcopal church.

Thursday, Aug. 6—10 a. m., adjourned session of the twenty-fifth annual encampment of the G. A. R. at the rink. In the evening there will be a banquet at the rink to the officers and delegates to the national encampment. There will be campfires at Camp Sherman and at the rink in the evening.

Friday, Aug. 7—Riding about the city and excursions to various river and lake resorts, etc., will be the order of the day. The Detroit Light brigade of the First division of the Fifth army corps will hold a review on Wednesday with the Sixteenth Michigan Volunteers. This was General Butterfield's brigade, which had the honor to be detailed to receive the surrender of General Lee's army at Appomattox. The national convention of the ex-prisoners of the war will be held Aug. 5 in the common council chamber; the National Association of Naval Veterans will hold their convention in the court room on Wednesday. On the same day there will be a reunion of army and navy musicians who served during the war. All bands, fife and drum brigade or regimental bands and those who served as buglers, fifers or drummers, whether they have made music a profession since the war or not, are invited to attend.

Election Gossip.

The politics of all the G. A. R. were becoming all day, and the delegates were being buttonholed by the hustlers for the different candidates for commander-in-chief. New York is first on the list with three candidates. They are General H. A. Barnum, of New York city, General John Palmer of Albany, and General I. M. Hedges of Haverstraw. Ohio presents the name of Judge S. H. Hurst. Michigan's favorite is Charles P. Lincoln.

Wisconsin has a candidate who will come near getting the place, and that is Colonel A. G. Weissert. He was one of the leading candidates a year ago and withdrew in favor of Commander Veazey, and it is said by doing this he secured the influence of the commander's friends.

John Smeabury, of California, will come here with a loyal and enthusiastic following, and will present the claim that in twenty-five years the Pacific coast has never been recognized by the Grand Army. It is felt certain that Washington will secure the encampment for '92, that being the understanding when Detroit carried off the prize at Boston last year.

The Washington Delegation.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—A large contingent of Grand Army people left Washington for Detroit Saturday night by the Pennsylvania railway via Niagara Falls and the Lake Shore route. Sunday by the Baltimore and Ohio route. Accompanying the Grand Army representatives was a committee of prominent Washington citizens headed by Commissioner John W. Douglas, who is authorized to invite the Grand Army to hold its encampment at Washington next year. The committee took hundreds of maps of Washington and the surrounding country, showing the battlefields and other points of interest, and a very handsome souvenir volume, finely illustrated and decorated. Ample funds have been subscribed, and the committee is confident of securing the encampment.

Victory at Niagara Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 3.—At noon the train bearing the Vermont delegation arrived over the Rome, Watertown and Ogdensburg road. Attached to the train were six cars bearing the Women's Relief corps and the private car of President Smith, of the Central Vermont railroad, which had been placed at the disposal of Commander-in-Chief Veazey and party. At 3 p. m. the Washington delegation came in about 1,000 strong. Prominent among the party are Secretary Banfield, Proctor, R. N. Bachelor and I. G. Perry.

THE ELECTROCUTION LAW.

Prominent Men Who Think It Should Be Repealed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—The Sun says it proposes to lay before the men of all parties who are nominated to high office in this state, or who are likely to be nominated, two simple questions, as follows:

Are you in favor of maintaining the electrical execution law with all its features as it is?

Or are you in favor of the repeal of the last and essential part of the law of that part of it which forbids the newspapers to ascertain the facts of death when legally inflicted, and to publish them for the information of the people?

Sun reporters have interviewed Hon. Roswell P. Flower, Hon. Edward P. Jones, Judge Alton B. Parker, Hon. William F. Sheehan, Dr. Chauncey M. Depew, the Hon. Cornelius Van Cott, Hon. Stewart L. Woodford and Secretary Tracy, all of whom emphatically declare their decision for a repeal of the section restricting the liberty of the press.

Mayor Chapin, of Brooklyn, expresses the opinion that the law prohibiting the publication of details "will be persistently and success-fully defied, and is, therefore, no law at all." Hon. W. H. Robertson, son, of Westchester, likewise believes that the repeal of the section is only a question of time. Collector Fassett apparently favors the repeal of the gag section, but on the ground that it is odious, or uncon stitutional, or undesirable, but because he thinks it can never be enforced.

LORD SALISBURY'S SCHEME.

He Will Drive William O'Brien Out of Parliament.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—William O'Brien has written in the matter of his bankruptcy, reproaching Lord Salisbury for taking advantage of a legal technicality to drive him from public life, and prevent him from appealing to the house of lords against the judgment of Lord Salisbury's suit against him for libel.

He offers to submit the matter to the arbitration of any three members of the house of commons that Lord Salisbury may select and abide by their decision. The proceedings instituted by Lord Salisbury to have O'Brien adjudicated a bankrupt for non-payment of the costs in the libel suit instituted and gained by Lord Salisbury, would result, if successful, in driving O'Brien from parliament. A bankrupt, unless cleared of his debts, cannot sit in parliament. It is not expected that Lord Salisbury will depart from the regular course of law.

A World's Fair Novelty.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3.—The committee on foreign exhibits of the World's Columbian exposition have recommended the erection at Jackson park, in Chicago, of an exact reproduction of the old convent of La Rabida, at Palos, Spain. It will be remembered that this convent is more closely associate l with the life of Columbus than any other building in the world.

Indian Territory Democrats Meet.

OKLAHOMA CITY, I. T., Aug. 3.—The territorial Democratic convention declared against national banks, denounced the Mckinley bill, demonetization of silver and the alleged extravagance of the last congress. A committee was appointed to investigate the title by which Republican delegate to congress held this office.

Governor Hill Goes Home.

NORMANDIE-BY-THE-SEA, N. J., Aug. 3.—The cost of arms of the state of New York will today be hauled down from the flagstaff on top of the Hotel Normandie. Governor Hill and family will go home. Today has been a guest of General Ferdinand P. Earle for nearly ten days and he had lots of fun bathing, fishing and boating.

Maryland's Big Bessemer Steel Works.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 3.—The first Bessemer steel product in Maryland was blown at Sparrow's Point Saturday by the Maryland Steel company. The mills when in complete operation will have a capacity equal to one-third of the total production of the Bessemer steel works of Great Britain.

General Booth's African Colony.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—It appears that part of the object of General Booth in going to South Africa is to inspect the large tract of land which he has secured in Swaziland for starting his Salvation colony, somewhat on the plan outlined in "Darkest England."

BUTCHERED BY ITALIANS

A Family of Seven Slain by a Frenzied Mob.

FATHER AND SON FOUGHT BRAVELY

But They Were Soon Overpowered. Their Throats Cut, and the Women and Children Left at the Railway Mercy—Many Men with the Brand of Cain.

CATTLETSBURG, Ky., Aug. 3.—Wayne county, W. Va., has been the scene of a series of murders. Mr. Brumfield, his wife and five children have just been murdered in a most horrible manner and their bodies consumed by fire. About midnight fifty Italian railroad laborers became drunk and started on a tour of devastation. The Brumfield family were known to have considerable money. The Italians went to Brumfield's residence and were refused admittance. Doors and windows were then forced open.

The Whole Family Butchered.

Mr. Brumfield, with his two half grown sons, fought with desperation, but were finally murdered, their throats being cut from ear to ear and the bodies repeatedly stabbed. Mrs. Brumfield and her three little children were next killed by the same method. The committee searched the house for money and set it on fire.

The Victims of a Feud.

Mr. Brumfield was influential and wealthy. Two or three years ago, while county commissioner, he opposed the building of a new courthouse, and thus made many enemies. The courthouse was built, and it is thought that this bloody work was the result of the old feud and that Brumfield's enemies supplied the Italians with liquor and then pointed out the path to the residence.

The Shooting of Ingersoll's Secretary.

SING SING, N. Y., Aug. 3.—Isaac Newton Baker, Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll's private secretary, who was shot by Orville Anderson at Croton Landing, is still lingering between life and death with four bullet holes in his body. C. P. Bryington and T. J. Acker found that he was shot in the muscle of the right arm, where the bullet is still lodged. Another bullet entered at his right side and passed through both lungs; one went in his side and came out of his back, while the other struck his elbow and glanced off to his head, making a scalp wound.

Anderson Tells His Story.

Anderson is at present lodged in the village lockup, where he gave his reasons of the shooting. He said he was going to the postoffice about 4 o'clock and met Baker soon after he got off the train. Baker stopped him and proposed that they talk over their differences, as there was not some way of settling their troubles, which were about the apartments of the house occupied. While they were talking Mrs. Baker appeared on the scene and, pointing to Anderson, said that he had insulted her that morning in the hallway.

They Drew Their Revolvers.

Baker then took up what she said and made a motion as if to get his pistol. Anderson says he noticed this and as he pulled his revolver quickly to defend himself. Mrs. Baker then jumped between them. Each man says the other pulled his pistol first; but Anderson was the only one who fired, as Baker's right arm was shattered before he could shoot and his pistol was not discharged.

The Cause of the Trouble.

The Bakers had lived in New York until last April, when they advertised in the newspapers for rooms in the country and received an answer from Mr. Anderson, who had leased the mansion known as the Moody House. Arrangements were made by which Baker occupied up stairs. Everything went on smoothly until recently, when the families began to quarrel about little things, and sneered at each other in the hall. The dividing of the fruit in the orchard was the cause of the most recent disturbances.

Mysterious Shooting Affair at New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—A mysterious shooting occurred early last night in the apartment house 237 West Forty-second street. While Charles C. Goodwin was engaged in writing in his room Bertram Webster, an acquaintance, opened the door, and without uttering a word fired at Goodwin, who fell to the floor with a bullet in his abdomen. Webster coolly walked down stairs and told the janitor that Goodwin was sick and needed a doctor, after which he disappeared. Goodwin will probably die. He is a bachelor, aged thirty-five, and Goodwin is a married man as a boarder.

The police profess to believe that Mrs. Webster, who is young and pretty, is the cause of the shooting.

To Keep a Drunken Husband.

To escape the fury of a drunken husband, Mrs. Bowmeyer, occupying the second floor flat of 632 East Thirteenth street, threw herself out of a rear window of her apartments, receiving internal injuries from the effects of which she may die.

The police think they have a further clew to the murder of William Mc-Laughlin, who was shot in front of 416 East Eighty-ninth street Saturday night, and are now looking for George Halliwey, son of William Halliwey, who is now under arrest. It is alleged that McLaughlin while in Halliwey's house offended the latter's youngest daughter and was taken to task for it by George Halliwey, whose disappearance leads to the suspicion that he did the shooting.

Deadly Affray at a Ball.

DURANGO, Colo., Aug. 3.—During a ball in the Blue mountains Tom Roach, a Ute Indian, escaped, stabbed Frank Hyde and shot William McCord dead. A boy slipped away to a house nearby and securing a Winchester, returned to the ballroom and took aim and fired at Roach, killing Mrs. Walton, an outside lady, living in the community. In the excitement Roach escaped.

Drowned by a Companion.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 3.—Paul Latuski, aged eight years, was drowned in the Mississippi river in this city. It is claimed that Frank Ratinsky, aged twelve, pulled the boy into the river and held him under the water until he was drowned.

Gave His Life for the Cattle.

FITCHBURG, Mass., Aug. 3.—A barn on the city farm was burned and Frank Miller, head farmer, was burned to death while trying to save the horses and cattle.

Closed by the Strikers.

OMAHA, Aug. 3.—The Omaha and Grant Smelting works were closed by the strikers last night. They demanded eight hours work in compliance with the state law.

SIXTEEN CHARGED WITH MURDER.

It Is Said That Killed a Son of King William of Wurtemburg.

PETOSKEY, Mich., Aug. 3.—Warrants are out for the arrest of thirteen men whom William Repke claims assisted him to murder Albert Molitor and its clerk. Ed Sullivan, of Rogers City, sixteen years ago. The men are well known, and some of them hold public offices. Molitor was a natural son of old King William of Wurtemburg and came to this country while quite young, being banished for trying to steal a plan of the fortifications at Ulm.

After coming here he enlisted in the army and soon rose to a place on General Siegel's staff. After the war he went to Detroit, married, and formed a partnership with a man named Rogers. They came to this county and built a mill, improving Germans and Poles to work it. The burning of the mill caused Rogers to draw out. He left Molitor without money. By his influence with the Germans Molitor got himself elected treasurer of the county, and it is said that by manipulating the money and juggling with the funds rebuilt the mill and acquired a great deal of money. He refused to make any accounting and ruled the people with a rod of iron, bringing upon himself, so many people say, the fate he met.

THE HOLY COAT OF TREVES.

It Was Worn by Jesus and Will Soon Be Exhibited.

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The approaching exhibition of the Holy Coat of Treves at that city is creating considerable excitement throughout Germany. The garment is said to be a veritable seamless mantle that was worn by Jesus Christ, and it has been an object of veneration for centuries. The coming exhibition will be the first in this generation and only the fourth time the garments will have been shown within the past three centuries, and its sight is naturally awaited with great interest by Catholics in all parts of the world. In the year 1810 the first Napoleon assented to the garment being shown, but for the second time, but in giving his sanction he added that the working of miracles was to be forbidden on that occasion.

The Holy Coat was found in 1884, and the mantle is said to have been the medium of numerous miracles at that time. The German authorities will not permit any utterances reflecting on the exhibit. The people of Treves are making immense preparations for the influx of pilgrims. The fact that the pope has ratified his approval of the exhibition and sanctioned the forgiveness of the sins of the pilgrims who comply with the religious requirements has been made as widely known as possible.

TERRIBLE TEXAS CATTLE.

A Woman, Two Little Girls and a Cowboy Gored to Death.

ARKANSAS CITY, Kan., Aug. 3.—A report has reached here from the Cherokee country that one of the Neosho river four people were gored to death by Texas cattle. A woman and two little girls were first attacked and literally torn to pieces. A cowboy who came to their rescue them was thrown from his horse and instantly killed.

Riot in a Church.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 3.—Four hundred members of the congregation of St. Ladislaus church engaged in a serious riot in this city Sunday. The congregation is about equally composed of Slavs and Hungarians, who do not affiliate. Both factions met and engaged in a free fight. The police were summoned, and Father Marastowvez was removed to a place of safety, although stones were hurled at him by the infuriated women.

Erastus J. Bassett's Will.

HARTFORD, Aug. 3.—The will of Erastus J. Bassett, of the Ætna Insurance company, will be probated Tuesday next. Most of the estate has been devised in favor of the widow, Mrs. Mary Cleveland Bassett, a cousin of the late President Garfield. The three sons of Mr. Bassett by his first wife have been cut down to $10,000 each. It has not yet been decided whether they will contest the will or not.

The Letter Carriers' Convention.

NEW YORK, August 3.—The second annual convention of the National Association of Letter Carriers will be held in Detroit, August 5, 6, and 7. There are 290 branches, numbering in all a membership of 8,000. The objects of the association are to establish a reliable and economical insurance system and to effect reforms by legislation in their behalf.

The New York Life Attacked.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—Mrs. Maud Thews renews its attack upon the New York Life Insurance company, and publishes the charges made against the executive officer four years ago, and supports them by specifications twenty-eight specific instances in which President Beers and his officers are said to have violated the laws of the state or the by-laws of the company.

A Daring Negro's Leap.

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—An exciting chase was made through the Fourth avenue railroad tunnel by the police last night after a negro ruffian who had insulted women. The negro dropped from the tunnel through an air hole and was nearly killed. His name is Thomas Lawson.

WHO KILLED THIS GIRL?

A Very Mysterious Murder Discovered Near Brooklyn.

THE VICTIM CHOKED TO DEATH.

Found Dead in a Lonely Spot Near Glendale with Finger Marks Upon Her White Throat—A Ring She Wore Bears the Inscription, "M. to H."

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—A mysterious murder, surprisingly similar to that which is known only as "the Rahway case," was discovered yesterday in a swampy field near the village of Glendale, Ridgewood, and Fresh Pond, L. I. The crime is supposed to have been committed on Saturday night. It is like the Rahway mystery in that it was committed in the country; that the victim is a woman unknown to any of the residents of the villages named; that there is very little clew to her identity, that there is nothing which would point to her murderer, and that it is not positively known when the crime was committed.

Cruelly Choked to Death.

This woman, however, was cruelly choked to death. A man who had gone out to pick some blackberries for his Sunday's dinner in the fields found the body of a young woman lying under the shadow of the walls of a new building in the middle of the fields. The marks of finger nails on the throat left no doubt that the woman had been choked to death.

The Victim was Pretty.

The woman was about twenty years of age, of petite figure, with a pretty face, dark hair and eyes. The body was clothed in a black Cashmere dress and Jersey, white underclothing, with the exception of a red flannel petticoat embroidered with white silk, black stockings, French kid gaiter shoes with patent leather tips, a black straw pancake hat trimmed with black ribbon and yellow flowers.

There was a black kid glove on the right hand. On the left hand were two gold rings. One had a Rhine stone and the other a garnet; the latter was engraved "M. to H." An odd pair of gold sleeve buttons and a black bog oak bar breastpin were the only other articles found on the person. Nothing which would give a clew to the identity of the murdered girl could be found—no letters or papers of any description, nor was any money found in the pockets of the dress.

Finger Marks on Her Throat.

The skin of the neck bore five abrasions where, on the left side of the throat, the nails of four fingers had cut into it and the ball of a thumb had penetrated the skin on the right side. The vital organs were in a normal condition. The physician said there was no doubt whatever that she had been choked to death.

The scene of the murder, although almost within gunshot distance of one of the most populous portions of the city of Brooklyn and in full view of passengers on the Manhattan Beach trains, is otherwise about as desolate and uninviting a spot as one would wish to go to.

Was She Murdered There?

There are circumstances which clearly indicate that the body had not been laying where found or in the open air before 10 o'clock Saturday night. The girl's clothing was perfectly dry. The garments had not even been wet. As it rained very heavily in the morning, up to nearly 10 o'clock that night, the clothing would undoubtedly have been soaked.

Another mystery about the case is whether the murdered girl was alive or dead at the time her body was placed where it was found. It is beyond all probability that she would wander or deliberately go alone to the place, so it is likely that her murderer was skulking around there awaiting a victim.

No Signs of a Scuffle.

If the murder was committed on the spot where the body was found the murderer and victim went there either by the blind path from Myrtle avenue or the private road from Cypress Hill station.

In that case the girl was probably lured by her companion to the spot because of its loneliness and for an evil purpose, and was choked in a moment of passion or from fear. The absence, however, of any disturbance of the outer or underclothing and the good order of her attire and hair, together with the fact that there are no signs of a scuffle on the soft ground, have given rise to a theory that the crime was committed elsewhere and the body was carried to the place after death.

In Love with His Own Sister.

DANBURY, Conn., Aug. 3.—Thirteen years ago Erastus Beckett came to Danbury, having left in England a wife and four children. Six years ago Beckett married a Danbury girl. Last year his oldest son, John Beckett, went to England and met the oldest daughter of Erastus Beckett and his deserted wife. The young man, unconscious of their relationship to Erastus, fell desperately in love with the girl, and secured her promise to marry him. She has just arrived here and they have discovered their relationship. John says he will marry her just the same.

WORK THAT GIRLS DO.

FILEMAKING REQUIRES MANY SKILLFUL YOUNG WOMEN.

The Work Is Trying on the Body—Good Eyes Are Necessary, and Girls' Seem to Be the Steadiest Ones for the Delicate Handiwork—Something About Files.

The file trade is peculiar in this way, said a prominent file dealer the other day. It depends on the other trades. Although in nearly every business a file is used, and these tools are always in demand, when it comes to such trades as carriage making, where files are necessities, the busier the carriage maker the more files he needs and the brisker the file business.

If the machine shops are busy we are all the busier for it, and they are not so much the worse for us. Sometimes we are busy all the year round, for when one trade is dull the other has a great deal to do. Some of these factories use an immense number of files, safe manufacturers generally buying in quantities of from twenty-five to fifty dozen, and I have in mind some well known tool works where twenty-to thirty boxes, or $1,000 worth, of files are used every season.

This is not exceptional, but merely gives a slight idea of how many files are in use.

The firm of manufacturers from whom we buy turns out from 1,000 to 1,200 dozen files a week. Formerly, about forty years ago, all files were made by hand, but with the enormous demands of today machinery is necessary. By hand a file maker can turn out about two dozen 14-inch files daily.

This is far less than machines can do, and the result is that hand made files are twice as dear as machine made ones, which compensates any loss of fineness and durability in the machine made file, because if the latter were to wear out twice as fast as the former use of it would not cost any more. The fact is that the hand made files do last longer than the others, but then the machine made files are cut more accurately.

Some hand cut files are still used, and especially for very fine work, such as jewelers' and dentists' work, and those instruments are made by the French-Swiss girls. They take pieces of good quality steel—all files must be made of good steel —and with chisels and hammers run the cuts along the metal.

WHY GIRLS ARE PREFERRED.

The reason girls do this work is because their hands are lighter and more accurate than men's, and the work they do is positively beautiful. Some of it is so delicate that you could run your hand over the file and not perceive any roughness, and sometimes a piece of steel so thicker than a sheet of paper is cut for a file on both sides of it, set by hand with hammer and chisel and unerringly, as you may know, for a single miscut might spoil the whole thing.

It is not easy to imagine this, and one would also think that the work is too arduous for girls, but it is not. Almost every filemaker I ever saw was healthy, and I never knew one to wear glasses, though plenty of them are old men.

The only difficulty in filemaking is the stooping position in which the worker must sit all day. The steel in works is notes hard as the file on the market. The metal is made as soft as possible for the workers in the shop. When the bar of steel enters the factory it is forged into pieces of metal the size and shapes of files.

Then about 100 of these are put into an air-tight furnace, when they are heated to a dark red heat, which is the limit for annealing. Then the five is turned off and the files are left to cool, a process sometimes lasting two or three days; in fact, the more slowly the cooling is done the softer the metal.

When the files are removed from there they are taken to the various machines, where they are to be cut, and years back this was the stage of the process when they were given out to be done by hand.

The men always cut the same sizes of files, because when a man was used to and expert at cutting one sort of file he would not cut any other. If he were a workman on rough files and tried to cut a fine one he would always make it too coarse, even while thinking he was making it too fine.

HOW FILES ARE CUT.

Each man had his set of chisels, which were of one size, and with which he did his cutting. He first made one stroke, and the pressure of the chisel against the part of the metal raised by this incision gave him guidance for the next stroke. In this way these men became so expert that they did not have to look when they were cutting and yet they made no mistakes.

After the machine has cut the files they are reheated for tempering, and as the object is to harden them as much as possible as soon as the proper heat has been attained the files are plunged into cold brine. If any saw or something of that sort. These things were also guarded against in handmade files, which for some reason or other used to average about sixteen or eighteen inches in length, while machine made files average about fourteen inches.

Files are made anywhere from two to twenty inches in length, but of late years the work of the large files has been superseded by the emery wheel, and so has the work of gumming saws—e., sharpening their teeth.—Cincinnati Times-Star.

Mrs. Wesley and Her Children's Education

Mrs. Susanna Wesley was very much in advance of her age in one particular, and that was in waiting till her little ones were five years old before teaching them to read. Many children at five years were taught the alphabet at two, and could read quite fluently at three, while of a noted Scotch divine his biographer tells that at three he had mastered the Greek as well as the English alphabet, and at five was wrestling with the Greek Testament. Nor was this considered precocious or singular. So, Mrs. Wesley displayed independence as well as discretion by waiting till the fifth birthday had come before her tiny men and women were brought into the schoolroom. —Margaret E. Sangster in Harper's Young People.

The bathroom in Mrs. William H. Vanderbilt's residence was regarded upon the completion of the mansion as the handsomest private bathroom in America at that time.

KOSCIUSKO'S HORSE.

How This Animal Gave Indication of His Owner's Character.

There is a story told of a precise old gentleman who, having purchased a pony for driving, was annoyed by the animal stopping at every public house which he passed in his drives. The pony gave sure indication of the habits of its former owner. The horse of Kosciusko, the celebrated Polish general, appears to have had a different training.

When the Polish leader was living in exile in Switzerland he wished to send a few bottles of choice wine to a clergyman who dwelt at Solothurn. He intrusted the wine to a young man named Zeltner, lending him his own horse on which to perform the journey. Young Zeltner set out with the basket of bottles and was canter-ing along the road when a poor man approached, and pulling off his hat asked for alms. The horse immediately came to a full stop and refused to move for either coaxing or threats. This was awkward for the young man, who had no money, and the horse seemed to be waiting for something; but a bright idea seized him. He plunged his hand into his empty pocket and pretended to take out some money and made a motion as if putting it in the poor man's hat. This he had no sooner done than the animal trotted on again.

After going on for some distance another beggar pulled off his hat, and the horse again stood still. This time Zeltner was prepared for the occasion, and pretended to put money in the man's hat; the animal went on his way quite satisfied. The wine was duly delivered to the clergyman, and Zeltner, having encountered during the journey several mendicants, all of whom he induced the horse to pass by pretending to give them something, returned to Kosciusko and told him he would never ride his horse again unless he also lent him his purse.

"Why so?" asked Kosciusko. And then the young man, much to the general's amusement, narrated the incidents of the journey and how he was obliged to pretend to give something to the poor beggars in order to satisfy the horse.

An Amazed African.

There is nothing which causes so much wonder in the mind of the savage as the arts of reading and writing, and many amusing tales are told of his inability to understand how "talking paper" works.

An African named Mungo was once sent by one missionary to another with a present of cocoanuts. As it was a hot day and he was thirsty, he ate two of them by the way. When he handed over the others to the missionary, what was his astonishment to hear the latter remark, after reading the note that accompanied the present, "How carelessly you must have carried the basket; twenty nuts were sent and here are only eighteen."

As the missionary did not make much of it Mungo did not enter into particulars, but he was greatly puzzled. It was evident that the note had given the information, for as soon as he read it the missionary counted the nuts, and so the perplexed messenger concluded that the paper had been watching him all the time that he committed the theft.

Shortly after he was sent again on a similar errand, but in this occasion he was determined to circumvent the "fetish paper," and so before helping himself to the three fine, fleshy nuts of which he was in need on the road, he hid the telltale letter under a stone and retired to some distance from it. Having finished his repast he went back for the nuts, and entered with confidence the missionary's house.

"All the nuts here dis yere time, massa," he said jauntily.

"Except the three you ate coming along," answered the missionary after consulting the note.

Mungo's amazement was now beyond the power of words to describe, and from that day forward he might have been trusted with uncounted cowries, if only a scrap of "fetish paper" were sent along with them.

Fred and the Clock.

CHANGES IN ONE SHORT HOUR.

"Tick, tock, goes the clock."
Grumbled little Fred.
"Just at six I have my tea,
At seven I go to bed."
—St. Nicholas.

An Easy Question.

"Who can tell me the chief use of bread?" asked the teacher of the oral class.
Quick up popped a tousled curly head,
And up spoke a little black eyed lass,

Much astonished any one should ask
That which could be answered with such ease:
"Surely it were but an easy task!
"It's to spread the jam on, if you please!"

BASEBALL PAYING.

The National Game Again Making Big Profits.

THIS SEASON WILL BE A SUCCESS.

Not Only the Big Leagues but the Minor Organizations as Well Are Making Money—Contract Jumpers—The Cincinnati Muddle—Gossip of the Week.

That baseball is again a popular American game goes without saying, and the crowds this year have been more than the most ardent crank expected. In fact the crowds that have turned out to see the League games in the east have been of the largest in the history of baseball.

The League magnates are well pleased with the outlook, and many of the dollars that were lost last year will surely return before the grand windup this fall. Not only is the League making money and playing good ball, but the American association, Western association, Eastern association, New England league and most of the minor organizations are doing excellent work and drawing good crowds. This is quite a contrast with the state of affairs at this time last year. Those who remember that disastrous season will readily recall that smashup was the order of the day then. Many went under before the Fourth of July was reached.

The only event that has so far marred a successful season is the action of the American association in going it alone and defying the national agreement. The Association magnates profess to be well pleased with the state of affairs; but it is an acknowledged fact with those on the inside that overtures are now being made and that before the end of the season the American association will probably be under the wing of the national agreement again.

Of course, before a settlement comes, many hard nuts will have to be cracked. There are the Cincinnati muddle and the contract jumpers. Both the League and the Association swear they will not give up Cincinnati. Both of the home magnates say they will stick. Well, let them. That can be easily arranged. There is no doubt that with perfect harmony existing two clubs could live in Cincinnati if all were under the one agreement banner.

The Association magnates all over the country, while claiming that they are all right in going it alone, realize the fact that things would be much better if they were not fighting the League and Western association. In fact, in a published interview with President Al Reman, of the Cincinnati club, he advocated a new national agreement, and said it would have to come.

But the nut that will not crack will be the contract jumpers. Manager Ray Raymond, with their eyes wide open, jumped their contracts to play with Jack Chapman's Louisville team. The national board at once blacklisted both of them, and any one that has followed baseball knows what that means—that they will never play ball under the national agreement again, and will follow in the footsteps of Devlin, Hall, Nichols and Craver. These four men were blacklisted years ago and have never been reinstated.

Players, no matter who they are, will be foolish to jump their contracts, for in the long run it will mean a great deal.

The race for first place is more than interesting, and the respective followers of Chicago, New York, Boston and Brooklyn all claim that their team will land the pennant. The teams are closer this year than ever before, and no doubt the finish will be a close and exciting one.

The followers of Captain Anson—and they are many—look around and smile when you mention the possibility of Chicago losing the pennant this year. "Why," said Tom Burns the other day, "Chicago was never better off. You know we always make a strong finish, and this year will be no exception to the rule, except the same. You can gamble the pennant will float over our grounds."

In New York the cranks are just as confident. If the flag does not go to the Polo grounds there will be weeping and wailing in Gotham.

Johnny Ward is on deck again, and since his return the club has been playing better ball and much is expected from them.

Most of the clubs are after pitchers. In fact all the Association teams are looking for the youngsters that can twist the sphere. The club that can hold its young blood will not only land well up this year, but will make a greater showing in 1892. Young blood will tell, and already several of the old timers have been relegated to the rear and the youngsters that were brought out last year are more than filling their places.

An association that is playing good ball and making good money is the Eastern association, comprising Buffalo, Syracuse, New Haven, Albany, Providence and Lebanon. This coterie has been going right in midfield ever since it reached, and from all accounts making money. Pat Powers, a well known hustler, is at the head of the Buffalo club, and they are well up in the front. President White, whose office is in New York, said last week that all the clubs were playing to large crowds and making money.

The New England league has not been so fortunate, and already the flag of distress has been flung. Tom Lovell, the president of the league, is well known in eastern baseball circles, and is now working hard to keep her afloat. Some time ago Woonsocket and Lewiston were taken in and an eight club league is now in working order.

There was a chance a few weeks ago of the Western association losing a great many of its stars, as two or three of the Association clubs sent agents out to steal the cracks. They could only induce two of them to go—Meekim and Raymond—but where would surely follow but for the prompt action of the board of control in blacklisting. This order has had its effect, and it will be hard to get any of the that is now under contract to jump.

How the stars have fallen! Take Mike Kelly, Dan Brouthers and Jerry Denny. With President Al Reman, of the Cincinnati club, he advocated a new national agreement, and said it would have to come.

But the nut that will not crack will be the contract jumpers. Manager Ray Raymond, with their eyes wide open, jumped their contracts to play with Jack Chapman's Louisville team. Lemon Cake.

Cream together two cupfuls of sugar with two-thirds of a cupful of butter, add the beaten yolks of three eggs, then the beaten whites, two-thirds of a cupful of milk, three and one-half cupfuls of flour, and at the last the juice of one lemon. A little more than half a teaspoonful of soda should be sifted with the flour before this is mixed in, or it may be beaten in just before stirring in the lemon juice.

Chicken Custard.

Mince finely the white meat of a chicken; place in the bottom of a small pie dish and season with pepper and salt; moisten with a little stock. Let the pie dish be half full of meat. Make a custard of quarter of a pint of milk, two eggs well beaten, yolks and whites whipped separately; beat up with the custard two ounces of grated cheese. Pour the custard over the meat and bake in the oven.

Raspberry Ice.

Make a syrup with three quarts of water and four pounds of sugar, add the juice of two lemons and one quart of strawberry or raspberry juice, then freeze.

Pleasing Toilets.

In the illustration here presented are shown two stylish toilets worthy of description. In one the jacket and plain skirt of the dress is in grape and heliotrope checked silk. The jacket bodice is enhanced with a Louis Philippe large necktie in white lace. The stylish little capote is in gold tissue with mercury's wings.

SUMMER TOILETS.

In the second figure is illustrated a gown with a round bodice finished with a circular hip belt. The skirt is in dove gray cloth and is embroidered with lover's knots, outlined with steel beads. The belt, in drawn lace, is trimmed with an upstanding bow of lace, in front of which rise two heliotrope loops finished off with earlike ends in lemon colored velvet.

Veils with very tiny spots are used.

—Some day railroads will have in them no dangerous and deadly curves. Over half the disastrous collisions and a large percentage of run-offs are caused by curves. Of course, it will sometimes be found difficult to straighten out a curve and keep a legitimate grade; but if the laws required all railroads to go straight in all cuts and, other dangerous places some plan would be devised by which this could be done.—Dallas Tex. Most of these gentlemen take their cameras with them on their vacations to the shore, for the ocean views and cloud effects only obtainable by the sea. They question the right of anyone to prevent their carrying what they please. The next move of Monopolist Bradley will probably be to curtail the quantity of ozone breathed.

—To save the gold and strengthen the case of watches, Joseph Fahy, a clever lad, born in French Switzerland nearly half a century ago, rolled out two plates of gold and putting a plate of composition metal between them, a "filled case." Since then he has brought the process to perfection, and his filled cases are now known to every jeweler on earth. They are not plated cases. They would, without the composition metal filling, be a double case thicker than heavy writing paper.—New York Truth. The above explanation will be news to most of the many owners of heavy gold-case watches in this city.

THE CROPS IN JERSEY.

Peaches Are Plentiful, but Somewhat Off in Color and Size.

The crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report that during the week ending Friday, July 31, the rainfall has been above the weekly average and very evenly distributed; also, that the temperature and sunshine have been below the normal, cool and cloudy weather generally prevailing. These conditions have been most favorable to the growth of all crops, except vine truck, which is somewhat retarded. Corn is reported to be in a most promising condition in all sections, and the prevailing cool weather has not affected its growth.

Oats are being threshed and the yield will be from forty to fifty bushels per acre.

"A few words relating to crop prospects and prices may be of use to those who receive this Crop Bulletin, aside from the weekly returns of correspondents of the Bureau. Fruit is abundant and the market is kept well supplied, with prices tending downward. Peaches seem to be ripening imperfectly, being destitute of fine color, flavor and size. Should continuous warm weather prevail from this time until the crop is finished, later varieties may improve in the particulars named.

Potatoes also are falling lower in price, but the prospect for a full crop the State over is not certain. The present outlook for corn, even though sufficient rain and warmth should be supplied, will not warrant the hope of a full crop. Cool and dry weather in many parts of the State have made the crop about two weeks behind its usual growth at this date, and should cool nights prevail during August it will not reach perfect results."

Reckless Driving.

Yesterday afternoon a young man named Sharkey, who was under the influence of liquor, while out driving with a companion, began running his horse. But for the strenuous efforts of Sharkey's sober companion, the inebriate would have been thrown out and doubtless badly injured. The last seen of them was far out Somerset street the horse still going at a gallop.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

THE TWENTY-FOURTH MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

The Combine Refuses to Appropriate Money to Examine the Books.—The Sewerage Ordinance Passed on its Second Reading, Regardless of the Big Five's Objections. Other Business.

The City Common Council met in regular session last evening. It was 8.40 o'clock when the meeting was called to order. Besides the president, Messrs. Ackerman, Gallup, Ginna, Hetfield, Johnston, Moffett, Roberts, Rushmore, See and Spangenberg responded to roll call.

The minutes of the two previous meetings were read and approved, notwithstanding the objections of Mr. Ackerman. He thought that the minutes did not read right. He said that he thought they were misleading, and that when the motion was made at the last meeting to reconsider the vote on the Waterings ordinance, he and several other members voted against it, but in his opinion the minutes read as though the motion was unanimously carried.

Mr. Hetfield said that the chair stated the motion before it was carried and moved that the minutes be approved as read.

Mr. Ackerman called for the ayes and nays.

A roll call showed that the motion had been carried by a vote of 6 to 5.

A communication from the trustees of St. Mary's church to the effect that an Electric Light had been removed from the vicinity of the church, and petitioning Council to replace it, was read.

Mr. Spangenberg moved that the communication lay on the table.

The motion prevailed.

Mrs. M. A. Hines and others also petitioned for a light in that vicinity. This petition followed the same course as its predecessor.

In a communication Assessor Hubbard notified Council that it would be necessary for them to meet on the third Monday in August to examine the Assessors books and fix up the tax duplicate. Later on in the proceedings, on motion of Mr. Ackerman it was decided to meet that evening.

Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, in a communication invited Council to be present at a banquet to be given this month in the Crescent Rink, which was read and on motion the invitation was accepted.

Corporation Counsel Craig A. Marsh petitioned for a month's vacation as he wished to take a trip abroad. His request was granted.

The following communication from Mayor Gilbert was read:

Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield.

GENTLEMEN.—While you are considering amendments relating to the sale of liquor I desire to inform you that through trustworthy information I have reason to believe that the ordinance as it relates to the sale of liquor on Sunday is being constantly violated by several of the licensed saloons.

The charter makes it the duty of the mayor to see that the ordinances of the city are enforced, and while I am both willing and anxious to fulfill this requirement, I find it extremely difficult to obtain the evidence necessary to secure a conviction for violations of the ordinance referred to. I would suggest therefore, an amendment to the ordinance which shall provide that from 12 p. m. Saturday until 6 a. m. Monday no window, blind, curtain, screen or other article shall be placed on left ans to obstruct a full view from the street of the interior of any saloon licensed by the Common Council to sell liquor.

That it shall be the duty of every party licensed to sell liquor in this city, so to arrange the doors and windows of his or her saloon, that a full and unobstructed view of the interior thereof can, during the hours mentioned, be had from the street, through an opening in the door at the entrance thereto, or through the windows, or through both.

That a failure to comply with these provisions shall subject the offending party to a forfeiture of his or her license.

This will render it easy to detect violations of the ordinance, and cannot be objected to except by those who desire to violate it.

Respectfully submitted,

A. GILBERT, Mayor.

Mr. Ackerman moved that it be received and referred to the Corporation Counsel.

An amended motion to the effect that it be referred to the Laws and Ordinance Committee, prevailed.

The monthly statements of the Collector and Treasurer were read and ordered filed.

Mr. Ginna from the License Committee reported that the application of Jas. J. Day for a license to keep a saloon on West Third street, conformed with the requirements of the law.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the license be granted. The motion was lost by a vote of 8 to 5.

A resolution offered by Mr. Ackerman to the effect that Council be authorized to borrow $5,500, in anticipation of taxes, was adopted.

WHAT DOES THIS MEAN?—ARE THE MEMBERS OF THE COMBINE AFRAID TO HAVE THE BOOKS EXAMINED?

Mr. Ackerman from the Finance Committee offered a resolution to the effect that $200 be appropriated for the purpose of employing an expert to examine the books of the City Collector and Treasurer.

In support of this motion Mr. Ackerman said that although he had no suspicion that there was anything wrong, he thought as the books had not been examined for several years by an expert it was a wise move to employ one, and further stated that the citizens and taxpayers would think that that amount of money had been expended wisely.

Mr. Hetfield objected to the appropriation because it was to be drawn from the general fund and said that the Finance Committee should have asked for it earlier in the year.

Mr. Ginna was of the opinion that it would be wise to adopt the resolution.

Mr. Hetfield said he did not think it was right for Mr. Ackerman to ask for that amount of money for such a purpose and he did not think it was right for Council to appropriate it.

Mr. Ackerman thought that the action of Council, if the resolution was adopted, would be approved by the citizens, and urged its passage.

President Smith thought the resolution should lay on the table for the present.

Mr. Ackerman.—"I object. I feel satisfied that everything is all right this year, but I want to go back and examine the books of previous years.

The motion to appropriate $200 was lost by a vote of 6 to 5. All the members of the combine voted in the negative.

On motion of Mr. Ackerman the Committee on Fire and Buildings were instructed to purchase a horse for Alert Hose Company at a cost not to exceed $250.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the Committee on Fire and buildings be instructed to exchange one of Gazelle Engine Company's horses at a cost not to exceed $75.

An ordinance concerning the use and repair of streets was introduced, passed on its second reading, ordered engrossed and duly advertised.

Mr. Hetfield introduced an ordinance to prohibit the giving of concerts in saloons or any room adjoining. The ordinance was ordered engrossed and advertised after its passage on the second reading.

J. M. Low & Co., asked Council through a communication, to rescind an agreement accepting his proposal for a sewerage system to enable him to present a similar proposal as corrected.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the communication be received and that the contract be rescinded.

Mr. Ginna claimed that the city had entered into no contract with Mr. Low.

Mr. Hetfield said that the Council had accepted the contract and that now they wanted to rescind it.

Mr. Ackerman, for his personal information requested the clerk to read from the minutes the extract bearing on the subject.

After it had been read Mr. Spangenberg reminded Mr. Ginna that he was not present at the meeting.

Mr. Ackerman then moved to amend Mr. Hetfield's motion by referring the matter to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances.

The motion was lost.

Mr. Hetfield then offered the proposition of J. M. Low & Co.

After it had been read he moved that the contract and specifications be accepted and that the Mayor and Clerk be instructed to enter into a contract with Mr. Low.

Mr. Ackerman requested the ayes and nays on the question.

Mr. Hetfield retorted "me too."

Mr. Ackerman then addressed the Council as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT:—It seems to me that the arguments that have been presented by our worthy Mayor and by this side of the house, should have some weight with the gentlemen on the other side of the house when they come to re-introduce an agreement and ordinance of this kind for we as well as you represent a considerable portion of the taxpayers, and are equally as much interested in the growth and health of the city as you are.

This promise being indisputably so, why is it that no attention whatever is paid to our wishes in the matter that to grant a franchise of this kind, will work an injury to the city?

Why should a stranger be given the privilege to erect and maintain in our midst a private system of sewerage when competent and reliable declare that by doing the city may be doing a great injury?

This is a plain pertinent fact, gentlemen, and your constituents will feel that every Councilman voting for this proposed franchise has been recreant to the trust reposed in him, unless a good plain and satisfactory reason can be given why such Councilman voted the interests of the city away. I contend, as I have before, that haste should not be exercised in matters of this kind, that as the proposed contract contains a provision that the city may purchase the system after a term of years, it is highly important that some competent engineer in the city supervise the work, and ascertain its original cost, in order that an extravagant figure may not be demanded should such time ever come.

As far as I can see, there is nothing in the proposed specifications binding its counsel to supervise the work in the slightest extent. The pipes are to be laid to such lines and grades as the Engineer and contractor may designate, and all the pipes, sewer, bends, branches, manholes, flushholes, covers, castings and flushing tanks to be placed at such points as said Engineer or the Engineer in charge shall direct.

The gentlemen on the other side of the house have on various occasions held up their hands in horror at the mention of the word "bonds," but at the same time they contemplate foisting upon the community a contract and ordinance whereby the bonding may become possible without submitting the question to popular approval. Don't overlook this fact gentlemen. The Councilmen on this side of the house take no such view of the matter. While equally anxious to buy the city possess the latest improvements in sanitary arrangements, they desire to impose no unasked for taxation upon the citizens.

An opportunity for a popular expression as to what should be done, was requested but was not even humbled laborer, as well as to the largest taxpayer, to say whether he will consent to an improvement or not. Why deny the humble working-man of this privilege and place this great power in the hands of a few?

Then again, experience has conclusively proved that in matters relating to the disposition of municipal sewerage the city and not a private individual should have control of the same, for the variest tyro in business affairs can see that to make money is the aim of the individual, and often at the expense of the community, by omitting necessary repairs to their plant, or failing to make improvements from time to time. If we do not provide for the health of the city, by rejecting strenuously to such contemplated action, will we not be held responsible?

We must not forget we are the servants of the people and everything we do must be for the greatest good to the greatest number, and our action to-night may be of far wider scope than we can possibly contemplate at this time. Therefore, fellow Councilmen, I entreat you to move cautiously, to postpone all action upon this contract at the present time and give the people an opportunity next Fall to say whether or not they desire the advantages that would accrue to the community by the city gradually building its own system of sewers.

Therefore, Mr. President, deeming it highly inexpedient to proceed further with the matter at the present time, I desire to be recorded as voting in the negative.

Mr. Rushmore also objected to the passage of the ordinance and said that there were a number of objectionable features. Continuing he said: "Both the corporation counsel and the exchancellor thought that "each and every" should be inserted in every clause. We never saw this agreement. It is different from the other one. I think it is wrong that we should be asked to enter into an agreement that we have never before seen. It seems to me that it would be as well to lay the matter on the table until we have had a chance to investigate it."

The motion to accept the contract was adopted.

Mr. Hetfield then introduced an ordinance granting a franchise for sewerage to J. M. Low & Co.

Mr. Ackerman moved that the ordinance be referred to the Laws and Ordinance Committee.

His motion was lost by a vote of 6 to 5.

On motion of Mr. Hetfield the ordinance was passed on its second reading, ordered engrossed, and duly advertised.

Mr. Rushmore reported back the ordinance referring to the repair of streets and stated that as the Corporation Counsel was absent the Committee would not report on it.

Notwithstanding Mr. Rushmore's report Mr. Spangenberg moved it be placed on its second reading.

The motion prevailed.

The ordinance was afterward, on motion of Mr. Gallup, ordered engrossed and advertised by a vote of 6 to 5.

On motion of Mr. Hetfield the thanks of the Council were extended to the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company and the Central Railroad Company for donations which enabled Council to repair North avenue in the vicinity of Netherwood.

Mr. Hetfield also made a motion thanking Councilman Spangenberg for being instrumental in securing the donations.

On motion of Mr. Hetfield the Corporation Counsel was instructed to submit his opinion as to whether or not the Plainfield Water Supply Company had a right to erect hydrants.

After the Auditing Committee reported the bills correct, the meeting adjourned.

DELIBERATE SUICIDE.

An Unknown Man Jumps in Front of a Swift Flying Train.

Yesterday morning as the Woodbride and Perth Amboy train on the Pennsylvania railroad, which leaves New York at 10.10 o'clock, was midway between the Emmet street station at Newark and Bound creek near Waverly, and unobserved by any one, from his appearance, was a laborer, committed suicide by throwing himself directly in front of the engine.

Death was instantaneous, the iron horse cutting the upper part of his body in pieces. The engineer saw the man throw himself in front of the engine when the engine was within ten feet of him.

The suicide having occurred in Essex county the body was taken to Newark.

To Keep Wet Shoes From Mould.

[From the Ladies' Home Journal.]

When you come home with wet feet don't throw aside your boots to get hard and mouldy. Stand them up, put them in shape and then fill them with oats, such as they feed to horses. This will, in a few hours, draw all the moisture out of the leather, keeping the boot in shape meanwhile and leaving it soft and pliable. The oats can be used again and again. This is a relic of the days when no railroads existed and travelling was done under difficulties and in weather the present generation has no conception of.

What's in a Name?

"People might select names for their children with a better discretion if they were acquainted with the very expressive meanings borne by many of their personal designations in the language, said a linguistic professor to a writer of the Washington Star. "Some of them have rather funny significations. For example, a woman named Bernhardt, Ursula is a 'female bear,' Priscilla is a 'little ancient,' and Cecilia is 'dim sighted.' Barbara signifies 'foreign,' Abel is 'vanity,' Bernard is a 'bear's heart' and Caleb is 'a dog.' Daniel is 'judgment of God' and Raphael is 'medicine of God.'

Ever so many English names have very beautiful meanings. Beatrice is "making happy," Letitia is 'joy,' Mabel is 'my fair,' Selina is 'a nightingale,' Susan is a 'lily,' Sarah is 'a lady,' Rebecca is 'faithful,' and Lydia is 'a well of water.'" What is prettier than Margaret, which signifies 'a pearl,' or then Amelia for 'sincere,' or then Sophia for 'wisdom,' or then Katherine for 'pure,' or then Adeline for 'a princess?' Bertha is 'bright,' Charlotte is 'all noble,' Cornelia is 'harmonious,' Caroline is 'noble spirited,' Harriett is 'a sweet perfume,' and Jane is 'a willow.' Again, Henrietta is, properly translated, 'a star,' Judith is 'praising,' Selma is 'sweet song,' Isabella is 'fair Eliza,' Agatha is 'good,' Felicia is 'happy,' Lucy is 'constant,' Muriel is 'myrrh,' and even humble sounding Bridget is 'shining bright.'"

On the subject of execution by electricity The Christian Union asks and answers three important questions as follows: "1. Has the state done right in substituting instantaneous and painless death by electricity for prolonged and often torturing death by the gallows? Yes. 2. Has it done wisely to exclude representatives of the press from such scenes of homicide? Yes. 3. Is the execution of murderers by the state a justifiable homicide? In some cases, yes; in the Empire State in this Nineteenth century, no."

The war in Chili has been, curiously enough, a godsend to wholesale merchants in San Francisco. Chili has been unable to produce her usual supply of wheat and food for export to the neighboring republics. The Yankees of South America are this year engaged in intersecine war, deadly and destructive. Consequently, the other South American republics look to the west coast of North America for wheat and provisions, and trade in San Francisco has been more active this summer than in any other city.

British Literary Style.

The London Times is grieved in its inward parts because it fears that the American international copyright law will ruin the style of British authors, notably British novelists. They will have a very large constituency now on this side of the Atlantic, larger than at home. And The Times has a concern lest they will consciously modify their work to catch the dollars of their American cousins, thereby injuring that work in the direction of high art.

This would be sad indeed. The average British novelist whose work floats upon the palpitating sea of the American reading public has just three stories to tell. They are either the doings of lords and ladies in high life, the horsey and army novel or the sea story. With these the British novelist seems to be at the end of his type, temper, perhaps, when he can weave in a little thread of hypnotism.

We are very tired of these three themes. The style has been just the same for the past twenty-five years. It has become set and crystallized. Nothing short of an earthquake could break it up, and British literature is not given to earthquakes. The Times may rest its soul in peace. The British literary style cannot be hurt by the American copyright law.

A State's Paupers.

New York keeps the vital statistics of public paupers carefully and thoroughly, and the latest report presents some features of interest to the general public.

In the state during 1890 the whole number of persons obtaining public relief was 125,209. This makes about 1 pauper to every 42 of New York's population, a showing not as bad as England's, where 1 person in 33 is a pauper; still, for the empire state of the American republic it is bad enough. Under paupers are included in the New York report, however, not only those wholly dependent on the public fund for support, but persons receiving occasional assistance.

New York spent in relieving her poor in 1890 $3,087,185. In the county poorhouses the paupers perform considerable labor, which saves the state somewhat. In 1889 their work amounted in a saving to the commonwealth of $71,887. This sum was within a thousand dollars of enough to pay the salaries of superintendents of the county poorhouses. This, however, the reader will perceive, amounts to less than sixty cents per head earned in a year by all of New York's paupers. In the pauper colonies of Germany every individual, however old, young or weak, is obliged to do some kind of work.

Poorhouse farms in New York comprise 9,381 acres. At the beginning of 1890 30,990 paupers lived in the county houses, and at present there are 17,647 inmates. Statistics of the sex of paupers make a curious exhibit. Of paupers living permanently in the poorhouses there are about a thousand more females than males. But in figuring up the whole number of persons obtaining state relief the figures are so strongly the other way as to be startling. In spite of the supposed weakness and disability of women in the labor field, in spite of the small wages paid them and the comparatively few occupations open to them, New York has 15,479 more male paupers than female ones. The tramps go to swell this sum total heavily. They are quite willing to be supported by the public, but they insist at the same time on their freedom; otherefore they choose to be tramps.

There are other striking figures. One set of these faces us when we look at the nativity of the paupers. There are 83,682 of them foreign born, while much less than half—33,696—are natives of the United States. It does, indeed, look as if Europe was unloading her paupers upon the United States, particularly upon New York.

ALLIANCE MEN ON TOP.

They Will Control the Next Kentucky Legislature.

QUAY AND CAMERON FOR BLAINE.

At Least There Is a Story to the Effect That They Prefer Him to President Harrison—McKinley Says Ohio Has No Forsaker-Sherman Fight.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 4.—Kentucky held a state election yesterday. From the fact that the People's party has made a tser fic fight during the campaign the election is of more than usual importance.

Four tickets were in the field—the Democratic, the Republican, the People's party and Prohibition. The Prohibition ticket cut a smaller figure than usual, the Republican ticket the same, while the People's and the Democratic divided honors so far as the legislature is concerned.

The Democrats Successful.

The Democratic state ticket is elected by about the usual majority—35,000 to 40,000. The ticket is as follows: For governor, John Young Brown; lieutenant governor, M. C. Alford; attorney general, W. J. Hendrick; auditor, L. C. Norman; treasurer, H. S. Hale; superintendent of public instruction, Ed Porter Thompson.

The Alliance on Top.

The new constitution has carried with a sweep and the majority for it is placed at anything from 80,000 to 100,000. The People's party has polled only about 30,000 votes. These have come mostly from the Republican party. While the Alliance was supposed to be back of the People's party it has done very little for it on account of dissensions which arose last January.

The Alliance has devoted itself to the legislature and probably has practical control of that body, and so will control the revision of the laws under the new constitution. In only a few instances has the Alliance put out candidates in opposition to the Democratic nominees, but it has taken care to control the Democratic nominations. So while the legislature will be nominally Democratic, it will have strong Alliance affiliations and tendencies.

ARE THEY FOR BLAINE?

It Is Said That Messrs. Quay and Cameron Will Back Him.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 4.—Most of the friends of Senators Quay and Senator Cameron have agreed to make every possible effort to have the delegates to the next National Republican convention from Pennsylvania pledged to Mr. Blaine.

It does not mean that the representatives of Pennsylvania in the United States senate have given up their plan with the advice or even the consent of Mr. Blaine, but enough is known to make it clear that in every quarter of the state friends of Senator Quay and Mr. Blaine will ask for administration and secure indorsement for the secretary of state.

Senator Quay and Senator Cameron who spent Sunday on the farm of the latter at Donnegal, in Lancaster county, parted yesterday in Harrisburg. Senator Quay went to Beaver. Well informed politicians say the final details were arranged for a vigorous campaign in every county.

To this state in 1891-2 the battle cry of "Blaine!" will be sounded as never before, unless Mr. Blaine positively forbids the use of his name at a very early day.

Today an effort will be made to commit the Schuylkill county convention to Mr. Blaine in the strongest terms.

McKinley is Confident.

PITTSBURG, Pa., Aug. 4.—Major William McKinley, of Ohio, was in Pittsburg today. He was well satisfied with the outlook. The Republicans are united, so far as I know, to a man. They all appreciate the importance of a Republican victory in Ohio this year, and intend to work to that end.

"What do you think of the free coinage plank in the Democratic platform?"

"Free coinage favored by the Democratic party of Ohio will weaken rather than strengthen the party."

"Will it catch the farming vote?"

No Sherman-Forsaker Fight.

"No. The farmers of Ohio are among the most intelligent of our population. They know figures as they sell them. What they must give a full bushel in measure, and in payment they want a full dollar worth 100 cents. They can't measure their wheat in a short bushel, nor do they propose to receive for it a short dollar.

"There is no Sherman-Forsaker fight in Ohio. The Republicans are determined to elect the Republican ticket, and when once elected it will be quite capable of choosing a United States senator."

SHE STOLE HIS HEART.

And Now Miss Comfort Will Marry the Pasha.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Among the passengers who came over on the last trip of the Etruria was a distinguished looking foreigner. He was no less a personage than a real Egyptian pasha.

His mission to America is to escort to Cairo a young lady who is highly esteemed in society circles in that city. She is Miss Emma Walraven Comfort, the only child of Major Samuel Comfort, a member of the Standard Oil Company.

During her recent visit in Egypt she is said to have stolen from the khedive's palace an article of such priceless value that the pasha was sent in person to convey Miss Comfort to his country.

It was at a grand ball that was given in the khedive's palace that the article Miss Comfort is said to have stolen was first missed. It was the pasha who discovered its loss. It was his heart.

So she will return with him on the Etruria next Saturday. Miss Comfort will be escorted to Egypt by her husband. Although a pasha, the handsome foreigner is an Englishman. His name is Harry Cook shank and he is entitled to add F. R. G. S. to his signature.

A Great Dress Reform Crusade.

CHAUTAUQUA, N. Y., Aug. 4.—A great dress reform movement is about to be inaugurated in the United States. The crusade against the prevailing fashions is begun at Chautauqua about a week ago. A leader has been found in the person of Mrs. Frank Parker, of Chicago. The women say that corsets, bustles and skirts must be abolished.

Saving Made Him Crazy.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 4.—C. W. Lockwood became suddenly insane and it took four men to get him into a strait jacket. Dr. Shiels says the insanity was caused by a mania for saving money.

FAILED FOR $4,000,000.

Abraham Backer, Dealer in Commercial Paper, Has Assigned.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Abraham Backer, dealer in commercial paper, at 285 Broadway, has made an assignment without preference to Benjamin F. Einstein, of Townsend, Dyett & Einstein, lawyers, at 287 Broadway. The announcement of the assignment created a sensation in financial circles. Mr. Backer was a heavy dealer in commercial paper and also the capitalist of the firm of Backer & Co., dry goods commission merchants at 295 Broadway. He also manufactured goods at Glastenbury, Conn., where he had a large mill. These goods were largely sold for the southern trade. Backer once manufactured cotton goods in Philadelphia, but sold out about five years ago and went to Glastenbury, Conn., where he purchased a mill. He sold the goods which he manufactured there through his own firm of A. Backer & Co.

Mr. Backer's assignment, it is said, is principally due to the condition of the money market, which made it very difficult for him to float the quantity of commercial paper that he generally handled, and also to the decline in certain southern railroad bonds in which he was a large holder.

Mr. Backer, it is also said, lent the Macon Construction company a large amount of money, which he has been unable to recover. The liabilities are said to exceed $4,000,000, of which $2,500,000 are direct and $1,500,000 contingent. The liabilities are principally to banks in this city and Philadelphia.

A friend of Mr. Backer said that although the liabilities were about $4,000,000, Mr. Backer would not be called upon to pay the entire amount, as over one-third are notes of other parties which Mr. Backer indorsed but which will be taken care of by the makers. These are considered good paper and will not anticipate any loss on that account. His assets, if they are properly taken care of, and pan out as expected, will more than cover his liabilities. His mill and plant at Glastenbury, Conn., are very valuable, and he owns real estate in New York city worth from $100,000 to $200,000.

Young Mrs. Blaine's Divorce.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Aug. 4.—Ever since Mrs. W. G. Blaine, Jr., has been in this city she has boarded at the leading hotel. To-day, under the instructions of her attorney, she rented the Fleming cottage, located on Duluth avenue. This move is under the theory that boarding at the hotel does not perfect one's residence, and should she continue at the hotel the judge would refuse to grant a decree.

Baker Very Near to Death.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—James Newton Baker is very near death as the effects of the three bullets Orville M. Anderson fired into him at Croton Landing on last Saturday. The young southerner is also held responsible in unpopular Mrs. Baker told Mrs. Colonel Robert G. Ingersoll that Anderson had his pistol pointed at her husband when Baker's right hand in his hip pocket to draw his.

The Red Cross Guidon Riddled.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—A letter has been received at the war department from Major Hoff, of the medical department, transmitting a Red Cross guidon, which was completely riddled with bullets during the battle of Wounded Knee. Hospital Steward Pollak was killed while going to the relief of a wounded soldier. The Indians did not respect the flag pledge of neutrality.

The President's Summer Home.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 4.—Last evening the president, Mrs. Harrison and Mrs. Eaton attended the concert at Chalfonte given for the benefit of St. Margaret's house. A number of children from the Seaside home called on the summer capitol children and entertained them with songs and recitations.

Bonds for Russian Jews.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Superintendent Owen has directed that thirteen Russian Hebrews who arrived at Baltimore Sunday last and were detained as "assisted immigrants" be released from custody, bonds having been furnished that they would not become public charges.

A Statue of Pope Leo XIII.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—A statue of Pope Leo XIII for the Catholic university near this city has arrived and it will be unveiled with appropriate ceremonies Sept. 28. The statue cost $10,000 and is four feet high. It will be presented to the university by Joseph F. De Loubat, of New York.

The Davis Will Case.

BUTTE, Mon., Aug. 4.—In the Davis will case the time of the court was occupied in hearing argument on the advisability of expert testimony on handwriting on the part of the contestant. Argument against it was made by Judge Kirkpatrick, who occupied all the forenoon.

Mrs. Ledger Will Contest.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Mrs. George W. Ledger, nee Ida Florine Newcomb, daughter of the late Richard S. Newcomb, the well known lawyer, will contest her father's will on the ground of undue influence on the part of Mrs. Newcombe and others to whom estates are left.

Under the Fayerweather Bequest.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 4.—The erection of a new building for the Sheffield Scientific school will be begin next week, the money needed, about $200,000, to be taken from the Daniel B. Fayerweather bequest. The building will be used partly for recitation purposes and as a machine shop.

A Distillery Attached.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 4.—The Old Colony Distillery company, which was attached by the United States authorities, and New York, for $150,000, has applied to United States Internal Revenue Collector Hutchinson for permission to suspend temporarily.

Peas Colored by Copper.

BOSTON, Aug. 4.—S. Hall Chase & Co. charged with selling adulterated goods in the shape of French peas, to which had been added a certain preparation of copper to give the peas a greener color, were fined $25 in the municipal court.

A Fair Accountant Crippled.

BOSTON, Aug. 4.—Miss Jennie Crockett, the accountant who was injured at Waverly, has been transferred from the Massachusetts hospital to her residence in Auburndale. She will probably be a cripple for life.

Will Build the New Steamer.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 4.—The New Haven Steamboat company has awarded the contract for a new steamer to the Harlan & Hollingsworth Co., of Wilmington, Del. The steamer when finished will cost about $250,000.

STRANGLED FOR MONEY

That Was the Fate of Pretty Matilda Huber.

SHE WAS A CONNECTICUT GIRL.

Be Left North Haven with a New York Drummer Named John Habe and $725 in Cash—Identified by Her Farmer Uncle, Charles R. Weber.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The mystery of the beautiful girl, the finding of whose body just beyond the Brooklyn city line, near Glendale, was told in these dispatches yesterday, has been solved, and it adds one more to the already too long list of revolting crimes. At 8 o'clock last night Charles R. Weber identified the body in the Ridgewood morgue as that of Matilda Huber, of North Haven, Conn. She was his niece, an orphan and lived with him and his wife on a farm, and he accuses John Habe, her lover, of the murder. For several months she had been acquainted with Habe, a New York drummer, and on Saturday morning she left her home in his company against the wishes of her relatives.

Robbery Was the Motive.

She took with her $725 of her own money and the pair came to this city on the 9 o'clock train. Nothing further is known of her movements until her body was found in an unfrequented spot near Glendale. It is supposed that she was murdered for her money, as it had disappeared, together with her pocketbook and hand satchel. It is presumed that she was choked to death, and then dragged to the spot where she was found, where her body was found has not yet been determined. Mystery surrounds the disappearance of the supposed murderer.

Almost a Hopeless Task.

The officials were busy from early dawn yesterday trying to get some clew to the identity of the dead girl. It was apparently a hopeless task, for no one in the locality had any knowledge of her. Officer Becter sat in Homeyer's saloon, just across the road from the morgue, when a little white haired German lady walked in and inquired for the coroner. When he said that he had come to identify the body of the murdered girl he was quickly surrounded by reporters. Through the morgue keeper, led him to the place where the body lay. Mr. Weber, for the little German was he, gazed long and earnestly at the upturned face, and then groaned aloud as he shook his gray head.

"If You Had Only Listened."

"My God, Matilda," he wailed as he stood by the side of the murdered girl, "if you had only listened to me when I warned you against that cursed tempter and refused to go with him. But you would have your own way, and now you have come to this."

As he spoke the old man touched the forehead of the dead girl lovingly, almost reverently, with the tips of his fingers and then staggered back from the box.

Mr. Weber went back to the saloon, where he told his story to Constable Becter.

Mr. Weber's Story.

"I am Charles R. Weber," he said, "and I am a gardener. My farm is in North Haven township, near New Haven, Conn. Matilda Huber, the dead girl, was my stepniece, being the stepdaughter of my brother. She was about twenty years old. She was born in Ocealia, Pomerania, Germany. Her mother died eight or ten years ago, and my brother died five years ago. Matilda came to live with us then, and he directed that she should be placed in my charge. She came to this country immediately after his death.

She Loved a Drummer.

"About nine months ago she became acquainted with John Habe, and she was perfectly infatuated with him. I think he was a drummer from New York. He used to appear at our place about once a month and they would go out walking together until 12 or 1 o'clock at night. He always had a satchel with him. He was about thirty-five years old, compactly built. And was about 5 feet 10 inches in height. He had dark brown hair, brown mustache, a slight goatee and prominent eyebrows that met at the nose. His eyes were close together, giving him the appearance of being crosseyed. He was always nicely dressed.

"My wife and I disliked him and we warned Matilda against him, but she would not hear anything against him.

She Took $725 with Her.

"Last Saturday morning she came into the house, went to a bureau and took from it a pocketbook containing $725. I asked her what she was going to do with so much money. She replied, 'None of your business. I will attend to my business and do you attend to yours.' Then she went away with Habe."

Matilda carried her money in a pocketbook which had a red metallic fastened to her waist. Neither pocketbook, relicals nor money was found upon or near the murdered woman. The description of the man in whose company she left Saturday, as to the color of the hair, to that of the man whom Flagman W. H. Lake saw walking with a woman on the Fresh Pond road near the Manhattan Beach railroad crossing on Saturday night.

Lake says he heard the girl remark to her companion, who had his arm about her neck:

"Now, Jack, leave me alone. When I get home I will tell how you treated me."

Then the girl grew loud and angry. The pair crossed the tracks and went on beyond the factory. That was the last seen of them until Michael Dauber's little girl found the young woman dead by strangulation.

QUEEN MARIE STRICKEN.

Extreme Unction Administered to King Leopold's Wife.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 4.—On the queen's return from Ostend she visited Princess Charlotte, the ex-empress of Mexico, at that palace of Tervueren. She found the ex-empress in an excited state, and was so much affected that she was seized with a nervous fit and in the afternoon she fainted. She afterwards regained consciousness slowly.

The dean of Laeken, who was summoned when Queen Marie fainted, administered extreme unction. The queen is now in a troubled sleep. Her condition is said to be critical. King Leopold was hastily summoned from Ostend.

Wholesale Indictment of Newspapers.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—The grand jury delivered action on the matter of indicting the newspapers that published accounts of the quadruple electrocution at Sing Sing. Assistant District Attorney Lindsay declared that the indictments will be laid against The Tribune, Morning Journal, World, Sun, Press, Times and Recorder to-day.

PATTISON TO FOSTER.

Governor Refuses to Appoint Attorney to Recover the State Funds.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 4.—Governor Pattison sent the following letter to Secretary of the Treasury Foster:

SIR—The published reports of the committee appointed by Messrs. Edwin S. Stuart, of Philadelphia, to investigate the accounts of John Bardsley, late treasurer of the city and county of Philadelphia, seem to indicate that a considerable proportion of the money that is appropriated by Mr. Bardsley, and which made the deficiency in the commonwealth of Pennsylvania and to the city of Philadelphia, was deposited in the First National bank of Philadelphia, which bank has been closed by order of the controller of the currency.

The apparent loss to this commonwealth and to the city of Philadelphia is about $1,500,000, in which loss the state is largely concerned, directly and indirectly. In view of this fact I respectfully ask that you will authorize the receiver of the Keystone National bank to permit a committee of one or five citizens, to be designated by me to examine the books, papers, accounts, etc., of the bank, with the view of ascertaining what disposition has been made, if any, of the state funds as the committee may be directly or indirectly interested in, and it is respectfully suggested that such committee be empowered by the receiver may be limited accordingly.

I have been awaiting the result of the investigations which I already supposed to be in the examination of the accounts and affairs of the Keystone National bank in the hope that there would be found in the course of the examination which it is important that the state's officers should have in their possession. But as this information is being sought for by other accountants designated by the mayor of Philadelphia and by other expert accountants selected by the councilmanic committee, I am informed, I am of the opinion that a like investigation should be made on behalf of the commonwealth. And I have concluded that her interests require that I shall obtain the desired information as early as possible and in the manner I have indicated.

I trust you will see your way clear to accord to this commonwealth the same facilities you may be disposed to grant to other parties, especially in view of the large interests involved and of their importance to the people of this commonwealth. Very respectfully,

ROBERT E. PATTISON.

The Murder of Goodwin.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Evelin C. Webster, the wife, and Frances Romaine, the servant of Edwin C. Webster, who shot and killed Charles E. Goodwin, have been arrested. Two letters addressed to Mrs. Webster confessed to public enormities, but the girl said that Goodwin came to Webster's rooms and attempted to strike him. Webster followed Goodwin to the latter's room. A pistol shot was fired and Webster a moment later returned to his rooms, put on his coat and hat and went out. Before going he said to his wife, "He threw a spittoon at me and I shot him." Webster is still at large.

Customs Receipts Decreasing.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4.—Customs receipts at New York for July, 1891, were $11,803,169, while for July, 1890, they were $17,178,096, showing a falling off of nearly $6,000,000. Two-thirds of the customs duties paid in the United States are collected at New York. Other ports show as great a decrease. If the same decrease continues during the year, receipts from customs will show a falling off in the United States of about $48,000,000.

Navy Yard Swindlers Caught.

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.—Commandant Henry Erben, of the New York navy yard, has sent to the secretary of the navy a report of the board of inquiry, which he appointed to examine the charges of conspiracy against two clerks, named Desmond and Farrington, in the pay department. The scheme was the old one of increasing the amount on the vouchers presented to the paymaster by laborers and mechanics.

Newburger Stopped the Meeting.

WILKESBARRE, Pa., Aug. 4.—A meeting of the directors of the Pennsylvania and Lehigh Valley railroad companies to elect a president and six directors was prevented yesterday by the service of an injunction in behalf of Jacob Newburger, of New York. Mr. Newburger claims he is a majority of the stock of the road, claims that the meeting was an attempt to secure fraudulent action.

Atkinson, M. P., in a Bad Way.

LONDON, Aug. 4.—In the house of commons Edward Atkinson, Liberal member M. P. for Boston, who had been expelled for one week for insulting the speaker, asked leave to move to expunge from the journals the resolution of expulsion. He said he would rather die than be so disgraced. He asked to have the question debated, and if the resolution was confirmed then he would resign.

A Defaulter's Clever Scheme.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 4.—Walter H. Ellis has been arrested here on a charge having set fire to the freight depot of the Alabama Great Southern railroad, when fifty kegs of powder blew up. Ellis was a clerk in the freight office. He overdrew his accounts, and it is believed that he blew up the building to remove the evidence of his defalcation.

To Make the White Caps Settle.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Aug. 4.—James Beach, of Rosendale, has been reported to have beaten his wife and children. Many people exasperated his neighbors that they assorted to white cap measures, and flogged Beach. He has promised reformation. Beach has now brought suit against the white caps, claiming $15,000 damages.

Fatal Affray at Kingston.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Aug. 4.—Gottlieb Goetz, a shoemaker, aged twenty-five, unmarried, beat Herman Erb, a stonecutter, aged forty-two, fracturing the skull, and producing injuries from which he is not expected to recover. Goetz was on a spree.

The Strike at Pottsville.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 4.—It has been decided to start up the 23-inch mill of the Pottsville Iron and Steel company with nonunion men as soon as they can get strikers. The Amalgamated association have promised aid to the strikers.

His Body Tied to the Bridge.

TRENTON, N. J., Aug. 4.—Enoch Tindall, aged sixty years, a well-to-do farmer of Hamilton township, committed suicide by drowning in a small creek near his home. His body was found tied to the bridge with a rope.

Started with Non-Union Men.

READING, Pa., Aug. 4.—The large rolling mills at Seyfert's Station, owned by S. R. Seyfert & Brother, will resume work today. After shutdown of four months. The mill employs 235 hands, and they will all be non-union men.

THEY MARCH ONCE MORE

Forty Thousand Veterans in Line at Detroit.

THEY OWN THE CITY AT PRESENT.

Cheers for Generals Veasey and Alger, Secretary Proctor and Ex-President Hayes—Detroit Is Packed with Men in Blue.

DETROIT, Aug. 4.—The Grand Army encampment opened here today in earnest with the parade of the old veterans. Despite the threatening weather fully 40,000 men were in line. There were no men in blue who had not faced shot and shell on southern battlefields. The parade was participated in solely by veterans. The only military company visible besides these regiments of grizzled soldiers was the Fourth regiment, which did police duty. The veterans literally owned the city today, for every street within three blocks of the line of march was closed by the proclamation of the mayor, and intrusion further guarded against by the roping off of the section and the stationing of a strong armed guard at each street intersection.

Cheers for Veasey and Proctor.

Thousands watched the old heroes as they tramped along. Among the prominent men who were heartily cheered were General Veasey, Secretary Proctor, ex-President Hayes, General Fairchild, of Wisconsin, and General Alger.

One company, from Union City, Mich., tramped along in heavy marching arms with the old Springfield muskets and the same accoutrements as they wore when they marched out of Detroit in the stormy days when men were needed and Michigan did its duty.

The Evening Programme.

The programme for this evening is as follows:

8 p. m.—Reception and greeting to Commander-in-Chief Veasey and members of the G. A. R., Sons of Veterans and the Women's Relief corps at the Detroit rink.

9 p. m.—Reception at Camp Sherman to the commander-in-chief of G. A. R. and veterans.

One of the perplexing questions to come up at this meeting is the admission of colored posts. The southern delegates are strongly opposed, while the negroes are as strong in the demand for equality, and have the sympathy of the north to a large extent. With its streets full of marching men, with every house quartering a veteran, with the strains of music floating on every breath of the wind and with the sound of the drum and the shrill note of the fife in the air, Detroit is experiencing a time the like of which it has never seen before and will never see again. Thanks to the perfect arrangements, there is room for all, with plenty to eat and nothing lacking to make the silver encampment worthy of the name of past encampments.

GENERAL ALGER.

An Ovation to Secretary Proctor.

Among the early prominent arrivals was Secretary of War Redfield Proctor, who was accompanied by Assistant Secretary Bachelder. He had no sooner left his private car than he was surrounded by a mob of people and in turn shake hands with him, and his whole day has been spent in receiving the marks of distinction from the old veterans. General and Governor Fairchild, of Wisconsin, with the empty sleeve to tell the wealth of love he bore his country and his country's cause, was another of the citizen soldiery that all decked to tell the wealth of love he bore his country and his country's cause, was another of the citizen soldiery that all delighted to honor. General Alger, right at home where he is loved, was given a reception as hearty and as cordial as any. Ex-President Hayes was also honored by loud applause whenever the crowd caught sight of him.

The politics of the Grand Army has been an object of much importance all day; first, on the selection of a place of encampment, and, second, for the choice of commander-in-chief.

Willis Washington has the lead in location, the champions of the capital cannot rest on their oars, as hustlers from Lincoln, Neb., are here. Frank Hatton, who is head of Veasey's Columbia warriors, will win, however, and have the pleasure of getting an affirmative answer to his invitation of silver on a platter of gold with the key of the city of Washington surmounting it.

For Commander-in-Chief.

For commander-in-chief a new feature has sprung up in the person of Smedberg, of California, who has the sure backing of New England and the Pacific coast, while Hodges has Pennsylvania and New York.

Still the Wisconsin men are not downcast and are doing great battle for Weisbert and with apparently good chances of success. Their campaigning is of the effective sort and their captain of the solid Indiana delegation has helped matters, while the Wisconsin man is said to be the residuum legatee of Colonel Lincoln, of Washington, who is a candidate.

Medals for Old Warriors.

Last night the festivities consisted of three presentations, one to the commander-in-chief Veasey, one of a $1,000 gold medal set with diamonds; one of the same sort to General Alger from his aides of last year, and one to Mayor Pingree, a member of the second Massachusetts heavy artillery, who has cared for all the members of his battery by turning his magnificent estate into a camp with a menu card to the feed tent that would make many hotels green with envy.

Three Firemen Were Hurt.

Buffalo Will Not Jump.

BUFFALO, Aug. 4.—Director Gillespie, of the Buffalo Baseball team, said that it was not very probable that the Buffalos would jump to the American association. He said that Buffalo has so much interest at stake in the Eastern association that it cannot afford to step out unless the American gives a big bonus.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

The president has signed the commission of J. Sloat Fassett to be collector of the port of New York.

The Rev. Francis F. Williams, who was burned to death in Palmer, Mass., was over sixty years of age. He was ordained a minister of the Orthodox Congregational church in 1853.

"IN MARCH AND FIGHT."

CAREER OF THE FIFTY-FIFTH ILLINOIS UNDER SHERMAN.

It Joined His Brigade in 1861, Was with Him at Shiloh, 1862, at Bentonville, 1865, and in All His Intervening Campaigns.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

EVEN thousand nine hundred and sixty-five miles, almost one-half the distance around the world, taken in a direct line, were covered by the travels of the Fifty-fifth Illinois in the service of the government during the war. It marched 3,240 miles and made the remainder by boat and rail. At an average of fifteen miles a day its marches occupied 216 days. With the exceptions of Florida and Texas every state in the Confederacy was touched during its campaigning, and in eight different states it buried battlefield victims.

The field services of the Fifty-fifth began in Sherman's brigade, in the St. Louis rendezvous, in 1861, and it ended when he handed his army after the grand review in 1865. The regiment was with Sherman at Shiloh, in April, 1862, and at Bentonville, N. C., in March, 1865, having followed his fortunes closely during the intervening three years. This record alone would be a proud one, though it could be told in a few sentences, but the regiment has other claims to notice, having won a place among the 300 fighting regiments whose losses in killed and mortally wounded in action entitle them to special classification. Its battlefield losses were distributed over the whole period of its campaigns, and in fourteen out of the thirty-five months of its campaigning it counted its killed in action, and in the aggregate these amounted to 157, nearly 15 per cent. of the total number borne on the regimental rolls. Probably one out of every five who stood in its ranks in battle was killed.

But the best of all is that the fighting of the Fifty-fifth meant something. Shiloh, the Vicksburg assaults, Atlanta, these were the fields of its fiercest struggles. Two of them were victories and the third, Shiloh, had its triumph for the Fifty-fifth aside from a share in the general result, which was measurably a victory. In that battle the regiment was in Sherman's division, Second brigade, and was detached from the main line and sent to the extreme left to hold a position more than a mile distant from other troops. It so happened that the left flank of the Union line was just the point the Confederates determined to smash at the outset. This flank rested very near the Tennessee river, and across that river help would come to Grant's support if he could get at it. The Confederate commander wished to fight it out with Grant alone, and therefore aimed to force the Union line back from the river and seize the crossing places before reinforcements could be effected between the Union troops on the field and the 20,000 marching to their relief or the routed army could escape over the same route. The battle was fought as planned. Johnston, the Confederate commander, was wounded while urging his men forward to break the Union resistance on the left flank.

The brigade in which the Fifty-fifth served was commanded on that field by the colonel of the regiment, David Stuart. Its fighting strength when brought into close action was 800 men—512 of the Fifty-fifth, the remainder a part of the Fifty-fourth Ohio and 81st. The Confederate reconnoissances developed the left of Prentiss' line, which was next on the right from Stuart, as the left of the Union army, and that line was the first attacked. But the battle was hardly under way when Stuart's men were seen by the Confederates, and being in motion, shifting their positions to receive an expected attack, they were supposed to be maneuvering to flank the enemy's line. Considerable time was lost by the Confederates in preparing to meet this new emergency. Brigades and regiments changed their places, and reserves were brought up to fill the gap in the line of battle caused by this extension of front. It fell to the lot of Chalmers' Confederate brigade, of Wither's division, to grapple with Stuart, and that command moved forward under the personal direction of Gen. Johnston, with orders to drive the lonely brigade back toward the river and isolate it from the rest of the Union army.

THE FIRST DAY AT SHILOH.

After some skirmishing Chalmers got a battery into position to shell Stuart, and as the latter had no artillery it looked like a very unequal fight, for Chalmers had over 2,000 men in line. At the time that Confederate shells began to burst among his men Stuart ordered a change of position, and the Fifty-fifth, being compelled to turn its back to the enemy during the movement, forgot for an instant what it was there for and broke into a genuine "skedaddle." It was a case of fright pure and simple, and the "skedaddle" was due to the rear, out of harm's way, but off to the right across a ravine about 100 rods from the starting point. It is a good soldier who owns up to a wholesome respect for his enemy's prowess, and if the feeling of respect takes the shape of fear, that is all right, providing it stops within certain limits. The fear must be such that man holds for a live rattlesnake so strong that one cannot endure the thought of his coming into existence, and therefore spends guardedly of course, to exterminate him. So the Fifty-fifth ran away from the infantry danger of which were mad berserk frying, then quickly rallied and pitched in like heroes. About this time a body of Confederate cavalry appeared in view and the regiment formed a square to resist attack; then, when the troopers rode off without engaging, resumed a simple line, its position was along a ravine about sixty rods from its original camp.

Chalmers' onslaught, when it came, was received with great coolness, the Illinois boys holding their fire until the Confederates were within forty yards. The effect of their fire was awful, and in a close combat that ensued, lasting two hours, Chalmers' brigade was completely used up. The Fifty-fifth lost heavily, but maintained its ground until all the line on its right had been driven back. Even then warning was given to the Union commands in the rear before the position was abandoned. During the confusion of the retreat an order passed along the flanks of the Fifty-fifth to cease firing, about face and retire. The command was obeyed and the line moved off in an orderly manner down a slope to the rear. Suddenly the order was countermanded and the regiment faced about, marched up the hill to its old position and opened fire again on the advancing enemy. The fear, which had led to a "skedaddle" a short time before, had given place to fighting vim.

Gen. Stuart finally retired it was to march away unopposed by the enemy, and his retreat was not followed up. After retreating a few hundred yards it was proposed by some officer of the Fifty-fifth to halt and make another stand, but examination showed that the supply of ammunition on hand was less than two rounds to a man. There was nothing to do but retire. In the new line formed around the steamboat landing Stuart's brigade took its place on the extreme left. Thus, while the whole army had been disrupted, Sherman's battalions beaten back and Prentiss overwhelmed, Stuart with 800 men—reduced by losses about one-half—kept his re-volve position and maintained a bold front, preventing the enemy from seizing the landing upon which the fate of the Union army depended.

The battle I have described took place on Sunday, April 6. On Monday, the 7th, the Fifty-fifth was also engaged and lost about twenty men. Its losses altogether on the field of Shiloh were 51 killed outright and 35 mortally wounded—making 86 deaths—and 162 wounded and recovered. The killed and wounded together numbered 248, almost half of those engaged.

In skirmishes and general actions the regiment was engaged in May, October and December, 1862, the last at Chickasaw Bayou; also at Arkansas Post, January, 1863. Its next severe fighting took place in the assaults before Vicksburg, May, 1863. At this time the Fifty-fifth was in the Second brigade, Blair's division, Fifteenth corps, led by Sherman. Dr. the Confederates had retired behind earthworks encircling the city, an assault was ordered all along the Union line at 2 o'clock on the afternoon of the 19th of May. The regiment numbered about 350 men when it took its place in the line. The assault was a hopeless one, but the men dashed forward gallantly, to be cut down by a pitiless fire as they struggled on to the ramparts and led about trees, through gullies choked with brush and vine, and up their steep banks, climbing hand over hand. The Second brigade wrestled a crest with fifty paces of it, planted work in front and lay there until dark. The colors of the Fifty-fifth were pierced by seven bullets, but they floated defiantly within pistol shot of the Confederates *until the command was or*dered back to its own works.

Another assault was made on the 22d of May. The column was preceded by volunteer storming parties, who planted flags upon the enemy's embankments. But the main army could not face the withering fire poured upon it by the well sheltered men in gray. The Fifty-fifth again pressed forward close to the enemy's breastworks and held its position until recalled to its own works on the morning following. In these two assaults the regiment lost, 11 killed outright, 3 mortally wounded and 35 wounded and recovered.

After Vicksburg the Fifty-fifth was engaged, with loss, at Jackson and at Black River, Miss., and at Mission Ridge, Tenn. Its next desperate fight was at Little Kenesaw, Ga., June 27, 1864. The regiment and meanwhile re-enlisted, and on the 19th of June joined its old division and was assigned to the First brigade, under Gen. Giles A. Smith. It was 475 men strong. On the morning of the 27th the brigade was detailed to lead an assault upon the Confederate works on Little Kenesaw. The men were ordered to unsling all baggage and parade in light marching order. The place of assault was in view of their bivouac, and every man realized the desperate work before him. Messages were hastily written, and keepsakes and valuables were handed over to noncombatants to send north in case of disaster. The regimental comander, Capt. J. M. Augustine, confided to a brother officer that he felt a presentiment of death, handed him a memento and a message, and then in tones as clear as a bell and as calm and hopeful as the prayer of a saint, called out "Forward."

The field to be charged over was exposed to the Confederate batteries, and was so difficult to traverse, owing to swamp and thick underbrush, as to exhaust the men before they reached the base of the precipitous, rock strewn hill, where the Confederate infantry lay behind stone shelter. The line was soon broken up into a mob of struggling men, clambering over bowlders and fallen trees and wrestling with abatis of sharpened branches planted to impede their progress. Capt. Augustine pressed forward, and with a handful of his followers was almost under the enemy's parapet when the brigade bugler sounded the recall. The gallant leader mistook the meaning and again said, "Forward, men!" As he stood erect, animated with the spirit of the scene, a bullet in the left breast sent him to earth like a bolt.

The survivors dropped back down the mountain side, and when the losses were reckoned up the killed and mortally wounded were 16, the wounded 32. Throughout the Atlanta campaign the regiment took part in the heaviest fighting, and the total losses reached 36 killed and 86 wounded; fully one-half of its fighting strength. In all its campaigns its losses amounted to 448 killed and wounded, of which 157 were dead. Its first fight was its last, and after that episode it dared everything that came in its way, and that was a good deal. GEORGE L. KILMER.

How to Raise the Pile on Velvet.

Cover a hot iron with a wet cloth and hold the velvet over it. Brush the velvet quickly while damp.

How to Cure a Felon.

Mild forms of whitlow or felon usually yield to fomentation with hot water cloths or poultices. When the deep textures of the fingers are involved, accompanied by severe pain, throbbing and much redness, heat and swelling, free and early incisions with the lancet are necessary. There are several simple cures for ordinary felons. As soon as the parts begin to swell wrap with cloth well saturated with tincture of lobelia. This kills the felon in short order. Another method is to stir half a teaspoonful of water into one ounce of Venice turpentine until the mixture appears like granulated honey, when a good coating should be wrapped round the finger with a cloth. If this is promptly done, the pain will disappear in six hours. For bone felon a blister of Spanish fly about the size of the thumb nail should be placed directly over the spot. After six hours the felon may be seen directly under the surface of the blister, and can be taken out with the point of a needle or lancet.

How to Preserve Clothing from Moths.

Furs should be thoroughly beaten, aired for several hours and carefully combed with a clean comb. Then wrap them up tightly in newspapers and keep in a thoroughly tight chest lined with tin or cedar wood. They should be taken out and examined in the sun once a month and thoroughly beaten again. The printing ink on newspapers is distasteful to moths. Feathers and all kinds of woolen clothing—minus the combing, of course—may be preserved in the same way.

How to Get Rid of Rats.

There are traps and poisons innumerable for abating rat plagues, but the best means of ridding a building of rats is to frighten them at headquarters. One of the best methods of doing this is to catch two or three in a trap, and after singeing off their hair set them loose with a coating of the following mixture: Dissolve two ounces of glue, two ounces tincture of assafœtida, and two ounces potash in water, and add half an ounce of phosphorous to one mixture. Rats treated with this compound slightly heated scare their fellows, and there will be no more trouble for months. Another good plan is to scatter dry chloride of lime around and in the rat holes.

How to Dress for a Journey.

A great many people when preparing for a journey insist upon buying quantities of new clothes, and they go to much needless expense in this regard. Before preparing for a journey the first things to be considered are its duration and the social status you occupy and that of the persons you go to visit. If your journey is to be short, and of a business nature, you require nothing new, and a gripsack containing a change of underclothing and toilet necessaries is sufficient. If it be long—for instance, to Europe—do not overburden yourself with baggage; a couple of changes of clothes will suffice, and let these clothes be such as you are accustomed to wear at home. In new super-fashionable garments, to which you are unaccustomed, and which will afterward be comparatively useless to you, you will both feel and look awkward and parvenu—like a fish out of water. Common sense should be studiously consulted in this matter.

How to Sleep in a Sleeping Car.

Always have your berth made up head to the engine. As the train jumps forward the motion sends the blood away from your head, and this has a tendency to make you sleep. Try it and see.

How to Secure a Copyright.

Send to the librarian of congress, Washington, a printed or typewritten copy of the title of the book, map, musical composition, etc., for which copyright is desired, and inclose one dollar, fifty cents of which is the legal fee and fifty cents for a copy of the record. No copyright is valid unless notice is printed on every copy of the production as follows: "Entered according to act of congress, in the year ——, by [name of person or firm securing copyright]. in the office of the librarian of congress, at Washington," or "Copyright [year] by [name of person or firm securing copyright]." Two copies of the work must be sent to the librarian after publication to complete the copyright. The original term of copyright runs for twenty-eight years. Within six months before the end of that time the author or his widow or children may secure a renewal for the further term of fourteen years.

How to Be Photographed.

Short and stout people should not be photographed full length; they look better taken half length, turned slightly from the face of the camera, so as to hide their stoutness. Full length pictures make tall, thin people look more slim and angular. Long necked people should wear low, turned down collars; short necked ones, high collars. Plain dark colored clothes "take" best. An old suit looks as well in a photograph as new garments. Let your face assume its natural expression, and allow the photographer to exercise his professional skill in the matter of posing.

How to Keep Ivory Handled Table Knives

The knives should be washed in a pitcher with enough water to cover the blades, but not to touch the handles. The water should not be very hot. Soaking the handles makes them crack.

AN EVENING RHYME.

Hush, father's abroad; he has made him a camp,
And now he is lying asleep,
With the sky for his roof, and the moon for his lamp,
And around him are lying his sheep;
While over their heads in the sky's azure vales
See, the Man in the Moon and his sheep,
Sleep, sleep.

There are sheep on the earth, there are sheep in the sky,
But no one can think it is strange,
When they know that the Man in the Moon has sheep,
And the sky land up there is his range.
Sleep, sleep.

The Man in the Moon is a herder, dear,
And the woolly white clouds are his sheep.

The little lamb ran by his mother all day;
He tired his four little feet,
And he is lying beside her asleep.
Under the dusky mosquito
While through the long fields the pastures of heaven
The moon man is drifting his sheep.
Sleep, sleep.

Shut up your two pretty eyes,
For the Lobe night is come
And the lambs in the hills
And bowl at a baby that cries.
Sleep, sleep.

The Man in the Moon is a herder, sweet,
And his woolly white clouds are his sheep.

How Sound Travels.

In dry air at 32 degs. sound travels 1,142 feet per second, or about 777 miles per hour; in water 4,900 feet per second; in iron 17,500 feets, in copper 10,378 feet, and in wood from 12,000 to 16,000 feet per second. A bell heard at a distance of 45,000 feet in water could be heard only 600 feet in the air out of the water. The barking of dogs on the earth can be heard in a balloon at an elevation of four miles. On a still day the report of a rifle can be heard at 5,300 yards. The fire of the English on landing in Egypt was distinctly heard 130 miles.

How to Avoid Mosquitoes.

The smoke of burning camphor will expel mosquitoes from a room. A piece of sponge or flannel dipped in camphorated spirits and made fast to the top of the bedstead will secure you immunity at nights. They can also be kept off by rubbing exposed parts with a decoction of pennyroyal.

—Any shoe dealer has in stock a number of shoes that will fit you, but it does not argue that they were all made for you. Because an item in the paper may look fit your case, it does not always show that you were the one the writer had in mind.

—The Reading, Jersey Central and Pennsylvania railroads are considering a movement to abolish mileage books. All passengers will be carried at the uniform rate of two cents a mile, instead of discriminating in favor of the frequent book fiend.

—A writer in Our Dumb Animals says that whenever a horse driven by himself has balked he has got out of his carriage and gone to its fore foot, lifted it from the ground and struck the shoe with a stone. He has never failed to start the horse in that very simple way, and he has on several occasions had balky horses which had exhausted the patience of all former owners.

—A wiser observation was never made than the following: Every man ought to take pride in the prosperity of his own town. While you can earn money in the place you ought to spend it in the town where you live. Few people stop to think of the dependence of one person upon another in their community. The money you spend at home willdirectly benefit yourself more than when spent abroad.

—We state on good authority that the State Board of Health has not officially approved of the combine's scheme of sewerage for Plainfield, as alleged originally in the "combine" items. Members of the Board, including President Hunt, required certain alterations in Low's proposed sewerage specifications before they would even consider the matter. They suggested a change in the code, and in an alternative method of disposing of the sewerage in case their present scheme proved impracticable. In making these changes the combine have made other changes of which we will treat later, saying only now that they are simply infamous in their treatment of Plainfield taxpayers.

—At the Council meeting a week ago the combine requiring a two-thirds vote to place the ordinance for sewerage back on its second reading, invited the minority to a conference, and tried to persuade them to give them the necessary two votes. The Big Five declined, so the ordinance was brought up on its third reading, and the combine voted against it, thereby killing it so as to bring in a new ordinance covering the items. Low himself was seen when asked, that inasmuch as there was a clause about the city buying the works, he thought it proper that the city should have an engineer of its own to supervise the work. Mr. Low was present and said he did not allow any one to supervise any work he was putting his money in." "Well," said Mr. See, "the city is giving you a valuable franchise and ought to know something about the work it is expected some day to buy, and you can never get my vote until the city is in some way protected." That is, the Big Five wanted to guard against any possibility of the city being swindled, but the combine wants to serve Mr. Low—not the city—and every-thing he says must therefore go.

ARRESTED FOR THEFT.

William McCready Charged With Stealing a Wagon.

Captain Grant yesterday went to Lebanon, N. J., and arrested William McCready, who, it is alleged, left this city a short time ago because he was wanted by the authorities.

McCready is charged with stealing a wagon from a man named Johnson and selling it to Mr. Mahlon Vail of Park avenue for forty-five dollars. One day, as Mr. Vail was driving on Park evenue, he was accosted by Mr. Johnson seated in a wagon, and, upon inquiry, the latter was informed that he had purchased the wagon from McCready. Mr. Johnson claimed his property, and Mr. Vail immediately made out a warrant for McCready's arrest.

The police were unable to locate him until yesterday, and his arrest followed, as above stated. McCready's family reside in this city. He will probably be given a hearing this afternoon.

LINEMAN KEEGAN DEAD.

He Succumbed to His Injuries Last Evening.

William Keegan, the lineman, who was formerly employed by the New York and New Jersey Telephone Company in this city, and who fell from a fifty-foot pole at Elizabeth Sunday afternoon, died at the hospital in that place yesterday afternoon at half-past five o'clock, from the effect of his injuries.

As was reported in Monday's NEWS Keegan's spine was fractured and several of his ribs were broken, one of which penetrated his lungs. The unfortunate young man remained unconscious up to the time of his death. He was but twenty-three years of age and weighed 213 pounds.

A Carnival on the Water.

Arrangements are being completed for holding a carnival on the Raritan river, at Bound Brook, some evening toward the latter part of this month. To prove that the press is mightier than a canal boat we may observe that this Summer's night festival was the suggestion of The Bound Brook Chronicle, and to the publisher its promised success is due. We understand that he is to gaily ride at the head of the procession in a boat with three decks and no bottom, and which is to be furnished with an American tin anchor—donated by Mr. Thomas Lipton. He cabin will be supplied with hand grenades filled with "fire extinguisher" or rare vintage—but these will be kept carefully from the sight of George LaMonte, the Prohibitionist. The marline spikes, life-savers and halyards are to be manipulated by a detail of "old salts" from the Brooklyn Navy Yard, through the courtesy of Boss Platt.

The twenty-five or thirty other boats in the river will be decorated with Chinese lanterns formed in various designs, and their crews will be selected from the flower of Bound Brook's youths. A drill will take place, the boats going through various evolutions.

The railroad bridge will be decorated with lanterns, and colored fire will be burned from various points along the shore. Rockets and Roman candles will be set off, and the whole will form an exhibition never before witnessed in Bound Brook.

Joseph M. Low Gets Another Plum.

The Plainfield Common Council at its meeting on Monday night virtually granted the petition of Joseph Kingston, N. Y., and six unnamed associates the franchise for building in Plainfield a system of sewerage. The "Big Six" Democratic combination accomplished this piece of work unaided. Notwithstanding the objections of every Republican Councilman, they passed a resolution instructing the mayor and city clerk to enter into a contract with Low for the sewerage system as soon as an ordinance making legal such action was passed. Low obtained a water works franchise from the Plainfield Council last week. He applied for the sewer franchise at the same time, the exposure of the incomplete system of work proposed was instrumental in causing these specifications to be amended in several particulars. The amended contract is little better than the old former one, the Republican Councilmen affirm, and the latter made strenuous efforts on Monday night to defeat the action of the "combine," which favors Low in every particular.—New York Tribune.

Yesterday's Accident.

Oscar Davis, a lad of seventeen, was dangerously injured here yesterday, as reported in last evening's NEWS, and taken to his home on Railway avenue, Elizabeth, later in the day. He was in the employ of McCabe & Faulks, hardware merchants, and lives with his parents. The wagon he was driving upset while turning a street corner, and he was flung under the ihe horses' feet.

Before His Honor.

His Honor, Mayor Gilbert, was this morning called upon to pass judgment on a prisoner in the City Court during the absence of City Judge Codington, who is enjoying his vacation. The man who gave the name of Sharkey was arraigned for fast driving. He pleaded guilty to the charge and the mayor imposed a fine of ten dollars, which was paid.

WESLEY LEVERS' TERRIBLE FATE.

A Broken Brake Precipitated Him Under the Cars.

Wesley Levers, the brakeman who died at the Muhlenberg Hospital Monday afternoon as announced in these columns at the time, lived on Fulton street, Elizabeth. He was one of the crew of Conductor John Long's freight train, and the accident which resulted in his death took place at Bound Brook, about nine o'clock in the morning. He was operating on a brake and the ratchet broke, causing him to fall under the cars.

One of his legs was cut off and the other mangled. His body was also considerably mutilated. He was still living when picked up and was brought to this city. His mother and other members of his family were notified and reached his bedside some time before he expired. He was conscious before his death.

His remains were taken to his late home that evening.

Levers was twenty-one years of age, and an estimable young man, held in high regard by the railroad officials and all acquainted with him. He was unmarried and a member of Court Advance, Ancient Order of Foresters.

The family moved in recent years from Easton. The male members have been well known as railroad men, and two others, brothers of Wesley, were killed by the cars. An older brother had both legs cut off by cars some years ago, and is now a resident of Elizabeth.

The grief of the family over this new affliction is intense, and the home on Fulton street is the scene of the most sincere sorrow.

—A peach exchange has been organized at Pattenburg, Hunterdon county, with M. D. Knight as president and J. M. Maxwell as secretary and treasurer. It is estimated that from 75,000 to 100,000 baskets of peaches will be shipped from Pattenburg this season.

A BIG SWINDLE EXPOSED.

Many Credulous Americans Victimized by the "Home Fascinator Company."

The officers connected with the Assistant District Attorney-General's office of the Post-office department at Washington have succeeded, it is believed, in rendering abortive the attempt of the Home Fascinator Company of Montreal, Canada, to victimize many credulous Americans. This concern, it is stated, publishes a monthly journal called the Home Fascinator, alleged to be devoted to useful knowledge, Romance, etc. The "etc." seemed to cover the greater part of the paper, and consisted of an advertisement of four prizes to be awarded to persons sending in the largest correct list of English words of not less than four letters constructed from the letters contained in the words "The World's Fair," each competitor to send with his list the sum of $1, the subscription price of the paper.

The enormous circulation has been acquired throughout the United States upon the basis of this offer. Prizes were advertised to be awarded on June 25, 1891, the first prize consisting of $1,000 in gold, the second prize a grand piano, valued at $400, and the fourth prize a sewing machine, estimated at $65. And to the third prize, consisting of a silver tea set, gold lined, and valued at $120, the clever and unique plan was adopted of awarding it to thousands of persons at the same time, and each of them to forward $4.90 to pay for freight.

Postmasters have been instructed by wire to refuse to certify money orders or forward registered letters, payable and directed to the Home Fascinator Company, Montreal, Canada, but to return the same to the offices of origin marked "Fraudulent." It is expected that many thousands of letters containing money will thus be restored to the writers.

TO HAVE A TEAM.

The Brunswick Base Ball Club to be Organized.

New Brunswick is at last to have a base ball team. John Harkins, the well-know-player, is organizing a nine to play with the Somervilles, Westfields, Plainfields and possibly the New Jersey Athletic Club.

He is collecting subscriptions for the club, which will be known as the New Brunswick Base Ball Club. Nearly all of the players will come frome here, but the catcher will be an outsider. Harkins himself will play with the nine except when the Somervilles play with the latter. He went to New York Monday to see about uniforms.—New Brunswick Home News.

State Notes.

The peach crop for Hunterdon county alone is estimated by competent judges to be from 1,500,000 to 2,000,000 baskets.

Enoch Tindall, a farmer of Hamilton Township, Mercer County, drowned himself yesterday. He was sixty years old, and his mind evidently be affected.

While Chorister Kennedy was beating time with his baton on Sunday night at the Presbyterian church at Vineland he gave Pastor King a terrible whack over the head. The congregation laughed.

The buttonwood to which Master Barnard, of the ship Kent, lashed the cable when the first settlers landed at Burlington in 1678, is still standing on the river bank in front of the Grubb homestead.

Millville was in darkness on Sunday night. The old lighting contract had expired and the new electric lights were not ready for use. Several minor accidents occurred on the streets owing to the darkness.

Annie Weber, ten years old, died in Paterson yesterday of lockjaw. Last week while playing she fell among a lot of glass and cut her right wrist above the wrist. The wound proved very obstinate and Friday lockjaw set in. The little ones sufferings were terrible.

William Faversham, of the Lyceum Theatre, New York, has a kennel on his premises at Atlantic Highlands. Yesterday morning two bulldogs escaped. One flew at a woman with three children and the other at a colored woman. A young man named William Truss went to their rescue, when the dogs turned on him and bit and tore his flesh on both the right and left arm, on the back and in the legs. Mr. Faversham came to his rescue and called the dogs off. The young man was picked up insensible and attended by a physician.

DISEASE IN THE PHONE.

Medical Men See a New Source of Contagion.

A new source of contagious disease has come within the ken of medical men. Dispatches from Germany say that the clever scientists of Berlin have come to the conclusion that the transmitter and receiver of the telephone may store up and carry contagion, and it has been decided to disinfect frequently with carbolic acid every instrument that is in use in the Prussian capital.

One of the managers of the Bell Telephone Company said yesterday afternoon that no necessity for anything of the kind had arisen here. It is true that soreness of the ear has been produced from the chafing of improperly fitting receivers, and this is easily and quickly remedied by a slight change of the form of that part of the instrument. Aside from these complaints from purely mechanical causes, no trouble has been experienced. The instruments are kept thoroughly clean, and there is very little interchange of them among the operators.

DISINFECTION DESIRABLE.

A doctor, when questioned on this point, said that it was quite possible that the transmitter of an ordinary telephone could in time become so dirty as to seriously affect an ear on which the skin had been injured to the extent of producing a sore, and even, if proper cleanliness be not observed, of causing any contagious disease to which the ear is susceptible. He recommends the periodical cleaning of the instruments, and, if disinfection be found necessary, would prefer a weak solution of bichloride of mercury to carbolic acid.

"The danger in this source," continued the doctor, "is insignificent compared with that incurred by the use of the hard-rubber ear-cones attached to phonographs. These enter the ear some distance and are always very dirty. Their use is a highly dangerous practice.

"Speaking of telephones," said he, in conclusion, "brings to mind the question raised some time ago as to whether or not the use of the telephone affects the hearing, and on this point I must say, that although the duty placed upon the ear in telephone work is one likely to overstrain it, still, so far as my practice is concerned, I have seen no evidences of a permanent injury so inflicted. In any case, where danger is apprehended from this source, it would be well to take the precaution of using the ears alternatively when much telephone work is to be done."

More Than a Centenarian.

[From the Somerset Unionist-Gazette.]

Mrs. Sarah Heath, who lives near Peapack, passe l her one hundred and second birthday on Friday. Mrs. Heath was born about three miles from Flemington, near the place where John Roe Kafelover's Mills, July 24, 1789. She lived with her parents at her birthplace until she was thirteen years of age. Her father then removed to Mine Brook, Somerset county, to a farm now owned and occupied by John Whitehead.

In 1809 she married Robert Heath. Mr. Heath built a house near by, where they resided until his death, in 1869. Then she lived with her son and a grandchild until July 9, 1884, when she commenced boarding with the family of Justice of the Peace David M. Todd, where she still is.

She had four children, only one of whom survives. This is William Heath who is hale and active at the age of seventy-four years. He lives at Lambertville, Hunterdon county. There are living, five grandchildren and fourteen great-grandchildren. One grandchild, Robert Heath, resides in Denver, Col., another, J. Anderson Heath, at Columbia, S. C. The others reside in adjoining counties.

Mrs. Heath's health is good. Her sense of sight is nearly extinct; she can barely discern day and night. She walks around the house, and has walked with fruit: other varieties also. ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

There is one thing that will enable the various labor organizations to accomplish their aims, and that is perfect harmony and good will among themselves. Without this they can do nothing.

Russian peasants are starving; there is famine in India, only the province of Bombay promising a good grain crop. American corn and wheat will be looked to to supply the world.

Mankind have believed they knew the worst, and were prepared for it, in the way of bad smells. But they were not. Some German chemists are experimenting at Freiburg have obtained a new sulphur compound with acetone, the odor of which was so frightful that they were temporarily disabled from proceeding with their work. Here would be a decided novelty for the World's fair at Chicago. If a high official wanted perfect rest in his cottage by the sea or on the mountain side he would only need to fill a hose pipe with the new compound, set it near the approaches to his retreat, and let it play upon all comers in the form of delicate spray from the brass nozzle. An invading army might be routed from our shores in the same way. Here is a better idea for coast defense than even torpedo boats or smokeless powder.

Solitary Confinement.

A writer in the Boston Globe has been pitying John Bardsley, the defaulting but gentlemanly city treasurer of Philadelphia, who robbed the city of $2,000,000. Bardsley was sentenced to solitary confinement for fifteen years at hard labor. On entering the Eastern penitentiary of Pennsylvania the prisoner who is sentenced to solitary confinement is blindfolded and marched around the corridors, so that by no means may he perceive by which direction he finally goes to his cell of doom. He is bathed, dressed in stripes and taken to the cell, 13 by 14 feet, where for years he is to see no human face and hear no human voice but that of the keeper who brings him his food and his daily task of work, and perhaps a word now and then from the chaplain or the visitors in the corridor on Sundays and preaches to invisible prisoners in solitary cells.

Well, it is bad enough. There will not be much pleasure in it, this living fifteen years in such a way. It is a question indeed for the mere enjoyment of it whether death would not be preferable. But it is not well for that reason to grow sentimental and spend pity on the man who robbed a city of $2,000,000 that had been confided to his keeping by his fellow citizens who trusted him as a man and a gentleman. There is a tendency in this country to play fast and loose with public funds generally, a feeling somehow as if it was not stealing to appropriate money belonging to the state. If fifteen years solitary confinement at hard labor will recall to our minds the fact that this is stealing, and stealing of the meanest kind, then Bardsley will not have been put behind the bars in vain.

New Idea in Heredity.

Nothing is more firmly established apparently than the principle that like transmits like. It is true of animals; it is claimed to be true of the human race as well. Trotting horses are improved on and strains of blood handed down till the gait of the flyers grows faster and faster with each generation of men. It is not as all improbable that in a few years even Maud S's famous record of 2:08¾ will be lowered. In animals to the latest generation a strain of particular blood is transmitted from a famous ancestor to nearly every descendant.

Is this law unalterable in the human race? It is true on general principles and in a broad way that children are like their parents—that is to say, it is true to a degree. But somehow when we have developed from monkey to the stage of man, if we have so developed, new laws seem to supervene. The appearance of the intellectual and reasoning powers seem somehow to change things. Remarkably handsome parents are apt to have very ordinary looking children. Great geniuses of either sex never have children equal to themselves. It is as if nature used up her powers in the making of a Shakespeare, a Goethe or Mary Somerville, and there was no greatness left to be handed down to their children. The descendants of transcendently great people have been in most cases not at all above mediocrity; often have been below that.

History goes to prove, indeed, that the children of common, middle class, respectable people are the ones who reach the high heights. The common people are apt to be the parents of finer children than the great geniuses are. For this reason a philosopher declares nature knows her own business when she leaves the most gifted individuals often childless. They can serve the world better, says the crank philosopher, by giving to mankind the benefit of their intellectual and moral powers and letting the healthy middle classes people the earth. Marvelous intellectual powers appear to be nontransmittable.

HAYES WAS WITH THEM

The Ex-President Walked with the Veterans.

ECHOES FROM THE GREAT PARADE.

Very Enthusiastic Reception to Commander Veazey Last Evening—The National Encampment and the Women's Relief Corps Meet.

DETROIT, Aug. 5.—It was precisely 5:10 last evening when, with a sigh of relief, Commander-in-Chief Veazey swung his stovepipe hat on his head and grasped the hand of ex-President Hayes. Six hours before he had given the signal for the head of the order to move, and for over five of them he had kept on his feet, while the veterans marched past the grand stand and saluted. It was a long and trying spell, but the other occupants of the grand stand, which included Governors Pope, of Vermont; Hovey, of Indiana; Thayer, of Nebraska; General Miles, ex-Governor Oglesby, of Illinois; ex-Governor Winans, of Michigan; ex-Congressman Conger, of Ohio; ex-Senator Thomas W. Palmer, United States Senator Manderson, of Nebraska, and General Smith, of the Nineteenth United States regulars, stood it bravely, and although they mutually agreed that they were glad enough it was over and the tattered, footsore and worn out as they were, for the line of march covered over five miles, were in the best of spirits.

It Was a Grand Success.

What with the enthusiasm of the immense crowds, the broad and well paved avenues, the ample police arrangements and the innovation in the shape of the wire ropes that were stretched on either side of the route along the entire line of march and which kept the throngs from encroaching on the formation of the line, they were fain to admit that it was one of the most pleasant and successful turnouts in the history of the organization. The arrangements for feeding the multitude were likewise ample, and the tens of thousands of hungry men and women, when the parade was finally disbanded, found no cause for complaint. All in all the City of the Straits has done itself proud.

Echoes from the Parade.

There were forty-seven divisions in the parade, and it took just two hours for the first four to pass a given spot. Estimates of men who galloped along the line and through the formation streets after the column had moved placed the number of men in the line all the way from 35,000 to 40,000. Every division was replete with interesting features. At the head of the Indiana delegation Wallace Foster, secretary of the Silent or Deaf Soldiers, Sailors and Marines' association, carried an immense banner with the inscription "Teach Patriotism in the Public Schools." The only colored member of the national council of administration of the Grand Army, James E. Fuller, marched ahead of Dahlgren post, of Norfolk, Va. In the Michigan division the Sault Ste. Marie post carried umbrellas emblematic of Lake Superior and the City of the Soo.

In the Connecticut line part of the Women's Relief corps rode in carriages, waving their white handkerchiefs in response to salutes from the crowd. Massachusetts followed Connecticut in very fine formation, marked by division banners borne on horseback. The drum corps of the Rhode Island advance, dressed in confidentials, caused the veterans to quicken their steps to the old marching tune, "Garry Owen." Massachusetts was followed by New Jersey. New York swept around the corner after Ohio's long line passed with a splendid band and drum corps. The continentals, with cocked hats and regimentals, led by Uncle Sam himself, took the crowd, who cheered themselves hoarse. This unique band, with its old looking drummers, led the three solid platoons bearing the old war colors of New York.

Pennsylvania's Great Showing.

The Keystone state made a great showing, one of its novel features being the Philadelphia contingent, nearly 300 strong, which carried umbrellas, each one painted to represent a portion of the battle of Gettysburg.

A Distinguished Company.

When the head of the column had passed the grand stand Commander Veazey relinquished command to Vice Commander Weisert, and took his place upon the reviewing stand. Here he was surrounded by Secretary Proctor, Secretary Foster, Governor Winans, ex-Governor Alger, Mrs. Annie Etherbridge, of Washington, better known as "Gentle Annie," who marched with the Fifth Michigan through the war and was shot in two engagements; Miss Clara Barton, of Red Cross fame; Corporal Tanner, Captain Jack Crawford, the "poet scout," and others.

Hayes Marched with "The Boys."

For the first time in the history of the order, an ex-president of the United States marched with the ranks of his native state. It was Rutherford B. Hayes that won this distinction. He joined the Cleveland post just before it reached the reviewing stand, saluted as he passed the commander-in-chief and marched several blocks with the Buckeye lads before he retraced his step to the grand stand.

The Artistic Decorations.

The decorations along the line of march still stand, and are models of beauty. There are four handsome triumphal arches spanning important streets. One, spanning Fort street, near Griswold, is surmounted by an elaborate Florida display of tropical plants. It is called the Ponce arch.

Another arch bridges Jefferson avenue but a few blocks east and south at the Indian section of Woodward and Jefferson avenues in the finest work of art. It was built upon the plan of the Eiffel tower of Paris, and is a double arch looking through from either avenue. "Triumphal arch," as it is called, displays in wood the insignia of the various corps of the Union army crowning the structure are field guns unlimbered and in position, and on the cap of the lateral supports of the flanks are stands of arms.

A Reception to General Veazey.

Last night the comrades flocked out to the rink to participate in a reception to Veazey. The Governor's floor was massed of commoners. Mayor Pingree, in a well chosen address, welcomed the veterans and the commander-in-chief made a brief response. The latter was in a rollicking spirit of good will to the veterans were made by ex-President Hayes, Secretary Proctor, Governors Hovey and Page (New Jersey) Butterfield and General Smith. Meanwhile another great crowd had gathered at Camp Sherman in the Exposition building, and *thither the same speak*ers were hurried when the programme was repeated. At midnight the streets were just as crowded as they were at midday, but the sleeping accommodations of the city were ample and none were compelled to seek a lodgment in the open air.

Washington Will Get It.

It is pretty well conceded that Washington will get the next encampment. The western posts have made a gallant fight and the Lincoln delegation aspect ally have spent money like water. At the parade scores of carriages, with canvas inscriptions "Lincoln in 1892" were flying over to the various headquarters and the delegates from the east were in bored with long and earnestly. The Washington crowd, however, had got in their work and the western men have shown up the light. Ex-Postmaster General Frank Hatton was the leader of the Washington boomers. A. G. Weisert, of Wisconsin, is still in the lead for commander-in-chief, although a combination against him is probable. The chief argument against him is that both Wisconsin and Minnesota have had the office in the last decade.

The Color Question.

This morning the sessions of the encampment were formerly opened. Probably the most important matter that will come up for consideration is the trouble over the colored issue in Louisiana. The delegates from New Orleans are determined to force a vote on the question whether or not they shall be compelled to have posts of mixed color, or whether the colored man and brother in whose behalf they fought shall not be compelled to get into posts by themselves.

If the encampment lays down the law of "no color line" the white Louisianians threaten to break up the department.

Some of Today's Features.

The ninth annual convention of the Women's Relief corps was opened late this morning at the Church of Our Father. All day long there were held reunions of veterans at the various halls, school buildings and offices by regimental and brigade organizations.

The programme for this evening follows: Grand naval and pyrotechnical display, closing with the most magnificent fireworks spectacle ever seen in America, entitled "Perry's Victory."

Campfires at the rink, at the exposition building and at the Central Methodist church.

A BIG SUGAR FIGHT IS ON.

Claus Spreckels and the Trust Really Cutting Prices.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—A bitter fight is on between the sugar trust and Claus Spreckels, who has been a thorn in the side of the sugar refiners on this coast for many years. About ten days ago the president of the sugar trust was called away by the fatal illness of his father, F. C. Havemeyer. While he was away Claus Spreckels announced a reduction of one-sixteenth cent per pound on granulated sugar. He cut seriously into the trade of the sugar trust, but no action to meet the cut was taken, as it was believed that as soon as Spreckels' stock was reduced he would retire from the market. He kept on filling orders, however, and practically supplied all demands.

When President Havemeyer returned he at once ordered the sugar trust price for granulated sugar reduced one-sixteenth cent below that made by Spreckels. The latter then brought his price one-sixteenth cent below that of the trust. The reductions made bring the price of granulated sugar down to four cents per pound in Philadelphia, on which 2 per cent. is allowed off, making the net cash price 3.92 cents—the lowest on record. The price named by the trust is a 1-16 cent less. On August, 1889, after the formation of the trust, sugar sold for 8¾ cents per pound.

An Eiffel Tower for Chicago.

CHICAGO, Aug. 5.—President Baker, of the World's Columbian directors, has just received a propositions by cable from M. Eiffel, the architect of the Eiffel tower, for permission to erect a tower on the grounds, the enterprise to be backed by French capital. The cable set forth that the tower would be superior to the one at the Paris exposition. The prospects are that the proposition will be looked upon most favorably.

Henry C. Ogden's Body Found.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Eugene and George West, while out fishing found a body floating off Galilee Beach, N. J. It was identified by Oliver Dond Byron as that of Henry C. Ogden, connected with the dry goods house of James Talcott, at 100 Franklin street. It is a question whether he committed suicide or accidentally fell overboard.

McCarthy Again After Dixon.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—Cal McCarthy has issued a challenge to George Dixon for another fight for $1,000 a side, provided that the Greenville club of Hoboken will add a purse of $4,000, the men to weigh 115 pounds.

The Utah Elections.

SALT LAKE CITY, Aug. 5.—The returns show that while the Liberals, or Republicans, have carried the city, the Democrats have captured the county offices.

The Italian Massacre a "Fake."

CINCINNATI, Aug. 5.—A special dispatch from Catlettsburg, Ky., says the report of the murder of the Blumsfeld family is utterly false.

A MYSTERY AFTER ALL.

No Trace of Matilda Huber at North Haven.

"UNCLE" WEBER HAS DISAPPEARED

His Identification Is Now Believed to Have Been a Bogus One—Detectives Discover That He Was Not Known in Cincinnati.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The Glendale murder mystery promises to vie with that of Rahway. The identification of the girl's body by Charles H. Weber, of New Haven is not accepted as trustworthy and Coroner Homeyer is perfectly at sea. Yesterday the coroner went off to Rockaway posthaste with a strange young man in search of the murdered girl. Instead of leaving that work for detectives. This young man, who gave his name as Charles Read, of Darien, Conn., and his age as twenty, was not of an appearance calculated to inspire confidence. The coroner took him away from the reporters into an upper room, and when he came out gave the impression that he had an important clew to the mystery.

No Weber at North Haven.

The body of the murdered girl was embalmed Monday night by Leonard Ruoff, the undertaker. Yesterday no one was allowed to see it, and the authorities even asserted that, had no description of it been sent out in the first place, they would not have been so likely to be imposed upon by fraudulent identifiers. The two detectives whom Coroner Homeyer sent to North Haven, Conn., to investigate Weber's story were unable to find anything about him. They scoured the place in vain, and had the assistance of local officials. They telegraphed the coroner to hold Weber until they should arrive; but the coroner had allowed Weber to depart and he could not be found.

Matilda Huber a Myth Also.

Neither is the name Matilda Huber known in the town. The nearest is Matilda Zuber, a comely German girl, who lives near Morse's crossing, a settlement a few miles north of North Haven. She is employed in the suspender shop at Centerville. She is alive and well.

There is also Adolph Huber, the proprietor of a roadhouse on the Wallingford road, who has been missing since Friday. It is known that he had a niece visiting him who was unknown to the neighbors. She, too, is missing.

A Story from North Haven.

An incident which adds a flavor of truth to Weber's story is that the girl came from North Haven is told by Station Agent Morse and is corroborated by Maltby Fowler, a farmer. Both men say that they saw a couple walking on the track and hanging about the depot on Saturday morning. The woman was dressed in dark clothes and had light hair. They overheard them talking about the purchase of property and remember hearing the woman say that she had $700 which could be used. They station agent says they took the 7:41 train for New Haven.

The Second Identifier.

Weber's escape so nettled the coroner that he declared that he would refuse to do hereafter would be to hold every one who should appear to examine the body until the mystery has been fully cleared up. He has been

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

New York State Republican Clubs Meet at Syracuse.

BLAINE'S BOOM IN PENNSYLVANIA.

Three Different Conventions Pass Resolutions Eulogizing the Man from Maine—Kansas Alliance Leaders Who State That They Are Opposed to the Sub-Treasury Scheme.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 5.—This city is full of delegates to the annual convention of the New York State League of Republican clubs. At 11 o'clock a. m. to-day the convention was called together by President McAlpin. It is expected that little will be accomplished the first day except the appointing of committees on organization, resolutions, etc. When the name of the James G. Blaine association of the Sixth Assembly district was called in convention today there was a tremendous demonstration for the statesman from Maine.

Shroeder for Governor.

Ex-Senator Griswold, of Brooklyn, says Frederick A. Shroeder must take the Republican nomination for governor whether he wished it or not. "I tell you," he said, "Shroeder is the only man to carry Kings county, and if we can do that we are sure of the state."

They Favored Blaine.

The New York and Kings county delegation while en route balloted for president of the United States. When it was announced that 102 favored the nomination of James G. Blaine, 15 President Harrison, 3 McKinley and 14 were for the nonimee, and three of the secretary of state had turned themselves loose and yelled.

The headquarters of the league at the Globe were thronged with politicians up to late hour. President McAlpin and Secretary Hedges were visited by many delegations with assurances of their support for re-election.

Secretly a divide exists that both will remain in the offices they now occupy.

The big mass meeting this evening is to be addressed by President James S. Clarkson, of the National league, General Nathan Goff, National Organizer T. E. Byrnes, Robert P. Porter, Colonel Elliott Shepard, Roswell G. Horr and others. President Clarkson and General Goff will be here today.

Blaine and McKinley.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The Herald says, "Do the Blaine Republicans believe that the success of McKinley would make the tariff the overshadowing issue in 1892, and are the Blaine Republicans for this reason preparing to knife the author of the tariff bill in Ohio this year?"

The Herald's Columbus dispatches indicate that they are. Mr. McKinley more completely embodies the protection principle than any other American, and it may be said for Mr. Blaine that in him the reciprocity idea finds its strongest and most intelligent advocate. Mr. Blaine is bitterly antagonistic to the protective idea as is finally expressed in the McKinley tariff law. What, then, more natural than that he should covertly desire the defeat of its acknowledged champion in a gubernatorial contest where tariff reform and tariff prohibition furnish the battle cries for the respective forces engaged?

Harrison's Intentions Will Resign.

Among the many rumors current in Washington is one crediting Secretary Blaine with the purpose of retiring from the cabinet in an early date and seeking asylum in Italy for the restoration of his health. The story must be taken, however, with many grains of allowance. Well informed people say that Mr. Blaine is gradually recovering from his late illness, and the belief is general that upon his restoration to health he will return to his capital and resume again the duties of his department. These duties are very congenial to Mr. Blaine. There is an intellectual delight in them that cannot be found in the ordinary routine of the other executive departments, while the prestige of the office is far beyond that enjoyed by his cabinet confreres.

These Republicans Want Blaine.

The Republicans of Mercer county recognize in General Blaine a statesman whose advocacy of the party's principles in the house and senate and before the people has drawn to the banks of the Delaware, whose diligent and manly management of foreign affairs has gained for the nation the respect and admiration of the world as secretary of state and a citizen, whose ability and zeal pre-eminently fit him for that high position, do hereby declare him our choice for president in 1892.

The convention elected the Hon. Henry R. Hall, C. W. Ray and J. D. Madge delegates to the state convention, and nominated A. W. Williams, of Sharon, to the constitutional convention. This nomination of Blaine is significant from the fact that this county is Hr Quay's congress district.

Another Blaine Boom.

BRADFORD, Pa., Aug. 5.—At the Republican convention held here the following resolution was adopted with great enthusiasm:

"Resolved, That the devoted patriotism, wise statesmanship and skilful diplomacy of the Hon. James G. Blaine, secretary of state, command the admiration of the world, the gratitude of the nation and the renewed pride and confidence of the Republican party in his ability as a leader."

And Still Another.

POTTSVILLE, Aug. 5.—Seven Republican conventions were held here yesterday. The feature of the platform was a paragraph endorsing the administration of Secretary Blaine.

Against the Sub-Treasury Scheme.

TOPEKA, Kan., Aug. 5.—C. W. Shum and W. A. Harris, leaders of the People's party, have caused a sensation in Alliance circles by publishing open letters protesting against the sub-treasury scheme. Harris would have been elected United States senator instead of Peffer had he not been a Confederate general. Shum was the People's party candidate for lieutenant governor last fall.

They Object to Damrosch's Ballet Girls.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—A committee from the Musical Protective union has notified General O'Beirne, of the immigration bureau, that Walter Damrosch is bringing a party of ballet dancers across on the Majestic who are not artists, and their coming is in violation of the contract labor law. General O'Beirne will make an investigation.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Malignant diphtheria is prevalent in the South Dakota Hospital for the Insane.

The California wheat crop this year will be 20,000,000 centals, worth $40,000,000.

Five large double furnaces are now being run by the Pottsville Iron and Steel company.

The two battalions of cavalry have left El Reno, I. T., to drive cattlemen and cattle from the Cherokee outlet.

Four Chicago capitalists are reported to be ready to build an elevated railroad on the west side in that city.

Deputy Cal Tucker has been indicted for aiding in the escape of the notorious burglar Mathewson from the jail in Hamilton county, O., two weeks ago.

The sealing schooners Minnie and C. D. Rand have been sent home from the Behring sea by the Fleets, which has so far warned forty schooners to leave that sea.

The National Bank of the Republic has begun business in Chicago, with a capital stock of $1,000,000.

The Bank of England is shipping gold to the Argentine Republic, a sign that the financial crisis is over.

William O'Brien has been granted three days' extension of time by the bankruptcy court to explain his failure to pay the costs in his suit against Lord Salisbury in July, 1882.

Mrs. Helen M. Gougar, the Iowa prohibitionist, will follow Major McKinley all through Ohio during the campaign and talk low tariff and increased wages for workingmen.

The Knights in Politics.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 5.—James Wright, Organizer for the Knights of Labor, has returned from an extended tour through Pennsylvania and other states. He asserts that the order in Pennsylvania is for a constitutional convention and ballot reform, and in Ohio the Knights will find allies in the People's party and the farmer. "We want ballot reform," said Mr. Wright, "and we are supporting the Republicans because they will give us what we want. We cannot have a reform of the ballot without a constitutional convention. The Republicans have opened the way toward both.

"I cannot say how far McKinley will be directly antagonized, but think Foster's action in Washington in dismissing Knights of Labor from government employ may affect the campaign. There are those who think McKinley might have done more than he did in the way of conciliation."

Alleged Murders in a Mine.

CONNELLSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 5.—Mine Inspector Duncan and Coroner Holbert are exploring Rainey's Grace mines. At the beginning of the late coke strike this mine was set on fire, and three Polanders, who were repairing the tracks, lost their lives in the mine. Their decomposed bodies have just been found. Three of the strikers are suspected of having first killed the Polanders and then set fire to the mine to conceal their crime. Sensational developments are promised as the coroner's inquest.

William L. Scott Very Ill.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 5.—Congressman W. L. Scott lies very ill at his residence in this city. His physician is very reticent, but there can be little doubt but that Mr. Scott is suffering from his old stomach trouble. The members of Mr. Scott's family are all here, and though but little is given to the public regarding Mr. Scott's condition, they cannot disguise their anxious concern nor the conviction that he is a very sick man.

New York Editors Indicted.

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—The grand jury has indicted John A. Cockerill of The Morning Advertiser, William M. Laffan of The Morning Sun, Joseph Pulitzer of The World, Bradford Merrill of The Press, G. W. Turner of The Recorder, Albert M. Hoeckley of The Morning Journal, and Charles R. Miller of The Times for publishing accounts of the Sing Sing electrocution. Joseph Pulitzer was the only morning paper not indicted. It was found that this paper practically complied with the law.

Democratic Clubs to Meet.

A PUZZLING FIGHT

Hard Times, These, for the Baseball Prophets.

EVERY ONE IS IN THE RACE.

No Club Has a Very Decided Advantage Over Its Rivals, and the Pennant's Place Can Only Be Guessed At—A Bad Year for Pitchers.

The glorious uncertainties of the national game were never better illustrated than during the last few weeks of play by the National League clubs. A couple of weeks ago it seemed as if everybody was "in it" by which I mean the pennant race, of course. Now it seems as if but three clubs had any show.

These three clubs are New York, Boston and Chicago. There is a remote chance that Cleveland and Brooklyn may get into line, but it is doubtful if they can do so, as the three first clubs have a good strong lead, while Cleveland and Brooklyn have lost more games by two or three than they have won.

The New Yorks on June 24 had a percentage of .612, and had won one more game than Boston and Chicago, these clubs being tied in games won, each having captured twenty-nine games. The Giants, however, had the additional advantage of having lost two games less than Chicago and four games less than Boston. These deductions, after three months' play, show what a remarkably close race—indeed closer than was ever before known—the League clubs are having, and how difficult it is for any one to predict a winner; and yet I stick by my friends the Giants.

Your "Uncle Ansom" visited the east with feathers inflated, waving plumes and that confidence in himself and his team which never fails him at any stage of the game. He had beaten everything in the west, and announced that he was ready to eat up the entire eastern baseball world. He returned home, bereft of plumes and feathers, with the worst record made by any of the western teams, having won but six games out of sixteen. He carried back with him, however, a salve for his wounds in the shape of a tremendous bag filled with coins of the realm. His coming was heralded far and near, and the result was a tremendous attendance at every place the team visited. In New York alone over 35,000 people saw the four games which Anson lost in Gotham.

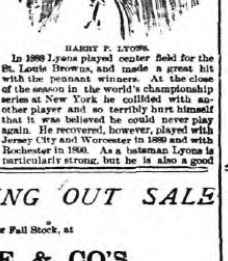
The Brooklyn club deserves better than it has received, but its team could not hold its own, nor could it be expected to hold it with the steady run of ill luck that has pursued it from the very start. It seems as though the Brooklyn and Philadelphia teams had one mission left, and that is to help kill off pennant winners. That they will do this or try to do it is a surety. The Phillies have already commenced their fiendish work by winning a couple of games from the New York team.

The Bostons have slowly crept up near enough to toe the line. They will have a very hard time to keep in the ring, but Captain Nash and Manager Seely think, and indeed quietly state, that they will not only stay there, but will also win the championship. But Captain Nash and Manager Seely have been known to make predictions before that shot very wide of the mark. It is a business, however, for all these various managers and captains to prophesy good things for their team, and if they did not do so the patrons of the club would not think that they were doing their work properly. The Bostons have really not done the work expected of them this year, nor pitched like their pitchers beg in the trim they are paid to be. Clarkson has certainly been a disappointment. He has pitched some fine games, but on the whole he has been a most decided failure. It may be that he has been saving himself to come out strong in the closing games of the season.

It seems though to me that Clarkson and Keefe, and other pitchers of their caliber, are having more or less of a bad year. Keefe has pitched one and Clarkson five or six, but in some one inning, although using all their nerve and skill, they have been hit very hard, and the result has been disastrous for their team. Keefe says that he thinks some change in the rule is necessary if the pitchers are to have any protection whatever. He avers that the batsmen have got an advantage over the pitchers, inasmuch as they seem to have discovered a good many of their best points, and as a result can pound the ball away much oftener than they did heretofore. Whether this is a result of returning to the old League rules Keefe is unable to say, but the fact were his arrangements for food, etc., that he only passed about three minutes during the run. He is a great rough country rider, and secured his big lead on the first 130 miles of hilly country.

Harry P. Lyons.

Harry P. Lyons, one of the clever young players of the Buffalo club, Eastern association, made his first appearance upon life's arena at Chester, Pa., twenty-five years ago. He began to play ball at Philadelphia, and was a member of the Crack Wynwood amateur team. He made his professional debut as a member of the Kingston (N. Y.) team, of the Hudson River league, and at the end of the season ranked very high in batting. The following season he played successively with the Oswego, Binghamton, Philadelphia (N. L.) and Ashland clubs.



HARRY P. LYONS.

In 1888 Lyons played center field for the St. Louis Browns, and made a great hit with the pennant winners. At the close of the season in the world's championship series at New York he collided with another player and so terribly hurt himself that it was believed he could never play again. He recovered, however, played with Jersey City and Worcester in 1889 and with Rochester in 1890. As a batsman Lyons is particularly strong, but he is also a good fielder and sender.

How G. P. Mills Won the Bordeaux-Paris Road Race.

G. P. MILLS.

Mills was pitted against such cracks as M. A. Holbein, holder of the world's record of 285¼ miles for twenty-four hours; S. F. Edge, J. E. L. Bates and Louis Mast, three Swiss riders. Mills was attended by fourteen pacemakers, one of whom was with him throughout the race, and so perfect were his arrangements for food, etc., that he only passed about three minutes during the run. He is a great rough country rider, and secured his big lead on the first 130 miles of hilly country.

Harry P. Lyons.

Harry P. Lyons, one of the clever young players of the Buffalo club, Eastern association, made his first appearance upon life's arena at Chester, Pa., twenty-five years ago. MRS. EDWIN FORREST.

She Had Long Been Forgotten, and the Other Day She Died.

Readers of newspapers who remember the events of half a century ago were surprised the other day to see announced the death of Catharine Norton Sinclair, the widow of Edwin Forrest, the tragedian. They had supposed that she was dead years ago.

At one time the name of Mrs. Edwin Forrest was as well known as that of any woman in America. It is difficult for one of the present generation to understand the place that Edwin Forrest held in the hearts and minds of Americans. In 1845 he was at the height of his fame, and the president himself was scarcely more talked of. His personality ruled the stage, and he was a recognized power in social and political life. His popularity caused a riot in New York to be directed against Macready, his rival, which was accompanied by considerable loss of life, and which will always be an important episode in American history.

MRS. EDWIN FORREST.

And yet he was a man of unpleasant temperament. His abuse of those beneath him in his profession is proverbial among actors. It was this which caused the first trouble between him and his wife. She remonstrated with him and angered him. Afterward he charged her with violating her marriage vows, and began one of the most sensational divorce suits on record in America. It was tried before the Pennsylvania legislature. Charles O'Conor defended the wife, and his reputation became world-wide through his splendid efforts in her behalf. The suit was the all absorbing topic of the newspapers and of conversation. All America and a good part of Europe discussed it.

Mrs. Forrest was acquitted of the charge. She brought a cross suit, her plea was granted and she was awarded $6,000 a year alimony. Forrest appealed the case, but was defeated and the alimony increased to $8,000.

She afterward went on the stage herself, but won only indifferent success. For many years she lived in almost retirement, being known by her maiden name. There were probably not a dozen people in New York at the time of her death who were aware that Mrs. Sinclair, the pleasant faced, gray haired old lady, who died on Eighty-fourth street, was the widow of one of the world's greatest actors and the heroine of one of its most sensational trials at law. She was seventy-four years old.

Boy Boxers.

The champion pair of boy boxers is said to belong to the Palmetto club, of South Brooklyn. They are Willie Crook and John Snee, Jr. Young Crook is certainly a phenomenon with the gloves, and his attitude when sparring is particularly graceful. He is a handsome lad and possesses more than the usual intelligence. Crook was born in the Sixth ward, Brooklyn, March 15, 1877. He stands 4 ft. 8½ in. tall, and weighs about 75 pounds. When but a mere child he took quite a fancy to the manly art, and the lessons that he has received from time to time have developed him into what many believe to be the cleverest lad of his years in the country. Young Snee stands about 4 ft. 6 in. tall, and weighs 62 pounds. The little fellow is the picture of a thoroughly athletic when in costume, and he carries himself very well. He is quite active, uses one hand as well as the other and is rather a remarkable hitter at close range. He has met a number of much mostly older than himself, and with but one exception has come off with flying colors. He is improving all the time, and before many years will by will have become a wonderful boxer.

BURGLARS AT NETHERWOOD.

Mr. Gunter's Residence Entered Early This Morning.

Burglars effected an entrance into the residence of Mr. Otto Gunter at Netherwood at an early hour this morning. Mrs. Gunter was awakened from her slumbers by hearing an unusual noise in her room. When fully aroused she saw a man standing over her bed. She screamed and the noise awakened her husband. It also frightened the midnight intruder and he made his escape as hastily as possible. Mr. Gunter secured a revolver and seeing two men running away from the house, fired three shots, none of which took effect however.

A hurried search of the house was then made, but the inmates did not miss anything of value and it is thought that the burglars were frightened off before they accomplished the object of their midnight mission.

PERSONAL.

Miss Ella M. Conkey of West Front street left yesterday with her sister for Saratoga Springs.

Mr. William Campbell of East Second street has accepted a position to manage a drug store at Asbury Park.

Mr. and Mrs. T. B. Penton of Rockview avenue, North Plainfield, are arranging for a brief visit to Newport, R. I.

Mr. Alexander Gee and wife, formerly of this city but now of Bayonne City, spent yesterday with friends here.

Mr. Frank Ryno, formerly of this city but now of Jersey City, is visiting his friend, Mr. George Demarest of Race street, North Plainfield.

Mr. B. J. Allaben of Miantonomo Tribe, No. 118, Improved Order of Red Men of this city, will leave for Orange this evening to assist in the institution of a new Tribe at that place.

Mrs. Lawrence, a guest at the Hotel Netherwood, while walking in her sleep last evening, fell from one of the hotel windows and was badly injured. Dr. Murray attended her.

Mr. Charles Mason and family formerly of this city but now of Jersey City, are visiting at the residence of Mr. Mason's father-in-law, Mr. John M. Schorb of East Front street.

Mr. Robert E. Spooner of Grove street, North Plainfield, and Mr. Charles J. Beggs of Brooklyn, have returned to their respective homes from a week's fishing in Sullivan county, N. Y.

Mr. James McCormick of East Front street and Mrs. Foster, widow of the late George Foster, were united in marriage in St. Joseph's church last evening, by the pastor, Rev. Father McKiernan. A reception followed the ceremony at the home of the bride. Mr. and Mrs. McCormick will make Plainfield their future home.

Mrs. Mary A. Corey died at the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. Jacob Davis, 328 North Broad street, Elizabeth, at four o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Mrs. Cory was in the 80th year of her age. She was born in Springfield township, and was the wife of Jonathan Cory, of Westfield, where she spent most of her life. For nearly forty years she was a member of the Westfield Presbyterian church, and when she went to Elizabeth about twenty-five years ago, transfered her church relations to the Westminster church.

EMANCIPATION DAY.

THE COLORED PEOPLE DOING HONOR TO THE OCCASION.

The Business Part of the City Decorated With Flags and Banting.—Base Ball, a Parade, etc.

Plainfield presents a holiday appearance to-day. The stores are decorated with bunting, the owners of flags have thrown them to the breezes and large crowds of people, both white and colored, were on the streets.

The reason for this annual display is that the colored populace, not only of this city but surrounding cities, towns and villages, have flocked here to assist in the proper observance of the day that is dear to the heart of every African throughout the land, and that day is Emancipation Day, the day the poor Southern slave was by the proclamation of the immortal Abraham Lincoln declared free.

Some two months ago a number of our colored citizens called a meeting and decided to arrange for the proper observance of the day. Committees were appointed and nothing was left undone that could in any way mar the joyous occasion.

Invitations were extended to Governor Abbett, ex-Gov. Green, Senator McPherson, Hon. John Ulrich, Hon. George Kyle, and other prominent State officials to be present and assist in making the celebration of the day a success.

This morning the day's festivities were begun by a game of base ball between a local nine and a team from Washington, N. J. The contest was an exciting one and was finally won by the home team.

The procession formed on Broadway, right resting on Fourth street and in the following order under command of William Douglass, Grand Marshal and aids.

First Division.—Grand marshal and aids, band, mounted guards of New Brunswick, President, vice-presidents, secretary and treasurer, reader—Charles M. Robbison, of Camden, N. J., chaplains—Revs. W. A. Alexander, F. G. Warnick, J. W. Mitchell. Grand Marshal, Wm. Douglass; assistants, Benj. Sutton, Edward Maynard, James Walker, Geo. VanBlake, Wm. Phillips, Leander Brown, Thornton Langford, Albert Hankinsan, James Long, Robert Yetman, Thomas Jones, Scipio Wellington, Chas. Mason, Moses Carey. Mayor of Plainfield and Mayor of North Plainfield, city Council in carriages, Plainfield Metropolitan Drum Corps, James Scott, drum major.

Second Division—Benj. Sutton, Assistant Marshall. I. M. Tucker Post of Newark, Gentleman's Benevolent Society of Jersey City, Citizen's Club of Somerville and Fife and Drum Corps, Citizen's Club from Trenton, Citizen's Club from Morristown and Drum Corps, Citizen's Club from Rahway, Citizen's Club of Elizabeth.

The following line of march was traversed:

Peace street to Front, to Washington avenue, to Park place, to Grove street, to Craig place, to Somerset street, to Manning avenue, to Westervelt, countermarch back on Manning avenue, to Somerset street, to Park avenue, to Fifth, to Central avenue, to Eighth, to Park, to Crescent avenue, to Broadway, to Kensington, to Putnam, to Franklin place, to Fifth, to the Crescent Rink, where the afternoon celebration will be held.

Governor Abbett, Senator McPherson, and several other of the invited guests failed to put in an appearance.

Must Publish in English.

An interesting decision was given yesterday by Chancellor McGill at Jersey City when he refused to confirm a sale of land. The last Legislature, at the solicitation of the publisher of a German papers, passed an act requiring that all judicial land sales must be published in one German newspaper. Ex-Judge Bair complied with this law and inserted the advertisement in an English and a German paper. The Chancellor holds that the advertisement published in the German newspaper should have been printed in English and not in German and quotes an ancient act, nearly a century old, which is still alive, that all judicial advertisements must be published in the English language.

Held for the Grand Jury.

William McCready, who was arrested at Lebanon by Captain Grant on the charge of stealing a wagon from a man named Johnson and selling it to Mr. Mahlon Vail of Park avenue, was given a hearing before Justice Crossley yesterday afternoon. The justice deemed that there was sufficient evidence to warrant his holding McCready to await the action of the Somerset county Grand Jury and required him to furnish bonds in the sum of $200 for his appearance when wanted. At this writing McCready had been unsuccessful in his endeavor to secure bail.

How a Dime Made Trouble.

When the big vault of the City National Bank was closed Monday night a ten-cent piece was jarred down behind one of the bolts of the delicately adjusted locks. Tuesday morning it was impossible to open the door. Expert safe-openers were sent for. It took them all day and until midnight last night to get inside the vault. The little casualty was quite expensive to the bank.

PUBLIC LIBRARY.

The Regular Monthly Meeting Held Last Evening.

The regular meeting of the Board of Directors of the Public Library was held last evening. There were present Directors M. W. Tyler, Rowland Cox, J. Evarts Tracy, J. B. Dumont and Wm. M. Stillman.

The minutes of the meeting of July 1 were read and adopted as read.

The secretary read the following communication from his honor, Mayor Gilbert, which on motion was ordered engrossed on the minutes and placed on file.

THE MAYOR'S OFFICE,
PLAINFIELD, N. J., JULY 31, 1891.

A. C. Baldwin, Esq., President.

DEAR SIR—By virtue of the authority vested in me I hereby appoint to serve as Directors of the Plainfield Public Library for three years from July 1st, 1891, Mason W. Tyler, J. Evarts Tracy, Henry P. Talmadge.

Respectfully submitted,
A. GILBERT, Mayor.

This being the first meeting of the new board the board then proceeded to the election of officers for the ensuing year as follows:

President, A. C. Baldwin; Vice President, M. W. Tyler; Treasurer, J. B. Dumont; Secretary, Wm. M. Stillman; Art Committee, George H. Babcock, A.C. Baldwin, Jos. W. Yates; Library Committee, J. Evarts Tracy, M. W. Tyler, H. P. Talmadge.

The Treasurer reported the following bills which on motion were ordered paid from the general fund.

Putnam's (books)	$15.
Librarian, salary and sundries	464.14.
Janitor	40.

He also reported the sum of $60.06 as having been deposited in the First National Bank, leaving the amount received from fines, etc., for the last three months.

It is moved and carried that the sum of $50 be appropriated from the general fund to pay for the purchase of books, under the direction of the Library Committee.

The Librarian's report for July was read, and on motion ordered received and placed on file. No further business appearing, the meeting then adjourned.

WM. M. STILLMAN,
Secretary.

Several Old Coins.

Mr. H. D. Dorr of Park avenue is the possessor of a coin issued during President Jackson's term of office. On the back of the coin is inscribed a sentence which made an American Commissioner to Paris in the early part of the present century famous. The sentence is as follows: "Not one cent for tribute, millions for defence." The date of the coin is 1837 and it was unearthed by an Italian who was digging a trench for the mains of the Plainfield Water Supply Company on West Second street yesterday morning. Mr. Dorr purchased the coin from the Italian and prizes it very highly.

While walking along the Passaic River in the vicinity of Sterling a few weeks ago, Mr. Warren Squires of North Plainfield found an old copper penny bearing the date of 1802.

The Crescents Tie One Game And Win One.

As previously announced in these columns, the Crescent League Base Ball team, accompanied by a number of their admirers, and under the management of Mr. T. H. Kojler, are in Connecticut playing a series of games with the "crack" clubs of that State. Tuesday afternoon they played a game with the celebrated Norwich team, and after playing nine innings the score stood 8 to 8.

Yesterday they played a game with the Willimantics and defeated them by a score of 6 to 2.

A Mad Dog Shot.

A dog showing all the symptoms of the rabies was shot on East Third street, near the railroad crossing yesterday afternoon. It required three bullets to kill the rabid canine. It is thought that the animal bit other dogs in that vicinity, and as a precaution, it would be wise for owners to chain their dogs up for a few days.

PLEAS AND SENTENCES

BRIEF SESSION OF THE COUNTY COURT.

Judge Rice Passes Judgment on Several Prisoners.—Bail Fixed for Sadie Jones' Assailants.

The session of the Union County Court of Special Sessions yesterday morning was unexpected to most people, as it was announced recently that during August court would not sit. Judge Rice, however, is presiding in the absence of Judge McCormick, and on account of repairs to the general court room the sessions are held in the room of the Board of Chosen Freeholders.

There were several motions in the Orphans branch and a number of prisoners arraigned on motions of Prosecutor Marsh.

Henry Miller who was recently arrested at the instance of County Detective Kevin, charged with stealing from the complainant's stable a harness, blanket, coat and other articles valued at $38.50, pleaded guilty.

The thefts were committed a year ago, while Miller was in the employ of Mr. Heron. He handled the goods up, dropped them from a rear window, and fled from the city. He returned week before last and was arrested by Officer Dillon.

Miller stated in court that he sold the goods. He was sentenced to State prison for a term of eighteen months.

James Ryan pleaded guilty to going into a barn in Union township and stealing clothing valued at $2.50. The commitment alleged that the goods were taken from a clothing house.

Ryan said he lived in New York, and was in Union looking for work. He claimed to never have been before a court prior to this occasion. He was sentenced to the county jail for a term of five months.

John Pfifer of Westfield was accused of stealing blackberries from the farm of James L. Clark. The allegation stated that 62 worth of berries were taken.

Pfifer said he picked two quarts of the berries from bushes hanging over the fence from Clark's property.

Judge Rice called the prisoner forward and talked with him as to the condition of his family, concluding by imposing a fine of $1 without costs. Pfifer had been in jail two weeks.

Michael Mitchell, John and August Schultes, the men accused of the assault on Sadie Jones, the young colored woman, made application for bail. They were arraigned, and Prosecutor Marsh said as the facts came to him it was an aggravated case.

The prisoners were asked if they had any statement to make, but they were silent. Judge Rice made an order fixing bail at $1,000 in the case of each defendant. The prisoners were remanded to jail.

In the case of John Demarco, who was in jail for non-support, Mr. Cook, his counsel, moved for his discharge under an act which provides for the release of such prisoners on proof that they cannot furnish bonds, and have no money. The object of the law under which the prisoner was arrested was to compel him to provide for those dependent on him, but in the discretion of the court if it was found that that object could not be obtained by his incarceration it was at liberty to order his release.

Mathew Wade testified to Demarco's inability to furnish the bonds and to support the complainant. The prisoner was released.

Judge Rice gave notice to lawyers that in cases of application for bail during the recess of the court, it must be in New Brunswick, he would come to Elizabeth or attend to the matter at his home.

The court adjourned until Sept. 8th.

Bicyclers and Dogs.

The following clipping is of interest to Plainfield's many wheelmen. Many complaints are made every month to the curs which chase bicyclists and in some cases bite them. Here is what one man has to say:

To the Editor of the Tribune:

Sir: The practice of harboring vicious dogs and allowing them access to the public thoroughfares in the cities and towns of Northern New Jersey has become an intolerable nuisance that demands vigorous measures for its abatement. The daily records of serious injuries inflicted attest the constant peril to life and limb to which men, women and children are exposed. Newspapers and letter carriers and others obliged to deliver goods from house to house are frequent victims. As pecuniary responsibility for damage is rarely to be found, the dog-owner should be made criminally liable for the acts of the animal (severely so if committed by himself. Of course every owner will tell you that his particular brute is perfectly harmless and could not be induced to bite any one for the world, but nevertheless, like the gun that isn't loaded, he will do harm when least expected. Public officials seem to be indifferent toward any protective measures, and it is therefore satisfactory to hear that in one or two places at least private enterprise has developed a remarkable increase of mortality among the curs which it is hoped will become epidemic. Since the bicycles became so general their riders offer a conspicuous and favorite object of attack and are compelled to be always on the defensive. Several bicycle clubs, it is said, have of late organized a crusade against dogs. As wheelmen's outfit is now considered complete without a liberal supply of dog medicine in proper doses for dispensation along his routes where it will do the most good, and the death rate of the curs, it is expected, will be speedily increased. Self-defence is the first law of nature, and those who voluntarily persist in putting in peril the lives and limbs of others have only themselves to blame if retaliation follows.

W. H. SMITH.

Orange, N. J., Aug. 1, 1891.

—The Westfield base ball team visited Staten Island yesterday and defeated the Bensonhurst, a "crack" team of that place, by a score of 14 to 1.

VOLUNTEER FIREMEN TO MEET.

A Convention and Tournament to be Held at Atlantic City.

The fourteenth annual convention of the New Jersey State Firemen's Association, which will be held in Atlantic City on September 30th, promises to be of unusual interest, and the volunteer firemen in various parts of the State are making active preparations to participate.

The fire department and citizens of Atlantic City have arranged to hold a grand firemen's tournament and reunion in connection with the convention. The tournament will cover a period of four days, beginning Tuesday, September 29, and ending Friday, October 2.

The programme of entertainment will include horse races, running team races, steamer trials, prize drills, and other firemen's contests, varied by reception ceremonies, sessions of the convention day and evening musical concerts, torchlight procession, fireworks display, and a short excursion by rail or water, terminating in Friday with a grand parade. Delegates from this city will attend.

Not Even That to Offset Combine Folly

"The story of the pretty little farce, which was enacted in the Common Council Monday night, when Leonard Spangenberg received a vote of thanks for 'his efficient services in securing the appointment of North avenue," will prove very interesting reading to the officials of the two companies from which we are told that our Netherwood hero obtained so much. Is it possible that Mr. Herbert believed his colleague was deserving credit for this piece of work when he introduced the motion for thanks? It is beyond the limits of probability that that member of the street committee candidly considered himself deserving the thanks he received with becoming blushes and the unnecessary assurance that he was but "doing his duty." There is but one man deserving of credit for the North avenue improvement and he is our efficient Street Commissioner. It was Mr. Meeker who secured the appropriations from the Central Railroad Company and the Land Improvement Company. It required a degree of diplomacy and tact to get the Spangenberg is an utter stranger to obtain even a favorable consideration of the plan by which the burden of cost was removed from the city's treasury. And the task was not made any easier by a call which the recipient of last Monday night's vote of thanks made upon the companies, at which time he found that neither whining nor bluster was a valuable adjunct in securing the co-operation of the companies. Much of the advantage which Mr. Meeker had already obtained was lost by that unfortunate visit of Mr. Spangenberg and the ground had to be regained inch by inch, but through no credit to the latter gentleman. There are perhaps some things which Mr. Spangenberg can do very well, but his experience with the companies in question have proved very conclusively that he has no business to undertake the mission for which he appropriated Monday night the credit due a gentleman. It is possible that the paign of glorification of the "Big Six" was opened by that vote of thanks. If subsequent efforts are as ill-timed and ridiculous, we will all enjoy them hearily."—Editorial in Central New Jersey Times.

Here is what the New York Tribune has to say on the matter:

The Democrats in the Plainfield Common Council have been trying to make political capital over this in the approaching Fall election. For the permanent improvement which the city has which has been condemned by the courts as a nuisance, the Central New Jersey Land Improvement Company has subscribed $1,500 and the Central Railroad has given $1,000. These amounts were obtained by Robert Herbert, the street commissioner, who is a Republican. By Mayor Gilbert's order a vote of thanks of the city was extended to Mr. Spangenberg, and that Councilman accepted the tribute.

A DEMOCRATIC OPINION.

[From the New York World.]

Considerable ill-feeling has been aroused by the action of the Common Council last Monday night in passing a vote of thanks to Leonard Spangenberg, a member from Netherwood, for his active services in securing from the Central Railroad Company and the Land Improvement Company a sum of money by which a much-needed change of grade was affected in North avenue.

The facts of the matter show that the credit which Mr. Spangenberg received should belong to him.

Last Autumn the Grand Jury arraigned the city of Plainfield in open court for the bad condition of North avenue, which is Netherwood station, which made the approach from the west absolutely unavailable. Mayor Gilbert, Senator McPherson and other prominent citizens of the city was extended to Mr. Spangenberg, and that Councilman accepted the tribute.

How Are You, Mars?

It may or may not be true that a pious and wealthy woman in France has left a prize of $20,000 to the person who shall invent some way of signaling to the inhabitants of one of our neighbor planets. Well, perhaps nothing stranger than that has happened in the history of inventions and discoveries, but things nearly as strange have.

If ever earth's people do succeed in communicating with the inhabitants of another world, that world will probably be Mars. It has not yet been discovered that any of the planets except our own are inhabited, but it seems that Mars may be, and with beings not unlike ourselves. The most powerful telescopes have perceived that Mars has icefields around its poles and has also summer and winter as we have, and that in winter the icefields grow broader, in summer narrower. Schiaparelli believes he has seen long lines like gigantic canals across the face of Mars' equatorial regions, but others think that the lines are in this astronomer's eye. However, it is not safe to say what is or is not any more.

One proposed way of signaling is this: Upon the bosom of some immense plain like the Sahara desert let there be a gigantic right angle triangle measured off. Its sides must be hundreds of miles long and may be marked by lines of palm trees planted and nurtured till they attain their growth. If then the inhabitants of Mars know what mathematics is, and if their telescopes are powerful enough to see this gigantic triangle, they will know it means something. They in turn maybe will plant a corresponding triangle on their planet, that is, if they have any manners at all, and we on our side shall see it and know that our signal has been perceived. Earth and Mars will understand each other.

What They Knew of Shakespeare.

The St. Louis Globe-Democrat has been having no end of fun by discovering to the world how little the average intelligent man knows about Shakespeare. Printing twelve of the commonest Shakespearean quotations upon a neat card, The Globe-Democrat sent a number of its young men with the cards to the Merchants' exchange. The cards were scattered among the members with the request that they would write opposite the quotation the name of the play from which it was taken.

The result was something fearful and wonderful. Two out of the hundreds of intelligent and wealthy American gentlemen present gave ten of the twelve plays correctly. The others were away off. One gentleman said he only knew one Shakespearean quotation, "To be, or not to be." He was sure that was from "Hamlet," because he had paid $2.50 to hear Booth say it. Another prominent citizen simply handed back the card, writing upon it, "I am not going up against this Shakespeare stake."

The quotation that the most of them got correct was this, "Frailty, thy name is woman." They knew Hamlet said that. A member of the St. Louis school board could not correctly place one of the quotations, which must have been a satisfaction to St. Louis teachers. One popular merchant read carefully the lines:

Be just and fear not;
Let all the ends thou aimest at be thy country,
Thy God's and truth's.

And wrote under it, "This is from the Democratic platform."

There is one trust, formed years ago, which never had any charge of sharp practice, and which has laid at its door that the public has heard of. The present Omaha railroad was consolidated from five roads. The government granted public lands to all. These were put into a common syndicate in 1879 and placed in charge of two men—A. H. Wildes and F. Drake. They were to dispose of the land to actual settlers and hand the money over to the roads. The work began on the line, laid down. The managers of the trust handled millions of dollars. Through their agency 200,000 settlers migrated to Minnesota, and they disposed of nearly 350,000 acres of lands which are now thriving farms. The trust has at length come to an end because its work is done. There are no more lands to dispose of and the affairs of the concern have been wound up. Trusts of this kind are welcome.

It would be a strange thing now if somewhere there should be made discoveries of magnificent gold mines, and the world should in consequence be flooded with the yellow metal till it would become a drug in the market, as silver now is. It is not at all impossible for such a thing to happen. Then we should have to adjust the gold standard all over again to meet the changed proportions of the two metals.

The territorial supreme court of Washington decided three years ago that woman suffrage was unconstitutional. This decision disfranchised the women of Washington, who were already voting. Their case has been carried to the supreme court of the United States, where it will be decided during the October term.

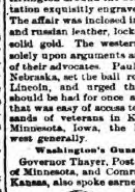
WASHINGTON A WINNER.

The Lincoln Cohorts Routed at Detroit.

PENNSYLVANIA WAS FOR THE WEST

But the Capital Won the Day by a Vote of 566 Against 339—Some of the Prominent Candidates for Commander-in-Chief of the Grand Army.

DETROIT, Aug. 6.—In the fight for the next encampment Washington has defeated Lincoln, Neb. When the encampment reassembled after the noon recess it was generally thought that Washington had a "cinch" on the location for next year's encampment. Her supporters gave out that even the formalities of a ballot would probably be dispensed with. They did not depend entirely upon the oratory of their advocates. Their invitation took the form of an immense silver plate, with statues of Thomas and Farragut on the sides, vignettes of the Capitol, Mount Vernon and Arlington around the border and the invitation exquisitely engraved in the center. The affair was inclosed in a casket of satin and russian leather, locked with a key of solid gold. The western men depended solely upon arguments and the eloquence of their advocates. Paul Vandervoort, of Governor Thayer, Post Commander Rae, of Minnesota, and Comrade Campbell, of Kansas, also spoke earnestly and at length in behalf of Nebraska's capital. General Burdett and W. Pipes, of Washington, led the oratorical batteries in behalf of the national capital, Corporal Tanner dwelt upon its advantages, and Edgar Allen, of Virginia, rose to its rescue on behalf of the South.



A. G. WEISSERT.

While the speech making was in progress the Pennsylvania delegation, which early in the day had been scheduled as solid for Washington, asked leave to retire for consultation. This filled the Washington people with alarm, and they redoubled their button-holing of the delegates on the floor of the hall. When the Pennsylvania delegation filed in again it was with the announcement that they had voted 25 to 18 in favor of Lincoln and that it had been decided to enforce the unit rule in favor of the will of the majority.

Excitement Ran High.

Amid a scene of excitement unparalleled in the history of encampments the roll was called. Illinois, Pennsylvania and Wisconsin and other large delegations voted for Lincoln, and when the last state had been called the tally sheets apparently showed a majority for Lincoln. Thereupon President Oakley, of the Lincoln board of trade, tore off to the telegraph office to spread the good tidings. Meanwhile the apparently defeated delegates had been clamoring for a verification of the vote, and when this had been done it was found that the thirty-six votes of New York had got into the wrong column and the corrected vote stood: Washington, 306; Lincoln, 320. When the corrected count was announced the western men were for the moment stunned while the supporters of Washington yelled themselves hoarse. In the midst of the confusion an adjournment for the day was taken.

Ex-President Hayes Barred Out.

At the opening of the afternoon session a resolution was passed that hereafter the route of the encampment parade should not exceed two miles. At the morning session ex-President Hayes was halted by the sentry because he had forgotten the pass word, and was compelled to remain in the lobby until General Alger, of Michigan, GENERAL BUTTERFIELD. and vouched for him as a true and loyal ex-commander-in-chief.

The Fight For Commander.

Lincoln, of Washington, who was a prominent candidate for commander-in-chief, has withdrawn from the field. In his place appeared a new candidate in the person of General Lew Wallace, the author and brother of Bishop Hurst, of the Methodist Episcopal church, and well known as the "Ohio fighter."

General Butterfield, who has developed toward Colonel Weissert, of Wisconsin, who a few days ago seemed to have a clear field, still has it. It is said that he is not a volunteer soldier, but a West Pointer. Another prominent candidate is Colonel W. R. Smedberg, of California. He also is a graduate of West Point and has behaved himself since the war he has shown but little sympathy with the citizen soldier, and that he is at heart proud, cold and haughty as at heart proud, cold and haughty as at West Point idolatrous. Both candidates, however, have a host of friends who are working hard. The election promises to be very close. General Butterfield, of Troy, N. Y., is a promising dark horse.

Renewed opposition is being manifested toward the proposition to authorize the creation of a new provisional department for colored comrades only. Leading delegations from Ohio, Kansas, Vermont, Michigan and other states expressed themselves without reserve as in favor of compelling white posts to admit colored members.

Over 50,000 people witnessed a grand display of fireworks at Belle Isle Wednesday night under the auspices of the city authorities. The exodus has commenced and special trains packed with worn out veterans are hourly leaving.

General Veazey on the Negro Question.

The "southern question, or "negro question," as affecting the Grand Army of the Republic, was touched upon by General Veazey in his annual report. Referring to the disturbance in the departments of Louisiana and Mississippi over the color line, he recommended that his successor be given authority to create a separate department in Louisiana and some other Gulf states, having concurrent jurisdiction with the department already established in such state.

He also recommends that congress be appealed to to provide for the maintenance of Mount McGregor cottage, where Grant died, the expense of which has hitherto been assumed by the G. A. R. It may be said that, although no section of the country is engaged in disloyal acts, still the doctrine of the right of secession permeates the political literature of the country, and until the heresy is completely eradicated the work of the G. A. R., whose basic principle is loyalty, will not be finished.

The commander-in-chief's declaration is favor of the establishment of departments of the G. A. R. for the negro veterans created a decided sensation.

The Number of Veterans Living.

Adjutant General J. H. Goulding's report for the year ending June 30 shows forty-five posts organized in Texas, Nebraska and 268,607 comrades in good standing. The amount of money expended in charities for the year was $333,609, as against $317,597 in 1890, the death roll for the year foots up 5,330, as against 5,479 last year. He believes that within five years the membership can be increased to 600,000 or 700,000, as there are 1,300,000 soldiers now living.

Quartermaster John Taylor reported the receipts for the year as $39,100; expenditures, $27,298, and the assets of the order, $34,711.

The report of the surgeon general contains a statement from Pension Commissioner Raum announcing that the amount of $116,000,000 will be expended for pensions during the fiscal year.

The "negro question" was referred to a special committee consisting of Mr. Terrill, of Massachusetts; Henderson, of Pennsylvania; Conger, of Ohio; Linehan, of New Hampshire, and Atkins, of Ohio.

For the Women's Relief.

Over 700 women gathered in the Church of Our Father this morning when the ninth annual convention of the Women's Relief Corps was called to order by Mrs. Mary Seem McHenry, of Denison, Iowa, the national president. Congress, she said, should pass a special pension law for the corps, and, said she, that law or its record should be completed as soon as possible. So far 26,000 names were enrolled, but of 18,000 more there was no record whatever. National Secretary Hannah Plimpton, of Iowa, presented her report showing a total membership of 77,879. The general and relief funds on hand aggregate $160,326.

Alleged Plot of the Chinese.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—A letter from Rev B. C. Henry, of Canton, states that there are indications of a strong undercurrent of hostility to foreigners in the reigning dynasty. "Rumor now declares," says the letter, "that Sept. 4 is the day fixed for a general uprising. The programme laid down is to destroy the Roman Catholic cathedral; then the Protestant chapels, and to finish up with the destruction of Shameen, the foreign settlement."

Celebrated Their Golden Wedding.

HARTFORD, Aug. 6.—John Hooker and Isabella Beecher Hooker celebrated their golden wedding last evening by a reception in the city mission rooms. Among those present were Senator and Mrs. Hawley, William M. Evarts, William Lloyd Garrison, Dr. Edward Beecher and wife, Rev. Thomas K. Beecher, Dr. Charles E. Stowe, Susan B. Anthony, and a number of representative woman suffragists.

Hosmer Defeats Ten Eyck.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 6.—Hosmer's sculling defeated Ten Eyck in the three mile race at Lake Quinsigamond. Hosmer's time was 19 minutes. Ten Eyck was 12 seconds behind. Ten Eyck claimed a foul, saying that he was fouled during the last turn of Hosmer's boat collided with his boat, but as neither the referee nor judge at the stake boat had seen it the claim was not admitted.

President Currier's Proposal.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 6.—President Currier, of the Union Pacific combination, has made a proposition to the creditors of the Old Colony Distillery company to take the plant and issue bonds to the other creditors. The plant is claimed at $150,000, the claims to run for five years and bear a 6 per cent. semi-annual interest.

Mate Winbrow's Alleged Brutality.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 6.—H. V. Winbrow, first mate of the schooner Hestor A. Walters, is still held here, charged with assault with intent to kill Henry Shepard, a colored man employed on the schooner. Shepard is in a critical condition.

Terrible Explosion of Molten Metal.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 6.—A buggy of molten metal exploded at the Sheen steel mills, fatally burning Frank Kalisch and seriously injuring two other Polish laborers. Water dripped into the metal pipe into the metal, causing the explosion.

To See the Holy Coat at Treves.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—About 150 ladies and gentlemen left on the steamer Steinfriesland bound for Treves, Rheinish Prussia, to view the Holy Coat of Christ, which is on exhibition there for the first time since 1884.

Safe Robber and Incendiary.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Aug. 6.—Joseph Chesebro, twenty-eight years old, who was sent to state prison for safe robbing, has confessed that he set fire to the Methodist church here five years ago.

The Despatch at Bar Harbor.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 6.—The U. S. S. Despatch, with Secretary Tracy on board, has arrived here. She was saluted by the Philadelphia as she came into the bay.

Spain Gets Our French Minister.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The state department has been advised that M. Roustan, the French minister here, has been appointed French minister to Spain.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS

M'Alpin Re-elected President of the Republican Clubs.

WILL QUAY SUCCEED ANDREWS?

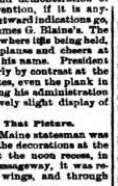
A Report That the Pennsylvania Republican State Chairman Will Resign in the Senator's Favor and That the Latter Will Vigorously Fight Harrison.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 6.—The first day of the convention of the State League of Republican clubs has come and gone, and, so far as surface indications go, there has been nothing to justify the reports spread abroad to the effect that it was to be a gathering largely factional in its character. The mention of Warner Miller and Thomas C. Platt's names were greeted with about equal applause. The sentiment in Mr. Miller's letter of regret at his inability to be present, "Organization not machines should be the watch word of the party," brought out a particularly loud demonstration of approval. The convention, if it is anybody's, is, so far as could be ascertained indications go, solely and entirely James G. Blaine's. The Grand Opera House, where it is being held, fairly shook with applause and cheers at the first mention of his name. President Harrison fared poorly by contrast at the hands of the delegates, even the plank in the platform indorsing his administration called out comparatively slight display of enthusiasm.

GENERAL GOFF.

They Wanted That Picture.

A portrait of the Maine statesman was conspicuous among the decorations at the morning session. At the noon recess, in order to open a passageway, it was removed to one of the wings, and through forgetfulness it had not been replaced. The Kings county delegation were the first to notice its absence. Then the cry arose all over the house, "Where is that picture of Mr. Blaine's picture?" and the demand did not cease till the picture was restored amid tremendous cheers. At the afternoon session an attempt was made to increase the number of members in the committees named in the morning, so as to give every congressional district a representation, but the motion was voted down.



ROBERT B. PORTER.

The Platform.

The platform announces adherence to the principles declared in the national convention of 1888, indorses the administration of President Harrison, and offers congratulations to the country that so courageous and able a magistrate is at the head of affairs; approves the protection of American labor, reciprocal trade with the civilized world, and a bi-metallic currency based on sound financial principles that will protect the producer and consumer; demands a fair ballot and a fair count; a generous recognition of the soldier of the republic, his widow, and his orphan by judicious and liberal pension laws; the creation of a great navy that shall cause our flag to be respected on every sea; the erection of national defenses that shall protect us at home; the protection of honest immigration, while restraining the influx of criminals and cheap labor.

The platform also denounces Democratic rule in this state during recent years, and declares that the administration of David B. Hill has degraded the gubernatorial office and is a reproach upon the Empire state, demands that ballot reform shall be carried out in its legitimate conclusion, demands that a liberal appropriation be provided for the World's Columbian exposition and favors such legislation as will protect home industries in this state from foreign competition.

Rochester was chosen as the next meeting place.

Colonel Edward McAlpine, of New York, was unanimously elected president. A mass meeting was held in the Grand Opera House last evening, at the principal speakers were General S. L. Woodward, Congressman Barr, of Michigan; General Goff, of Virginia. President McAlpine was in the chair. Letters of regret were received from Major McKinley and General John S. Clarkson.

A Report About Mr. Quay.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A special to the Evening Sun from Washington says: It is learned here that Senator Quay will succeed John Q. Andrews as chairman of the Republican state central committee of Pennsylvania, Chairman Andrews retiring to make the vacancy.

John L. Hill, commissioner of public buildings in Philadelphia, who is here, confirms the report that Chairman Andrews, of the Pennsylvania Republican state committee, will resign and that he will be succeeded by Mr. Quay. He adds that Quay will lead the fight for Blaine as against Harrison for the presidential nomination.

J. H. Gaskill for President.

TRENTON, Aug. 6.—At a meeting of the executive committee of the State Republican league, J. H. Gaskill, of Mount Holly, was elected president in place of Wilbur A. Mott, of Newark. It is understood that a convention of all the Republican clubs in the state will be held shortly. The political situation in the state was thoroughly discussed, and it was decided to organize at least 500 new Republican clubs in the state. The new president is a rising young lawyer of Mount Holly. He is at present in Ohio stumping for McKinley.

Democratic Clubs at Work.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The executive committee of the National Association of Democratic clubs will hold a meeting at the Hoffman House next Tuesday. The president of the executive committee is Congressman W. L. Wilson, of West Virginia. Next Tuesday's meeting will consider the reports from the secretaries of State League associations in thirty-six states. Plans will be considered for the coming campaign.

An Election Officer Shot.

MOUNT VERNON, Ky., Aug. 6.—John Mullins, an election officer in the Crooked Creek district, was shot in the head and instantly killed during the election. Will Damaron and Jones Durham have been arrested on suspicion.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Pritchard Will Come to America and Fight Fitzsimmons.

LONDON, Aug. 6.—Ted Pritchard has announced that he will come to America to fight Bob Fitzsimmons before the club that will allow him expenses and put up the largest purse.

John Hughes, the pedestrian, has put up a forfeit of $200 for a match with Charles Rowell, of England, to race in America or England for $1,000 a side, all of the gate receipts and the world's championship.

Nancy Hanks Defeats Belle Hamlin.

BUFFALO, Aug. 6.—At the driving park the attraction was the Belle Hamlin-Nancy Hanks match race. The talent went down with a dull thud when the Hanks mare finished an easy winner in the slow time of 2:16¾.

Record Breakers at Independence.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Aug. 6.—Allerton was sent to break his record of 2:12½, and lowered it half a second, Harry Marshall, 2:14¾, finished in 2:12¾. Manager, who holds the two-year-old pacing record of 2:16¾, was sent to beat it in his three-year-old form. He finished in 2:14¾.

Louisville Will Remain.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 6.—Dr. Harry Stucky has been elected president, and Hon. Zach Phelps a director of the Louisville club. The club will remain in the Association.

SLEW HIS ONLY SON.

The Unlucky Blow of a Prominent Philadelphia German.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—By an unlucky blow struck during a quarrel, John Jahks, a prominent West Philadelphia butcher, who has accumulated a large fortune, became the slayer of his only son, Frank, a young man with good prospects and affair. Young Jahks was intoxicated, and when his father reproved him, became quarrelsome.

As the young man was a powerful fellow, his father picked up a piece of gas pipe to frighten him away. Young Jahks leaped at his father, and the latter says he fortified the piece of pipe properly to ward off his son's attack, and without any intention of striking him. The pipe, however, fell over the son's arm as he grabbed his father, striking him on the left temple.

The wound was not considered of any consequence, but it grew worse, and the young man died about midnight. The father was committed to await the action of the coroner. Mr. Jahks is one of the most prominent Germans in the city. He is connected with many of the German societies and many building and loan associations.

She Will Comfort the Pasha.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—Miss Emma Walraven Comfort and Dr. Harry Crookshank, pasha and director of the Egyptian prisons, were married at noon by Rev. A. G. E. Westmacott at Beechwood, near Langhorn. Mr. J. H. Barnsley, of this city, acted as best man, and Miss Belle Ward, of Orange, N. J., was maid of honor. The newly wedded couple departed for Washington, where they will be entertained by the secretary of the English legation until Saturday, when they will sail for Europe.

She Was Not Goodwin's Wife.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—It has been learned that the woman to whom Goodwin was writing when Webster murdered him on the night in question is believed to be his wife. She is the wife of another man with whom she has not lived for some time, and she is now supposed to be in some western city, for the purpose of gaining a residence in order to secure a divorce and marry Goodwin.

The People's Party Surprised Them.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 6.—Late Kentucky election returns are favorable in every instance to the farmers, and there is no question but that they will control the next legislature. The People's party has surprised the Democrats by electing 18 candidates. The political complexion of the house is Democrats, 81; Republicans, 7; People's party, 13, Independent Democrat, 1.

To Dissolve the Flour City Life.

ALBANY, Aug. 6.—Hon. James F. Pearce, state superintendent of insurance, reports to the attorney general that the Flour City Life association, of Rochester, has been conducting its business fraudulently and has failed to comply with the provisions of the state laws governing insurance law. He requests the attorney general to secure a dissolution of the association's charter.

George Jones Dangerously Ill.

LEWISTON, Me., Aug. 6.—The physicians in attendance on Mr. George Jones, of the New York Times, say that his condition is serious. His wife and daughter are with him at Auburn. Mr. Jones' life advanced age, seventy-nine years, makes his case more serious than it would be in a more youthful person.

A Cloudburst Near Harrisburg.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 6.—A cloudburst between Hummelstown and Rockville caused Paxton creek to rise so rapidly that much damage was done to railroad tracks and houses. Several factories were compelled to shut down. Trains on the Pennsylvania railroad ran through three feet of water for two or three hours.

Mrs. Blaine, Jr., Will Get Her Divorce.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Aug. 6.—It is now stated that Judge Aiken did not refuse to grant a decree of divorce to W. H. Maan because of his short residence in this state. Therefore the case of Mrs. James G. Blaine, Jr., will not be interfered with as was first believed.

Dugan Held for Manslaughter.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 6.—Frank Dugan agent of the Meriden Brewing company, who is charged with manslaughter in causing the death of Josephine Wallace at Silver Beach, has been bound over to the supreme court.

John S. Rogers Chosen Commissioner.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—Acting Secretary Nettleton has appointed John S Rogers, of Philadelphia, commissioner of immigration at Philadelphia. Mr. Rogers has for years been connected with immigration matters at Philadelphia.

Pennsylvania Railroads Consolidate.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 6.—The state department has been notified of the consolidation of the Cambria and Clearfield Railroad company with the Pennsylvania Railroad company, with J. N. Dubarry as president.

The Kaiser and the World's Fair.

BERLIN, Aug. 6.—The Berlin papers say there is no authoritative corroboration of the statement that Chancellor Caprivi told Minister Phelps that the kaiser would perhaps visit the World's fair.

EIGHT REPORTED DEAD.

Disastrous Smashup on the Vermont Railroad.

AN EXCURSION TRAIN WRECKED.

Conflicting Accounts Place the Number of Dead from Two to Eight—The Scene Is Near Champlain, N. Y.—Two More Bad Calamities of the Hail.

CHAMPLAIN, N. Y., Aug. 6.—A train conveying a Sunday school excursion from Ellenburg and Rouse's Point and intervening stations on the Central Vermont railroad ran into a mail train which had the right of way just east of this station at 7 o'clock last night. The excursion train had about 700 persons on board and was returning from Willsborough Point. William Angell, aged seventeen, son of a merchant of this place, and Sim Venetta, a laborer, of Chateaugnay lake, were killed outright and some twenty people more or less injured. The most seriously injured are Henry Lamountain, of Champlain, both legs cut off; it is thought he will die; Sydney William Moore, both legs broken; Henry Swett, of Ellenburg Center, arm fractured and body and limbs bruised, John Patterson, of Perry Mills, leg broken; Mrs. Lewis, of Moira, head and limbs bruised; Miss A. Bateman, of Perry Mills, hip dislocated; S. Levy, of Albany, commercial traveler, wrist broken and seriously bruised.

The Excursion Train's Mistake.

The excursion train had orders to meet the mail here, and should have gone on the siding a few rods back of where the accident occurred. The engines telescoped and both were badly smashed, one on each train. John E. Healy, excursion manager of the Central Vermont, started himself for the injured, and the physicians and citizens of Champlain were prompt to render assistance. The engineer of the mail probably backed his train when he saw the train coming up on the timing over 200 rods ahead. The engineer and firemen of the two engines jumped before the collision occurred.

Eight Reported Dead.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—A special to the Herald from Rouse's Point, N. Y., says that eight persons were killed, from ten to fifteen were badly injured, and a number of others more or less hurt. The list of the killed, so far as known is as follows:

William Angell, nineteen years old, a resident of Champlain.

Henry Lamountain, twenty-one years old, also of Champlain.

George Wrimsetz.

The names of the other five dead persons cannot be learned.

Train Wrecked in Michigan.

KALAMAZOO, Mich., Aug. 6.—A plot to wreck a train was successful on the Grand Rapids and Indiana railroad near Cooper, the first station north of Kalamazoo. The train was the through express. After leaving Cooper, and while the train was running thirty-five miles an hour, a rail which had been sprung threw the train over an embankment thirty feet high. There were about sixty passengers in the train and twelve in the Wagner sleeping car.

A List of the Injured.

This is a list of the injured:

A. Conway, Fort Wayne; head cut.

N. B. Williamson, Trenton, N. J.; arm injured, head cut, great loss of blood.

Dr. H. B. Carriel, Chicago; back hurt.

F. A. Burnham, Medina, N. Y.; head cut.

Charles A. Spellman, Baltimore, Md.; face cut and head bruised.

W. H. Pratt, Grand Rapids; shoulder dislocated.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Earl Kay, Grand Rapids; his shoulder dislocated and her body badly bruised.

M. R. Powers, Chicago; bad gash in leg, skin broken, head and face cut.

J. Wakeman, Lowell, Mich.; badly injured internally.

Henry G. Dykehouse, Grand Rapids; two bad scalp wounds.

One Dead and Many Scalded.

CUMBERLAND, Md., Aug. 6.—A trawway engine started as usual from Switchback, on the West Virginia Central railway, to convey seventeen workmen to their work in the lumber regions. Two women who had asked for a ride to a berry batch a short distance away were also aboard. The engine had hardly got under full headway when it struck a piece of timber lying on the track, turning it completely over. Every person on the engine was more or less injured by escaping steam or by being crushed under the locomotive. Alice Robinson was horribly burned about her face and arms, and will die. John McKenzie, of Frostburg, was caught under the engine and scalded so badly that he died.

The Glendale Mystery.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—Four days have elapsed since the discovery of the girl's body at Glendale, L. I., and the mystery is no nearer solution than it was the morning the body was found. A detective has gone to Jamaica to look for the missing workman who had been employed on a house at Glendale, outside of which the murdered girl was found, and who has disappeared. He left his tools behind him and is thought to be in Jamaica, but there is no evidence of his known connecting him with the crime.

Total Abstainers in Session.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 6.—The twenty-first annual convention of the Catholic Total Abstinence Union of America is in session here. Addresses of welcome were made by Cardinal Gibbons and Commissioner Rose, of the District of Columbia.

American Turners Meet.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 6.—The North American turnerbunds are in session at the hall of the Philadelphia Turngemeinde. About seventy delegates are present. Henry Brown, of St. Louis, is in the chair.

Two Killed by a Boiler Explosion.

WINCHESTER, O., Aug. 6.—The boiler of a portable sawmill, six miles south of here, exploded Tuesday night, killing Moses Sowers and Martin Tracy and seriously injuring three others.

Mr. Blaine's Physician Arrives.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The physician who treated James G. Blaine during his stay in Florence, Italy, has arrived here from Italy, and gone to Bar Harbor to treat Mr. Blaine.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Parliament was prorogued to October 20. The Queen's speech contained nothing of grave importance.

Admiral Walker and the officers of his command were breakfasted by the chamber of commerce at the Lawyers' Downtown club at New York.

Captain Thomas Martin, for many years a prominent vessel owner, dropped dead as Oswego, N. Y.

Herman GutterBack, city editor of the New York Staats Zeitung, has been indicted by the grand jury for publishing an account of the prize fight recently at Sing Sing.

A receiver has been appointed to take charge of the property of O'Brien & Clark of New York to squedue funds. Two judgments were filed against the firm, one for $1,141.20 and the other for $6,491.87.

The White Star steamship Majestic has broken the record from Queenstown to New York. Her time was 5 days 18 hours 8 minutes.

The Ohio People's Party Meets.

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 6.—The People's party of Ohio convention here. About 400 delegates are present. The delegates claim that they are after the scalps of Senators Sherman and Brice.

A LITTLE BOY'S TROUBLE.

Abandoned in the Street by His Alleged Father at Stamford.

NEW YORK, Aug. 6.—The little boy with big blue eyes who was left at police headquarters on Tuesday night by a man who said he had found him crying in the road at Stamford, Conn., was christened Dudley Pritt by Superintendent Jenkins, of the children's society. The boy said his name was Dudley Worm.

Frederick Worm, of 223 East Eighty eighth street, called at the police station and told a long story about how the child had come to call him papa.

In December, 1890, Mr. Worm said Mr. Frank K. Leavitt, of Stamford, brought the boy to him and told him he would pay ten dollars a month for his board and would buy his clothing. Mr. Worm took the child and kept it, but Leavitt whom Worm describes as wealthy, never paid for the child's board and Worm returned the boy to him last Monday.

The man who left the child at headquarters said his name was C. A. Shoot. "I live at the Fifth Ave. hotel, New York," said Mr. Shoot, "and that's all there is about it. I found him crying in the road and running after a carriage and screaming, 'Papa! papa!' Mr. Leavitt says the child is not his, but the son of a former Miss Pond.

She married a Mr. McKenzie, who was the child's father, but she didn't want to be troubled with the care of children, so she never took it to live with her. Mr. Leavitt volunteered to take the child and find a home for it, provided she would pay a part of the expense. She agreed.

An Aged Woman's Heroism.

RAHWAY, N. J., Aug. 6.—Georgie, the three-year-old son of George Foster, of this place, narrowly escaped drowning yesterday, but was rescued through the heroic efforts of his grandmother, who is sixty years old. The child fell into a deep pool in the Rahway river. The brave old lady plunged in head first and succeeded in bringing the child to the surface, when both were dragged into a passing boat.

A Desperate Suicide at Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 6.—Jack Frost, aged about twenty-eight, of Anderson, Engiand, stabbed himself in the breast with a pair of pliers, ripped open his abdomen and then jumped out of a third story window at the Hotel Carson about noon. His recovery is improbable.

Eloped with a Penniless Farm Hand.

MONTREAL, Aug. 6.—Mrs. Florence Tiffin, a widow, and a member of the old, aristocratic and wealthy Tiffin family, of this city, has eloped with Arthur Crew, a penniless emigrant who worked as farm hand on her estate.

A Georgia Bluebeard Sentenced.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 6.—Albert Moree, alias Albert Kitchen, the negro who has murdered three wives, was placed on trial. Within three hours after a jury had been selected he was sentenced to death. He will be hanged Sept. 18.

Letter Carriers Meet.

WOMAN'S HOME

OAK FURNITURE THE BEST.

It Furnishes Less Opportunity for Deception Among Dealers.

In the last score of years the tendency has been to adopt hard wood not only for furniture, but for the paneling and interior woodwork of the house. Oak furniture of a fair quality may now be purchased as low as was the painted or enameled pine furniture of years ago. It is true that a good deal of this cheap furniture is made of inferior wood in which the defects are hidden by filling in before it is polished or brushed off. But even then wood that is thus treated is far more durable than the cheap veneered furniture of half a century ago.

Oak is undoubtedly the most popular wood today. It is found in both natural and antique finish. All antique oak and all the various fumed finishes, such as the Sixteenth century finish, the malachite finish, are artificial methods of treating the natural wood. They are produced by the use of stains of various kinds, and are there fore to be condemned as shams.

Another artificial method of treating oak is to bleach it, until it becomes an light colored as white maple. This effectually destroys all the natural beauty of the wood. Inferior pieces of oak furniture are invariably treated in antique finish or some artificial style in order to cover up their defects, and this is another reason why they should be avoided. The best choice in low priced furniture is a good set of oak. Ash is not especially durable. It is likely to split off. Maple, which is a very beautiful and expensive wood, is so delicate in color that it is liable to become soiled and is not very durable.

Care should be taken to buy oak furniture of a thoroughly trustworthy dealer, as no wood is more liable to warp than oak if it is used before it has been seasoned. When once well cured it is probably the best and most durable of all woods, mahogany alone excepted.

Black walnut is one of the strongest and most durable of woods, but it is not fashionable at present and is not as expensive as it was at one time. The most valuable wood in market is the genuine Spanish mahogany. It is dark, has considerable curl in the grain, and is fine and close in texture. Honduras mahogany, on the contrary, is coarse and straighter in grain and is much less valuable. The best mahogany is very heavy. The old variety of mahogany, known as San Domingo, is all spent out of market and is the most valuable of all. It is found chiefly in antique pieces.

There is a new kind of mahogany which has come into use of recent years and which grows chiefly in Lower California and Mexico. It is known as prima vera, or white mahogany. It is a wood with a beautiful grain, nearly as light in color as maple, with a beautiful golden tone and grain. It has been used for the interior of the houses of millionaires on the western coast and for fine pieces of parlor furniture. Genuine ebony is one of the most expensive of woods and is seldom seen in entire pieces. The best ebony comes from Africa. Most of the so called ebony furniture in market is of soft wood, which has been stained and treated to a good polish.

Cherry wood, which is frequently stained to look like mahogany, is a cheap limited one and should be avoided, because it is not durable. Cherry is far more durable finished in its natural color, a gray brown hue. Rose wood is another old fashioned hard wood no longer in much demand for furniture. It is used chiefly for the cases of pianos, but even for this purpose it is passing out of date.

There is a fancy at present for enameled furniture, but this is as expensive as hard wood furniture if it is properly made, as it must always be finished over hard wood to be durable. Even then it is easily chipped and defaced.—New York Tribune.

The Individuality of Children.

How can we mothers with large families and limited means best instruct our little ones to prepare them for the vicissitudes of life? Children are not all alike. In our gardens we have the roses brilliant with color, the lilies in their snow white purity, the tall honeysuckle and the tiny forget-me-not, and yet each is different, and each filling the place assigned it. One cherished plant needs to be cultivated and enriched to bring forth its beautiful bloom, another attains its greatest beauty of bloom only by restraining its too forward growth. So each child has an individuality of his own, which must be studied before any effort over their bangs and their makeup, yet everybody knows a fine figure is the most important requisite of all. Any face can be rendered attractive by expression. Good carriage induces a good figure. It at least throws such lines as you have into an adjustment of harmony. It will make your dresses fit better, last longer and look finer while they last.

"A head well carried comes soon to be well poised." Shoulders well squared back fill up your bodice and improve your silhouette as well as your profile. Hips well balanced make your gowns drape gracefully in spite of your dressmaker. Feet that come down to the ground prettily come near to being pretty feet. If women would spend their time bathing, rubbing and exercising they would have something to show for it. Instead, they set around in 'masks' or make themselves hideous over night. They use washes, prescriptions and oils and they don't half wash. Oh, yes, that is true. Many women, especially those addicted to greases, do not half wash. Absolute cleanliness—not a mere superficial clarity cleanliness—is the best and only safe cosmetic in the world."—Chicago News.

How to Make a So Called Divided Skirt.

Make your skirt of light crisp silk, some pretty color—scarlet, if you like, or bright blue. Let it come half way between knee and ankle. Do you know how to make the skirt? Just a pair of scant bloomers, either ballooning or holding by elastic about the knee. Then, as a finish, a ruffle, or better still a knife plaiting that falls to where the bloomers end. If you want to be very particular, you can put another ruffle under this just about the knee of each leg, and falling to the edge of the bloomers. Then sew a skirt this same length and of the same material, to the band of the bloomers. No matter what happens, no flash of white can suggest exposure.

The white articles of wear are safe under the bloomers. No matter how high a reach the step up is, the ruffles on the lifted leg fall in a mass about the leg and down to the other leg, looking as if one's skirt clung kindly. The whole thing goes on at once and does not call any scorn upon the would be "spotted" her for offenses, and was an old tyrant, evidently, until finally the boy got the outgrew little faults naturally, with out any "spatting."

Suddenly my eyes were opened. There are little tricks that one does well to induce baby to forget as soon as possible, but for all the great sum of little ways and freaks one should simply ignore them. Let them alone and baby will outgrow them.

If baby wants to play with books and tear them put them out of his reach. If he pulls at the table scarf put it away. A few months later he will not notice it because he has outgrown that state of baby hood.

Not until I learned this was I fit for the care of children.

Because of the restless, growing life in side them must babies be ever on the move, not from any lack of mindled. Make a practice to drop the word "Don't" out of your list. If baby fingers pull at scarf or tidy refrain from the usual cry of "Don't do that," and instead say, "Do this," by means of some attractive thing that will call away baby's attention.—Health and Home.

Helps for Beauty.

"A girl who sits unexceptionally is a rarity," said an artist. "The sex's poses in a chair are instinctively and unconsciously slightly. Then why will not girls practice a good carriage? They spend hours of prayer and effort over their bangs and their makeup, yet everybody knows a fine figure is the most important requisite of all. Any face can be rendered attractive by expression. Good carriage induces a good figure. It at least throws such lines as you have into an adjustment of harmony. It will make your dresses fit better, last longer and look finer while they last.

was the one. It is probable that this mother had been reading a novel, and had decided that Blanche should be the name of her first girl, and it is possible that she does not know what Blanche means. It occurred to me, however, that many children are named in a fashion which is very unjust to them, and that parents hold these youngsters in trust and are answerable for any wrong they may do them.

When I was a child there was a family in our neighborhood named Sead, and their oldest girl was named Birdie. It is bad enough for any woman to go through the world with such a name as Birdie, but to be called Bird Sead is cruelty.—Detroit Free Press.

The Temperature of Dwellings.

Two eminent women, who have visited this country, join in a common public criticism of the temperature of American homes. These are Mrs. Stanley, wife of the African explorer, and Mrs. Rider Haggard. The latter insists that a temperature of 70 degs. gives her a headache, and she regards 65 degs. as too warm for comfort. Probably most of our American women would shiver and complain seriously if required to live in a house temperature as low as 65 degs. Yet it is interesting to know that the complaints of our visitors are in line with the teachings of high medical authorities.

Many homes are kept, the season through, at a temperature of nearly 80 degs., and in consequence that thing is the secret of many of the ills which are experienced, especially those which manifest themselves in chronic headaches, nervousness and depression.—Good Housekeeping.

The Woman with Her Translation.

Let us suppose that a woman sends to the editor of a magazine a translation of that touching story by a hitherto unknown French author, "Paul et Virginie." Very likely it will be returned to her, with a curt note from the editor regretting the want of space. Now, if she had taken it to him and had seen the man herself she could have explained that she was not in a hurry to see her work in print; that another month, when he had less matter on hand, would do equally well; that, after all, the story was quite a short one and did not take up so very much space, and that she had another story which she would gladly translate if he thought that he might like it better than the one offered to him. That is the really businesslike and practical way of doing things, and far more expeditious than bandying letters through the postoffice.—London Spectator

A Closet for Ironing Utensils.

Whenever it is possible it is well to keep a separate closet for articles pertaining to ironing. Keep the irons, starch, bluing, bolders, boards, sheet, blanket and other articles pertaining to ironing in this closet, which should be warm and dry and shut off from the dust. If the ironing boards are kept in a closet in general use it is best to put them in bags of bed ticking or some other heavy cotton, and hang them up where they will be free from dust and dirt. If they are kept in a closet reserved for the ironing material they need not be covered. Tubs and ironing boards should be kept in a cold place, and there is no objection to a little dampness.—New York Tribune.

Pleasant Methods of Giving Medicine.

A strong solution of extract of licorice destroys the disagreeable taste of aloes Peppermint water disguises the nauseous taste of epsom salts. Milk is a good abater of the bitter taste of Peruvian bark.

and cloves that of senna. Castor oil cannot be tasted if beaten and thoroughly mixed with the white of an egg. Another method of covering the nauseous taste of castor or codliver oil is to put a table spoonful of strained orange juice in a wineglass, pour the oil into the center of the juice, then squeeze a few drops of lemon juice upon the oil and rub some of the juice on the edge of the glass.—New York Telegram.

No One Sees Her Face.

A woman residing near Irasburg, Vt., is said to have allowed no human being to look upon her during the day for nearly forty years. She lives in a small, sandy, shantal, one room, about six miles from town, and ventures out only on the darkest nights, when, thickly veiled, she will walk into town and transact such business as she may have. She lives on money left her by her father who, it is said, was a well to do farmer.—Philadelphia Ledger.

Take Out All Stains Before Soaking.

Before putting clothes in soak remember to remove all stains. Fruit stains and coffee stains may be removed by cold water. Iron rust is one of the stains which may be left in after the washing, as washing does not seem to set it perceptibly. It can be taken out at any time by laying the stain over a board in the hot sun, covering it with salt and saturating it with lemon juice. Slight mildew stains will yield to the same treatment.—New York Tribune.

The Woman's Liberal Federation of London includes many a noble lady, with the Countess of Aberdeen as president. The principal interest of this great body of women is to provide woman lecturers for the purpose of organizing associations and visiting those already affiliated for the advancement of the great question of conferring parliamentary franchise to women the same as to men.

Whenever a baby is restless and "fussy," whatever the cause, instead of administering soothing syrups or other drugs, the mother should always try to afford relief by simple means. In infinitely many such instances water will be found a potent remedy, and in ordinary febrile attacks it is no less efficacious.

Here is an excellent receipt for cleaning silver: Rub the silver with a piece of an old soft napkin moistened with a little olive oil; then rub it well with calcined magnesia, using a brush when necessary, and afterward with a clear, soft chamois.

A correspondent says that where soot has been dropped on a carpet and an equal quantity of salt thrown over it it may be swept without a trace of the soot remaining on the carpet. This is certainly worth trying.

To keep the bread jar and cake box sweet, rinse, after washing, with boiling water in which a little common soda has been dissolved, then set out of doors in the sun for a few hours.

To remove scratches and bruises from furniture, rub them gently with a fresh walnut, butternut or hickorynut kernel, and they will disappear as if by magic.

The skin of a boiled egg is the best remedy for a boil. Carefully peel it, wet and apply to the boil. It draws out the matter and relieves soreness.

Mildewed linen may be restored by soaping the spots, and while wet covering them with powdered chalk.

THE LATEST OUTING COSTUMES.

Jaunty Gowns for Boating, Cycling and Tennis—A New Cut in Riding Habits.

The season for outdoor sports is at its height. In order that women shall gain the greatest pleasure in the various outdoor games and exercises, a costume suited to the sport is necessary. We take pleasure, therefore, in presenting models for a lawn tennis dress, a cycling costume and something new in the way of a riding habit.

The tennis dress depicted in the cut is a serú flannelet, spotted with garnet. The gallows which trims the costume, also the plaited yoke, matches in color the garnet spots. The hat is of ecru straw, with garnet velvet composed of bows of garnet colored ribbon.

The cycling costume shown in the same cut includes a skirt in gray cheviot, encircled with two rows of dark gray braid. The bodice is in blue stockinet and is finished with a turndown collar, lapels and deep cuffs. The blouse worn beneath may be also in the stockinet, or in silk or satin, with a waistcoat and cravat. Another model had a bodice fashioned on the same lines as a man's sleeveless jacket.

The second cut is shown a French riding habit, the bodice of which is quite new in cut. This habit is in brown cloth; the waistcoat is of white cloth, striped. The gray hat is finished with a twist of rust brown gauze. A jockey necktie is worn with this habit, which is fastened with gilt pins.

Some of the river dresses have nautical decorations—an anchor, a life buoy, or a pair of oars embroidered on the corners of the skirts. Others are ruffled with silk or gold cord and made quite plainly. A gown of diagonal blue serge, suitable for rowing, punting or playing tennis in, is built on natural lines, with a full lining, and is suspended from the shoulders by means of stout braces fastened to a Swiss belt. The bodice is of striped silk and fashioned like a blouse. Corded materials and materials with patterns are very much more dismissive than plain smooth cloths. Several of the most recent dresses are of corduroy cloth, and have kid waistcoats elaborately trimmed with tinsel passementerie. A pretty blue serge gown—just the thing for a warm day—has the bodice and skirt arranged on either side with a row of gold buttons and has a cost bodice opening over a white cloth waistcoat embroidered with gold.

Miss Anna Williams, the girl whose classic profile appears on the silver dollar, is still a Philadelphia teacher, as she was when her features attracted the attention of the mint engraver. She now teaches the philosophy of drawing in the Girls' Normal school in the Quaker City.

—For the first time in several days the chief maximum temperature in the United States was registered not along the sub-tropical Gulf coast but in Rapid City, S. D. The thermometer at that point touched 100 degrees Fahrenheit yesterday. While this extreme is not remarkable for South Dakota in August it indicates the birth of a wave of severe heat. Its effects will be felt generally in all the country east of the 100th meridian, either in temperature or in an increase of absolute humidity, or both, until Monday.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Jacob Hodges has returned to his home on West Sixth street from Elizabethtown, N. Y.

Mrs. Geo. D. Blazier, formerly of this city but now of Newark, is visiting relatives in this city.

Mr. Isaac Scribner has returned to his home in North Plainfield from a pleasant visit to Providence, R. I.

Miss Leora D. Wenzel of Evona is spending the month of August at Flemington, Hunterdon county.

City Judge Codington has returned to his home in this city from his annual Summer outing in New York State.

The following from the local paper of Amsterdam, N. Y., relates to a cousin of Mr. R. M. Stover of Ninth street, this city, who himself edits the New York State law reports, and is distinguished in the profession.?

IN WILL BE JUDGE STOVER.

The stalwart Republicans of Malone, in the fourth district political convention, ended and began again on Saturday. It ended in the unanimous nomination of Hon. Martin Luther Stover of Amsterdam for justice of the Supreme court, to succeed Hon. Joseph Potter of Whitehall. It began again over the nomination of Judge Tappan's successor. The convention continued on a 7 to 7 division till adjournment was taken to Aug. 11. The one candidate nominated is one of the best known lawyers in Mohawk valley, Martin L. Stover is a native of Seneca county, and 52 years old. He was educated in Wittenberg, O. In 1862, only 17 years of age, he enlisted in the Eighty-sixth Ohio infantry for short-time service. The next year he re-enlisted in the Seventeenth Ohio. He served to the close of the war, being a union veteran at the age of 21. Subsequently he taught school in Montgomery county and studied law. He was admitted to the bar in 1870, and began practice in Amsterdam, where he has resided ever since. Mr. Stover has held a single political office—that of member of assembly in 1874. In his profession he has won high rank, and enjoys the esteem and confidence of the bar and the community. In the fourth judicial district the republican nomination assures election. Judge Stover's term of fourteen years will begin with the first day of January, 1892.

EMANCIPATION DAY.

THE CONTINUATION OF THE EXERCISES.

Mayor Gilbert's Eloquent Remarks of Welcome.—The Entertainment at Crescent Rink in the Evening.

THE NEWS of yesterday published the account of the Emancipation Day exercises up to the time of going to press. At the conclusion of the parade the participants adjourned to the rink where Mayor Alexander Gilbert, delivered the following address of welcome:

MAYOR GILBERT'S ELOQUENT REMARKS.

FELLOW CITIZENS:—No man in this land to-day can dispute your right to the title by which I address you. You stand before the law clothed with the full dignity of citizenship, and yet I can recall the time when from the Supreme Court of the United States—the highest judicial tribunal in the land—was issued the decree that the black man had no rights which the white man was bound to respect. And this sentiment was sustained and upheld by a very large portion of our countrymen. But I rejoice that this iniquitous condition no longer prevails—the fetters have been struck from the limbs of your people, and they have been raised from the darkest of bondage to the glorious light of liberty. It is very fitting that you should commemorate this day, for among all the influences that have served to confer upon your people this inestimable blessing, the Emancipation Proclamation was the only one that visibly expressed the power and righteous determination of the great republic. And the issuance of that proclamation by the immortal Lincoln was certainly the greatest event in the history of your race in this continent.

Looking back from our present standpoint to the time when our forefathers founded this government and adopted the constitution, it seems strange to us that they should have recognized slavery as one of the institutions of the new republic. But after passing this year 5,387 struggles and sacrifices of the revolution fighting for the sublime idea that all men are born free and equal, that they could have consented to a union of states on any such basis.

But it was not done willingly, for, notwithstanding that slavery had existed in the colonies since 1620 and had spread itself pretty generally throughout all of them—there was a determined effort made in the convention that adopted the constitution to eliminate by one bold stroke this evil from the land. But there was opposition, and the delegates from North and South Carolina and Georgia took the positive pronouncement there could be no union of the States if slavery was to be interfered with.

For seventy years after the Union the compromise was made and the great republic was born half slave and half free.

But the spirit of liberty, which the God had sown the seed of great and immortal principles that were to take root and bear fruit, began to put forth fruit for the healing of the nations.

*Virginia, at the formation of the gov*ernment, had ceded to the general all of her immense territory north of the Ohio river, and by the ordinance of 1787 this territory had been forever dedicated to freedom. And so at the very outset the principle was established that no slave could be introduced into any of this division was established which was not to be obliterated until human freedom was established in all the land. And when the admission of new States and the increasing power and preponderance in Congress of the free States line of division became broader and broader—the people of the North awakened to the necessity of slavery—the Abolition party was born—and so step by step the nation was on until the final struggle came which resulted in the event which you meet to-day to commemorate.

I rejoice with you for what emancipation has done for your people, not only in this country but throughout the world, and I would like to impress upon your minds this thought, that in order that the untold millions of your race who through the ages to come may inhabit this land, shall reap the benefit of its liberty and its laws—it is necessary that you should love your country and its institutions, respect its laws, and at all times stand ready to sacrifice your lives and your fortunes in defending them. I cordially welcome to our beautiful city all strangers who may be here to-day, and can only express the wish that the occasion which brings you here may long be remembered with pleasure.

The address brought forth loud and prolonged applause.

The Mayor was followed by Rev. Wm. R. Jason of Orange. Mr. Jason also delivered an address which it abounded in eloquent appeals to his brethren to continue in the line of improvement. After the oration Charles M. Robinson, of Camden, read the emancipation proclamation, and the meeting dispersed after the benediction by Rev. William Alexander. In the evening there was more speaking in the rink. Rev. Wm. Alexander and Jesse Lawson, of Washington, were the speakers.

Their addresses were of an interesting nature and held the close attention of the audience. They commented on the advancement of the colored race since the signing of the Emancipation Proclamation.

The affair concluded with a grand ball and then the colored damsels were in their glory. They tripped the light fantastic until the early hours of the morning. One thing can be said that of the large number of colored people who visited Plainfield yesterday not one acted in a disorderly manner.

The occasion was a grand success in every particular. The colored people were assisted in their efforts by reliefs from the police force. The city was thronged with colored people. They were on the streets and in the hotels; they monopolized all the livery carriages; they packed the stages and public vehicles.

For many weeks a committee of prominent colored men, headed by W. E. Johnson, of North Plainfield, has been making preparations for the day. The white people subscribed liberally to make the event a success. Democrats, Republicans united in giving their colored brethren a good send-off.

At two o'clock in the afternoon, as announced in yesterday's News, there was a parade through the main streets, under the direction of Grand Marshal Wilson E. Douglas. He was assisted by a squad of aids. The Mounted Guards of New Brunswick headed the procession, followed by carriages containing Mayor Gilbert, of Plainfield; Mayor Place, of North Plainfield; Postmaster E. R. Pope, James E. Martine and members of the Councils of the city and borough. Then followed carriages containing the orator of the day and other speakers.

The procession was plentifully besprinkled with that delight of a colored race, great brass bands and drum corps. The committee had extended an invitation to all citizens to join in the procession, either on foot or in carriages. The result was that a goodly number turned out. A feature of the procession was a huge stage full of little girls clad in white and decked in the National colors. They screamed with delight when they recognized any one in the crowded streets.

In the procession were representatives from Paterson, Newton, Passaic, Newark, Orange, Madison, Morristown, Elizabeth, Dover, Rahway, Westfield, Bound Brook, Trenton, Somerville, Phillipsburg, New Brunswick, Camden, Princeton, Pennington, Lambertville and Atlantic City.

WILL THERE BE A COAL WAR?

Plainfield Dealers Will Ask the Exchange to Protect Them.

The complications arising from the fact that the Board of Education has awarded to Charles W. Thomae, of New York, as reported in THE NEWS at the time, the contract for supplying the Plainfield public schools with coal now threatens to precipitate a war between the New Jersey Coal Exchange and the Lehigh Valley Railroad. The Exchange is an incorporated body which has very successfully been kept out of public view ever since its organization. It controls the whole State and monopolizes everything connected in any way with the coal business.

The Plainfield dealers are of necessity a part of the combine, and when Thomae, the New York man, underbid them for the school contract they said very little, but did not waste their time. They made an appeal to the Exchange, which will protect them in its own peculiar way. If the Lehigh Valley Railroad delivers the coal for Thomae, a boycott of the road commences that will be placed on the company and the people of the State will have a chance to watch an interesting and exciting fight in which they will have no opportunity to participate. Interested parties in the Coal Exchange will protect the Plainfield dealers at any cost. Every coal dealer in the State is compelled to become a member of the Exchange, the membership fee to which is high.

A Pool Tournament.

A most exciting pool tournament is being played at the Crescent League Club house by the expert members of the League. In all 210 games are to be played, of which eighty-two are finished. At present it looks as though F. C. Green would be the winner. He has an allowance of 15 points over Charles Lyman, who is a scratch man. Lyman has been winning in excellent form until this week, when he went to pieces. Up to then he had lost but two games. The loss of two more has proved disastrous to him. The score to date stands as follows:

The Fakir Stole a Ticket.

There was commotion around the Union depot at Elizabeth yesterday, where one passenger jumped out of the train. He was chasing another man, whom he caught and charged with stealing half of his excursion ticket from New York to Plainfield. Officer Eckert took charge of the man, who was a fakir going to Plainfield to work a shell game. He took the ticket out of the man's pocket just as the train reached Elizabeth. The passenger could not stay over to make a formal complaint at the Police Court and the fakir escaped punishment.

A Fight Followed by Shots.

Two colored men engaged in a dispute near the Pearce street bridge at about ten o'clock last evening. One of the principals knocked the other down, and when the fallen "hero" arose he began firing shots promiscuously, with a revolver. His antagonist, however, made his escape, turning the corner of Fourth street.

Runaway on Park Avenue.

A horse which belonged to Policeman Fredrickson was frightened on Park avenue at about half-past seven o'clock last evening and ran away. Two children were seated in the wagon to which the horse was attached. The animal was frightened by a colored drum corps. but was caught before it did much damage.

MUSHROOM INSURANCE

MORE REVELATIONS FOR THE MANY DUPES.

Official Reports Showing the Rottenness of the Endowment Insurance Orders in Massachusetts—Matured Obligations Still Unpaid.

It is not many months ago since THE NEWS denounced as swindles the so-called short term insurance companies chartered under the laws of Massachusetts, and flourishing in this city. We did this on our own judgment when our attention was first called to them, with the object of saving innocent victims from being further swindled. We were the first to expose the frauds. We had our judgment in the matter confirmed by Secretary of State Kelsey, who has legal authority over insurance companies doing business in this State. We have our judgment still further confirmed by the report of the Insurance Department of Massachusetts just issued.

The Massachusetts Insurance Department has supervision of the returns of the assessment endowment orders, and the figures for the six months ending June 30 have been compiled for publication. Of the fifty or more orders, special interest attaches to the assessment orders which have begun to mature their certificates, for by their condition can be judged the ability of the others to meet their obligations when they become due.

The Friendly Aid Society, which is a six-months order (all the orders mentioned being for one year), reported June 30 that it had $106,084 on hand, with liabilities amounting to $900,825. Its expenses for the six months were $85,355, while its payments for sick benefits were only $5,775. It is safe to say it would scarcely ascertain whether the lines belonged to the Western Union or some other company and even if they found out what company owned them it was an almost impossible task to untangle the many poles and wires there were and what were their value. This is being done, however, with as great care as possible.

The postal Telegraph Company is making arrangements to open an office in this city. The company will occupy the offices all over the country.—Somerville Unionist-Gazette.

He May Tell of the Crime.

It is said that John Walker who is charged with assaulting old man Toms, and leaving him for dead in a corn patch, is jail and don't like the idea of a possible term in State prison. It is further reported that he has intimated to Prosecutor Steele that he would turn State's evidence. It is also confirmed by his friends of this but he scouts such an idea. He thinks Walker is too much his friend to go back on him. The two men are together all the time and are kept in their cells all the time except when they are exercising, as the jail keepers are allowed to come out for exercise and to bathe. There is likely to be some sensational developments when the time of trial comes.

Gen. Fay Again Rallies.

Gen. J. Augustus Fay had a third tapping operation performed on him yesterday at his home in Elizabeth. He was so low after the previous one that it was feared he could not survive another, and his brother, Capt. John C. Fay, who had been back to Washington on business, was summoned to his bedside. Dr. James S. Green performed the operation, and the family and relatives of the sick man were gathered around, prepared for the worst. To their surprise he rallied from after the operation, and seemed brighter than he has been for some days.

Base Ball.

The Plainfield colored nine played two games of base ball yesterday with a team from Washington, N. J. A large number of people witnessed the contest. The home team was defeated in both games by the following scores. Morning game—Plainfield, 8; Washington, 11. Afternoon game—Plainfield, 10; Washington, 13. During the morning game Frank Nelson, the catcher for the home team, was struck in the face by a pitched ball and was badly injured.

—Rogers Bros. have been advertising some rare bargains in shoes of late, but in their advertisement to-day they offer, they say, the greatest bargain of the season. Don't fail to read it.

The decision of Chancellor McGill, of New Jersey, that all judical proceedings, advertisements, etc., must be published in English, suggests some highly interesting considerations. We have in America a polyglot population, and consequently a polyglot press. That this should be the case in a land receiving such enormous immigration is inevitable. The fact must be recognized, and to some extent the publication of public and private business must be adapted to it. That such a state of affairs should be permanent is not to be thought of, necessary nor desirable. The English language is, after all, and must remain, the language of the United States, and we must require of every immigrant on landing that he shall be conversant with it. But in the unreasonable haste to exact that he will endeavor to learn it as soon as possible, and that he will have his children taught to use it in preference to any other. Nor can it justly be regarded as a hardship to our foreign citizens if our laws discriminate in favor of the English language, and thus constrain the native population to become uniform in speech. In the old fatherland there should be but one mother-tongue.—Tribune.

Wm. Huston, engineer, Weehawken, N. J.: 'I know that Dr. Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy' is an honest preparation. I suffered from Dyspepsia and Kidney Complaints for years and was cured by 'Favorite Remedy'.' —ADV

A story is told of a poor woman who came to the Insurance Commissioner's office to complain that the State gave its countenance to such schemes, and who attacked the legislature severely for legalizing a robbery which she had lost money she could not afford to lose. She believed that the state's indorsement meant safety and another member went into the scheme. It was a great mortification to the State official to admit that the Legislature had legalized this fraudulent method of doing business. The sure downfall of the whole tribe, including the Iron Hall, is confidently predicted by the State officials who are familiar with the sufferings caused by the loss of money and the delay forced upon the butcher and baker and grocer for honest bills. Open criticism is heaped on lawyers who have been counsel for the Iron Hall and for the other assessment concerns, and they have suffered a loss of reputation which will increase as the people come more and more to realize the extent of the injury done by methods which they have foisted upon the State and of whose nature they were more keenly aware, or must plead guilty to a less amount of intelligence than the people they have duped.

Some of the orders run for five years, others for ten, and one for fifteen. So their day of reckoning is yet to come, but the fate of the short-term orders shows that they are doomed to fail. It is found that the Attorney-General cannot proceed against them to prevent them from doing business until a Grand Jury can be done until a Grand Jury has returned an indictment. Some of the States have provided that this course be pursued in order to save as much as possible of the money for the holders of the certificates, but in this it cut short the course of the fraudulent managers.

Assessing the Telegraph Lines.

One of the township assessors was at the railroad station on Tuesday inquiring for the Postal Telegraph lines, and they had received instructions from the State Board to assess all telegraph and telephone lines extending across their townships, and they found it a difficult matter to find them. They would scarcely Woman in Journalism.

Judging from the literature that fills the "woman's page" of newspapers, will the feminine sex attain intellectual equality with man? Are they there now? That is to say, if the said pages fairly represent the tastes and literary food of women. In the old times, when woman was put upon and in subjection, a keeper at home, and never thought she was born for a higher destiny than to be the Jane of some John, there were no fashion plates in the newspapers. If women cared more for clothes than for anything else it did not appear in daily journalism. Now, however, we have the higher education. Women want some show in the journals, they say. Give place to things that interest the fair sex. With all our hearts, bless them, say the gallant editors. Bring on your matter that is of supreme interest to ladies. They shall have a fair show in this paper if the whole economic situation of the United States and the silver question in the bargain are crowded out.

So the matter that interests women is poured in. At least we are to suppose it is what they demand, or it would not be there. Every day some columns in many of the large papers are filled with wood cuts of various articles of dress and hats that would give an artist the nightmare. We are told here that it is the newest fad now for girls and women to pet white rats, and if a lady would be really chic she should walk the public promenades with a white rat running over her arm and shoulder. There a quarter of a column is devoted to description of a gown that had a long wrinkled taffeta and a deep, long sash of peach pink chiffon, while next below it is a "creation" that has lace around the skirt caught up by artificial violets, the bodice and shoulders being trimmed the same way, the back knotted and each knot adorned with a bunch of violets tied by a bow knot of Lincoln green ribbon. Think of the profound lady philosopher elaborating a system of economics when her brain has just gone out in the perfection of a black silk gown draped with iron gray gauze covered with jet catechons. We quote literally from the woman page of a great daily in order that we may not become mixed about the iron gray gauze covered with jet catechons. We know we are right about it.

Think of one of the glorious old Greek statue women being snipped and basted and trimmed in this fashion, and having it reported in the daily papers. Will the female Watts, when she invents the new steam engine, be clad in a brocade which is of "a lovely shade of palest blue, with a design in metal-foil and a pearl ground which has all the effect of being shot with gold?" When after a trance of deep meditation, lasting for weeks, the feminine philosopher springs from her chair shouting aloud, "Eureka! I have found it!" will she be careful to see that she wears a habit skirt of whipcloth, deeply trimmed with hand braiding, and a gorgeous white chiffon parasol, with white shoes?

Probably. One does not know. But if women can make inventions, thrill multitudes with their eloquence and find the solution of the deep and sorrowful questions that trouble humanity, and attend to all this dressing and fuss and feathers besides, then will they indeed be great. They will have the most tremendous intellects of any race or sex that have ever appeared on the globe up to date.

Meanwhile, of course, place aux dames! If this is what the advent of woman into journalism means, all right. If this is the daily newspaper literature that the emancipated American woman of the near future wants and will pay for she shall have it. It is the newspaper editor and publisher's place to supply what his patrons call for.

The professor of history in Cornell university is a woman, Harriet Cook, and it is claimed that she is the first woman member of a college faculty to receive a salary equal to the masculine professors. This is a mistake. Years ago, when Hiram College founded Antioch college one of the principles he entertained was equal pay for equal work, whether it was done by man or woman. Consequently women members of the college faculty, of whom there were occasionally one or two, received the same pay as their brethren.

The torpedo boat which has been built on the Thames river by the Thornycroft Brothers is the swiftest that has ever been made, and she belongs, not to any of the nations of Europe, but to the United States of Brazil. This little vessel will tend to increase the belief that the torpedo will play a large part in the warfare of the future. Brazil's torpedo boat is 130 feet long and 14 feet 6 inches wide. Her machinery consists of two tubular boilers which supply steam to two sets of triple compound engines.

Southern Grand Army Men Defeated at Detroit.

PALMER FOR COMMANDER IN CHIEF

A New York Man Knocked Down the Persimmons—A Spirited Debate Over the Negro Question in the Order Which Did Not End as General Veazey Desired.

DETROIT, Aug. 7.—The silver encampment of the G. A. R. is over. All day long the veterans have been leaving the city by train loads. Those that remained here amused themselves by talking over old times, visiting various pleasure resorts near the city or in general sightseeing about Detroit. The fight for commander in chief was won by Captain John H. Palmer, of Albany, Wisconsin nominated A. G. Weissert, of Milwaukee, and General Lucius Fairchild made a stirring speech in his behalf. Delegate Clark, of Illinois, seconded the Wisconsin man, reviewing his war record. Ohio nominated General Samuel H. Hurst, who declined to withdraw.

Captain Palmer Elected.

The ballot resulted: J. M. Palmer, of Albany, 322; Weissert, 270; Smedburg, of California, 177. On the second ballot there were numerous defections from the Wisconsin man. Before the third ballot was ordered the California delegation cast its vote for Palmer. The latter's election was then made unanimous.

Colonel Henry M. Duffield, of Detroit, was elected senior vice commander by acclamation. Nebraska put in a claim for junior vice commander in behalf of Commander Clarkson. Delaware presented K. S. Ayres. Clarkson won on the first ballot. The committee to be appointed to frame resolutions on the deaths of General Sherman, Admiral Porter and Hannibal Hamlin. Benjamin F. Stevenson, of Kentucky, was re-elected surgeon general by acclamation.

The Colored Issue Fight.

At this point the committee appointed to report upon the address of the commander-in-chief made its appearance amid a buzz of excitement, and the encampment settled down for the fight on the colored question. It was known that there was a majority and a minority report. The former, presented by ex Congressman Conger, of Ohio, antagonized the proposition to create professional departments for the colored men, thus going counter to the recommendations of the commander in-chief.

The minority report supported the latter, and ended with a resolution recommending the erection of separate departments for the colored comrades in Louisiana and other southern states, and empowering the commander-in-chief to take action accordingly. This was greeted with groans and hisses from the colored contingent in the gallery. Decker, of the minority, argued that it was not a question of drawing the color line. The colored men had separate schools and churches, why not posts?

A Storm of Hisses.

This brought out such a storm of hisses from floor and gallery that the president threatened to clear the upstairs portion, and Decker continued, and energetically insisted that they were not trying to draw the detestable color line. Post Commander-in-Chief Warner, of Kansas City, said that there was no question of sociability in taking up a musket to defend the nation. [Great applause.] "Don't desert your principles at this hour," he shouted, and the convention yelled for a full minute. Johnson, of Washington, a colored delegate, wanted to know why they were to be shoved off at this late day, and strongly backed the minority report.

Another colored delegate from Kentucky made a hot speech, and when interrupted by Decker, retorted, "You are one of the ducks that hide their badges down one way while you are flirting with the Democrats." This brought down the house, and the uproar was terrific.

General Fairchild's Speech.

General Lucius Fairchild made the speech of the day. He took the position that if the colored men wanted to withdraw, as had been claimed, they ought to be at liberty to do so. It was evident, however, that they did not want to. Past Commander Gobin, of Pennsylvania, presented the case of the south in an impassioned address. He said that the idea that there was a disposition to drive out colored men was erroneous.

Negroes have been heard to say: "Why should we thank the whites when it was by our own brawny arms that we have got what we have?" That ought to be at liberty to do so. It was evident, however, that they did not want to. Past Commander Gobin, of Pennsylvania, presented the case of the south in an impassioned address. He said that the idea that there was a disposition to drive out colored men was erroneous.

Negroes have been heard to say: "Why should we thank the whites when it was by our own brawny arms that we have got what we have?" That ought to be stricken out. [Hisses.] Perhaps he (the speaker) had imperiled his life for some of those that were now hissing him. [Applause.] The whites had made their home in the south, and it was their right to conform to the social rules around them. When the first application was made for a colored post it was refused. Then certain posts were organized in fraud. The speaker said that while he had no objection to colored soldiers it was necessary to insist that the social aspect of affairs in the south demanded a change. The whites, if permitted, would be willing to withdraw and organize a department to themselves. There were colored men present who knew the status of affairs and knew that the present condition was not continue [Hisses and cries of "No."]

The Southern Men Defeated.

A score of delegates rose as he sat down, but hundreds of voices clamored for a vote. The scene was a bedlam. In the midst of the uproar Veazey put the question of adopting the minority report. There were a good many ayes, but an avalanche of "noes," the veterans in the gallery making as much noise as the delegates on the floor. Then the majority report was put and carried in the same way, while white and colored men jumped upon chairs, waving hats, canes and handkerchiefs and creating pandemonium. The southern delegates took their defeat very much to heart, and one of them shouted above the din: "That's good by for us." The majority report was signed by ex-Congressman Conger, George S. Merrill, Massachusetts, and S. Henderson, Pennsylvania.

The minority report was signed by Atkins, Ohio; J. C. Lineham, New Hampshire, and Decker. The principal arguments before the committee against the separation of the posts were made by Colonel H. C. Lewis and ex-Lieutenant Governor H. T. Antoine, of Louisiana.

The Mount McGregor Cottage.

The committee approved the recommendation of the commander in chief that the Grant cottage on Mount McGregor should be preserved with national moneys, and that the decorating of soldiers' graves be done by contributions from the general government, and that the pledges of the country to the soldiers and sailors should be strictly carried out so long as a single one survives.

McKINLEY'S NEW RIVAL.

John Seitz Nominated for Governor by the Ohio People's Party.

SPRINGFIELD, Aug. 7.—Major McKinley has another rival for the governorship of Ohio. He is John Seitz, of Seneca, who many years ago ran for the same office on the Greenback ticket. He, with a full state ticket, was nominated here yesterday by the state convention of the People's party.

For Governor—John Seits, of Seneca.

For Lieutenant Governor—Frank Rist, of Clinton.

For State Auditor—D. M. Cooper, of Athens.

For Attorney General—Rial M. Smith, of Summit.

For State Treasurer—Henry Wolf, of Cincinnati.

For Supreme Judge—Albert Yaple, of Cincinnati.

For State School Commissioner—J. H. Peterson, of Greene county.

For Member of the Board of Public Works—J. S. Bower, of Franklin.

For Food and Dairy Commissioner—W. J. Weaver, of Portage.

In the platform adopted the questions of tariff and money of the Cincinnati and Ocala platforms are reiterated, sub-treasury plan, free coinage and all. Planks are included demanding the prohibition of alien ownership of land and a graduated income tax. The most unique plank in the platform reads as follows:

We believe that the solution of the liquor problem lies in abolishing the element of profit, and that the source of constant temptation and evil, and we therefore demand that the importation, exportation, manufacture and sale of spirituous liquors shall be conducted by the government or state at cost, through agencies and salaried officials, in such towns and cities as shall apply for such system.

Resolutions were adopted favoring female suffrage, government ownership of all means of transportation and communication, and favoring liberal pensions. All the resolutions except that referring to the liquor question were adopted. After considerable debate on a motion to lay the liquor plank on the table, the committee's recommendation to refer it to the national committee was adopted.

Republican Clubs Choose Officers.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 7.—At the convention of the state league of Republican clubs the following officers for the ensuing year were elected:

President—Colonel E. A. McAlpin, of Westchester. Secretary—Job E. Hedges, of Genesee. Treasurer—Colonel John N. De Peyster, of Dutchess. Vice Presidents—Clarence M. Smith, of Richmond; Alonzo B. Cornell, of Buffalo, and Salem Hyde, of Syracuse.

Henry Gleason, of New York, and Rev. Dr. W. B. Derrick, colored, of Richmond, were elected delegates-at-large.

THE BREAK IN UNION PACIFIC.

Russell Sage Says Gould Is the Largest Stockholder in the Company.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The break in Union Pacific continued yesterday, the stock falling two points during the morning.

The president of the company, Mr. Sidney Dillon, says: "There is no crisis in the affairs of the company, as alleged. Everything is in good condition. Any talk of a receiver for the road is simply for the purpose of depressing the market price of the stock. There is no prospects for Union Pacific as favorable."

Mr. Russell Sage confirmed Mr. Dillon's statement and added: "The rumors that the Union Pacific will be sold by selling our Union Pacific are untrue. Mr. Gould is at present the largest stockholder in the company, his interest amounting to over $6,500,000. He declares that he will reinvest his income as received in the property. The loans of the company falling due have been taken care of. The floating debt has been reduced over $2,000,000 since the present administration took hold. Prospects for earnings are very good, and Union Pacific will benefit largely by the enormous crop movements during the balance of the year."

Pennsylvania Wants That Money.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—The city treasurer has received a communication from the auditor general of the state demanding that $1,000,000 of the state's indebtedness on account of mercantile taxes, shall be at once turned over to the state. The money was stolen by ex-City Treasurer Bardsley. Many people believe the city cannot be held for the misappropriation of the state's money.

Insane Convicts Escape.

AUBURN, N. Y. Aug. 7.—After a desperate struggle nine insane convicts overpowered their keepers in Auburn prison at 6 a. m., scaled the wall surrounding the institution and escaped. A hard fight preceded the break for liberty. All but three were captured after an exciting chase.

Senators Investigating at Boston.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—Senators Aldrich, Carlisle and Allison, comprising the United States senate finance committee, are here investigating the manufacture of textile goods. The movement is strictly non-partisan. Boston firms will meet the committee.

Rumors About the Barker Failure.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—It is now alleged that the $4,000,000 failure of Abraham Barker, of this city, was a swindling operation in which many well known dry goods and clothing houses in this and other cities have been heavily victimized.

Newark Loses One Chinaman.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Acting Secretary Nettleton has refused to permit the re-entry into the United States of Chu Chung Cat, a former resident of Newark, N. J.

LIGHT ON THE MYSTERY.

The Glendale Victim's Name Was Hannah Robinson.

HER LOVER IS NOW UNDER ARREST.

She Said She Was Going to Meet Him When She Left Her Home in Hewlett's, L. I.—The Fair Had Quarreled. He Protests His Innocence.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The mystery that has hung over the Glendale murder since the discovery of the stranded girl on Sunday morning begins to lighten. The unfortunate girl has been identified by the Rev. Mr. Martin, of Hewletts, L. I., as a domestic who had been in his employ for two months. Her name was Hannah Robinson, and late last evening her body was conclusively identified by her sister, Mrs. William Lass, of 64 Kent avenue, Williamsburg.

Her Lover Arrested.

The girl's lover, Martin Phillips, a pressman, has been placed under arrest and it is claimed that the letters of the murdered girl, which were found in the Rev. Mr. Martin's parsonage, point to him as being implicated in the crime. He stoutly denies having seen the girl for months and says he broke his engagement to her for good reasons two years ago. He claims that it will be easy for him to prove an alibi, as he was fishing with a party of friends on Saturday when the murder was committed.

As an Innocent Looking Fellow.

Phillips was placed under arrest, and, with Mrs. Lass, her husband and Detective Miller and Coroner Hohmeyer, was taken to the residence of District Attorney Fleming at Jamaica. Phillips is an innocent looking fellow about twenty-five years old. His complexion is light, he has a large forehead and thick lips and does not look like a man who would take human life. He boards at 205 Bedford avenue, Williamsburg.

Said She Would Meet Phillips.

When Hannah left Hewletts Saturday afternoon she told Sexton Smalley, of Trinity, that she was going to meet Martin Phillips. Hannah and Phillips had quarreled, and this meeting was to be a making up. "He's my steady company," explained Hannah, and she appeared very happy at the prospect of the meeting. Whether Phillips met the girl is not known. His whereabouts on last Saturday night will now be a matter of most searching inquiry.

The Woman Goodwin Loved.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—The relatives and friends of Charles E. Goodwin, Jr., who was murdered in the Percival apartments, No. 220 West Forty-second street, by Bertram C. Webster, a fellow clerk, feigned astonishment when they read the unfinished letter that Goodwin had addressed to "My own precious and darling wife." They knew very well, however, it is said, that Goodwin was in love with some married woman, and that he was but awaiting a decree of divorce to be granted the woman, who is now said to be in South Dakota, when he would make her his wife.

She Was Another Man's Wife.

It has been learned that this woman was Mrs. Essie Snyder, wife of Peter Snyder, cashier of the Hudson River bank, this city. Goodwin met her at Larchmont in 1888 and won her affections. Mr. and Mrs. Snyder had two children. The woman was not particularly handsome of face, but was fascinating, and Goodwin, after the first time of introduction, became exceedingly attentive.

Then, it is said, the woman openly acknowledged to Goodwin that her marriage was a hopeless one. Three children were born while she yet lived with her husband. A proposition was made for a separation between the husband and wife. The understanding was that Goodwin was to marry the woman, and she went to South Dakota last spring, taking the three children with her. Goodwin was very anxious to wed her, and worried greatly over the delay in obtaining the divorce.

When Mr. Snyder was seen he refused to talk, but said he may at some future time deny the rumors connecting his wife with Goodwin's name. Webster is still at large.

A York Banker Arrested.

YORK, Pa., Aug. 7.—James Danner, of Schall & Danner, bankers and brokers, who assigned in March, has been arrested, charged with larceny and embezzlement by John R. Walsh, of New York, who alleges that Danner embezzled stocks and bonds intrusted to his custody. Danner gave $10,000 bail.

Five Hundred Slaters on Strike.

BETHLEHEM, Pa., Aug. 7.—Five hundred slaters in the Bangor and Pen-Argyl slate region have gone on strike for an advance of 10 per cent. and eight hours. A long contest is anticipated. There are over 1,500 slaters employed in this region.

Tubular Iron Goods Depressed.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—At a meeting of manufacturers of wrought iron pipes and tubes here the rate of discount on the trade was reduced 2½ per cent. Unless better prices are received for tubular goods a large number of mills will be compelled to shut down.

KNOCKED OUT BY OLD OCEAN.

John L. on the Rampage Again and Locked Up at Sea.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 7.—The steamer Alameda from Australia brings particulars of another escapade of John L. Sullivan. While the steamer Mariposa was between Honolulu and Samoa Sullivan disposed of thirty-eight glasses of porter and got uproariously drunk. Captain Haywards ordered the bar shut down.

Sullivan strongly protested against being deprived of liquor. He squared off to strike the captain, when there was a roll of the ship and John L. went down in a heap. He was seized, bound and taken to his stateroom and locked up. He obtained no more liquor during the remainder of the passage.

Pritchard Will Fight Any One.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—Pritchard is shortly going to America to deposit with Richard K. Fox £300 as a challenge to fight any man in the United States.

The Sea Serpent Away Ahead.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—Officer Moore, of the steamer Queensmore, which spoke both the Mermaid and the Sea Serpent, forwards a letter from Captain Lawler, of the latter craft, which was then 1,100 miles ahead of the Mermaid on July 20. On July 10 one of the crew fell overboard and was only saved from drowning by a rope which he keeps tied around his waist all the time.

Hal Pointer the Victor.

BUFFALO, Aug. 7.—At the grand circuit races, Spanish Gold Dust won the 2:19 trotting event. Best time, 2:16½. Hal Pointer took three straight heats in the free-for-all $5,000 pacing match. Zolo Maid was second. Best time, 2:10¾.

R. Crosby, of Buffalo, captured the 440 yard run. Alvah Nickerson, of Brooklyn, won the running high jump. John Wilkinson, of Syracuse, was victor in the one and two mile safety bicycle races, and T. P. Conneff won the three mile run.

No Tonnage Dues on Foreign Yachts.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—The government has recently endeavored to collect a tonnage of fifty cents a ton on yachts purchased abroad by American citizens for pleasure use. In the case of the Miranda Judge Benedict, of the United States district court, has just decided that the tonnage cannot dues be collected.

Miss Willard Will Welcome Them.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—The resolutions adopted by the Catholic Total Abstinence union state that it is the duty of all temperance men to support candidates for public office who will labor for the enforcement of laws, and that every temperance man should discourage any candidate committed to the support of the liquor interests. Bishop Keane declared that he was not committed to any form of prohibition. Miss Frances Willard, president of the Woman's Christian Temperance union, said that the lady delegates of the Catholic union to the convention of her organization in Boston next year would be heartily welcome.

Germany Will Be on Deck.

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—Negotiations between the foreign committee of the Columbian exhibition and the official representatives of the German government have been concluded, and the necessary documents in relation to the German exhibit have been exchanged. Munitions of war, we believe, as a rule, that by making a good display at the Chicago fair they will be able to greatly extend their trade with America. A noteworthy German exhibit seems probable.

Murdered a Sister of Charity.

LOUISVILLE, Aug. 7.—Robert H. Murray, who was released two days ago from the Jeffersonville (Ind.) penitentiary, has been arrested here. The technical charge is being a suspected felon, but the crime of which Murray is suspected is a most sensational one. It is alleged that he assinated a Sister of Charity who nursed him in the hospital at Terre Haute, and whom he killed because she would not marry him.

Clung to Him and Both Drowned.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 7.—James Convey and Patrick Gallagher were drowned in Onondaga lake. They and another man started across the lake, and in attempting to change places their boat was overturned. Convey was a good swimmer, but Gallagher clung to him and both men went down. The other man was saved by some men on shore who saw the boat capsize.

Killed by Excitement.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 7.—Johnny Chap man, five years old, was playing along the Erie track when a car wheel, weighing 900 pounds, fell on him, injuring him serious ly. Mrs. Wm. Hall, aunt of the child of the boy, and the wife of a prominent hotel keeper, was on her way to visit here when she suddenly dropped dead from apoplexy brought on by excitement.

A Policeman Drowned.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Policeman William Ketchale, of the West Forty-seventh street squad, who had been missing since Tuesday morning, was found floating in the North Hudson river at Forty-fourth street. An examination of the body failed to reveal any mark of violence, and it is believed that he was accidentally drowned

A Sensational Elopement.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—Official society here has a sensation in the elopement of Miss Lulu Overlee Jordan, the only child of the late Paymaster Jordon, of the navy and Dr. William Frederick Nickel, of Baltimore. The mother of Miss Jordon was bitterly opposed to the marriage and she refuses to acknowledge her daughter.

A Missing Girl.

BOSTON, Aug. 7.—Annie May Mace, age twelve years, residing in Marblehead, is missing. She was to arrive at the Fitchburg depot from Concord, Mass., yesterday. Her father was to be on hand to meet her, but was delayed. Now no trace of her can be found.

A DOZEN MEN ARE DEAD

Details of the Awful West Shore Wreck.

ONE CAR TELESCOPED BY ANOTHER.

Like a Great Flow of Death, the Coach Relentlessly Crushed and Ground Its Way Through a Score of Sleeping Italians—Scenes of Awful Horror.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Twelve of the victims of the horrible wreck on the West Shore railroad, a mile west of Montezuma station, have died and others are dying. The train, which was the St. Louis and Chicago limited express, was made up of two express cars, a baggage car, a smoking car, a day coach and four sleeping cars. After the wreck all that remained of the train were three sleeping cars and the dismantled engine. The other cars were burned.

Crashed Into a Freight.

The express train left Port Byron a little late and was running at a high rate of speed when it crashed into the rear of a freight train which had broken in two while being switched to a side track to let the express train pass.

The engine of the express train was thrown down an embankment after running some distance on the ties. The wreck took fire in three places, but the dead and injured were taken out before the flames had made much progress.

Nearly all Italians.

In the smoking car was a gang of twenty Italians, from Tompkins Cove, Rockland county, on their way to Niagara Falls to work on the tunnel there. They were in charge of interpreter Savarino Scozzava. Ten were killed and nine were hurt. The day coach was also wrecked, but the passengers were taken out alive. The following are the names of the dead:

Michael Bergen, of Macedon, fireman of passenger train; leaves a widow.

Alphonse Carilla, Vincenzo D'Faurl, John Giambos, Joseph M. Keehan, of St. Louis (died in hospital, Syracuse); Thomas Marling, Dominico Richone, Coco Rosa, John Rosia, Dominico Scozzofa'e, Antonio Umbello (died in hospital at Syracuse), leaves a widow and four children in Italy.

Some of the Injured.

R. K. Service, of Newark, N. Y.; Lewis Teller, of West Point, N. Y., and Frank J. Meiar, of this city, who sustained internal injuries, were sent to their homes.

Others of the injured are Engineer Patrick Ryan, of the express train, Buffalo; Louis Diller, Alice Lorraine, deep flesh wound on the leg; John H. Schults, member of "Uncle Isaac" fares company, scalp wound, shoulders and clavicle badly strained; George H. Seeley, of Hamilton, Ont., injury to back and hips; John Preston, Troy, N. Y., railroad man, back and shoulders strained and bruised and knee, deep lacerated; Julius Myers, Buffalo, serious injuries to hip, shoulder and head; W. F. Pitts, musical director of "Uncle Isaac" fares comedy company, severe strain to back and bad bruises about ankles and hips. Nine other Italians were badly hurt.

Who Was at Fault?

Conductor Tobin, of the freight train, says that he sent a brakeman back with a lantern to signal the engineer of the express train, but that it was so dense that the red light could not be seen. On the other hand, it is said that the brakeman went back only a short distance, supposing that the freight had time to be safely coupled together and get safely on to the switch. Michael Bergen, the fireman on the express train, was killed and his body was thrown several rods into a marsh. Engineer Patrick Ryan stuck to his post and was pinned in the wreck. It is thought he will die.

Of the Italians who occupied the smoking car, only one escaped death or severe injury. He was thrown about fifty feet into the rushes near the tracks and stuck in the mud.

Some Thrilling Experiences.

John F. Bowdish, of Boston, was so pinned in by the debris that he could not escape. He says: "At first thing that attracted my attention was the working of the air brake. There was a crash, shrieks, and all was darkness and confusion. I felt myself pinned down by a great weight. I could look below me and see broken boards, beams and car wheels, but was unable to move. Soon I heard the crackling of flames.

"You cannot imagine the horror that crept over me. 'My God, help me,' I cried. Just then I heard a voice, 'Here's a man alive; let's get him out.' Then I heard the sound of axes, and pleasanter noises never greeted my ears. I suppose it was only a few minutes, but it seemed an age when daylight broke in from above and two burly trainmen handed me out."

Telescoped by the Rear Car.

Arthur Hutchinson, of Portland, Me., said: "I was in the smoking car when the accident occurred. In the front of the car were Italian immigrants. Most of them were asleep. God help them! Some of them never knew what struck them. All at once the shock came. The rear baggage car was telescoping us. I could see it coming straight through the door, driving right through the sleeping Italians, carrying everything before it.

"'Don't ask me how I got out, I could not tell you. I must have got out in about a second, and I had half the length of the car to go. Every man in that smoker was hurt except myself. Many were pinned down by timbers in all sorts of shapes. We cut them out with axes, but it took a long time. The rear car took fire and burned up. I saw one man entirely scalped, but he was alive. Some of the bodies were broken and twisted and badly burned all out of shape. The groaning was awful to listen to. I am sure there were more than twelve killed, as I am certain that some burned up that we could not get out in time."

He Told Them to Go Back.

William J. Wilsey, of San Bernardino, Cal., was among the injured. He said: "I was in the rear end of the smoker when the crash occurred. In an instant I was up to my neck in debris and felt that I was hurt, but managed to extricate myself and crawl out upon the top of the wreck.

"I saw a brakeman of the freight train standing by the side of the track, crazy with excitement.

"'Oh, my God,' he fairly shouted, 'I told them to go back; I told them to go back.'

"'What do you mean—back where?'

"'Back from the freight.'

"I asked him then if he meant that the freight didn't send back any light, but he would not say anything more."

CHIEF JUSTICE AXTELL DEAD.

He Was Once Governor of Utah and of New Mexico.

MORRISTOWN, N. J., Aug. 7.—Ex-Governor Samuel B. Axtell died yesterday at the residence of his son-in-law, Charles M. Phillips, in the Morristown, after a brief illness. He was born in Franklin county, O., Oct. 14, 1819, and was educated at Oberlin and Western Reserve colleges. In 1851 he went to California and was prosecuting attorney of Amador county in 1854. He was sent to congress from the First congressional district, California, in 1867, and re-elected two years later.

In 1874 he was appointed by President Grant governor of Utah territory, and then transferred by President Hayes to New Mexico. Subsequently, in 1882, he was appointed chief justice of the supreme court of New Mexico, which position he resigned in May, 1885. Since that time he had practiced law in Santa Fe.

Three Killed Near Champlain.

CHAMPLAIN, N. Y., Aug. 7.—Henry Lamountain, one of the passengers by the excursion train wrecked here, is dead, making three deaths in all. Sydney Williams, of Moore, is not expected to live. Henry W. Swett, of Ellenburg, is very seriously hurt, and Miss Lewis, of Irona, has an injury of the spine which will probably be permanent. There were about thirty persons injured.

The Holy Coat of Treves.

LONDON, Aug. 7.—The Holy Coat of Treves is the great topic of discussion at present. The three deaths of the relic seems likely to lead to a long controversy as to the claim that it was a mantle worn by Christ. Great curiosity is felt as to whether miracles will be performed on this occasion.

The Unhappy Fate of the Jews.

BERLIN, Aug. 7.—That the report that the czar has decided to alleviate the Jews' suffering, owing to American influence, is false is shown by a Warsaw telegram, which states that Russian frontier officials refuse to allow any Jews to return to Russia from Germany or elsewhere.

A Decapitated Suicide Discovered.

GREENSBURG, Pa., Aug. 7.—The headless and decomposed remains of an unknown man were found in a thicket near United mines. From an overhanging branch of a tree dangled the ghastly head at the end of a rope. Part of the coats and some papers were found in the pockets.

A Labor Crisis at Omaha.

OMAHA, Aug. 7.—The labor troubles continue to spread. Eight hundred brickmakers will be rendered idle by the closing of the yards on Saturday. The smeltey has closed for ninety days and the white lead works will soon be obliged to shut down for lack of material.

An American Forced Into Italy's Army.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Anna Polletta, who has just arrived from Italy, says her husband, who is an American citizen by naturalization, been impressed into the Italian military service while on a visit there, notwithstanding that he showed his proofs of citizenship.

General Greely Ordered to Bavaria.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 7.—General Greely, chief signal officer of the army, has been ordered to proceed to Munich, Bavaria, to attend the meteorological conference and the international polar commission, which will be held in that place in August and September, 1891.

Publisher Dillingham Fails.

NEW YORK, Aug. 7.—Publisher Charles T. Dillingham, bookseller and publisher at 718 and 720 Broadway, has assigned to John H. Kitchen, with preferences to the National Park bank and the American Exchange National bank for $26,136.47 and on promissory notes.

Jahns Goes Free.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 7.—J. Henry Jahns, Sr., has been exonerated of all blame by the coroner's jury of the killing of his son. Their verdict was that death resulted from a fall, and that the blow of the father in no way contributed to his son's death.

Editor Jones Has a Chance.

LEWISTON, Me., Aug. 7.—Dr. Wedgewood, who is attending Editor George Jones, of New York, says his patient has improved a little, and there is a chance for his recovery.

The Weather.

The weather promises to be warmer, more sultry and fair.

HOW.

How to Drive Flies from a Stable.
Chloride of lime scattered on a board in the stable will clear it of all kinds of flies.

How the Point of Break in an Ocean Cable Is Discovered.
If the metallic conductor is broken, the surrounding insulation remaining perfect, the electrostatic charge of the cable, or the amount of electricity which it absorbs in becoming charged, is electrically weighed by building up an artificial line until the current flows equally into the cable and such artificial line. If the insulating covering of the wire is broken the current will flow freely from the conductor to the surrounding water and its strength, if the power of the battery be known, definitely measures the electrical resistance, and consequently the length, of the conductor. In other words, the battery power, divided by the indicated current strength, gives the line's resistance, and therefore its length.

How to Dye Dress Goods Red.
Boil the goods ten minutes in one ounce of cochineal, one ounce of muriate of tin and a little cream of tartar for each pound of goods, dissolved in enough water to cover them. Hang up to dry.

How to Clean Hair.

How Ships "Speak" Each Other at Sea.
Communications are made from ship to ship by means of an international code of signal flags. A number of flags of various designs and colors are hoisted one under another, each symbol or combination having an arbitrary conventional meaning attached to it. Owing to the difficulty of distinguishing blue, red and black, or telling yellow from white, the tendency is to reduce all signs to black and white, singly or in combination, wreating to shape for different signals.

How to Destroy Acid on Clothes.
As soon as possible after exposure to the acid dampen with spirits of ammonia, which will destroy the effect of the acid immediately.

How to Test Steel.
Good tool steel will fail to pieces with a white heat with bright red heat it crumbles under the hammer; with middling heat it may be drawn to a needle point. To test hardening qualities, draw under a low heat to a gradually tapered square point and plunge into cold water. If broken point will scratch glass the quality is good. To test tenacity, a hardened piece will be driven into cast iron by a hardened hammer; if poor it will be crumbled. Soft steel of good quality gives a curved line fracture and uniform gray texture.

How to Engrave on Eggs.
Write upon the egg shell with wax or varnish, or with tallow, and then immerse the egg in some weak acid, such as vinegar or etching liquor. Wherever the varnish or wax has not protected the shell the lime of the latter is decomposed and dissolved in the acid, and the writing or drawing remains in relief.

How to Make Liquid Glue.
Take soft water, one quart; best pale glue, two pounds; dissolve in a covered vessel over a water bath or in a vessel immersed in boiling water; cool, and and add gradually of nitric acid (specific gravity) 1.235 ounces, when cold put it into bottles. It is very strong and does not gelatinize.

How to Enter and Leave a Room.
Never open the door of a private room without knocking—no matter upon what terms of intimacy you are with the occupant. Always remove your hat before entering—it is an insult to your host to remain covered, even for an instant, in his or her apartments. This is especially the case when ladies are present. When leaving do not replace your hat until you have crossed the threshhold.

How to Preserve Insects.
Persons who wish to make a collection of insects, butterflies, etc., can do so easily, and preserve their colors by immersing them in a weak solution of corrosive sublimate. As a matter of fact, stuffed birds and other products of the taxidermist can be insured from decay by soaking the animals in this solution.

How to Make Sandpaper.
Powder common window glass—that having a green tint is best—and sift through sieves of varying fineness, for coarse and fine sandpaper. Cover any coarse paper with thin glue and sift the powdered glass upon it. Let it stand a day or two, when the refuse sand is shaken off and the paper is ready for use.

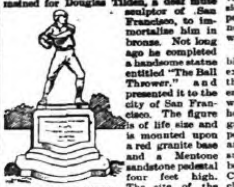
How to Make Family Wines from Fruits.
Take ripe fruit, crushed, twenty-four pounds, soft water, one gallon; loaf sugar, four pounds; cream of tartar, 1½ ounces; brandy, one quart. Dissolve the cream of tartar in water, mix all the ingredients, and let them stand one week before drawing off.

How to Eat Grapes.
Grapes have a dual medicinal quality which is almost unknown in this country. As a matter of fact, nature has provided in the grape a sovereign remedy for all minor disarrangements of the stomach. In northern and western Italy, when the bowels become lax, the natives eat quantities of grapes, including the skin. When they need a slight purgative they eat a number of grapes, discarding the skins and only using the flesh. The tannic acid combined in the skins is sufficiently astringent to arrest incipient dysentery.

"THE BALL THROWER."

Sculptor Douglas Tilden's Handsome Present to San Francisco.

The baseball player has long been immortalized in the public prints, but it remained for Douglas Tilden, a deaf mute sculptor of San Francisco, to immortalize him in bronze. Not long ago he completed a handsome statue entitled "The Ball Thrower," and presented it to the city of San Francisco. The figure is of life size and is mounted upon a red granite base and a Mentone sandstone pedestal four feet high. The site of the statue is south of the Garfield monument in San Francisco's park. A few baseball cranks claim that the pose of the figure is not so technically correct that the bronze twirler would ever be mistaken for Rusie, Tim Keefe or "Carmencita." Ewing at work in the box, but in other respects the sculptor's work is highly complimented.



THE BALL THROWER.

August Belmont's Mincola.

That enthusiastic young yachtsman, August Belmont, has found his new Burgess boat Mincola a very unlucky craft. She usually springs her mast or snaps her topmast at a critical juncture and leaves him in the lurch, but for all that she is a remarkably swift and beautiful boat. She is a 46-footer, and is commanded by Harry Haff, son of the Volunteer's famous captain. She has been beaten by the Herreshoff wonder Gloriana and by the Spaniards, but she recently defeated the Fife cutter Jessica in the Larchmont Yacht club's special race, and still more recently worsted the Sayonara.

SPORTING NOTES.

A recent record breaker was Charles S. Reber, of the St. Louis Athletic club, who made the phenomenal running bread jump of 23 ft. 6¼ in. The previous world's record was held by F. Copeland at 23 ft. 3¼ in.

Harry Jewett, of the Detroit Athletic club, recently ran 220 yards in the fast time of 22 seconds.

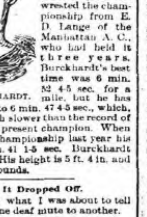
The Manhattan Athletic club's team particularly distinguished itself in France. At the Paris games the Frenchmen did not get a single first prize. The team did not do such a good work in England.

Luther Cary, probably the greatest sprinter in the world today, with the possible exception of John Owen, Jr., runs very awkwardly. He wobbles from side to side and presents an unordinarily unpeasance. It might be added that there is nothing commonplace, either, about the way he gets over the ground.

The American A. C. received its death blow when the Metropolitan association expelled it from membership. Although the organization is practically out of existence there are still a number of athletes who claim it as their club. The latter, however, will now have to join another organization in order to be eligible to compete in games. It seems a pity that such an old club as the American should suffer such disgrace owing to the failure of members to pay their dues. The American A. C. was at one time one of the best athletic clubs near New York, and one that graduated many good men, notably Al Copeland and George Schwegler, the hurdlers.

Broad Jumper Ramsdell.

A famous young athlete of Princeton university is Ernest S. Ramsdell. He also belongs to the athletic club of the Schuylkill navy, and his first performance of note was at that club's games in 1890, when he won the broad jump, covering 21 ft. 10 in. He captured the same event at the eastern championships in June, 1890, with a jump of 22 ft. 6 in., and was second to A. F. Copeland, who broke the world's record at Washington in October of the same year. Ramsdell has won about seventy prizes, and gives promise of developing into a phenomenal broad jumper.



ERNEST S. RAMSDELL.

Walker William R. Burckhardt.

One of the best amateur walkers in America is William R. Burckhardt of the Pastime Athletic club of New York. He is twenty-two years of age and has twice been one mile champion of America, in 1888 and in 1890. In the former year he wrested the championship from E. D. Lange of the Manhattan A. C., who had held it for three years. Burckhardt's best time was 6 min. 32 4-5 sec. for a mile, but he has since lowered it to 6 min. 47 4-5 sec., which, however, is much slower than the record of C. L. Nicoll, the present champion. When Nicoll won the championship last year his time was 6 min. 41 1-5 sec. Burckhardt is a small man. His height is 5 ft. 4 in. and his weight 120 pounds.

There It Dropped Off.

"I can't think what I was about to tell you," signaled one deaf mute to another.

"Can't you?"

"No; and I had it at my finger tips too."

THE BRIDE ELECT.

Her mother's face, as young and fair!
This is what father seems to me
As Ethel kneels beside his chair,
Her sweet eyes gazing tenderly
Into his own, while in his hand
He feels how quickly they must part.

Growing more beautiful and good,
More like her mother day by day,
A perfect flower of maidenhood,
How pure, how bright, no words can say.
He fain would keep her by his side
Who soon will be a happy bride.

For twenty years his thoughts go back
Along a shadowed path of life,
To find, with sunshine on the track,
The long lost vision of his wife.
What wonder if his eyes grow dim—
That face, so like, upturned to him!

Ah, well, his thoughts are unconfessed—
He would not mar her joy tonight!
He knows young birds will leave the nest,
And paints her future fair and bright.
One last fond kiss—she must not stay—
Tomorrow is her wedding day.
—J. R. Eastwood in Quiver.

MOTHERS AND MORALITY.

A French Statesman's Splendid Tribute to the Influence of Home.

Almost everywhere the subject for shortest hours for women is being agitated. During a debate in the French senate M. Jules Simon made a grand appeal for the passage of the law reducing the hours of labor for women. In the course of his remarks, which will interest people of other countries as well as France, the great senator said:

"My friend, M. Berenger, argued that by all these nice theories we are brought to the necessity of presenting labor as a punishment; that in attempting to protect the feeble against the abuse of labor we are simply persuading them that daily labor is a hard thing, whereas there is nothing more pleasant or beautiful.

"Certainly there is nothing in the world so sweet as labor. It is an old friend to us all. For my part, if it has not always given me what I hoped for, it has, on the other hand, made me pass many happy hours. The happiest part of my life I owe to it. Consequently I am in a position to say that work is a benefit, and I may add that I cannot conceive of any greater misfortune for a human being than to live without working.

"But there are several sorts of work, and I am afraid that this is something which some people are inclined to forget. For instance, the labor which we perform here, seated comfortably in armchairs, is very agreeable. The task which you undertake in your private office charms you, and that which my colleagues perform when he goes to the palais to plead before the courts is for him a source of joy and satisfaction. But permit me to say that there is nothing in common between that sort of work and the manual labor of the man who puts in his twelve hours in a factory.

"Who can teach morality to a child better than the mother? The moral instruction is included in all the school programmes, but however much I may respect the teachers, I believe that the mother is best fitted for giving this kind of instruction. When young folk are tempted by evil they think of their mothers; they don't think of their schoolmasters. If, when the workingman comes home he does not find his wife, who is obliged to labor as many hours as he is, and does not find his children neatly dressed, forestalling word, when there is in his home neither cleanliness nor comfort nor affection, can you not easily understand the cause of its errors and of his shortcomings? But let him find a neatly kept house, well cared for children, a humble but abundant supper, and the good kiss of a wife happy to see him back again. Then do you think that he won't come home more willingly and more regularly?

"My colleague, M. Tolain, has explained to you why it has often been said that steam has killed the wife and the mother and has left us only the female. That is only too true. In our workshops the mother and wife exist no longer. Therefore, in the name of humanity I say to you, 'Give us back the wife; give us back the mother!' And, I might almost add, 'Give us back morality!'

"That is the reason, gentlemen, why I ask to give the woman the hour that we demand for her. Give it to her, for if you don't it will not be given to her. Give back the woman to human society; that is to say, gentlemen, give back morality to humanity. What is society without a moral code, a house without children, a home without a wife and without a mother? You will, I know, vote for this law that we present to you for woman and in the name of woman. You all know how I love liberty. What would I not give for it! Everything, gentlemen, everything, except morality and duty."—Paris Letter.

Jewels and Silver.

Elsie Bee tells in Jewelers' Circular that:

The ruby, like the diamond, is never out of fashion.

A new fish knife has a fish carved on its handle.

The rage for collecting souvenir spoons is at its height.

Men and women, more than ever, wear rings upon their fingers.

The pink pearl is a lovely object and commands a high price.

With the summer season, silver mounted belts increase in popularity.

Silver combs in graceful openwork design are said to vest with white toilets.

The spinel masquerades as the ruby in many of the so called ruby ornaments.

White leather card cases dotted here and there with gold fleur-de-lis are seasonable.

An elegant belt is provided in a narrow ribbon of gold fastened with a jeweled clasp.

Who Was Mignon?

Mignon is one of the most touching impersonations of a faithful and guileless girl in adversity, which Goethe, the great master of song and romance, has created in the world famed duet between the blind harpist and his companion. Cast as a tender age on the cruel streets to lead her father on his dismal rounds, Mignon lewalls her hard fate and expresses an intense longing for those who love and know her, the harper responding in sympathetic strains.

Fashionable Parasol Handles.

White enamel, with silver tops, or the new thistle sticks for chiffon and lace sunshades, are fashionable. The natural wood handles are realized fresh, are still in fashion, though not new. Mother of pearl, enameled with silver or gold; a head in ivory, with black skull cap, or black wood, with pierced monogram in gold, are all new.

An excellent physician recommends a poultice of crushed cranberries as the best application that can be used to reduce the swelling and inflammation in erysipelas. If raw berries can not be obtained use the canned, and change the poultice as often as it becomes heated and dry.

The Needle.

How often have I blessed my needle for rescuing me from the temptations which assail the other sex! Bright and innocent little implement! Whether piled o'er tastefol luxuries or gaudying the poor picture of a day, thou are equally the friend of her whose visions tend to wander among the regions of higher abstractions and of her whose thoughts are pinned down to the treadmill of the minute progress. Amid the minor blessings of woman's lot thou shalt not be forgotten!

Still come and let thy fairy wand shine on her; still lend an ambitious joy to the playthings of the girl; still move unconsciously under the glittering smile of the maiden plaything; still triumphant reader, still beguile the mother whose thoughts rove to her boy on the distant ocean, or the daughter watching by the sick bed of one who has hitherto toiled for her; still soothe the long, dreary moments of faithful love; and though a tear sometimes falls on thy shining path, it shall but gather the rust of despair, since employment is thy owner. —Mrs. Lilman.

How to Give Baby Castor Oil.

Do not give baby a dose every time he is constipated. If the bowels do not move at least once every day something is needed to make them. After a hearty meal in the morning lay the baby on the bed or couch, take off the diaper and place a warm newspaper and a bit of cold cloth under him, and let him kick for a while. The warmth, energy and full stomach will probably cause the bowels to move.

If they do not, dip a plug of common white soap in castor oil and gently move it up the rectum. Baby does not object to taking oil in this way, and it works like a charm. The trouble often is not so much that baby should be constipated as that the lower bowel is not strong enough to perform its office, and by oiling the passage the movement is easily effected. Now wipe the baby and put on the cloth, and remove it with the newspaper to the kitchen stove; wash, wipe and vaseline baby, and take him up, happy every time, and ready for a second sleep.

As soon as baby's back is strong enough to allow him to sit up place him on the chair commode at proper times, and habits of neatness will be soon formed which will relieve you of much disagreeable work, and the child be less liable to attacks of sickness.—Cor. Ladies' Home Journal.

Frank R. Stockton's One Receipt.

Frank R. Stockton tells with great glee how once, many years ago, he invented a dish and got two dollars for the secret. In the morning by the soup-and-fish hour of lunch and Home, a weekly paper of which Mrs. Mary Mapes Dodge was the editor. He had established in every department save the household department. This put him on his mettle. So he handed in a receipt of his own concocting. Mrs. Dodge accepted it and paid for it at the current rates—two dollars. The dish is called "cold pink," and here is the receipt: Take all the white meat left over from the Thanksgiving turkey and chop it very fine. Pour a thin cranberry sauce over the cold meat. Mix well, put it in a china form and set it away to get cold. When cold serve it. It makes a delightful dish. But alas! as Mr. Stockton himself remarks, there is never any turkey left over from the Thanksgiving dinner.—New York Epoch.

Officially Denounced.

The following is an official circular received from the Insurance Commissioner of Massachusetts relating to the short term orders, which are flourishing in this city, where they find numerous dupes:

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS.
Insurance Department.

In reply to the numerous inquiries in relation to the standing and reliability of the various assessment endowment orders incorporated under the unfortunate law of 1886, it may be said that the Commissioner contended earnestly against the passage of the law, certifying the organization of the scheme. He has no faith whatever in the assessment endowment plan, and has protested constantly against the whole system, believing it to be morally and mathematically impossible of performance.

The law placed upon the Commissioner the duty of examining the preliminary organization papers, and if it was found that the formalities prescribed by the Statute had been followed out, he was required to certify that fact to the Secretary of State, from whose department the charters are issued. His certificate that the form of organization had been correctly observed has, in some cases, been frequently misconstrued as an "approval" by the Commissioner of their schemes for conducting the business. In no case has he issued the Certificate never indorsed or approved any assessment endowment plan.

After two years experience the Legislature has itself expressed emphatic disapproval of the system by repealing the law, and no more such corporations can be formed in this Commonwealth. But, meantime, fifty-six of the above named orders had been regularly chartered under the Statutes and cannot now be denied the right to do business in this State. The one inevitable conclusion, and when that shall come the blame for the loss and disappointment must be placed elsewhere than upon the Insurance Department.

Respectfully,
GEO. S. MERRILL,
Insurance Commissioner.

A Collision on Somerset Street.

A horse attached to a butcher wagon belonging to Mr. Gilbert Van Ness while being driven along Somerset street at about half-past eleven o'clock this morning became frightened and started to run away. The wagon to which it was attached collided with a wagon belonging to Mr. Joseph Blatz in which were seated Miss Chas. Ulrich and Miss Blatz. One of the shafts on Mr. Blatz's vehicle was broken as was also the axle on the butcher wagon. The occupants of both vehicles escaped injury.

Was Going to Play the Shell Game.

Officer Eckert of Elizabeth has learned that the fakir who stole a ticket from a passenger on the Central Railroad Thursday was "Chicky" Moran, a well-known light-weight pugilist of New York. "Chicky" was going to Plainfield to work a shell game, his outfit was found secreted in the train by the conductor after the officer arrested him.

No Quorum.

The Borough Council was to have met in regular session last evening, but for want of a quorum it was impossible to do so. The Mayor adjourned the meeting over until next Monday evening.

KURZHALS CONNOT SLEEP.

The Barber Disturbed by the Music in Miller's Saloon.

Mayor Gilbert has been appealed to by Theodore Kurzhals, a barber living in West Second street, to settle a dispute between Kurzhals and his next door neighbor, Joseph Miller, the proprietor of the Elkwood Hotel and Restaurant.

Miller's bar-room is in the Hand building, which stands on the line of Kurzhal's property. Three windows from the room open upon Kurzhal's back yard.

Within the past month Miller has introduced a concert-garden attachment to his bar and has given what his patrons think are excellent entertainments. The noise and singing, however, proved annoying to the barber and his family, who wanted to retire at hours comparatively early. They have been unable to sleep until the bar-room closed at 12 o'clock.

Kurzhals asked Miller if he could not close the windows, explaining that it was impossible to sleep. Miller explained that it was absolutely necessary to keep the windows open on account of the ventilation.

The two men were unable to make any arrangements that would preserve to each what he considered his rights, so the subject was dropped for the time.

Kurzhals, however, was still annoyed by the bar room noises. He had a high board fence built. It completely closed the windows. He put the fence within a half inch of Miller's windows and still kept it on his own property.

To even matters Miller and his friends, it is said, paid their respects to Kurzhals and his family by transferring some of the music to the upper rooms. The annoyance, instead of becoming less, threatened to become worse.

An appeal was made to the mayor yesterday to settle the difficulty. He is to hear both sides explain the difficulty. The result will probably be an amicable arrangement.

Miller denies that the music was transferred to the upper rooms, and says he has been willing all along to meet Kurzhals half way in mitigating any nuisance arising from the saloon.

Prof. Galno's vocal and instrumental Concert Company are drawing large and appreciative audiences every night at the "Elkwood". Concert commences at eight o'clock. This may account for some of the alleged unusual noise.

County Board of Registration.

The Somerset County Board of Registration met at the Court House in Somerville yesterday afternoon. Mr. North of Plainfield was re-elected president, and C. S. Hoffman of Somerville, secretary. STATE REPUBLICAN LEAGUE.

Joseph H. Gaskill Succeeds Wilbur A. Mott as President.

A meeting of the Executive Committee of the State Republican League was held at Trenton Wednesday afternoon. The meeting was called by President Wilbur A. Mott, to act on his resignation. He called it to order and tendered his resignation, stating at the same time that his act was caused by the pressure of business. The resignation was accepted and a vote of thanks tendered him for his services. Nominations were made for and the following names were suggested: Ex-Mayor Gilbert A. Collins, of Jersey City; L. P. DeForest, of Roselle, L. T. Derousse, of Camden; ex-Speaker E. Ambler Armstrong, of Camden, and J. H. Gaskill, of Mount Holly.

Mr. Gaskill was unanimously elected.

The new president is a rising young lawyer of Mt. Holly and a hard working Republican. He is well known all over the State. At the last gubernatorial convention he was chosen temporary chairman and made an able address. He will fill the position very creditably and is thought to be the right man in the right place. At present he is in Ohio stumping for McKinley.

The committee decided to hold a convention in the near future and a committee consisting of President Gaskill, Elmer Sanderson, of Newark; E. C. Hill, of Trenton, and L. T. Derousse, of Camden, was appointed to make arrangements for it.

PRINTERS' BILLS PAID.

JUDGE MAGIE'S DECISION THE BASIS OF SETTLEMENT.

A New Compensation for Publishing the County Collector's Report—Newark Avenue to be Examined for a County Road.

The newspaper publishers who printed the county collector's last report were interested in Thursday afternoon's meeting of the Union county Board of Chosen Freeholders. In former years the Board paid $100 to each paper, but the new law requires the county collector to publish his report in the papers designated to print the State laws, and fixes the legal rate at the compensation.

Accordingly the publishers with one exception sent in their bills for $185.10 each. The one exception claimed he was entitled to about ten dollars more than the others. At the July meeting these claims were referred to the county collector and the legal committee.

Editor Lane, of the Summit Record, was in attendance at yesterday's meeting to represent his fellow claimants.

The papers which publish the collector's report are the Free Press and Leader, Elizabeth, Railway Democrat, Summit Record, Plainfield Constitutionalist, Central N. J. Times and Royal Craftsman.

County Attorney Ward reported that the legal committee had made an investigation of the matter. They found that under the recent decision of Judge Magie in the Somerset county cases it was compulsory on the Board to pay the legal rate. It had no choice in the matter. The conditions of the law make it the duty of the collector to print his report in the papers designated to print the statutes. He was the agent of the Board, and the Board was liable for his acts. In the absence of any contract the Board must pay the legal rate for the publication. Judge Magie's opinion seemed to fix the legal rate at 60 cents per folio, but the publishers claimed that in case of doubtful matter they were entitled to 90 per folio. They had taken advice in the matter, and their claim is confirmed by the authorities at Trenton. Mr. Ward is of the opinion, therefore, that if the bills were correct as to the number of folios they should be paid.

The report was received, and on motion of Mr. Vanderbeck the claims were ordered paid provided the legal rates had been charged, and the number of folios correct.

The matter of adopting Newark avenue as a part of the county road system was again under consideration, and the proposition was favored in the little talks with the members of the Board by Comptroller Carlton and others prior to the meeting.

Mr. Trahon offered a resolution that a committee of three be appointed to examine Newark avenue, from North Broad street to city line, at Elizabeth, with a view of its adoption as a county road.

The resolution was adopted, and Mr. Hubbard appointed at the committee, Messrs. Trahon, Roll and Pierson.

Mr. Jones offered a resolution that a committee of five be appointed to meet with the Union County Freeholders at Littell's bridge in New Providence. The resolution was adopted and committee appointed as follows: Messrs. Jones, Vanderbeck, Briant, Kyte and Doty.

County Engineer Dunham submitted a detail of the condition of the county roads, and some certificates for completion of some of the work. The report was accepted and filed.

A large batch of audited bills was passed.

Among the Meteors.

A meteoric display is booked by the astronomers for the beginning of the second week of this month. These meteors in their passage are deflected from their course by the earth and are ignited by the arrested motion caused by the resistance of our atmosphere, leaving a luminous train behind them. Most of them are burnt up before reaching the earth. Those which are large enough to run the gauntlet successfully and strike the ground are known as aerolites or meteoroids. They are most numerous on the nights of August 9th, 10th, 11th, and November 13th and 14th.

Fell From a Church.

James Leonard, a man employed in the construction of the new Grace Church at the corner of Sycamore and Seventh street, fell from a scaffolding, a distance of fifteen feet, yesterday afternoon, and was painfully injured. His left wrist was dislocated and he was bruised and cut more or less about the head and body. He was placed in a carriage and taken to the Muhlenberg Hospital, where Dr. Endicott is attending him.

Died From her Injuries.

Mary Wagoner, the young woman who fell from a cherry tree at Dunellen about five weeks ago, died at the Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday afternoon from the effect of her injuries. The unfortunate young woman was in a bad condition. She died suffering from concussion of the spine and was badly injured about the head and body. Since the accident her friends had no hopes of her recovery.

Another Brakeman Injured.

Tuesday morning, near the scene of Monday's fatal accident at Bound Brook, John Skillman, of Easton was coupling cars. In some unaccountable manner the ball of his thumb was cut as with a razor. The accident was undoubtedly due to a sliver of iron on the coupling pin. Dr. Snowball put several stitches in the injured member and Skillman went to his home.

FACTORIES FOR WESTFIELD.

Their Proposed Erection Stimulates Other Projects.

The different manufacturing concerns are now negotiating for factory sites on the Central Railroad between Westfield and Cranford.

Dr. Ripley, who owns much of the land in that section fronting on the south side of the railroad, has been approached by the principals, and he thinks satisfactory arrangements will be made with the companies.

The three proposed factories will employ 1,200,800 and 400 hands respectively.

Negotiations are also in progress for the purchase of a factory site on the outskirts of the town. The people have been quite indifferent to the advantages of having factories located in the village, and many have opposed the idea, but now there appears to be a general feeling in favor of having factories locate there.

An interesting as well as a peculiar feature of the proposed location of factories in Westfield is the effect it will probably have on the interests of one or two churches of the town. For some time past the pastor and people of the Catholic church have desired to secure a more eligible site for their church and they have been negotiating for a plot of ground on Ripley's Hill, an eminence overlooking the town. Bishop Wigger has encouraged his people to take that step, but they have hesitated about taking the responsibility. But now that the factory project gives promise of becoming an actuality the pastor and his flock are stirred to renewed activity in the matter.

The Baptist church has also been looking for a site on Ripley's Hill, as it has outgrown its home on the North side, and the same causes that are enthusing the Catholics are reviving the enthusiasm of the Baptists.

The whole town is looking forward with interest to the action of the Baptist and Catholic churches, for the building of one or both of the churches on the hill would mark a new era in the development of the South side.

Dunellen Notes.

(From the Bound Brook Chronicle.)

John Curtid, after an absence of several years, has returned to Dunellen and is stopping at Maier's Hotel.

Mr. and Mrs. John J. Reilly, of West New Brighton, S. I., were visiting friends at Maier's Hotel last Sunday.

Dr. Champney has added to his already well equipped laboratory an electrical instrument with all the latest improvements attached.

Chicken thieves are again commencing their depredations in town. On Tuesday the hennery belonging to Michael Beck was entered and a number of fine fowls stolen.

Last Friday quite a number of outing parties from Dunellen and Evona visited Washington Rock to enjoy a day's recreation. Conspicuous among the Dunellen guests was a little donkey owned by Mrs. Tolsen, of New York, which was utilized to carry refreshments for the party.

W. E. Smith, of the firm of Desilmann Bros. & Co., for the first time in many years has taken a few days off for recreation. Mr. Smith is a pushing energetic business man and the community at large are wondering why he should do so, and many of them are bold enough to affirm that Mr. Smith is on his wedding tour.

From the way contributions come in for the purpose of forming a fire company in Dunellen the people here do not seem to want any improvement in that line. Perhaps some time in the near future, when they learn a bitter lesson, they will look back with regret at what was once a golden opportunity. The only contributions so far are from J. H. Pierson, $40; Dr. Champney, $5, which lays in Jos. Maier's safe and which will be given to a company when organized.

Miss Florence A. Howard, niece of Mrs. Warden, has been enjoying a visit from her sister, Mrs. D. W. Bryan, of Greenpoint, L. I., and her cousin, Miss Carrie Risdon, of Harlem, N. Y. Yesterday they were entertained at tea by friends and acquaintances made during their short stay. After a few days' rest they will take a trip to Lake Mahopac where they will spend the balance of the season.

Three young ladies, visitors in town, had a thrilling experience this afternoon at Washington Rock for a walk. They were more than delighted with the beautiful scenery of nature and were caught in a very heavy shower, with only two umbrellas between the trio. Imagine their appearance on their return home! One young lady got stuck fast in the mud and it required the united efforts of her companions to extricate her tiny feet from the sticky soil. The old adage is a true one, girls, "you must take some bitter with the sweet."

Epworth League Rally.

Notwithstanding the inclement weather of Tuesday evening about 350 people attended the rally given by the Dunellen Epworth League and it was indeed a success. Invitations had been sent out to the different chapters at Warrenville, Bound Brook, Somerville, Westfield, Cranford, Roselle, Elizabeth, Plainfield, and the three Christian Endeavor Societies in town, most of which, responded to roll call.

The principal feature of the evening was an eloquent address by Dr. Doherty, of Westfield, which was heartily applauded. Recitations by Miss Ella Fisher and Miss Louise Apgar were exceptionally good, as was also the quartette singing by Miss Louise Apgar, Miss Irene Giles, Charles Apgar and Edward Teal. Refreshments were served at a suitable hour and the guests departed to their homes fully satisfied with their evening's entertainment.

Wanted to Kill Himself.

A man, whose name we are unable to ascertain, while under the influence of liquor caused considerable excitement on the 10:28 p. m., train last evening by trying to hurl himself from the platform of a car, while the train was running at a high rate of speed between this city and Netherwood. The excitement happened to be on the platform at the time and the fellow was forced back into the car. He fought desperately and it required the combined efforts of the conductor and a brakeman to prevent him from accomplishing his purpose.

The Marshal's Victim Recovering.

James Ready, the man who was shot by Marshal Anderson at Bound Brook Saturday afternoon for an alleged interference with an officer in the discharge of his duty, and who is at present at the Muhlenberg Hospital in this city, is slowly recovering from his injury; although, it is said, he will always carry the bullet, as it is lodged under the kneecap, and the physicians find it impossible to extract it.

—"Railroad crossing; stop, look and listen," is the text of the signs to be erected at every road crossing on the Philadelphia and Reading railroad.

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

The Christian Union declares that it is all wrong for a minister to leave a church when he finds himself out of whack with its creeds. It is his place to stay in the church and make a square fight to reform its creeds. The Christian Union declares.

Jewish immigration is assuming proportions that are something tremendous. Well, there is this to be said: There is scarcely a Jewish pauper, and seldom a Jewish saloon keeper in America. There never has been in America a Jewish mob or riot. Hebrews are foremost in securing thorough education for their children, and liberal in all works of public charity. A Jewish immigrant will never eat any meat but the best and most healthful, never lower wages by cutting under current rates, and never pick his living out of a garbage barrel.

Melancholy indeed it is to read of the death of an Austrian nobleman in Hungary who occupied the place of a street car driver. Very sad it is to find that a member of one of the haughtiest families in Vienna had actually to come to working with his hands for a living. For one thing, sadness fills the soul because the proud baron was such a mortal fool. He spent all his substance in riotous living, till he had not so much as a respectable sum pipe left of his former luxury. He had ruined his health, morals and temper in the same way, and was no longer a beauty either to look at or to live with. But did he not know that in America, the big, rich republic across the sea, there are thousands of accomplished young ladies of the ranks of first society who are pining for just such a husband as he would have been? They are so eager to snap up such stale kind of noblemen that they force their millionaire fathers to settle large incomes on the aristocratic husbands and pay the debts incurred in former debaucheries. The Vienna baron simply sinned away his opportunities.

A Prophecy That Came True.

The Boston Herald calls attention to a remarkable forecast in regard to the cotton raising industry made by Edward Atkinson in 1861, at the outbreak of the civil war. Then it was believed the north would suffer for cotton goods, and that there never would be a sufficiency of it again grown in the country. Slave owners had been declaring for years that cotton could not be grown by free labor. White laborers could never endure the climate, said the owners of the cotton plantations, and the disposition of the negro was such that he could not be made to work in freedom. New England cotton manufacturers believed this, too, and were even inclined to want the south to go, if only their cotton mills were not interfered with.

In an anonymous pamphlet Edward Atkinson was invited to deny one of these propositions and argued them down. Mr. Atkinson was an adept in juggling with figures even then, and he showed by facts that white men did work, and worked constantly, in the most unhealthful regions of the south, making railroads and digging ditches. Moreover, said the writer, the free negro would work. More figures came to bolster up the statement. Under free labor cotton seed, then useless and a nuisance, would be utilized. Finally more cotton would be raised with free labor than with slaves. All these prophecies have been fulfilled. In 1860 the American cotton crop amounted to 4,675,670 bales. In 1890 it was 7,313,728 bales.

Disturbances in China.

There is news of continued disturbances in China. The feeling against foreigners seems to be on the increase, and there are internal dissensions besides. It may be that the empire which has survived so many thousand years is at last to be stirred to its depths and remodeled on modern principles, as Japan has been, and that the symptoms of this are seen in the disturbances which are like the mutterings of the storm before it bursts.

Certainly something must happen before long in China, if the signs mean anything. The main reason China is so populous is that Chinese worship their ancestors. If a man has no children, how then can he be worshiped? The railroads disturb the tombs of his ancestors, in the Chinaman's view of it, therefore they are not to be tolerated. Missionaries displease the powers that be, because they shake the good old faith. The old fogy Chinaman has fully as much right and reason on his side as the old fogy American, who never wants to see anything changed. But the Chinaman enforces his faith by deed by mobbing and beating to death those who would change things, which is a step ahead of the old fogy American.

Then, too, it would not be strange if the wholesale persecutions to which the Chinese have been subjected in foreign lands, particularly in America, was bearing fruit at last. The Chinese temper at home may have been aroused to the point of wreaking vengeance on all foreigners in the Flowery Kingdom; which is anything but a flowery land for Europeans and Americans who are there just now.

NO CHARTERS FOR THEM

Southern G. A. R. Men Will Fight the Negro.

VERY DEFIANT AND DETERMINED.

They Say They Will Refuse Recognition to the Colored Veterans Despite the Action of the Grand Encampment. Chief Painter Assumes Command.

DETROIT Aug 8, 1891.

General order No. 1

1. Having been elected commander in chief of the Grand Army of the Republic for the twenty-fifth national encampment, held in Detroit, Aug. 6 and 7, 1891, I hereby accept the trust and assume with the hope that the grand work of the order in which we are all engaged may be promoted during my administration.

2. The other officers elected and appointments upon the staff will be announced in future orders.

3. Till further notice all communications for the adjutant general will be addressed to Rutland, Vt.

J. H. GOUDELOCK,
Adjutant General.

Presented with a Flag.

When the officers were installed Commander in Chief John Palmer was presented the flag by the retiring commander in chief, with the declaration that there would be no hand to haul down and lose the flag. Palmer then assumed the gavel and closed the silver encampment. The following national council of administration of the Grand Army of the Republic has been elected:

The Council of Administration.

The Logan and Sheridan Monuments.

The report of the committees on John A. Logan and Phil Sheridan of Washington showed that the Logan monument fund now reaches $65,000 and is closed. For the Sheridan monument they have $50,000 in hand. Superintendent of Public Monuments reported satisfactory progress for the committee on memorial hall at Decatur, Ills.

The Color Question Not Dead.

According to the views of many intelligent southerners in the city, the recent action of the encampment in declaring that a color line should not be drawn in the G. A. R. will prove the death blow to the hopes of the salvation of the colored veterans south of Mason and Dixon's line.

The southerners are simply going home more determined than ever that they will not allow the negroes to associate with them as Grand Army men, but department officers will, as heretofore, refuse to recognize the legality of their posts or organizations.

Alleged Inconsistency.

Commander Hodges, of the department of Kentucky, said to a reporter this morning for his comrades, says: Now, we are the men who wish to give the colored veterans a representation in the G. A. R. by having provisional departments established, and it is the National encampment which has refused them this right by declining to authorize the establishment of such a department.

"These colored men claim to be members of the G. A. R., but they can't be admitted to the floor of the encampment and were refused admission here.

They Can Frame Them.

"The opponents of our plan say that to that we propose would open the door for 50,000 or 60,000 negroes in the south, but the only thing the colored men can do now is to go home and frame their so called charters, and then what is the use? Again, the matter stands they can't get any charters from our department, and our department is the only body with authority to grant charters in our jurisdiction.

"We don't want the colored men in our posts and we won't have them; so they won't get into the G. A. R."

The Color Decision in the South.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 8.—The action of the Grand Army encampment in the race question has created considerable stir among the white members of the order here. No action, however, will be taken until the delegates return, but Grand Army men here are strongly in favor of the four white posts—Joseph A. Mower No. 1, U. S. How No. 3, Abraham Lincoln No. 4 and Custer No. 5—receiving up their charter. They say that the other four white posts will follow. They will then form a social organization, to which no one but whites may be elected.

The Women Choose Officers.

To Welcome Palmer.

ALBANY, Aug. 8.—The joint committee of arrangements of the Grand Army posts in this vicinity have completed a programme for the reception of Commander in Chief General Palmer on his arrival Monday. Governor Hill will welcome him on behalf of the state.

The Baroucsses Horvath Drowned.

VIENNA, Aug. 8.—The Baroucsses Horvath, sisters, of the famous Hungarian family of that name, have been drowned while bathing at Madaras, Hungary.

AFTER TWELVE LONG YEARS.

Two White Girls Returned from a Band of Savage Indians.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—Cable Page has arrived in town from Dakota with his two daughters, having recovered them from a band of Indians in whose custody they have been twelve years. He moved to Dakota in 1879 with his young bride, who was Miss Clara Parker, of Roxbury. Everything prospered and the Indians were friendly.

One day a caravan passing through the settlement fired upon the Indians, who then next day returned with their war paint on. Page's little home was burned to the ground, and he, his wife and their two children were made captives.

Page was bound to a stree. His wife was taken with hysteria and died before his eyes. The children were carried away and he was left to perish.

The second day some cowboys saw him. They cut the rawhide which bound him and he went with them. A few days travel brought them to a mining camp where he joined a prospecting band. They were fortunate at every turn. In a few years he had amassed a fortune.

Finally he returned to Boston. Here he found his father-in-law had received the following letter:

NEAR FORT GARLAND, }
INDIAN RESERVATION, Aug. 6, 1891. }

Mr. Barker—I have just returned from the Indian settlement of the Utes. While there I saw two beautiful white girls. They informed me that their father and mother had been put to death by the Utes, and that their grandparents bore your name and lived in Roxbury, Mass. CHARLES PINCKNEY.

The case was put in the hands of the Washington authorities, and Mr. Page soon received the necessary papers. He went to Fort Brown, then, with guides and an interpreter, he visited the government post of Fort Garland, where he regained possession of his children.

Letter Carriers Elect Officers.

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—The carriers have elected the following officers: President, T. C. Dennis, of Boston; vice president, A. E. Smith, San Francisco; secretary, J. C. Victory, New York; treasurer, E. W. Crane, Indianapolis; sergeant-at-arms, D. W. Washington, Nashville; executive committee, T. B. Gregory, Ills.; Colonel G. W. Kinford, Omaha; C. C. Gondon, Cincinnati; P. K. Riley, Milwaukee, and W. H. Hogan, Chicago.

To Stop Yard's Seagirt Sale.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—Receiver Yardley, of the suspended Keystone bank, learned that H. H. Yard, who is charged with conspiracy with the cashier, intended to offer the Keystone bank's Sea girt's property at public sale to-day. Yardley immediately requested his attorney to go to Trenton to make application for an injunction restraining Yard from making the sale.

The Work of the Pension Office.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Pension Commissioner Raum in a letter to Acting Secretary Nettleton states that during the year just closed 156,482 original certificates were issued, 80,845 more than ever before issued. There are pending 920,486 claims but the office is working them off at the rate of 30,000 per month. The letter was written in response to the complaint of a soldier at the delay in the pension office.

Dentists Choose Officers.

SARATOGA, Aug. 8.—The American Dental association elected the following officers: President, W. W. Walker, New York; first vice president, J. D Patterson, Kansas City; second vice president, S. C. Watkins, Montclair, N. J.; corresponding secretary, J. Allen Brophy, New York; recording secretary, George H. Cushing, Chicago, treasurer, A. H. Fuller, St. Louis.

The Seized Fishing Boats Released.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—The state department has been notified that the British government has released the seven fishing vessels seized off Eastport, Me., for fishing in British waters. A fog prevailed at the time of the seizure, and the boats, if fishing in British waters, were doing so unintentionally, and for this reason they were released.

The Work of the President.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 8.—The president has signed the commissions of the following postmasters: John T. Robinson, Vine land; Clarence Moss, John H. Bergen, Casenovia, N. Y. Ezra H. Haywood, editor of the World, Princeton, Mass., who was convicted of forgery years ago, for release of the mails, was denied a pardon.

A Mystery of the Hudson.

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—Coroner Rion, of Ulster county, is trying to clear up the mystery surrounding the finding in the river of the body of a well dressed woman about fifty years old. It is suspected that she was robbed and murdered on one of the night boats and her body thrown into the river.

The President's Vermont Tour.

RUTLAND, Vt., Aug. 8.—President Harrison's tour through this state promises to be marked by a succession of public demonstrations, Aug. 25, 26 and 27. At Burlington the president will be the guest of Senator Edmunds. He will also visit Secretary Proctor at Proctor for a day or two.

Fourteen Deaths in All.

STRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The body of Charles West, a car inspector in the employ of the West Shore road, has been found in the wreck at Montezuma. He was riding on the rear end of the freight train. This makes a total of fourteen deaths by the accident.

Earthquakes Changed Its Course.

YAMA, Cal., Aug. 8.—A report brought in by the Cocopah Indians states that the earthquake on the 30th ult. resulted in changing the course of the Colorado river. It left its old bed, and now flows through a crevasse forty feet wide and 1,000 feet long.

Mate Winbrow Held.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 8.—H. Y. Winbrow, mate of the schooner Hester A. Walters, of Norfolk, Va., charged with the murder of Henry Shepard, a colored member of his crew, has been held for trial.

Chili Will Fight Bolivia.

PARIS, Aug. 8.—A telegram from Buenos Ayres asserts that Chili will declare war against Bolivia, because the government of the latter country has recognized the congressional party of Chili as belligerents.

The Queen Loves France, Too.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Queen Victoria has caused some surprise by her sympathetic command that the greatest honors shall be shown to the French naval visitors.

Two Duelists Dead.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 8.—Thomas Long and John Estiss, the two men who fought a duel on election day, are dead.

THE POLICE POWERLESS

They Have No Hope of Catching the Ripper.

DISCREDITING HIS LATEST DEED.

They Claim That the Wolfe Woman Inflicted the Wounds Upon Herself, but Physicians Say She Could Not Have Done So—Details of the Tragedy.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—The London police insist on a theory of suicide in the case of the old woman Woolfe found dying from horrible wounds that suggested the work of Jack the Ripper. The police have found that the woman was insured for £30 for the benefit of her son, and they allege that she probably cut herself with the razor in order to give the impression of a Ripper murder and to secure the insurance to her son, she being aged and feeble and with no interest in life.

The Police are Hopeless.

Physicians, however, say that it was impossible for the woman herself to have inflicted the wounds, and some critics aver that the police are hopeless of catching the murderer and wish to dismiss the crime as self perpetrated.

Early in the morning an unknown man attacked the woman, who is seventy years old, and a resident of the neighborhood. When found she was mortally and terribly wounded woman it was seen that he had cut her throat, and that she had been slashed in the body and on one arm.

Her assailant escaped, and thus far the police are without any knowledge as to his whereabouts. Of his identity nothing is known.

Without a Word of Warning.

The woman says that the man sprung upon and attacked her without a word of warning.

She suddenly saw the glitter of a knife and mastically raised her arm to ward off the impending blow. Then she fell to the step, where she was subsequently discovered, and remained there she had until the police finally came to her assistance. On the arrival of the police a razor smeared with blood was found lying near the wounded woman.

He Shot a Woman Dead.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 8.—About 8 o'clock last night Thomas D. Lavi, recently employed by the Baltimore and Ohio Southwestern railroad, shot and almost instantly killed Ida Kipp just as she was entering the gate at Fifth street beer garden with a friend. Lavi had been paying attention to the girl for some time and was jealous of her. He saw the couple walking together on the street and followed them for several blocks. Just as they reached the beer garden he stepped up, drew a revolver from his pocket and fired four shots at her, one taking effect in the head and another through the left hand.

The Weapon Missed Fire.

He then placed the weapon to his own head and pulled the trigger, but it missed fire. He ran down Fifth street, drawing the shells from his revolver and trying to reload it with Phil Sheridan of sending his own life. In his flight he stumbled and fell to the sidewalk, discharging the revolver, but doing no serious damage. He got up and threw pieces from the crowd who were after him, but was finally captured and locked up in the Central police station. Levi is about twenty-six years of age. Ida Kipp was a handsome girl about nineteen years of age. Her father keeps a blacksmith and wagon shop at 423 Second street and lives at 36 Anderson street.

Webster Surrenders.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Bertram Webster, the gambler who shot and killed Charles Gedney on last Sunday night, is in custody. The police profess to have been searching for him in every possible direction without avail. He drove up to the front door of Howe & Hummell's law office, at Center and Leonard streets, at 10 a. m., walked coolly into the office, and announced that he was ready to surrender. His coming was unexpected, as Howe & Hummell had previously notified the police, who were ready to receive the fugitive.

It looks rather strange that this well known man should have immunity for nearly a week after a killing of such a character, while police arrested 123 persons in their efforts to clear up the killing of "Old Shakespeare." It is now believed that Webster killed Goodwin because Mrs. Webster had been unable to entrap Goodwin and hated him for the deed.

The Funeral of Goodwin.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—Two hacks followed to its last resting place in the Lane family lot in the old cemetery back of the Unitarian church at Arlington the body of Charles K. Goodwin, the victim in New York of Albert Webster's jealousy.

Young Phillips Goes Free.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 8.—Martin Phillips, who was arrested on suspicion of being the murderer of Hannah Robinson, who was found choked to death at Gleadale, L. I., has been discharged. He satisfactorily proved his whereabouts at the time of the murder.

On Track of the Murderer.

Distinct progress was made yesterday in the perplexing process of unraveling the mystery. The nameless girl and her nameless murderer are now followed in their movements up to within an hour, or at most two, of the time when the crime was committed. The miscreant who betrayed the girl, then refused to marry her, and then capped the climax of his conduct by murdering her that he might obtain the letters which bound him to her and in which he promised her marriage, is known by sight, and four of the compromising letters which he dropped as he ran away from the scene of the murder are now in the hands of the coroner and justify the belief that he will soon be under lock and key.

The Effigy Taken Down.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—The effigy of William F. O'Neil, which hung over the street in front of the police station, was taken down by the chief of the fire department. There is talk of putting up effigies of both O'Neill and the woman.

Salisbury Off for the Continent.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Lord Salisbury has departed for the continent, where he will spend part of his vacation in interviews with continental statesmen.

A Pittsburg Bank President's Debts.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 8.—W. E. Schmeris, president of the Third National bank of Pittsburg, has confessed judgments for $225,000.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

The Volunteer and Gloriana Lead the Yachts at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 8.—The black schooner Volunteer, with Sanford and Iselin, dashed across the finish line last evening, and left in her wake a fleet of six schooners and five sloops that raced for the Goelet cups. Captain Hall was at the wheel, and she had covered the thirty-eight mile course in 5h. 30m. 9s.

The Volunteer had, however, fouled the sloop Gloriana, and no prize can be awarded until the regatta committee meet. If they decide against the Volunteer the $1,000 cup will probably go to the Iroquois.

This was the tenth season that schooners and sloops of the New York Yacht club had contested off Newport for the Goelet cup. A great deal of interest was aroused this year to see how Mr. Morgan's Herreshoff sloop Gloriana would sail against the crack sloops of the forty-six-foot class. The Gloriana won the $500 cup for sloops, and it was a well merited victory. Her time was 5h. 21m. 43s.

Belle Hamlin, Justina and Globe Foil.

BUFFALO, Aug. 8.—At the closing day's races of the Grand Circuit Rosalind Wilkes defeated Mambrino Maid and McDoll in the $2,000 free-for-all trotting race. Best time, 2:15. Belle Hamlin, Justina and Globe, driven three abreast, failed to lower their record of 2:14. They covered a mile in 2:16.

Murphy Outshoots Daly.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 8.—A pigeon match at 50 birds between J. Edgar Murphy, of New York, and Philip Daly, Jr., of Long Branch, was won by Murphy, who killed ninety-four birds to Daly's seventy-three.

SHOT TO DEATH BY A MOB.

Two Men and Two Women Killed for Incendiarism in Alabama.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 8.—News has reached here of a quadruple lynching in Henry county, Ala. The residence of William Davis, a prominent farmer, was burned and the family narrowly escaped with their lives. Ella Williams (colored) was arrested and confessed to saturating the house with oil and setting fire to it at the instigation of Lucinda Ingram implicated William Williams, Willis Lowe and Elisa Lowe (all colored).

They were arrested, and while the officers were taking them to jail at Abbeville a mob overpowered the officers and took the prisoners and shot them to death. Their bodies were thrown in the river near by.

Lady De La Zouche Arrested.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—Lady de la Zouche, one of the leading women in London society, was brought into the Marlborough street police court, charged with being drunk and disorderly in Hyde park. The affair created a sensation. Her ladyship testified in her own behalf, swearing that she had taken liquor with the morning of the day when she met with her mishap. The magistrate said there was a bad mistake somewhere. He dismissed the complaints amid the applause from those in the courtroom.

Houk Wants to Succeed His Father.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 8.—The Republican primaries for the selection of a successor to Congressman L. C. Houk, who died several months ago, are being held today. The candidates are John Houk, a son of the deceased, and William Woodruff, a capitalist. Democrats claim that this district for the first time since the war.

A Broker's Suicide.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Norman Campbell, aged fifty-eight years, a broker, having an office in the Consolidated exchange and the Petroleum exchange, in this city, committed suicide in Prospect park, Brooklyn, last evening by shooting himself in the head. He had become despondent over business troubles. He had but fifteen cents in his pockets.

That "Plot" to Loot the Treasury.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 8.—Acting Secretary Nettleton lands the alleged plot to loot the treasury by a band of tramps as a good midsummer yarn. Captain Cobaugh, of the secret service, has the alleged twenty men on duty day and night, and it would be almost impossible for the king of tramps or any one else to carry out such a plot as suggested.

Mr. Blaine Steadily Gaining.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 8.—Mr. Emmons Blaine said today: "Dr. Baldwin is not coming to Bar Harbor to see my father professionally. He has not been sent for and my father is not under his influence. My father has not taken any medicine for nearly two months. He is as well as usual—very well, indeed, and is gaining all the time."

Died Protesting His Innocence.

DOVER, Del., Aug. 8.—James T. Thoroughgood, the negro convicted of assault, was hanged here Friday afternoon. He made loud cries and uttered prayers as he stood on the scaffold. This kept up until the drop fell, when he died almost instantly. He protested his innocence to the last.

Dead Beside Her Husband.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Mrs. Sarah Coleman was found dead on the floor of her shanty, Fifty-ninth street and Park avenue. Her husband, who was asleep beside the body, was arrested because the body was found. The woman had been dead for several days.

A Mystery at the Falls.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 8.—The body of an unknown girl was found in the river about half a mile below Lewiston. She was about twenty years old, and of medium height and build. It is thought she was from Toronto. Two strangers have been arrested on suspicion.

Accuses His Brother.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 8.—Adelbert Geohan, awaiting at Fergus Falls the day of his execution for the murder of Rosa Bray, has made a statement that his brother, Anderson Geohan, did the killing, and that he saw it. Anderson Geohan has been arrested.

His Ancestor Captured Andre.

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—Isaac Van Wart, grandson of Isaac Van Wart, of Revolutionary fame as one of the captors of Major John Andre, the British spy, died on his farm at Westchester, N. Y., aged seventy-one years.

James Russell Lowell Very Ill.

BOSTON, Aug. 8.—The condition of Hon. James Russell Lowell, who has been confined to his house for the last three weeks, is unchanged. His trouble appears to be seated in the liver. His condition is very serious.

Grease Spots.

To remove grease spots from carpets a little borax or ammonia in warm water will often answer the purpose, or mix half a wineglassful of Fuller's earth and the same quantity of magnesia with boiling water, and, put it hot on the grease spots. When dry brush it off. Benzine is also good. Stains of grease on marble are more difficult to remove if they have remained some time. Make a paste of Fuller's earth and benzine and lay it on thickly, leave for twelve hours, then wash off with warm water.

TOLTAIRE'S DEFINITION
Of a doctor—"as one that pours drugs of which he knows little, into a body of which he knows less, in order to cure diseases concerning which he knows nothing." Is certainly not true of those who cure nervous exhaustion, chronic disease and impure blood by using Dr. Greene's Nervura, which is the one only vegetable neutralizer and alterative blood tonic known.

THAT BIG BLAINE BOOM.

Six Pittsburg Papers Get the Ball Rolling.

THE REFORM FACTION'S MANIFESTO.

The Citizens' Republican Association Attacks the Clique Who Are Alleged to Control Political Affairs and the Careless People Who Allow Them to Do So.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 8.—The newspaper press of this city, with noteworthy unanimity, has joined the Blaine boom. The Dispatch, Commercial-Gazette, Times, Chronicle-Telegraph, The Leader and The Press have all pronounced for Blaine. The Dispatch says this morning, under the head of "Politicians and the Blaine Boom:"

A Foregone Conclusion.

"It is a fact that the present Blaine boom is about the most spontaneous and honest expression for a public man from the people that has been witnessed in this country since the call in 1868 upon Grant to go to the White House.

"It has been a foregone conclusion ever since Mr. Blaine wrote his famous reciprocity letter that, if alive and well, nothing could prevent his being the Republican candidate for president in 1892. It is the widespread and earnest feeling among the people that Mr. Blaine is by great odds the most capable man in the party, or, indeed, in public life in this country today."

"The One Man to Lead."

The Commercial-Gazette in its leading editorial speaks of Mr. Blaine as "the one man above all others to lead his party to victory in the great battle of 1892.

"Men who once distrusted and opposed him are now his supporters, because to his conceded brilliancy he has added the proofs of a conservative and dignified statesmanship that has made the state department of this administration the pride of his countrymen."

Time to Speak.

The Chronicle-Telegraph says: "It is time for the Republican party of this state and every other state to speak in unmistakable terms for the greatest statesman, the brainest leader, and the most earnest, unflinching exponent of Republican righteousness in the republic." It adds, "It is an old cry, a strong cry, and a cry altogether —Blaine, Blaine, James G. Blaine!"

No Room for Any Other Name.

The Times, speaking of the attitude of Quay and others, says of Mr. Blaine: "His nomination is so clearly the party desire that there will not be room in the next Republican national convention for any name but his, except he declines absolutely in advance.

Citizens' Republican Association Speaks.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 8.—The new reform faction within the party organization, the Citizens' Republican association, has issued a lengthy circular letter, setting forth the principles on which it proposes to base its action, severely scoring the machine made politicians and the careless citizens who take no interest in public affairs, and calling upon every one to lend his aid in the effort to purge Philadelphia's political system.

Danger of Defeat.

The association, the letter says, has been formed for the purpose of arousing the Republicans of Philadelphia and Pennsylvania to a proper understanding of the true position of public affairs as they now exist. The supremacy of the party in this city and state, they say, is in danger, and unless renewed interest is taken by all sincere Republicans, defeat this fall and in the next presidential contest is inevitable. The circular continues:

By a Political Clique.

"In a commonwealth of over five millions of people, the industrious citizen, occupied by business, has insensibly permitted the formation of a political clique which has been guided largely by two considerations —self interest and the perpetuation of personal power. Such is the situation.

"There is a premium placed upon political subservience, but not upon political independence, however much genuine its spirit, however essential to our progressive civilization. The consequence is that few men of distinguished merit enter public life. A representative influence is even exerted to check their aspirations.

"The citizen has sometimes been cajoled, sometimes deceived, sometimes conciliated; but the process of perfecting the machinery of the political organizations for the convenience of its clever artificers has gone steadily forward. The machinery of government should be operated for the interests of the people, but ingenious patents have been obtained which permit its operation in the interests of the politician. The office-holders have formed a solid up an exclusive body, and admission to its membership is dependent principally upon political vassalage. The power to manipulate the division, rather than the qualities of manliness, moral courage and honesty, is the recommendation to favor.

The Statesmen of Pennsylvania.

"How many statesmen of the first rank has Pennsylvania in the national service? How many senators or representatives in our general assembly with courage, capacity and a willingness solely to the consideration of what is for the best interests of the state?

"We have, it is true, many faithful official servants, but their selection and promotion is so dependent upon men who dictate nominations that they seldom have the stimulus which comes from being the direct choice of the people. The condition of public affairs we have described exists by sufferance of the people. Therefore we must condemn them when we condemn the politicians. The remedy is to be found in united action and generous and persistent patriotism.

Attend the Primaries.

"If citizens will but attend the primaries, the initial point from which party movement originally starts, and select representative men as delegates, their authority will be irresistible. They will gradually re-acquire control in the party affairs which, by inattention, they have lost."

After severely scoring the citizens who allow such a state of affairs to exist, the letter concludes with a call for assistance from all classes, and declares that unless good men are nominated by the party a town meeting will be called for that purpose. Henry C. Townsend is president, Charles W. Henry vice president, A. D. Fell treasurer and W. G. Griffith secretary of the executive committee.

THE EVIL REPUTE OF THE CAT.

Superstitions and Proverbs of Various Nations Regarding This Animal.

The evil repute of the cat still clings to him says The Illustrated American. A Flemish poet which has served nine masters in succession is believed to have the right of carrying off the soul of the ninth to hell. In Upper Brittany there are sometimes seen enormous cats engaged in holding a meeting. If any one presumes to intrude upon their presence, they surround and tease him for a time. Then a long needle is driven into his heart and he is dismissed. Hypochondria ensues, and he slowly wastes away. A black tomcat, says a Russian proverb, is the soul of seven years becomes a devil. A Breton farmer, who neglected to take the usual precaution of putting his tomcat to death before it committed its seventh year, was found dead in bed one morning with his throat terribly torn.

Suspicion fell upon innocent persons, who were tried for the murder on circumstantial evidence. Luckily, they observed that the cat of the house was always watching the corpse with eyes that blazed with rage. So he fastened to the dead man's arm a string, the end of which he dropped through the window into the guard. Then he told the police to watch the body secretly, while he pulled the string. They did so. When the boy gave the string a pull, the corpse's arm jerked. The cat imagined the master had revived. With one bound it sprang upon the hand furiously tore away at the corpse' wounded neck. Whereupon it was confronted to be burned alive and the suspected persons were set free.

It is believed that a cat's viciousness depends to a great degree upon the length of its tail. If the end of the tail be cut off it is unable to take part in the witches' sabbath. When a Walloon maiden wishes to refuse a suitor she imaginarily sails in a boat on a lake and tells him to count its hairs. It is generally believed in France that a bachelor who treads on a cat's tail will find no woman to marry him till a full year has passed by. In Germany, in England and in France many a religious fete of the Middle Ages culminated in pitching a cat off a height or into a bonfire. Indeed, as recently as 1818 a decree was issued at Ypres, in Flanders, forbidding the throwing of a cat off a high tower in commemoration of a Christian festival. Pontenelle told Monsieur if that he had been brought up to believe that not a single cat could be found in town on the eve of St. John's, because they all went on that day to the witches' sabbath. It is readily intelligible from this why the people on that day threw into the fire all cats that the foolish could possibly be caught. They actually believed that in doing so they were ridding the country of sorcerers.

Early English Bookbinding.

When printed books were first produced in England by William Caxton in 1476-7 they were bound in leather, usually calf or deerskin, or in parchment, also in vellum. If manuscripts it was comparatively seldom made use of, covers richly adorned with the most valuable and decorative materials possible being generally adopted. This ordered, the intention and use of movable type about A. D. 1440, was distinctly changed; the manuscripts themselves were no longer of the extreme value they had been up to this time, and as the simple printed page superseded the beautiful illuminated manuscript, so leather took the place of the costly enamels, carved ivory and jeweled bindings hitherto used.

Books bound in the Fifteenth and early in the succeeding centuries usually had clasps, and frequently a short title is written on the fore edge. The clasps are seldom found perfect, as the backs, having been kept laid on their sides, with the fore-edge and its title outward, they were useful as handles, and have been, in consequence, almost always pulled to pieces. In some cases the printer was its own publisher and binder, and we find his device or initial inside and outside the same book, as in the little abridgment of the statutes printed by Richard Pynson in 1499, of which the obverse of the cover is here illustrated.

In the Fifteenth century the size of the leather bindings of printed books were exact, if at all, either in cut or stamped work; the cut work was not used to any extent in England, but the stamped work was. The stamps were engraved on metal or wood, and were impressed upon the leather after the book was bound; sometimes they were heated and sometimes not, and the leather was damped in either case.

Richard Pynson was a native of Normandy, a pupil of Caxton. He worked in England from 1486 to 1520, and seems to have been an especial favorite of Henry VIII, as, in an edition of the statutes printed by him about 1500, he says, "By me, Richard Pynson, Squyer and Prenter to the Kynge's Noble Grace."

Barometric Plants.

A French writer makes the following interesting assertions about some familiar plants: If the stalks of clover and other leguminous plants stand upright there will be rain; if the leaf of the wood sorrel turns up it is a sign of a storm, as is also the closing of the convolvulus flower, the expanding of the lettuce flower and the turning upside down of the pitcher plant, but if the last named stand erect it will be fine, as it will be if the flower on the sorrel opens.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS

A STRANGE TYPE OF SEA FOWL.

The Manchots of the Cape of Good Hope and the Theory of Development.

At the Cape of Good Hope and its neighboring islands is found the most curious and remarkable of the sea fowl tribe—the manchots, or jackass penguins. These animals are of a strange and aberrant type hardly worthy the name of birds. Popular Science News has the following to say about them: Their wings are entirely useless for purposes of flight, and have apparently been modified into an organ more nearly resembling the flipper of a seal. The feet are large and clumsy, and, like the bear, the manchot is a plantigrade, standing upon the full length of the foot, but even with this advantage his movements on land are so clumsy that he is obliged to use the cluster of strong feathers forming the tip of the tail as an additional means of support when standing upright. In the water, however, the limbs which are of so little use to it on land enable it to move with the greatest swiftness and ease.

The color of these birds is a pure white on the under part of the body, and a black or grayish blue above. Bands of a yellowish color have sometimes been observed on the breast and the sides of the neck, and tufts of bright yellow feathers about the eye. A peculiarity of the plumage of the adult male bird is the dark band surrounding the lower part of the body, as shown in the illustration. The average length of the birds is about two feet.

The eggs are laid on rocky islands and on cliffs bordering the sea. The nest is roughly constructed of stones and shells, the principal object being apparently to raise the eggs from the ground and keep them dry. Usually a single egg only is found in the nest, of a pure white color and globular in form, like that of a duck. After five weeks' incubation the young manchots make their appearance, and are fed from the beaks of their parents with partially digested food regurgitated from the stomach. After the responsibility for their young ceases the old birds commence to moult, and remain in a sort of stupor until the new feathers are grown and it is safe for them to take to the water once more.

When removed to the northern hemisphere the manchot tends instinctively to delay the nesting season about six months, to correspond with the difference in the seasons between the two hemispheres. In intermediate types or animals like the bird described are to be found strong witnesses to the truth of the theory of development.

Direction of Wind in Thunderstorms.

A correspondent writes to Science, from Lyons, N. Y., as follows: It has been noted in connection with thunderstorms in this vicinity this season that in every instance there has been an outflow of air in every direction from the storm, extending even beyond the area of precipitation and cloudiness. For example, in the case of a storm appearing upon the southwestern horizon and moving eastward, and passing thence three or four miles south of this village, the weather vane pointed directly toward it continuously, veering slowly from southwest to southeast, showing that the wind came steadily from the storm. The same thing also occurred in the case of a storm which appeared upon the northwestern horizon and moved eastward, passing three or four miles north of the village. In this case the vane pointed directly toward the storm throughout, the winds being quite brisk. In other instances in which the storms passed directly over the village the same thing was manifest, the vane shifting sharply from west to east as the storms passed. In previous years I have noticed the puff of wind in front of an advancing thunderstorm moving in the same direction as the storm itself and occurring just before the rain began to fall, but my attention has never been called to such an outflow of air in every direction as has been apparent in connection with thunderstorms recently. Whatever may be its explanation, it certainly is entirely inconsistent with the idea of an indraft and upraft at the center of the storm in which it occurs.

How Spools Are Made.

Birch wood is preferred. The wood is first sawed into sticks four or five feet long and seven-eighths of an inch to three inches square, according to the size of the spool to be produced. These sticks are thoroughly seasoned. They are sawed into short blocks and dried in a hot air kiln. At the time they are sawed holes are bored perpendicularly through each block, which is set on end under a rapidly revolving, long shanked augur. Next, one whirl of each little block against one of twelve knives, and turning at lightning speed, fashions it into a spool according to the pattern desired, and that, too, at the rate of one spool per each set of knives. A row of small boys feed the spool making machines by simply placing the blocks in a spout, selecting the best and throwing out the knotty and defective stock. The machine is automatic, but there are some things which it cannot do, hence the employment of the small boys above mentioned. After the spools are turned they are placed in a large drum and revolved rapidly until they have taken on a fine polish. For some special purposes they are dyed yellow, black or red, according to taste. When one sees a spool of thread marked "200" or "300 yards" it does not signify that the thread has been measured, but that the spool has been gaged, and is supposed to have that Amount of thread upon it, says The Implement Herald.

The Miles of Various Nations.

The miles of various nations, expressed in yards, are as follows: The Irish mile, 2,240 yards; Swiss, 9,153; Italian, 1,766; Scotch, 1,984; Tuscan, 1,836; German, 5,106; Arabian, 2,143; Turkish, 1,826; Flemish, 6,806; Vienna, 8,296; Roman, 1,682 or 2,025; Werst, 1,167 or 1,337; Dutch and Prussian, 6,853; Swedish and Danish, 7,351.5; English and American, 1,760.

GOOD HEALTH

A DECIDUOUS MAN.

He Sheds His Skin and Gets a New Outfit of Finger and Toe Nails Every July.

At a recent meeting of the Chicago Medical society Dr. J. Frank reported a case where a man every July shed his skin. He was taken with feverish tremors, increasing almost to paroxysms. He undressed, lay down, and within a few minutes the skin of the chest began to turn red. The redness rapidly extended over the entire skin, and the feverish tremors continued uninterrupted for about twelve hours. Then he arose, dressed and walked about in perfect health. The skin now commenced to peel, and ten hours later it began to come off in great patches. From the arms and legs it could be pulled off exactly like gloves or stockings. As the old skin came away a new epidermis, as soft and pink as a baby's, was revealed. This new skin was very sensitive; the patient had to wear softened gloves and moccasins for about a week. After the old cuticle had been entirely removed the finger and toe nails began to drop off—new nails literally growing them out. Finally the change was complete; the man had a new skin and a new outfit of nails, and was ready to return to the mines. The shedding began in his first year and recurred every July thereafter. The New York Medical Record is quoted as authority for the foregoing.

Seaside Visitors and Damp Beds.

The mischief wrought by damp beds unfortunately does not usually react upon its heedless originators. The sole sufferer is the luckless caretaker who lurks by herself within the chill of half dried bedclothes. An instance in which the injured party appealed successfully to the law for damages is related by the English Lancet, which says: "The plaintiff, who had for several days occupied a room at a seaside resort, was told that the apartment was in need of be must accept another. Here the trouble began. Illness with its expenses followed, and the final cost to the too unceremonious host was considerable. An action was instituted and a verdict so consonant with sanitary principles deserve to be kept in remembrance; however, the maxim which inculcates prevention is still the best. Not even a money fine will always atone for the injury done by avoidable illness. Let the traveler, however weary and inclined to sleep, first be careful that his bed is dry. In any case of doubt a change of bedding should be insisted on, and the further precaution of sleeping between blankets rather than sheets is in such cases only rational."

The Gastric Juice.

A physician is authority for the following statements in regard to the action of the gastric juice on microbes: "The empty stomach of a healthy man contains innumerable organisms. The gastric juice, and principally the hydrochloric acid, possesses microbicide properties. The microbes take no active part in digestion. Persons who, on account of stomach affections, have little hydrochloric acid, are easily intoxicated by means of the micro-organisms in the stomach. Therefore the stomach should not remain in an empty condition for any length of time, and during an epidemic food should be taken at frequent intervals, and, if possible, sterilized."

ETIQUETTE

A DAY IN AN ENGLISH HOUSEHOLD.

The Ideal of Comfort Is Good Service, Even if the Table Be Less Plentiful.

In an article on the English middle classes Harper's Bazar gives some very entertaining details about the manners and daily customs of an English household of the "upper" middle class, among them the following:

An American woman wonders when she learns how many servants are needed to run such a household. The cook must have her one or more kitchen maids, there must be a couple of footmen and a parlor maid, two or three chambermaids and a lady's maid, and in large houses this would seem but a small staff.

Visiting hours are so arranged that the Englishwoman has her morning practically to herself. She is well fortified for the day. She had her cup of tea before getting up. Then at 9 came breakfast with her husband and children—an informal meal, with no servants in the room. At this she drank another cup of tea, ate her rasher of bacon and toast and finished with marmalade. The menu is bacon and marmalade winter and summer, spring and autumn. Hot cakes or rolls are delicacies never seen on an English breakfast table. After the interview with the cook the lady of the house is full mistress of her own time. She can count upon no one, except perhaps an intimate friend, calling before 3 or 4 in the afternoon, so that it is rarely she is interrupted for formal social duties.

Luncheon is a very important function, from which children are banished to the nursery. It might be called more correctly a dinner—hot joint and vegetables, a pudding, cheese and fruit.

Shopping hours are much the same as with us. Between 12 and 5 the shops are most crowded. The most popular time of all, however, is from 3 to 5. And then, if luncheon must be had away from home, it is in the genuine English restaurant—in the Holborn or the Criterion or the St. James—it is eaten. Not for the British middle class women are the pleasant little French and Italian haunts.

At 5 o'clock tea is served. It is brought up to the drawing room on a tray, and is the most informal and delightful of all English meals. Thin slices of bread and butter and cake—homemade, Parisian—are eaten with it, and on a day "at home" it answers as an excellent substitute for conversation. After tea it is time to dress for 7, 7:30 or 8 o'clock dinner.

Dinner, the master of the house now being at home, is a very formal affair, far more so than it is with us. The manner in which it is served is of more account than the dishes of which it consists. Our standby, soup, you need never expect to get very good if you get it at all. Upon the inevitable joint and the no less inevitable tart you can as surely count. With dinner the day ends. The hours that remain are devoted to amusement, whether that means sitting around the fire in the embarrassed silence, broken by spasmodic "ahs" that in England is called talking, or going to the theater, where stalls and balcony are usually filled by the wealthy "upper" middle class.

EXQUISITE NEW DRAPERIES.

Choice Coloring in Inexpensive Chintzes, Cretonnes and Stamped Velvets.

In the handsomer damasks, brocha tapestries and brocatelles, it is a question whether the exquisite tints noticeable in some weaves were ever before accomplished. Here is a damask, the background of shimmering gray with a blue tinge glinting through it. Metal tones of copper, of silver, and of gold, the first deepening almost to red, all play a part in the floral design which almost covers the background. Others are of a tea-rose color with metal effects; of "Nile green" (a vegetable green), with gold and bronze touches and of Mercy blue, embellished in silver. In the damasks the tones most in favor are delicate and indistinct.

Brocha tapestry reveals brighter tints in floral designs, as do also a few of the brocatelles.

Perhaps one of the most surprising features just now is the assortment of cretonnes and the more inexpensive stamped velvets, designed especially for country houses. Choice in coloring and design, although its artistic possibilities exist, by their aid, as in the richer materials. Floral designs are so much the fore, and, in addition to the allover pattern, is a separate width composed of a double border incorporating the same designs.

Chintz of every hue and of lovely patterning will also play an important part in the hangings for country dwellings.

The Decorator and Furnisher, from which the above notes are gleaned, says also that if we are to be in style we no longer cover every part of the rooms with carpet; we use rugs and parquet flooring in all the corners, and dishes are to be square or rectangular piece of carpet cannot reach. What a saving this is, too, over the old fashioned style. The neatest thing in carpeting is to have a perfect square or rectangular carpet and then all spaces not covered with this may be left bare or partly concealed from view by rugs. The most effective way is to have the square laid and then a beautiful mat made to cover only a part of the floor. The contrast is very beautiful.

Stripe of Patchwork for a Chair.

A pretty and useful purpose to which odds and ends of silk and ribbon may be applied is illustrated in the cut.

The stripe of applique patchwork is arranged up and down the center of a strip of velvet, which may be black, dark olive or any dull shade. The patches are cut in a variety of shapes, and are fastened to the velvet foundation with fancy stitches of many kinds in filoselle or chenille. One of the most attractive uses of a patchwork stripe like this is to throw it over a canvas covered summer chair.

Plainfield Notables.

Assembly George Kyte is an important factor in the material development of Fanwood. He knows what is going on in the political swim of the county, and is sway up in matters relating to real estate. The assemblyman is a big enough man to hold two elective offices at once, for he is a member of the Assembly as well as a Freeholder.

Postmaster Elias R. Pope, of Plainfield, is paying strict attention to the affairs of his post-office, and he finds time enough to help direct the affairs of a savings bank, an insurance business, a church and some other affairs of business. Mr. Pope has served the people of the Third Assembly District in the Legislature, but of course he eschews politics now, being a Government official.—New York World.

A Mad Dog.

A mad dog caused considerable excitement in the vicinity of St. Mary's church yesterday morning at about half-past eight o'clock. The rabid canine chased two women for some distance, but they escaped by running into the church and closing the doors after them. The dog was afterwards seized with a fit and later in the morning it was killed.

—The Borough Council will hold a meeting this evening at eight o'clock.

BISHOP JOHN F. HURST.

THE CHANCELLOR OF THE AMERICAN UNIVERSITY AT THE M. E. CHURCH.

Preaching at Both Morning and Evening Services. — His Morning Sermon on Faith Rich With Illustrations.

That most brilliant of women writers, Kate Field, of Washington, had a two-column article in the Sunday Herald in which occurred the following paragraph about Washington:

Across the lane, higher up the hill, is the old Bancroft place, superb in situation, commanding a view of the Capitol, monument, city and Potomac. Here might be built the noblest country houses in the world, and here should be the private residences of our Presidents. It is now owned by the Sharon estate. Beyond, to the southward, is the Town and Country Club, where members congregate for breakfasts, dinners, suppers, balls and hunts according to the season of the year. Still further south rise Wesley Heights, where $10,000,000 will be expended in building and equipping the American University, of which Bishop Hurst is Chancellor. On these beautiful heights some of Washington's best citizens intend to put up Summer homes.

It was this distinguished Bishop John F. Hurst of Washington, whom Dr. Carroll, after the preliminary devotions, introduced to preach the sermon at the Methodist church yesterday morning, before a large congregation, despite the sultry weather and the fact that so many are absent at the seaside Summering.

The Bishop took for his text the words from St. Luke, chapter xvi, 10 — "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."

These words, said he, do the work of a microscope. They are the words which Jesus said, not only of the little deeds but also of the great deeds done. They cover all there is in life and character. Before a large congregation, despite the sultry weather and the fact that so many are absent at the seaside Summering.

The Bishop took for his text the words from St. Luke, chapter xvi, 10 — "He that is faithful in that which is least is faithful also in much."

These words, said he, do the work of a microscope. They are the words which Jesus said, not only of the little deeds but also of the great deeds done. They cover all there is in life and character. In human life there is nothing small. Our lives are planned on a broad scale. Each part bears a close relation to the other. The Emperor of Germany a few days ago injured his foot, and he has to be still a few days in consequence. It is the same with the ordinary man. The whole of the body must suffer for an injury to a part of it. So much one depends on the other. So it is that the hand of a prince's child is looked upon as the hand to wield a destiny in years to come.

We may view in wonder the great Niagara, but more wonderful is the butterfly flitting over the fields, among the flowers, and by the streams, in search of its prey. This is because of the life it contains. So one human life is most wonderful of all.

The body may be weak and ungainly and crooked, but the soul within that body loves its life, as dearly as does the King on the throne his own life. So every life should be holy.

Now a life means a service. Every human being serves. The question is, who does it serve? It cannot serve two masters.

So, let us consider the question of service.

You will find people who are fanatics — out of touch with the times — misfits, as it were, but the soul within them is more than the age, or they may be antediluvians more suitable to life in ages long passed away. They seem in this life to have no good purpose to serve.

As you see happiness in the child's thoughtless eyes, as it plays among the flowers, or sees the running streams, so you can see in the drift of a man's mind the nature of his work.

In an old lady's diary I once saw these words she had written: "I cannot pass this way again. I must do my duty now." How beautiful the thought, for it told of a life of benevolence.

Bushnell once said—and I consider it among the best of his sayings—"Every man's life is a plan of God." Though we warp it, and twist it, and mar thereby its beauty, yet it, originally, was a plan of God.

When Lincoln was President we needed just such a man for the times, not a man of the times of Christianus, or Washington. We needed a Lincoln in 1861, and it was God's plan that he should last until 1865.

Now we are to look around and see what the world needs of us, and try and make the world a little richer because we are in it. I rejoice that the fields of usefulness are widening, and that we can do so much more than formerly. We can work with the rapidity of lightning. In China they still spend a lifetime carving a piece of iron. Time there is of no value.

When a year ago I was in London visiting St. Paul's, that masterpiece, and stood in the whispering gallery, I was filled with wonder, but the world to-day is one immense sounding gallery, and what you say goes resounding through the ages for good or evil.

Humboldt, when a boy, was one day wandering about the streets of Berlin with no definite object in view and, happening into the botanical gardens, saw in imagination a medieval tower there a palm-tree. He said nothing, but it awakened the thought in him that he would like to see the land it grew in. And he kept on thinking until he finally gave to the world that most beautiful of works—Cosmos. It was what God wanted of him. So we must keep thinking all the time that we may learn what God wants of us.

The world is in a continual state of combustion. It cannot be measured. So between each of the periods of ruins has been spanned by years but by good works.

It was Cavour's appeals which brought about a United Italy, a free church and a free State. The one man had done the work which God had intended him to do, and which he would be called to do.

Every new spiritual force has its power. When Christ said "He who is faithful in little things is faithful in much," He was looking down the vista of time.

When the new testament appeared the world seemed poorly prepared to receive it. Luther walked all the way to Rome to find out for himself the rottenness of the old state of things, and he walked back again and wrote the ninety-five theses. Then he nailed them to his church door. There was not a ripple. It took a long time to move the world. But eventually it rolled along the centuries so that now all may obtain the truth.

The element of purpose may sometimes be forgotten. We may be ignorant of our critical moments. We never know when we are deciding for the best. We may think we do. You remember a President spoke his mind freely a few years ago, and his words were telegraphed broadcast, and a few hours later the fact of his assassination. We cannot tell when our time has come.

You can also discover the great worker by the attention to incidentals.

Napoleon said God was with the biggest army. But Napoleon watched night and day, and gave the closest attention to the material with which his battles were to be won. Grant did the same, and see the slow and patient Raphael work out the details of the "Madonna and Child." See the care with which he has placed the tints on which he must have spent many months to secure just the proper shade.

And what is Genius after all but the ability to triumph over the commonplace.

Our happiness here and beyond depends upon our ability to select that which is best for us to do.

When Florence Nightingale selected her task in the Crimean war she reared for herself a monument that will live for all time. Likewise did Garibaldi when he thundered at the gates of Rome where the bells of Liberty had been silent a thousand years.

In being faithful in the path of duty men may fall on the way, but the path will be all the shorter to victory.

The world is a vast storehouse. We cannot use all its treasures. If we take only what gives us strength we will do well. Say no to that which is hurtful.

Ours is a question of duty. This duty leads us to become a helper in every good cause—to defend the unprotected and help the weak, and the best way to remove every obstacle is to do our duty in attention to the little things which our hands find to do. But the term "little things" must not be misunderstood. For what is a little thing to one, may be a great thing to another. A pebble may be as heavy to a child as a boulder to an elephant. So Benjamin West in his rough sketch, when a boy, of his sister, did as much work as ever was done by Michael Angelo. It is not the size of the motive. Whoever shall give to these little ones even a cup of water in Christ's name lays up for himself treasures in heaven.

Then there is a timely service. Sir Philip Sydney, wounded on the battlefield, made himself immortal because he gave his cup of water to another. And the woman who broke the box of alabaster for Jesus did a greater service than if Cæsar had offered a crown of gold.

When Phidias wrought out those figures at the Parthenon, though they were placed high above the gaze of the multitude, he nevertheless worked out with great care even the minutest detail. In time the figures fell and centuries rolled by before they were found, buried in the earth. They were removed to the British Museum, where they are erected on small pedestals. They are known as the Elgin Marbles, because it was Lord Elgin who secured them. When I saw them a year ago every part was carved with equal care. You ask, Why so much care, since they were to stand so high up in the temple? Well, if Phidias had been unfaithful we would probably not have prized his work as we do to-day. The ancient artist had this no doubt in mind: "The gods are looking down on me. I must not slight my work." So we must be faithful, not because what others may see, but because God is looking down upon us. "Thou God seest me." There is no final oblivion to our work. What does Paul say?

Every man's work shall be manifest. The fire will test it.

If we do our best, great will be our reward, for "he that is faithful in the least is faithful also in much."

Bishop Hurst preached a brief sermon in the evening to a large congregation, despite the oppressive hot weather.

There Was a Policeman Handy.

Policeman Sheridan of Church street was passing up Elizabeth street yesterday afternoon in plain clothes. Near Houston street he saw two Italians in a doorway quarrelling. One of them pulled a long stiletto and slashed the other across the cheek. Then he ran and Sheridan chased him.

In Houston street the Italian turned, razor in hand, and Sheridan knocked him down with his club. The prisoner was Filomano Meisini, and Vincenzo Tsolisco, who was cut, is his cousin. They were quarrelling about a woman, they say.

Died in the Asylum.

Michael O'Neill, a former resident of West Third street, died at the Morris Plains Insane Asylum last night. Deceased had been an inmate of the asylum for about five years having been removed by years but by good works.

It was Cavour's appeals which brought about a United Italy, a free church and a free State. The one man had done the work which God had intended him to do, and which he would be called to do.

BASE BALL.

THE CRESCENTS DEFEATED THE WEST ENDS SATURDAY AFTERNOON.

The Score was Seven to Six.—An Interesting Game Throughout. — Some Excitement.—Hammill's Good Pitching.—McIndoe's Home Run.—Other Features of the Game.

After two successive defeats the Crescent base ball team went to Somerville Saturday afternoon and defeated the West Ends of that place by a score of seven to six and on their own grounds too.

A large number of the Crescents' friends and admirers accompanied them and were overjoyed at their victory.

After the first inning, the game was a very interesting one throughout and the excitement ran high.

The West Ends went to the bat first and started off by batting out five runs. The Plainfielders were discouraged. They thought the game was to be a repetition of the two former ones. Harkins, the West Ends pitcher, succeeded in knocking the ball over the fence, netting a home run.

In the Crescents' half of the first inning they succeeded in making four runs. The Plainfield contingent were "wild" with enthusiasm. They began to see some hope for a victory and they shouted vigorously for the home team. The West Ends still led by one run, however, and it was not until the third inning that the Crescents tied the score.

Then it was nip and tuck for victory. Neither team made a run until the fourth inning, but in the fifth the West Ends again succeeded in securing the lead by one run. The Somerville contingent yelled.

They were not permitte l to hold the lead very long, however. Jones went to the bat and succeeded in making the initial base. Lafferty followed but fell victim to one of the West Ends on a fly ball. Keeler met a like fate. In the meantime Jones had succeed in stealing second base. With two men out it did not look as though the Crescents were going to score. But then McIndoe, the old reliable, stepped to the plate bat in hand. Someone in the audience yelled "over the fence Mac." The words were hardly out of his mouth when "Mac" hit the ball and it went sailing over the right field fence. Jones scored and McIndoe succeeded in making a home run, and gaining a lead of one run on the West Ends. Manager Green said it was one of "Mac's" holiday hits, and he knew when and how to make them.

Neither team scored after the fifth inning. In the eighth the game was stopped by a heavy rain storm which lasted fifteen minutes.

When the West Ends had been retired in the first half of the ninth and the Plainfielders had realized that the Crescents had won, they began cheering and never stopped until they reached the hotel where the home team were dining their citizen clothes.

Hammill pitched for the Crescents, and pitched well. He succeeded in striking out Moorehead, the West Ends's hort-stop, and the official scorer said that it was the first time he had been struck out this season. He felt very mad about it too, for he afterwards did all in his power to "rattle Hammell.

The score by innings was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
West Ends.....	5	0	0	0	1	0	0	0	0	—6

The Westfield base ball team were defeated Saturday afternoon by the Cuban Giants, colored, by a score of 8 to 4.

The Plainfield Silver Stars played a game of ball Saturday afternoon on the Crescent League grounds. Their opponents were the little Cuban Giants of Somerville. The latter team succeeded in defeating the home team by a score of 12 to 6.

A nine from Bayonne defeated the Plainfield Bicycle Club nine Saturday afternoon by a score of five to three. The game was played on the park avenue grounds.

FIGHTING FIRE.

The Head Must be Used as Well as Both of the Hands.

[From the New York World.]

Fire requires air; therefore, shut all doors and windows, says a scientific exchange. By this means fire may be confined to a single room for a sufficient period to enable the inmates to escape; but the fanning of the wind and the draught will instantly cause the flames to increase with extraordinary rapidity.

The most precious moments are at the commencement of a fire. In a room a table-cloth can be used to smother a large sheet of flame, and a cushion may serve to beat it out. The great point is presence of mind.

In all large houses buckets of water should be placed on every landing, a little salt being put in the water.

Always endeavor to attack the bed of a fire, if you can not extinguish a fire, first the window, and be sure and shut the door when making your retreat.

A wet silk handkerchief tied over the eyes and nose will make breathing possible in the midst of much smoke; a blanket well wet and wrapped around the body will enable a person to pass through a sheet of flame in comparative safety.

LEAGUE OF AMERICAN WHEELMEN

The Board of Officers of the New Jersey division of the League of American Wheelmen met a Asbury Park Saturday. Those present were: Chief Consul G. Carleton Brown, of Elizabeth; Vice-Consul H. A. Benedict, of Jersey City; Secretary and Treasurer G. C. Pennell, of Elizabeth; State Representatives G. H. Cain, of Trenton, and H. S. Tulpey, of Flemington; W. E. Sluit, of Passaic; J. H. Huners, of Edgewater Park; W. H. Stauffer, of Asbury Park; G. C. Tomale and T. F. Marsella, of Jersey City. The following clubs were represented: F. S. Bennett, of Ridgewood, the Bergen County Wheelmen; A. A. Pope, of Roselle, the Roselle Ramblers; Dr. Lyman Clark, of Linden, the Union County Roadsters; F. L. C. Martin, of Plainfield, the Plainfield "Bi" Club, and James F. Edge, the Asbury Park Wheelmen. These National delegates were present: Dr. T. N. Gray, of Orange; F. G. Wiese, of Bordentown, and G. H. Calu, of Trenton.

The executive business was transacted an amendment to the by-laws was adopted increasing the expenses allowed to delegates. The principal business was the discussion of a proposed amateur rule and the allowing of expenses to racing men. Final action was deferred. The following resolution was then unanimously adopted: "That the delegates should be requested to favor a rule allowing the actual and necessary living and traveling expenses of racing men while en route to and from and attending a race meeting."

The chief consul urged the league clubs to send delegates to the Hartford convention next month in order that New Jersey might be able to cast a large vote in the National body.

A proposition from the Asbury Park Athletic Association to have a bicycle tournament, with a series of prize races, at the Athletic grounds on Friday and Saturday, August 28 and 29, was discussed and it is probable that the meet will be held. After the meeting a banquet was tendered the visiting wheelmen.

American Girl of the Period (to her millionaire father)—Papa, please buy me a prince.

Americans should watch the course of the legal investigations that grow out of the railroad disaster in France. Railroad officials and employes in Europe are held to a much stricter accountability than they are in America. The outcome of the French trials may afford some object lessons to us in America on railroad accidents.

Considerable of a to-do is made over the fact that the Church of England from its various endowments and state taxes receives $20,000,000 annually. That is nothing. In America, where the churches do not depend on the state at all for their maintenance, the annual income of the various denominations from mere voluntary contributions amounts to $150,000,000. Our way is certainly best. A church that cannot be supported by the voluntary contributions of its members has no right to live and ought to die.

Will Bear Watching.

From time to time in the past few years men have suddenly and mysteriously disappeared from their homes. They have been in most cases prominent, trusted individuals, of the class whom a newspaper reporter with no faith in humanity has dubbed "the uprights," because the local journal always speaks of them as upright citizens.

When these "uprights" have vanished suddenly and inexplicably they have generally had a sum of money with them with which they were about to pay a debt, or else it was money belonging to some bank, orphan or widow, the upright holding it in trust. The prominent and respected citizen vanishes. The river is dragged for his body, the morgue is searched, but old upright's mortal remains are not found. He is dead mysteriously, that is plain.

There is a funeral sermon fitting his station and the widow puts on mourning. Six months elapse, perhaps a year. The widow is just beginning to think whether she may not begin to smile again; may not, indeed mingle a bit of lavender with the somber black of her weeds, when, lo! as suddenly as he vanished, old upright walks into his late home, not a spook or a mummy, but the real old chap. He is sick and penniless. He is always sick and penniless. He can never give any account of himself. The upright is a blank, a dead blank. Now, one would hate to be hard hearted and suspicious. But are not these reappearances with the past a blank getting rather frequent of late?

Why They Failed.

An interesting chapter has been published by the New York Press about why people fail in life. A number of the failures tell their own story. One man is a failure because he always wanted to study theology and the destiny of the human soul. He was so much interested in this that he found it impossible to become interested in anything that would serve to maintain the human body in comfort. This was unfortunate, as in a comparatively short time man becomes a soul without a body, and will have a chance to study out the great truths the mysteries our friend pines to know.

A woman taker failed because she married. She had an excellent place, was highly educated and capable and saved most of her salary, with a fair prospect of being rich in time. But she "thought she must marry," and she did. It does not appear that she particularly had any will attachment for the man she married, but she merely "thought she must marry." Now she has to go back to teaching again with two children to support, and no place for her that begins to compare with the one resigned when she thought marriage was the proper thing for a woman on general principles. Marriage was the cause of her failure, she says.

It is sufficiently plain why certain other writers failed. One actress confessedly is left behind because she was not very good tempered and was "fussy." Good temper is one of the first requisites of success. Nobody can get on without it. Others went down through sheer want of gumption. One man who ought now to have been a millionaire failed because a railroad company "insisted" that he should buy a million dollars' worth property for the railroad in his own name. He was foolish enough to do so, and as he might have known beforehand, was held responsible for the payment. Of course it broke him up.

Yet another person owes his failure in life to the fact that he was over anxious to accumulate property and mortgaged what he had to buy more. Then a crash came and doubled him all up. Want of pluck and perseverance seems to be a prime cause of failure too. Many have failed through a bad business connection or otherwise appear to give down and believe there is nothing more for them in life. There is no more fatal mistake. There is a good living in the world for every human being if only he has the dauntless spirit that can never be downed. Having that he can always succeed at last, no matter how old he is or how often he has failed.

THIS YACHT CAPSIZED

And Six Persons Sank to Rise No More.

FOUR DROWNED IN WISCONSIN.

A Series of Fatalities on the Water—The Most Harrowing One Was on Dorchester Bay Near Boston—The Weather Was Calm, but the Yacht Went Over.

BOSTON, Aug. 10.—A sad accident occurred on Dorchester bay Sunday afternoon by which six persons lost their lives. The yacht Nay, owned and sailed by Captain J. M. Burke, started on a cruise about the bay in the afternoon, having on board four men and five children. There was but a light breeze blowing, but yachtsmen say the boat was overcrowded. In tacking the vessel keeled over too far, and the entire party was thrown into the water. Skipper Burke, aged forty-six, was one of the victims.

The others who were lost are Thaddeus Manthon, aged thirty; Nellie Burke, aged nine; James Burke, aged eight; Thomas Carmody, aged eleven; Annie Carmody, aged thirteen. Vincent Burke, aged fourteen; Fergus Churchill, aged thirty, and Thomas Ballard, aged thirty, succeeded in clinging to the overturned boat, from which they were taken by a passing yacht when they were almost exhausted. The bodies of the victims have all been recovered.

He Was Too Late.

Special Officer Barry, of the bathhouse, saw the accident and put off in a boat. He was too late to assist in the rescue, but he carried a long boathook with him and pulled up the bodies of the drowned persons one after the other. Burke was found standing erect in the water. The bodies were hurried ashore, but medical aid failed to save any of them. Burke is a widower. He had his entire family with him. He was an uncle of the two Carmody children. The other men of the party were unmarried.

Four Drowned in Lake Pewaukee.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 10.—Four young people, children of prominent business men, were drowned at Lake Pewaukee, thirty miles west, Sunday. They were out in a small boat with three other young people. A squall struck the boat, capsizing it. The men were utterly unable and almost immediately, leaving seven people struggling in the water. The names of the drowned are Albert and Emma Barth, Martha Kindling and Clara Siegler, their ages ranging from fifteen to twenty. Their fathers are Louis Kindling, Peter Barth and Leopold Siegler.

Pushed from a Boat.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—John Kurkfeller was pushed out of a boat on the Delaware river and was drowned. He was with a fishing party, and it is claimed by the others that he was intoxicated and became unmanageable. Hoyt, one of the party, tried to quiet him, and in the struggle that followed Kurkfeller fell overboard and was drowned. Hoyt was held pending an investigation.

EX-EXAMINER DREW'S DEFENSE.

He Believes the Opinion Did Not Affect Lacey's Auction.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—Ex-Bank Examiner Drew has forwarded to Secretary Foster a statement of his work in connection with the Keystone bank. The statement is in vindication of himself and deals with the action of Controller Lacey in requesting his resignation, owing to his omission in his January report of the condition of the bank of the Penn Mutual loan. Mr. Drew says this omission was purely an oversight.

Mr. Drew comments upon the fact that the unsatisfactory condition of the Keystone and Spring Garden banks was called to the attention of the controller in 1890. That proves believes that the omission was largely supplied by the letter transmitting it, or could have been logically inferred from other information in the controller's office, and was simply without practical effect in governing the department in its action toward the bank in question.

THE STANDARD'S EDITOR DEAD.

William T. Croasdale's Life Ended by Peritonitis.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—William T. Croasdale, the editor of the Standard and chairman of the national committee of the Single Tax league, died Sunday afternoon at his home, Sullivan county, N. Y., of peritonitis, after an illness of eight days. Mr. Croasdale was forty-eight years old and a bachelor. He was a native of Delaware, and was universally withdrawn from society. He was the founder of Every Evening, a daily paper in Wilmington.

For a time he conducted a daily paper in Baltimore, and afterward was an editorial writer on the New York Star. In 1886 he took an interest in the mayoralty campaign of New York in behalf of Henry George, and ever since that time he has been an active, and for most of the time a prominent, representative of the single tax, or Henry George, movement.

To Blow Up Chilian Cruisers.

LONDON, Aug. 10.—The Chilian Legation has been apprised of a conspiracy to destroy the two Chilian ironclads President Pinto and Errasuzaria. The sum of £3,000 was offered to any of the marine officer in the service of the Chilian government if he would undertake to blow up the Errasuzaria. While the vessel was in the harbor of Toulon several attempts were made to approach her. Similar attempts were made at Toulon against the Errasuaria.

The International Postal Union.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Captain Brooks, superintendent of foreign mail, has returned from Vienna, where he was in attendance as a delegate to the international postal convention. Delegates were present from every civilized country in the world except the Transvaal and Natal. Captain Brooks believes that by the time the next convention, which will occur in 1897, is held that every civilized country on the globe will be in the union.

Mexicans Fight a Duel.

CITY OF MEXICO, Aug. 10.—A duel was fought at Piedad between Colonels Francisco Nevis and Juan Blanco. In ten rounds Blanco was wounded in the right and in the throat and was forced to yield by a thrust in the side.

George Jones' Physicians Hopeless.

LEWISTON, Me., Aug. 10.—The condition of George Jones, editor of the New York Times, remains unchanged. His physicians seem to have lost confidence in his recovery.

THE DESPERADO ESCAPED.

Hunted by Hundreds of Men in Vain at Columbus Grove, O.

COLUMBUS GROVE, O., Aug. 10.—It now looks as though the unknown desperado who entered the Exchange bank with a revolver in each hand, shot Cashier Maple twice, fatally wounded William Vandemark, a farmer who came into the bank, stole $1,300 in greenbacks and fled, has eluded his pursuers.

After the chase was given up Saturday night the man stopped with some laborers building a pipe line about two miles east of Beaver Dam and at the crossing of the Lake Erie railroad at a point one mile west of Bluffton. He went into a pasture and stole a black mare at 10 a. m. Sunday four miles east of Bluffton. He followed a farmer and his family home who had been attending a show and with his ready revolver compelled them to get him a horse.

The stolen horse was tied to the branches of a tree by a rope halter during his stay at this place and an attempt was made to buy a buggy and harness or even a bridle from the farmer, but the attempt was in vain. It is highly probable that the hunted man has ridden his horse into Findlay, jumped a train and is by this time far away. Hundreds of men were in the chase Sunday where there were ten Saturday and the time was all spent beating about the bushes from which the bird had flown. Vandemark is dead and his friends are vowing vengeance.

The county offers $500 reward, municipality $250 and the bank $200, besides this a subscription paper has been started among the people, which, in connection with the official amount offered, aggregates considerably above a thousand dollars. Policemen from the forces of neighboring cities and several experienced detectives have joined in the chase.

THE EMPEROR IN PERIL.

It Is Said That His Rheumatism May Seek the Heart.

PARIS, Aug. 10.—The Gaulois publishes today a dispatch from Berlin which says: "William the Second has arrived at Kiel on board the Hohenzollern, which at present he is unable to leave. The emperor's condition is much more grave than has been admitted, for not only does he suffer from his knee joint and his ear trouble, but terribly severe rheumatic pains show lately call him down in his chair and will compel him to remain utterly inactive for at least a fortnight.

"The doctors say that if the emperor continues to refuse to submit himself to the treatment prescribed, the rheumatism must soon assume a more serious aspect and attack the heart.

"For the moment he is quite unable to undertake any work, and it is thought that his stay at Kiel may benefit him if he keeps to his room during the day. But they fear that his ardent temperament will not resign itself to enforced repose.

"These thoughts are all the more reasonable as the emperor does not husband his resources and will surely continue his series of fatiguing journeys and duties as the first sign of improvement he begins to be felt."

President Polk Forbids the Fusion.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 10.—On Friday a combination was made between the Farmers' Alliance and the anti-lottery wing of the Democratic party, by which the Alliance was to support the governor and join the fight against the lottery company. The combination has been broken up by a letter from President Polk, of the Alliance, who declares that the combination is against the constitution of the order.

Governor Abbett Praises Life Savers.

ASBURY PARK, Aug. 10.—There was an unusually interesting service at the Asbury Park beach auditorium. The topic was the "United States Life Saving Service." Governor Abbett spoke eloquently of the heroic service of the men, and said the government should recognize the good work of the life saving service by granting pensions to its veterans.

Killed by a Policeman.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 10.—Joseph McAvoy, a laborer, living at the boarding house of Mrs. Wells, on Passaic street, was shot and killed on Saturday night by Policeman Patrick J. Smith, of the Brooklyn Bridge squad, and received injuries from the effects of which he died in half an hour. The men met at Mrs. Wells' house and quarreled.

Trouble Brewing in China.

SHANGHAI, June 25.—Grave disorders have broken out in the principal open ports of the Yangtse-Kiang. The numerous missionaries, and among them the all powerful Kolagkwei, have thrown themselves heart and soul into a movement directed toward the overthrow of the present dynasty.

The Water Tricycle a Success.

TUSCOLA, Ill., Aug. 10.—About 1,000 people witnessed the first trial of Professor Claude Baum's aquacycle at the Montezuma health resort on the Wabash river. He says after years of failure and many set backs he is convinced that a wheel has been found that will run on water with almost as much speed as bicycles on land.

Two Thousand Hear Moody.

NORTHFIELD, Mass., Aug. 10.—A big meeting was present at the last day of the ninth conference of Christian Workers at Northfield seminary. Mr. Moody preached at 4 p. m. to 2,000 people, who crowded Recitation hall. Mr. Moody's subject was "Obedience."

The President's Sunday.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 10.—President Harrison did not attend divine services Sunday. Postmaster General Wanamaker and Rev. Dr. Chambers conducted Presbyterian services at Carlton Hall. George W. Boyd dined with President Harrison and Mr. Clarkson last evening.

Young Arnold's Fatal Aim.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 10.—Thirteen-year-old Edward Sixsmith, of 1,010 South Third street, dead from a pistol shot wound in the stomach. The shot was fired by fifteen-year-old Alfred Arnold, of 273 Chestnut street. Arnold playfully pointed the weapon at Sixsmith and shot him.

Lowell May Never Recover.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Aug. 10.—James Russell Lowell, the eminent poet, diplomat and scholar, is dangerously ill at his residence in this city, and it is felt that he can never recover from the general breaking down of his vital forces which has now set in.

Harrison and Blaine Invited.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The President will go to West Virginia in the autumn as guest of the Hon. Stephen B. Elkins at the club house on Cheat mountain, near Beverly. Secretary Blaine has been invited to join the party, which will spend the time deer hunting.

M'CLURE'S FINAL SHOT.

He Pours a Broadside Into John G. Nicolay.

WITNESSES LIVING AND DEAD.

The Philadelphia Editor Quotes Judge Pettis, General Butler, General Cameron and Others to Prove Himself in the Right in the Hamlin Controversy.

PHILADELPHIA, Pa., Aug. 10.—Colonel A. K. McClure, of the Philadelphia Times, has fired a final broadside in the controversy with Mr. Nicolay, Lincoln's secretary and biographer, about the president's attitude toward Vice President Hamlin, pending the Republican nomination in 1864. The statement made by The Times and disputed by Mr. Nicolay was that Mr. Lincoln had favored the renomination of Andrew Johnson over Mr. Hamlin.

His Public Duty.

Colonel McClure says: "We deem it a public duty to settle the issue by the direct testimony of the men now living, or the written testimony of the dead, who were in the confidence of Mr. Lincoln and acted in accord with his convictions of public duty."

Letters and statements from prominent actors in the nominations of 1864, including an apparent confession by Mr. Hamlin himself are given.

Judge Pettis' Testimony.

Hon. S. Newton Pettis, who was an active supporter of Lincoln at the conventions of 1860 and 1864, writes McClure from Meadville, Pa., under date of July 30, 1891, as follows:

On the morning of the meeting of the Baltimore convention in 1864, which nominated Mr. Lincoln, and immediately before leaving for Baltimore I called upon Mr. Lincoln in his study and stated that I called especially to ask him whom he desired for the second place on the vice president. He leaned forward and in a low but distinct tone of voice said, "Governor Johnson, of Tennessee."

In March, 1889, Judge Pettis casually mentioned Lincoln's remark to Mr. Hamlin, who wrote him a letter, and said he was sorry Pettis had told him of what Lincoln said. Later Pettis saw Colonel McClure's statement that Lincoln had made the same remark to him. McClure read and inclosed the clipping to Mr. Hamlin, who replied as follows:

Mr. Hamlin's Letter.

BANGOR, Me., Sept. 13, 1889.

To Hon. S. N. PETTIS, Meadville, Pa.:

MY DEAR SIR—Have been from home for several days and did not get your letter and news paper slip until last evening. Hence the delay in my reply.

When I met and conferred with you in Washington, and you told me of your interview with Mr. L. (Lincoln), I had not the slightest doubt of your correctness. The remark that I made was caused wholly because you made certain statements to me which I had not seen, but which I did not believe until made positive by you. I was really sorry to be disabused. Hence it was truly a relief to me that you said and the information you gave me.

Mr. L. (Lincoln) evidently became somewhat restive at his selection and changed his position. That is all I care to say. If we ever shall meet again I may say something more to you. I will write no more. Yours, very truly,

H. HAMLIN

What General Butler Says.

Under date of July 14, 1891, General B. F. Butler writes McClure that in March, 1864, General Cameron came to him, saying that he was sent by Lincoln Cameron said:

The President, as you know, intends to be a candidate for re-election, and as his friends intimate that Mr. Hamlin is no longer to be a candidate for vice president, and as he is from New England, the President thinks that his place should be filled by some one from that section; and aside from reasons of personal friendship which would make it pleasant to have you with him, he believes that by being the first prominent Democrat who volunteered for the war, your candidature would add strength to the ticket, especially with the war Democrats, and he hopes that you will allow your friends to co-operate with his to place you in that position.

Mr. Butler refused to be a candidate.

General Cameron's Evidence.

The following is an extract from an interview with General Cameron, taken by James R. Young, now executive clerk of the state, in 1873, revised by Cameron himself and published in the New York Herald in the summer of that year:

In the spring of 1864, when it was determined to run Mr. Lincoln for a second term, it was the desire of Lincoln and also of Stanton, who was the one man of the cabinet upon whom Lincoln thoroughly depended, that Butler should run on the ticket with him as the candidate for vice president. I was called into consultation and heartily indorsed the scheme. Accordingly Lincoln sent me on a mission to Fort Monroe to see General Butler.

Hamlin Never Had a Chance.

The full details of my interview with General Cameron, taken by Colonel Shaw a few years before his death, was carefully revised by Cameron himself:

Mr. Lincoln thought, as did I that Mr. Hamlin's position during the four years of his administration made it advisable to have a new name on the ticket. Mr. Lincoln seemed to regret General Butler's decision, and afterward the name of Andrew Johnson was suggested and accepted. In my judgment, Mr. Hamlin never had a serious chance to become the vice presidential candidate after Mr. Lincoln's renomination was assured.

Johnson's Secretary Talks.

Ben C. Truman, private secretary to Andrew Johnson in 1864, writes Colonel McClure under date of July 25, 1891, that he saw all of Johnson's mail, and knows it to be a fact that Mr. Lincoln desired the nomination of Johnson for vice president, that Brownlow and Maynard went to Baltimore at request of Lincoln and Johnson to promote the nomination, and that Lincoln, on the whole, preferred Johnson first and Holt next.

Jones Speaks for Raymond.

Henry J. Raymond was editor of the New York Times in 1864, of which George Jones was then, as now, the chief owner, and their relations were of the most confidential character. Raymond was the liaison officer and the master spirit of the convention of 1864. Raymond has long since joined the great majority, but Jones thus incisively speaks for him:

CAPE ELIZABETH, Me., July 17, 1891.

MY DEAR COLONEL MCCLURE—Your letter has been forwarded to me here. I have read the contention about the V. Presidency and do not hesitate to say that you are absolutely in the right in your statement of the facts.

GEORGE JONES.

Found Dead in Bed.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Ignatius W. Ketchum, sixty-two years old, a prominent wholesale grocer of this city, was found dead by his wife. Heart disease killed him.

Enquirer Held for Trial.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Charles Enquirer, the insurance collector, charged with assaulting a number of young girls, has been held for trial. Bail was fixed at $25,000.

BOTH KICKED TO DEATH.

Father and Son Dead in a Vicious Horse's Stall.

BROOKLYN, Aug. 10.—John Unlack, aged forty, a teamster employed by the People's Gas Light company, and his four-year-old son Thomas were murdered to death by a vicious horse in the company's stables in the morning. The boy had a great fondness for the horse, especially as the father was in the habit of taking him every Sunday and allowing him to sit on the animal's back. The little fellow had looked forward to these occasions with great anticipation.

After Unlack and his wife had returned from attending mass at St. Patrick's church he started with his little son for the stables. There he met John Mahoney, superintendent of the stables; Patrick McGee and Robert Newell. He told Mahoney that he intended giving his boy his usual ride. He had scarcely entered the stable when the men were startled by a child's voice, crying, "Oh, papa!" Mahoney and McGee entered the stall, and were astonished to see Unlack's feet sticking from the stall.

They then saw he was lying face downward, with his child crushed in his right. The horse had evidently kicked him as he was in the act of lifting the child upon his back. Picking up the boy, McGee saw that he was a mother. Life had department he gasped feebly and expired. The grief of the mother was terrible to witness, and when she realized that her husband had not returned, she darted from the house to the stable with her dead infant clasped to her breast. She arrived there as Unlack's dead body, crushed by the cruel hoofs, was carried to one of the empty stalls.

The doubly afflicted mother and widow gave a heartrending shriek as she caught sight of her dead husband, and fell in a faint. The doctors fear that the terrible accident that carried away her husband and son may also deprive her of her reason.

STABBED BY A WOMAN.

Fatal Affray on the Street in Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—A white man named Frank Hetzelberger was fatally stabbed by Ida Howard, a notorious colored woman. Hetzelberger and two companions were watching the Howard woman and two colored men play "Craps." When the woman took some offense at some remark dropped by Hetzelberger. Some words passed between the parties.

Finally the white man walked away, stopping at the corner of the next street to talk with some acquaintances. While they were standing there the colored woman ran up and stabbed Hetzelberger in the breast, directly over the heart, producing a wound which caused his death in twenty minutes. The woman ran away, but was subsequently captured by the police.

Shot His Father Dead.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 10.—George F. Nieman was shot and instantly killed by his son, Charles F. Nieman, aged twenty years, at their home, 18 Gorman street. The son saw his father strike Mrs. Nieman, who is a cripple, and shot his father dead. The young man surrendered himself. He is assistant secretary of the Cincinnati Insurance company.

Shot Dead by Bill Arp's Nephew.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 10.—Frank Arp, a nephew of the original Bill Arp, shot two men to death near the state line in Fannin county. Arp had a claim against William Bramlett for $100, and suits were attached. This produced a quarrel, during which Arp shot Bramlett through the heart. Bramlett's brother then interfered. Arp shot him through the chest.

Save the Negro from His Friends.

SAVANNAH, Aug. 10.—Rev. Dr. Oaks, of Manchester, N. H., preached at the Twenty-third street Baptist church on "Shall We Move the Negro?" He was decidedly opposed to any movement for the removal of the negro, who, he said, was a good citizen and would be all right if he was only left alone by his too numerous friends.

Shot by His Friend.

NEW YORK, Aug. 10.—Arnold Hartman, a twenty-one-year-old butcher of 218 Day street, Chicago, was accidentally shot last night at 10 o'clock on Forsyth street by John L. Calsino Klee, and will probably die. The young men were shooting at a cat and while Hartman was trying to take the weapon from his friend's hand it exploded.

They Will All Be on the Fair.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—Advices from the northern provinces of Brazil, from Mexico and from Guatemala indicate that all these countries will have notable exhibits at the World's fair.

The Chilians to Arbitrate.

MADRID, Aug. 10.—The Imparcial says that Balmaceda and the Chilian insurgents have appealed to Spain to arbitrate, in order to put an end to the war.

KAWEAH COLONISTS MAD

They Will Tell America of Their Alleged Wrongs.

AT ODDS WITH SECRETARY NOBLE.

He Thinks the California Bellamy Settlement Should Move, but the Members Claim They Are Living on Their Own Lands—No Resistance to the Soldiers.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10.—The trouble between the interior department and the people of the so called Bellamy colony, at Kaweah, Cal., arising from various interpretations placed on a recent act of congress reserving certain lands in California, is likely to bear fruit of some sort, for the colonists have determined to carry the matter into congress and into the political arena. The act that has placed the department and the colonists at swords' points reserved lands which include those of the colony, and among the restraining clauses is one which reads as follows: "Provided, however, that nothing in this act shall be construed as in anywise affecting the grant of lands made to the state of California or as affecting any bona fide entry of land made within the limits above described under any law of the United States prior to the approval of this act."

What the Colonists Claim.

The colonists claim that this proviso secures them title to their occupy, but Secretary Noble places a different interpretation on it and thinks the colonists should vacate. Agent Cauldwell, of the general land office, secured the conviction of the trustees of the colony under the act and has stopped them from cutting timber on the lands.

He also attempted to oust a colonist from land within the reservation which he (the colonist) leased from a man named Atwell. The Atwell estate, it is claimed by the colonists, is private property, and the lessee has as much right to cut timber on it as the owner has. Complaint has been made by colonists to President Harrison of the alleged overzealous interference of Agent Cauldwell in endeavoring to cause the military to prevent the colonists from working on the land.

It Was No Wonder.

In speaking of the controversy, a prominent member of the colony here said it was no wonder Secretary Noble and the general land commissioner placed different constructions on the congressional act when the boundaries of the reservation are found when traced on the map to lack six miles of joining. He says that Agent Cauldwell is devoting all his powers to the special work of constructing the act to mean that meg who have made bona fide entries under declaratory act to the passing of this act shall be driven off as trespassers.

No Resistance to the Military.

The published statement that the colonists have defied the military is denied by this gentleman. "The truth is," he said, "the colonists stood on their rights as American citizens and refused to recognize the use of the federal troops to dispossess men from their own private property in time of peace and depended on injunction of some civil court. This the officers could not give and they desisted. That was all the defiance there was. The people of California are getting weary of this sort of thing, and it will be odd if they do not speak pretty loud about it at the ballot box next election.

What Kaweah Will Do.

"We intend to make this infamous piece of monopoly legislation and persecution known to more millions of people of the United States than there are scores that know it at present. We mean to ascertain whether American citizens unarmed who fought to save the Union—have any rights left that those in high places are bound to respect. We are going to find out who runs this government, and whether out of the millions of acres of vacant land in all this wide continent there cannot be one little corner allowed where men and women may get together if they wish to try and live honest lives. It will not pay the government to make martyrs of the Kaweah colonists. This injustice may be the little cloud no bigger than a man's hand that will prove the precursor of a political deluge."

St. Michael's Dedicated at Long Branch.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 10.—St. Michael's Roman Catholic church at Long Branch was dedicated Sunday by Bishop O'Farrell, of Toronto. Right Rev. John J. Keane, D. D., preached the dedication sermon. The building cost upward of $60,000, and a considerable part of this amount has been subscribed by A. J. Drexel, George W. Childs, General Thomas T. Eckert, Daniel Dougherty, John A. McCall, Colonel D. M. Hildreth and the Messrs. George and Jeremiah Curtis. A magnificent altar has been presented to the church by Banker Drexel as a memorial to his brother.

The Wreck of the El Dorado.

KEY WEST, Fla., Aug. 10.—Chief Officer Boyd, of the Morgan line steamer El Dorado, has arrived on the revenue cutter McLean. He reports that she struck an unknown rock bearing west-southwest by Hen and Chickens shoals, Great Bahama banks. It was found necessary to beach her twelve miles west of the lenses. If the weather holds good the El Dorado will be saved. The McLean has gone to her assistance.

Murdered in a Cell.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—John McCloskey and George Barclay were arrested for drunkenness and placed in one cell. They had been there but a short time when they quarreled, and the turnkey upon going to the cell found McCloskey unconscious. He died without regaining consciousness. Barclay admitted having struck McCloskey.

Alleged White Cape Sund.

INDIANAPOLIS, Aug. 10.—John W. Abbott and Edward Benson, both of whom were handled roughly by alleged white caps in the suburb of Haughville, have each brought suit for damages against fifteen citizens. Each of the plaintiffs asks for $1,000 damages against every defendant.

Serious Accident at a Fire.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 10.—Fire damaged the Cochlenail factory $5,000. During the progress of the fire Frank Harkins was overcome by the fumes of ammonia and fell down stairs, causing concussion of the brain.

A Woman Shot Dead.

HOUSTON, Aug. 10.—Mrs. Charles Roemer was waiting on a number of negroes in her husband's store and detected one of them digging into the money drawer. When she tried to seize his hand he shot her dead.

William F. Round, secretary of the Prison association, has received permission from Superintendent Lathrop to investigate Clinton prison, and has gone to Dannemora, N. Y., for that purpose.

Young Cooley Attacks His Wife.

CHICAGO, Aug. 10.—A desperate attack on his wife in the Palmer House by W. K. Cooley, of New Orleans, has unearthed a sensational story of domestic life. Mr. Cooley is the nephew of Judge Cooley, of Ann Arbor, Mich., chairman of the interstate commerce commission. Mrs. Cooley is the divorced wife of Mark Elias, a well known bookmaker. A few months ago young Cooley and his wife came to Chicago. The couple quarreled daily, and Cooley, it is said, struck his wife to the floor because of his wife's refusal to give him money.

Eloped with a Handsome Clerk.

Shot While Resisting Arrest.

THE DESPERATE STRUGGLE OF THE GREEKS AT THERMOPYLÆ.

It Was a Forlorn Hope Undertaken by Leonidas in Order to Humble the Persians and Stimulate the Courage of His Own People.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

LEONIDAS and his 300 Spartans at the pass of Thermopylæ have for more than two thousand years furnished the world's brightest example of martial valor.

It was no sudden emergency that placed the heroic band in desperate straits, although there were accidental causes bearing upon the occurrence and determining its character. It was a forlorn hope, undertaken after grave deliberation, as part of a general plan of resisting to the death enormous odds brought against the Grecian nations by the power ful monarch of the east, Xerxes.

For seven years the Persians made warlike preparations to overrun Greece in revenge for the defeat by the Athenians at Marathon, and because the conquest of Greece would carry with it all Europe and give Persia a dominion from the rising to the setting sun. The whole empire of the east was levied upon for troops, animals, provisions, ships and general supplies.

In autumn, 481 B. C., Xerxes set out from the eastern limits of Asia with a host estimated at from 1,000,000 to 2,500,000 fighting men, including the crews of over 1,000 war ships. The Greek spies who were caught in his camps were not put to death according to custom, but were allowed to see the vastness of the Persian armament and report to tell their people about it, in the belief that the puny states of the little peninsula would be overawed by the intelligence, and would submit without a blow to the summons of the invading monarch.

The land force comprised the soldiers of forty-six different nations, each contingent having its own mode of costume and armament. But few of them were armed and equipped as well as the Greeks. Many nations carried swords or scythes only, and others had simply stakes fire hardened at the point. Among the irregular troops there were many fierce bands whose methods and whose armament were in the last degree barbarous. For instance, a nomadic tribe of horsemen, 8,000 strong, carried ropes, which they used after the fashion of the American lasso, to lassoo a foeman and then drag him from the field to be dismembered at leisure with a dagger, the only weapon used by these wild riders of the desert. Another nation, Ethiopians, from the head of the Nile, had their bodies painted half red and half white, were the lions of wild beasts of the jungle, and carried javelins and bows with stone tipped arrows.

In order to feed his vast army Xerxes ordered immense quantities of stores to be gathered at points on the line of march through eastern Asia, and the provinces subject to his rule were compelled to contribute subsistence for the whole force, which, with non-combatants, is computed at from 3,000,000 to 5,000,000 souls. Any lack of war material or supplies on the part of the people was cruelly punished. On one occasion a father of five sons pleaded that the eldest might be spared while the other four joined the corralling army. Xerxes caused the son whose exemption had been asked to be put to death, and his body severed into two parts and displayed along the route of march of the soldiers as an example of the inexorable laws of subjection that would be enforced.

In order to enter Greece by the paths most favorable for his gigantic enterprise Xerxes bridged the Hellespont with a structure of boats a mile long, and dug a ship canal for his fleet across the isthmus to avoid the stormy cape off Mount Athos. In Macedon and Thessaly he found willing allies, and in the course of his magnificent and awe inspiring progress southward the smaller tribes yielded their territory and offered their allegiance. What else was there to do when the Persians could pack a province with solid columns, covering every foot of the territory, and then have an army remaining over to pursue and punish the fleeing inhabitants?

The men of Athens and of Sparta were ruling spirits among those southern Greeks who proposed to bid Xerxes come and take the earth and water which he demanded should be sent to him as a symbol of subjection.

The mountain chain bisecting the Grecian peninsula from northwest to southeast, and approaching the sea on the east at the head of the channel of Negropont, was passable for an army at one point only, as was supposed—namely, by the pass of Thermopylæ, where the northern slope of the mountain crowded so close to the edge of the gulf that in two places, about one mile apart, there was room for but a single wheel track. It happened that this region was the northern limit of the territory loyal to the Greek idea of independence, and Xerxes arrayed so late his army and his fleet meet there and work in unison in fighting the opposition that was to be expected on land and sea.

The Greeks, meeting by lot in an assemblage of deputies from the several tribes, resolved to defend Thermopylæ and the adjoining straits and separate island of Eubœa from the mainland. The Spartan king, Leonidas, was chosen commander of the land force, and another Spartan to lead the fleet. A select band of Spartans, numbering 300, went with the king, and the choice fell upon those who could best be spared from the state; that is, fathers men who had sons to succeed them at home. Other northern nations sent quotas to swell the forces to about 4,000 men. The nations to protect the pass also contributed quotas, but those who inhabited the mountainous district along the margin of the gulf, sending 1,600 men.

But in spite of the grave crisis the Greek army under Leonidas was simply an advance guard rushing to arms to make a display of valor and serve as a nucleus for the cohorts that were to come from the rear, expecting that the enemy, who invaders back, after the mouth had passed sacred to the Olympian and other gods, and during which military operations were prohibited. It was the same superstition that had kept the Spartans from the field of Marathon when the skeptical Athenians won their glorious victory over the host of Darius, B. C. 491. The Athenians were all serving on the war ships in the campaign against Xerxes, and so the devoted Spartans and their neighbors and the contingents furnished by the northern tribes constituted the whole available land force to cope with the invaders, unless he chose to wait for the fleet and the foe pass and let loose the whole body of Greek warriors. This he did not do.

When Leonidas reached the famous pass at Thermopylæ, which the southern Greeks believed to be an impregnable position if manned by resolute men, he learned that another pass, over the mountain westward, led to the rear of Thermopylæ. A Persian army was in front of the eastern gate of Thermopylæ and his fleet was approaching the waters of the Malic gulf. A panic seized the southern Greeks when they learned that there were two passes to guard and saw so few men to meet the vast Persian armament, and they wanted to retreat and establish a new line on the narrow peninsula between the Corinth and the Saronic gulfs. The northern tribes, or nations, who would thus be left an easy prey for Xerxes, debated this plan with pleas so eloquent that Leonidas forbade the retreat and sent envoys to all the cities to hurry up re-enforcements.

The Phocians undertook to guard the secret mountain pass with their contingent of 1,000 men, and Leonidas awaited the attack. Xerxes, after getting over his astonishment at the audacity of the handful of men disputing his march, tried to bribe the Spartan king by offering to make him ruler of Greece. This being rejected with scorn, he next demanded the surrender of the arms in the hands of the Greeks, to which their leader replied, "Come and take them." This the Persian king promptly attempted, by no means belittling the task, however, for on hearing the attack with his choice regular troops, the fellows who burned to avenge their terrible defeat at Marathon ten years before. Even these proved no match for the defenders, who were heavily armed and bucklered, and formed close ranks of steady, practiced fighters.

The loss to the Persians was enormous, but the men in the rear ranks were spurred forward with scourges, and though again and again repulsed, kept it up for two days. On the second day a favorite body of household troops of the king, called the Immortals, because their number of 10,000 were always maintained to the maximum, were sent in under the personal direction of Xerxes. They, too, were cut to pieces and driven back by the Greeks, who constantly supplied fresh men to defend the narrow pass.

On the second night a citizen of the region occupied by the Persians revealed to Xerxes the secret mountain path, and a detachment of soldiers crossed over and at daybreak attacked the Phocians in the pass in a shower of arrows. The guard, more scared by the surprising attack than harmed by the missiles, fled down the mountain, and the Persians pushed on to the rear of Leonidas. Warning reached the defenders of the pass through scouts, and opinion was divided whether to stay and fight it out or retreat. The Spartans were firm, their king holding that his own honor and that of Sparta was at stake, and that the pass they had been sent to defend must not be yielded to an enemy. The warriors of two tribes, 700 Thespians and 400 Thebans, volunteered to remain, and the others retired.

Leonidas told his men to take some nourishment, promising them that they should sup with Pluto that night, and then marched them outside the pass to assail the advance guard of the Persians. So furious was the onslaught that many of Xerxes soldiers threw themselves into the sea to escape the deadly Grecian spears, and the Persian officers resorted to the lash to keep the soldiers up to the rack. In the heat of the hand to hand struggle Leonidas was killed, and a desperate combat was waged around his body, until finally the remnant of his band drew it back along the pass behind a cross wall that effectually blocked up the way, and there calmly awaited the end. The Persian detachment on the mountain side quickly closed in on the rear and cut off all means of escape. Then the work of slaughter began. The Greeks fought to the last like wild beasts at bay, and when their spears, swords and daggers were lost or broken, struggled with nature's weapons so long as the power remained.

The Greek total is placed by the historians of the time at 4,000, and this number includes the slaves attending the warriors. In the last struggle 1,400 perished, and out of the 7,000 total that took part during the previous days of course some were killed. The Persian loss is estimated at 20,000, a number fairly proportioned to the circumstances, where one Greek was fully equal to ten of the assailants when it came to close quarters.

On the day of the last struggle at Thermopylæ the Grecian fleet retreated before the Persian, and it required another campaign to arrest the career of the mighty invader. This was effectually done during the year in the naval battle of Salamis, off the shores of Attica.

The defense of the pass proved a useless sacrifice, though possibly the moral effect of the example had the entire Greek forces been on hand to cover the Thermopylæ gates and the mountain path as well. But a people who worshiped martial valor doubtless found some compensation in being able to hand down to later generations the wonderful story of the Spartans. Whose words they commemorated on the spot by this legend, "Stranger, tell to the Lacedæmonians that we lie here in obedience to their orders."

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

CAN HENS TALK?

An Anecdote About the Conduct of Two Hens and a Brood of Chicks.

A gentlemen had among his Spanish hens a mother with nine chickens. This had at length sickened with comb disease. Her chicks were only about four weeks old and could scratch but little for themselves. The weak mother would go around with them, putting down her bill to show where they were to scratch. She soon became too weak for this, and the gentleman says: "Soon after we noticed all of her chicks standing around her in a sort of half circle with their eyes looking piteously toward her, perching mournfully, she in turn giving faint chirps. At this all the other fowls came around her.

and each seemed to have something to say. After about fifteen minutes had been spent in this manner, a healthy young Dominick hen that was laying eggs every day and had shown no signs of desiring to set, stepped out from among the rest and took her position by the side of the sick hen.

"Upon this the mother hen gave a few faint chirps which all the chickens answered with a chirp. Then the mother looked toward the Dominick and gave two or three clucks, to which the Dominick responded for the first time with "click! cluck!" and the chickens answered with "peep! peep!" in concert, and all rushed up to the Dominick. The mother hen gave two or three farewell chirps, and the new mother walked off with the brood, clucking and scratching as vigorously for them as if she had herself hatched the brood. The Dominick and brood never went near the mother again. She died the next day, and the Dominick protected and faithfully raised the chicks committed to her care. This seemed to those who witnessed it as genuine a case of giving away children before death as we witness among human kind. These creatures must have communicated with each other about the matter, judging from their actions, and they say that the "dickied bird" knows more than words" was true in this case.

A Little Girl with Two Faces.

I heard a strange thing the other day, says a writer in The Examiner. It was of a little girl who had two faces. When she is dressed up in her best clothes, when some friends are expected to come to tea, or when she is going out with her mother to call on some neighbors, she looks so bright and sweet and good that you would like to kiss her. With a nice white dress on, and perhaps a blue sash and pretty little shoes, she expects her mother's friends will say: "What a little darling!" or, "What a sweet face, let me kiss it!" And so she always has a nice smile on her face, and when she is spoken to she says, "Yes, ma'am," "No, ma'am," when she ought, and "Thank you," very sweetly, when anything is given her.

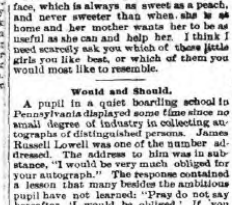
But, do you know, when she is alone with her mother and no company is expected, she does not look at all like the same little girl. If she cannot have what she would like, or do just what she wishes, she will pout and scream and cry, and no one would ever think of kissing her then.

I also know a little girl who has only one face, which is always as sweet as a peach, and never sweeter than when she is so busy at home and her mother wants her to be as useful as she can and help her. I think I need scarcely ask you which of these little girls you like best, or which of them you would most like to resemble.

Would and Should.

A pupil in a quiet boarding school in Pennsylvania displayed some time since no small degree of industry in collecting autographs of distinguished persons. James Russell Lowell was one of the number addressed. The address to him was in substance, "I would be very much obliged for your autograph." The response contained a lesson that many besides the ambitious pupil have not learned: "Pray do not say hereafter, 'I would be obliged.' If you would be obliged, be obliged and be done with it. Say, 'I should be obliged,' and oblige, yours truly, James Russell Lowell."

The Wild Young Grass Elves.



GALLOP GAY AND CANTER AND TROT.

"A horse to ride! a horse to ride!"
The wild young grass elves cried.
"Here are some threads a spider spun.
You take one and I'll take one."
Over their little grassy manes
They threw these dainty bridle reins.
And they rode with dewdrop bits and with spurs,
But without saddles, the grasshoppers.
They rode all over the garden plot,
Gallop gay, and canter and trot.
"You never see such a thing, you say?
Well, it's under the clover they ride that way.
—Wide Awake.

New Version of the Spider and the Fly.

"Will you walk into my parlor?" said the spider to the fly;
"Well, hardly," said the insect, as he winked the other eye;
"Your parlor has an entrance, but of exit it is shy.
So I'll stay outside in safety and remain a little fly."

A Chocolate Mold.

A nice dessert dish of chocolate is made by creaming together two ounces of butter with four ounces of sugar, the yolks of three eggs and three ounces of grated chocolate, adding last the well beaten whites of the eggs. Bake in a buttered mold.

Mrs. Jacob Laing, Miss Lizzie Laing, Mrs. Geo. M. Fletcher, Miss Georgia Corpeil, and Master Allan Laing of West Fourth street left this morning for an extended visit at Quakertown, Hunterdon county.

As reported in THE NEWS of yesterday Michael O'Neill died at the Morris Plains Insane Asylum. Undertaker Casey went to Morris Plains yesterday and last evening brought the remains of the deceased to this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Stephen Mangam, of Brooklyn, N. Y., have returned to their home after a short but pleasant visit with their brother-in-law, Mr. Samuel Taynor, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield. Mr. and Mrs. Mangam are Mrs. Taynor's father and mother.

Patrick McCourt, the young man who was so seriously injured by the premature discharge of the old one-horn cannon on the afternoon of July 4th, and who has been confined to the Muhlenberg Hospital ever since, expects to be discharged from that institution next Saturday.

Clarkson R. Hope, died at his home on West Fourth street last evening after a lingering illness. Deceased was a son of Special Policeman Stephen R. Hope. For a number of years he was the foreman of Gazelle Engine Company No. 1. He was a member of the Exempt Firemen's Association of the Firemen's Relief Association. During his lifetime Mr. Hope took a great deal of interest in fire matters and his former associates will greatly mourn his loss. A wife and several children survive him.

Mr. George Rickert has accepted the position as driver for Gazelle Engine Company No. 1. Mr. Rickert formerly drove for the same Company, but for several years past he has been travelling in the West. Some years ago, while he was responding to an alarm of fire, he neglected to strap himself in the seat and in going over a water-break in the road-way he was thrown off and badly injured. The members of the Company are pleased to see him back in his old position, as although he is a first-class horseman, and they know that when he is handling the reins the steamer will get to a fire as quick as any of the others.

Old Trinity's gravedigger was at work in the churchyard, New York, yesterday, opening the tomb of Wynand VanZandt to receive the remains to-day of Thaddeus Avery VanZandt, who died in this city, Saturday, at the age of sixty-three. The Van Zandt tomb is directly south of the southern portal of old Trinity, and is in the shadow of the monument erected to the memory of Commodore James Lawrence, of the United States Navy. There are now twenty-four members of the old Knickerbocker family of Van Zandt occupying niches in the vault, and to-day the twenty fifth member will be entered therein. The last time the vault was open was last May, when Wynand Van Zandt's oldest son was interred. The burial was attended by members of the family only.

YESTERDAY'S HEAT.

The Thermometer Nearly 100 Degrees.

It is said that yesterday was the hottest tenth of August in twenty years. It was as hot as the hottest day this Summer, June 13th, when the thermometer registered 96 degrees at three o'clock, with 38 degrees of humidity in the atmosphere. There were several cases of sunstroke in this vicinity yesterday, and everybody one met was complaining of the heat.

Two gangs of men were employed by the Plainfield Water Supply Company in digging up the streets for the water mains, while working on Park avenue, near Fourth street, at about half-past two o'clock yesterday afternoon were overcome by the heat. A physician attended them and they were taken to their homes in a wagon. Mr. Randolph Marsh, a mason, engaged working on a building in the course of construction on West Front street, was also overcome by the heat and was taken to his home where a physician attended him.

Another mason whose name we were unable to ascertain was also overcome by the heat during the afternoon.

A Runaway on Liberty Street.

A horse belonging to Lawrence Paoli became frightened on Liberty street this morning and ran away. A young man named Shirley, who was driving at the time, was thrown out of the wagon, but escaped serious injury. The frightened animal was caught by two men before it succeeded in doing much damage.

WAS IT AN INCENDIARY FIRE.

A Number of Children Claim that it Was.

About 5.45 o'clock yesterday afternoon an alarm of fire was sounded from box No. 54, which is situated at the corner of Fifth and Liberty streets. The fire proved to be in a barn owned by Mr. Charles Arnold and situated in the rear of his butcher shop on Liberty street, near Second. The department responded promptly but the building, which was a frame structure, was entirely consumed. The live stock was saved. Mr. Arnold's loss will not exceed $300. It is partially covered by insurance.

The building is situated in close proximity to the railroad track and it was thought that it took fire from a locomotive spark. Chief Doane discredits that idea, as he says the barn was covered with corrugated iron and that it would be impossible for it to be fired in that way.

A number of children who were playing near the barn claim that they saw a man come out of it a few minutes before the fire was discovered. The matter will be investigated.

Cricket Saturday.

The St. Georges Cricket Club of this city played against the crack team of the Cosmopolitan Cricket Club, of New York, on the grounds of the latter at Clifton, N. J., Saturday, as briefly stated in THE NEWS. The Cosmo's felt pretty blue when six of their wickets fell for 14 runs, five of them being their strongest batters, but they brightened up when the professional, McCarthy, coupled up with Capt. Jackson, they proving a stone wall to our bowlers. Jackson handled the bat in fine style. The bowling of Hendry and Stansfield and the batting of Ardern and Stansfield kept the score on the right side of the home club. The St. George's were invited to join the Metropolitan District Cricket League next season, and are considering the matter. The score appended:

Saturday's Races.

There were two interesting trotting events on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue Saturday afternoon.

The first was beat Jl. Fosher's "Dynamite" and M. Quinn's "Kitty Pilot." "Dynamite" won both heats. Time, 2:38 and 2:38¼.

The second event was between John H. Hayes' "Andy" and Dr. Herbert's colt "Andy" won both heats. Time, 2:46¾ and 2:46¾.

An Incorrigible Boy.

Mrs. Willobaw of Liberty street went before City Judge Codington yesterday and complained that her son Fred, was incorrigible and that she wanted him arrested. Yesterday afternoon Policeman McCue arrested Fred, and locked him up in the station-house. This morning he was arraigned before City Judge Codington and after being severely reprimanded his honor suspended sentence.

North Plainfield's Bonded Indebtedness.

A few days ago Collector H. N. Spencer, of North Plainfield, paid over to Treasurer W. C. Smith, of the Township Committee, a check from the collection of back taxes with which he paid the last of the North Plainfield bonded indebtedness, better known as the Johnston Drive bonds.

Burglars at Work.

Some thief endeavored to effect an entrance into Mr. John Bremer's tailoring establishment on Somerset street, North Plainfield. The mid-night visitor broke two panes of glass in a rear window, but evidently was frightened off before he accomplished his mission.

No Quorum Again.

Last night was the time set for the adjourned meeting of the borough Council, but as a quorum was not present, it was decided to call it for Friday evening next. Councilmen Buckle, Hegeman and Hummer were the only members present.

STOLE A HEADLIGHT.

A Fireman's Queer Theft Sunday Near New Market.

Frank Tolan, a Newark man, was jailed by Justice Mitchell at New Brunswick for a peculiar theft. He had stolen the lamp and inside fixtures of a locomotive headlight, from an engine up on the Lehigh Valley Railroad near New Market. Detective Willis, of the company, arrested the man and found the stolen property in his possession.

Tolan was on a fishing expedition when arrested. He had a lunch basket, well filled with dainty food, wore a gold watch, had $31 on his person and carried a good rod and fishing tackle. Indeed, he appeared like a well-to-do person, who would have no object in stealing and making such a theft as that which he is charged with. It is believed that he is not altogether sane, and his relatives in Newark will be notified, so that they can come to his assistance.

An examination yesterday confirmed the belief that Tolan is out of his mind. He had with him three flags that he had also taken from the railroad, and which he proposed to give to his children "to play soldiers with." He was hunting for the depot when found. Tolan is a silversmith, employed by C. M. Lockwood, and lives at 56 Orchard street, Newark.

The man's father-in-law went to New Brunswick yesterday afternoon, and gave bail for him and took him home. He had been missing since early Saturday, and his people were much worried over his disappearance. Tolan, while talking, lost his voice to-day in the middle of a sentence. He is probably suffering from some nervous affection.

—Mr. Lipenhoff, the Russian missionary, will deliver a lecture on Russia and the Russians in Warren Union Mission on Tuesday evening, August 11th, at eight p. m., under the auspices of the Young People's Christian Endeavor Society. A full attendance is desired.

—Great preparations are being made for the Thirtieth Regiment Reunion in Somerville on Wednesday, August 26th. A gentleman from New York has been engaged to superintend the clam bake, which is to be no small affair, as it is estimated that 4,000 people will be present if the weather is fine.

—Among the applications for patents at the Patent Office, is one for what is termed a "baby carrier." It consists of a finest sort of an arrangement which, is thrown over the mother's shoulder, and when the baby is placed in it, it spreads out like a hammock, and takes all the weight from the mother's arms.

—A Jerseyman predicts that the coming Winter will be long and cold, because the nut crop is immense. Some people have a habit in such a case of saying the winter that they forgot to wait and see what the goose bone has to say. Nothing will be positively known about next Winter's freezes and breezes until the goose bone comes on with its readings.

—The Somerset Democrat says that George Bragg, of White House Station, who has been employed by Holly Brothers, milk dealers in New York, disappeared on the 1st inst., and has not yet been found. A sales-book and the proceeds of some bills he had collected for the firm appear to have gone with George, and these also refuse to reveal their hiding place.

—New Jersey is getting so many doctors that the public have a right to expect cheaper pills and less "nasty" tasting medicine before a great while. We read that forty-four of the fifty-one candidates who recently presented themselves at Trenton for examination for licenses to practice as physicians in this State were successful in answering a sufficient number of questions for them to pass.—Hunterdon County Democrat.

—George Foster, the three-year-old son of George Foster, was saved from drowning at Rahway, a few days ago through the bravery of his grandmother, who is 60 years old. The child fell into a deep pool in the Rahway river, and was discovered by the grandmother, motionless at the bottom. The old lady jumped into the river and succeeded in bringing the boy to the surface. Both were pulled into a passing boat, and the boy was resuscitated.

"WHAT ARE YOU DOING."

The Thief Got Away With $11.—Another Robbery at Dunellen.

A burglar entered the house of Isaac S. Giddis, of Dunellen, between three and four o'clock Sunday morning. He made his way to Mr. Giddis's room, where he began to ransack the bureau drawers. Giddis, supposing it was his son, called out:

"What are you doing?"

Then the thief darted from the room, followed by Mr. Giddis. He succeed in getting out of doors and away before he was identified. He got only $11, which he took from Mrs. Giddis's dress pocket.

A little later the house of John Hubbard, on South avenue, was entered, presumably by the same man. While searching the pockets of dresses in the Misses Hubbard's room he was discovered by Miss Susie Hubbard. The girl screamed and awakened her sister, who added her screams to the uproar. The thief, thus disturbed, ran out of the room, carrying the dresses with him. The plucky young women sprang from their bed and followed him. They reached the outside door almost as soon as the thief. The intruder slammed the door in their faces, and held it shut until he had emptied the pockets of the dresses.

NEW JERSEY VETERINARIANS.

Annual Meeting of the State Society Held and Officers Elected.

The New Jersey State Veterinary Society held its annual meeting at the White Hall Hotel, New Brunswick, Saturday, with President Dr. E. L. Loblein in the chair. Officers for the ensuing year were elected as follows: President, Dr. Hopkins, of Newark; Vice-President, Dr. E. H. Lowe, of Paterson; Secretary, Dr. Sellars, of Camden; Treasurer, Dr. McIntosh, of Morristown.

The alleged troubles caused by the agents of the Bureau of Animal Industry in the State, particularly in Hudson county, were taken up. Complaints have reached the society that these agents have caused great hardship and loss to small cattle-owners by quarantining or killing their cattle upon the allegation that they have pleuro-pneumonia, when, in the opinion of veterinarians there has been no pleuro-pneumonia of consequence in this State in the past two years.

After a thorough discussion of the matter it was resolved that a committee be appointed to investigate and report to a special meeting. The meeting concluded with a banquet.

Of Interest to Lawyers.

The following case, just decided will be of interest to lawyers and others:

Order on the sheriff to show cause—In the case of Godown vs. Holcombe, et. al. —An order was obtained some days ago on the sheriff to advertise and sell the defendant's goods and chattels, under the execution, or show cause on the first day of August, before his Honor Judge Scudder, at the State House, in Trenton, why he does not sell, etc. On the return day, counsel for the Sheriff argued that he could not sell, and why he did not sell him. There was a prior execution in favor of defendant's wife, and in an Illinois case it had been decided that the Sheriff would be held liable to the first execution creditor for the property, if he did sell. His honor concluded that the present case did not come under Illinois law, but New Jersey law, and therefore made the order absolute, with costs.

An Effort to Avoid Fraud.

The new ruling of the post office department in regard to the delivery of pension letters is of interest to a large number of residents in this vicinity. It is very explicit and directs that a letter addressed to a pensioner must not be delivered to any person in whose care it may be, or any other person. In such instances must the letters of pensioners sent from the pension office, or from any United States pension agency, be delivered to any attorney, claim agent, broker or any other person. This is done to avoid if possible the perpetration of fraud, which has been frequent of late years in the pension department.

Weather Bureau Forecasts.

The Weather Bureau forecasts of the weather until eight o'clock p. m. Tuesday are as follows: For the District of Columbia, Eastern Pennsylvania and Maryland, continued warm and fair weather, except local showers in the mountain districts of Pennsylvania and Maryland in the evening; southerly winds. For Delaware, New Jersey and Eastern New York, continued warm, south-westerly winds and generally fair weather For Massachusetts, Rhode Island, Connecticut and Vermont, continued warm, south westerly winds; fair weather.

A Runaway on Madison Avenue.

A horse belonging to Charles Taynor, of Chatham street, North Plainfield, became frightened on Madison avenue at about half-past five o'clock last evening and ran away. The wagon to which it was attached contained several barrels of wood and that was strewn promiscuously along the streets. The animal was caught by Constable Force before it succeeded in doing much damage.

Rogers Bros. say that the papers had not been out over an hour when ladies came to buy the $6.00 shoe, they are selling at $3.75. When people see their adv., they know it is true. They have about one hundred pairs left, and about seventy-five pairs of the Oxford ties. Look at their advertisement. ,

CROPS IN JERSEY.

Corn, Potatoes, Garden Truck and Fruits Look Well.

The observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report that during the week ending Friday, Aug. 7, the rainfall has been below the weekly average, except in the counties of Warren, Mercer, Union and Essex, where it was above the weekly average. The temperature and sunshine were also deficient, cool and cloudy weather prevailing during during the greater portion of the week.

These conditions, however, were not unfavorable to the growth of crops, although late vine truck, melons and tomatoes were hindered somewhat in maturing. Corn all over the State is reported as having made a good growth, is earing well and developing fast. This crop may now be considered as promising, both in stalk and grain. Potatoes are yielding well in the Southern and Southern middle, and fairly well in remaining counties. In Middlesex, owing to the dry spells which prevailed during the Spring months, the yield will hardly exceed 150 bushels per acre.

Early fruits and vine truck in the southern counties are yielding so abundantly that prices have fallen. Potatoes now sell from 40 to 75 cents per barrel and tomatoes from 30 to 35 cents per crate. The market is simply glutted.

Orchard fruit, except peaches and quinces, continue most promising in all the districts. In the vicinity of Hammonton Bartlett pears were never better, and the Concord and Vineland and Egg Harbor City the grape crop continues to be in good condition.

A SIMPLE CONTRIVANCE.

Amusement and Instruction Combined at Very Slight Cost.

The mother of a large and enterprising family gives us the following suggestion: The children had no end of fun as well as profit last Summer with a water glass, a very simple contrivance, which they took with them on all their aquatic excursions, and which they found particularly delightful while bathing in still water. The idea was suggested by a friend who had been a great deal in the West Indies, where they use these glasses continually. Our little machine was an ordinary tin pail, one pint and a half feet square, open at the top, with a clear bottom of plate glass and with a handle for convenience. Any carpenter can make such a contrivance.

By sinking the glass below the rufled surface of the water the bottom, with all its growth of strange vegetable life and the innumerable queer aquatic creatures, can be as distinctly seen as through the glass of an aquarium, and this, too, at a very considerable depth. The West Indies use these glasses, as they carry out the same principle by having a glass panel set in their flat-bottomed pleasure boats. This protected by a sliding panel of wood when not in use. The effects must be very beautiful in those tropical regions, where the gorgeous coloring of the "flowers of the sea" rival those of the flora of our element, and where the pure white sand of the bottom gives a wonderful radiance and light.

State Notes.

Warren Wilson, a May's Landing lad, aged ten years, killed a pine snake on Friday, which measured six feet three inches in length.

A number of boys at Elmer, Salem county, have been bitten by a dog supposed to be mad, and grave fears are entertained about them. Several dogs have also been bitten.

Michael Mannion, of 230 Railroad avenue, Jersey City, quarrelled with his wife over the care of the children yesday and finally struck her with some sharp instrument over the nose. The blow broke the bridge of the nose and injured her otherwise. He was held for trial.

St. Michael's new Roman Catholic church, at the north side of Takanassee Lake, Long Branch, was dedicated yesterday morning by the Right Rev. M. J. O'Farrell, Bishop of the Diocese of Trenton. The Rt. Rev. Dr. John N. Keane, of the Catholic University, Washington, preached the dedication sermon. One thousand cottagers and hotel guests were in attendance. The church is the finest Roman Catholic edifice on the coast. It cost about $60,000.

Burglars broke into the store of S. T. White, at Atlantic Highlands, early yesterday morning and blew open a new safe containing over $700 in money and checks, and made good their escape. They were handled in a similar manner have been experts, for they had two sets of doors to bore through and force open. The thieves helped themselves to cigars and choice goods, and carried away a large quantity. None of the neighbors heard the explosion, nor did the two private watchmen on the beat hear or see anything of the affair until the discovery was made by Mr. White. The robbers forced an entrance in the rear of the building.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS

During the past month it has been discovered that there is such a thing as "July insomnia," and it has been named accordingly. But no doctor discovered how to cure it.

The ships of the new navy now under construction will be finished months before they were expected to be. Cruiser No. 12, the Pirate, is already well under way in building, and the contract for her mate, Cruiser No. 13, has likewise been awarded to the Cramps at Philadelphia. "Six such ships could exterminate the commerce of any country," says Secretary Tracy.

All over the country editors will watch with attention the result of the trial of Charles O'Conor Hennessey, of the New York Evening News, for the publication of the details of the execution of four criminals by electricity. The law of New York says such details shall not be printed by the newspapers. The news papers, on the other hand, claim that such a law is an unwarrantable interference with the liberty of the press, therefore unconstitutional.

The Real English People.

While the London Times is expressing its fear that the British literary style may be demoralized by the American copyright law, and while our English cousins are constantly casting it into our teeth that we do not use good language, and have moreover ruined the spelling of our native tongue by going back to original Latin in such words as "labor," "ardor," etc., instead of jugging in a "u," in imitation of the French, and spelling them "labour" and "ardour," it may not be amiss to recall what Gladstone said about the real English speaking majority. It is a cardinal doctrine of our republic that the majority shall rule. If this is to hold good then it is the United States that should lay down the law as to what is good English, or otherwise, and not England.

Here is what Gladstone wrote in 1889:

A hundred years ago the English speaking population of America amounted to 3,000,000. It now amounts to 65,000,000, and we are told, with every appearances of probability, that in another century it will amount to 200,000,000. Under these circumstances I wish to recognize the right of America to be considered as being, relatively, as large, and even more so to a certain extent—for we have not in our small islands yet quite touched 40,000,000—I wish to recognize the prospective and approaching right of America to be the great organ of the powerful English tongue.

Condolences for Canada.

The people of the United States send their sincere pity and sympathy here with to their fellowmen across the Canadian line. Canadians have been for many years making an awful example of the United States as a government full of all corruption and rottenness. The Canadians prided themselves on their purity, the unity of blood, and the morals. They were honest people over there, they were, and couldn't abear the thought of how the politicians and government contractors in the Union were fleecing the poor people.

Well, such stupendous frauds have recently been unearthed in the Dominion government departments as would make the cheeks of a brass monument turn pale. It is doubtful whether any record since that made by Boss Tweed a quarter of a century ago in New York can show anything equal to the Canadian frauds that have been perpetrated under the eminently respectable, high toned and "loyal" Conservative party of Canada. Sir John Macdonald himself knew of them. He himself used to say that corruption "and lots of it" was the only way to lubricate the wheels of government in the Dominion. The fact is, there is considerable human nature in Canada.

Sir Hector Langevin, the minister of public works, accepted a testimonial of $22,000 from government employes, office seekers and contractors, especially the contractors. They in turn took it out of the people of Canada, and a debt of fifty-six dollars for every man, woman and child in the Dominion is the result. This includes both the provincial and the Dominion debt.

A firm of contractors was in the secrets of this fine old Conservative government. It is interesting to know that one of the members of the firm was our own American Murphy, ex-excise commissioner from New York city, who left that place under unpleasant circumstances, and does not feel that it would be healthful for him to return. To this firm the honest Conservative officials tipped the wink when railroads, docks or public buildings were to be erected. They made their bids therefore lower than anybody else and got contracts in every case. Then, after they got a contract, "blunders" would be discovered in the specifications and new ones had to be made, which forever was required. Part of to the contractors, part, it is charged, to government officers themselves, and what was left to the famous "regular fund," a sum of money kept constantly on hand to keep the Conservative party in power. These were the government methods in vogue under that fine old statesman, Sir John Macdonald, who used to warn Canadians against the rascally United States.

WASN'T IT HOT, THOUGH

The Whole North Sweltered and Perspired.

TIPS FROM MANY THERMOMETERS.

New York Suffered from the Hottest Aug., 10 She Has Known in Twenty Years—Connecticut Streams Very Low. Heat Drives Several Persons Insane.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The mercury Monday reached 97½, and the day was the hottest 10th of August in twenty years. It was as hot as the hottest day this summer. June 15, when the mercury reached 96 degrees, and to-day is about the same. Those whose minds were affected went mad. Old James McHugh, who lives at No. 534 West Twenty-sixth street, was taken to the pavilion for the insane at Bellevue Hospital before the sun was well up. He has not been well for some time, and the heat set him crazy. Charles Weil, a German, hailing from Bridgeport, Conn., broke out after he boarded a New Haven train at Bridgeport in the morning. He, all of a sudden, went on the rear platform and pointed a revolver at Brakeman Frederick Stillman when he asked Weil to go inside.

He shouted Wildly.

He shouted wildly and incoherently, and it was only with the greatest difficulty that the train hands could restrain him. When the train reached the Grand Central depot Weil was turned over to a policeman and Police Justice Murray committed him for examination as to his sanity. Edward E. Gowing, of 234 East Seventy-fifth street, went to Bellevue from a police court too. He had been erratic for a few days, but became so violent yesterday that his wife was afraid of her life.

A Slaughter of the Innocents.

Such weather will cause a slaughter of the innocents. It requires no prophet to say that the number of deaths reported today will be something enormous.

One hundred and twenty-one deaths were reported to the bureau of vital statistics up to noon yesterday, 120 on Sunday, and on Saturday 110.

A Wave of Mosquitoes.

Worse than a hot wave in August, more terrible than a blizzard in March is the wave of mosquitoes that has settled down upon and engulfed this devoted city and every place round about it. Originally from the New Jersey meadows and marshes these blood sucking pests have flourished and multiplied in the heat and humidity of the past few days.

At Providence It Was Ninety-two.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 11.—At three p. m. the thermometer was at ninety-two degrees in the shade at the city engineer's office.

Ninety-six at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 11.—The heat here at the time o'clock was ninety-six in the shade.

Fears for Minnesota Wheat.

NORTHFIELD, Minn., Aug. 11.—The last four days have been days of terrible heat, the thermometer registering ninety-five to 110 in the shade. Great alarm is felt as to the hard wheat crop. It is feared that the too rapid ripening will make the entire yield an off grade.

Fruit and Grain Damaged.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Aug. 11.—The severe storm of wind and rain did extensive damage to fruit and grain. The fall of rain for the past forty-eight hours has been the heaviest ever known. Corn and oats standing were beaten down.

It Was a Scorcher.

BRIDGEPORT, Conn., Aug. 11.—The mercury stood at 94 here and the heat was almost unbearable. The lack of water made the terror of the heat all the greater. The Pequonnock river is shallow and the mains and dams are being repaired.

Connecticut Rivers Very Low.

PLAINFIELD, Conn., Aug. 11.—The weather here is the hottest in years and the drought is something startling. All late crops are burning up in the ground, and early ones have ripened by the drought so quickly that they are badly dwarfed. The rivers, ponds and other mill streams are lower than for years.

Ashland, Jewett City, Clayville, Elmville, Central Village and other places have been compelled to stop their mills for want of water. All through the valley of the Yantic, Quinnebaugh and Shetucket rivers mills are idle. Pachaug lake, that covers 14,000 acres, is nearly dry.

Sunstruck in Pittsburg.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 11.—A middle Aged woman nearly fainted while overcome in the Pittsburg market house by heat at 10 o'clock. She died one hour later. She is supposed to be a Mrs. Wilson, of Washington, Pa.

He Shot Two Policemen.

CHILLICOTHE, O. Aug. 11.—George Duhlmeyer while drunk began beating his wife. Policemen Hall and Von Kennel attempted to arrest Duhlmeyer and both were shot by him. Hall's wounds are considered fatal, while Von Kennel is but slightly hurt. The latter shot Duhlmeyer in the leg before he could subdue him.

Americans Safe in Hayti.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—The Herald correspondent at Port au Prince, Hayti, says that there is absolutely no truth in the report that Americans are in fear of assassination in the Black Republic. Another revolution is imminent. It is believed Minister Douglass resigned because the Haytians objected to his color.

Columbus Relics Duly Free.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Acting Secretary Nettleton has directed that certain articles—relics of Columbus—intended for exhibition at the World's fair and ultimately to be turned over to the United States shall be admitted duty free.

Held for the Montezuma Disaster.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Tobin and Conlin, conductor and engineer respectively on the freight train in the West Shore disaster at Montezuma, have been held to await the action of the grand jury.

San Salvador's Seizure.

SAN SALVADOR, Aug. 11.—The government says it seized the Yankee steamship City of Panama under the same circumstances which the United States have applied in the case of the Itata.

Over the Cliff to Death.

LOCKPORT, N. Y., Aug. 11.—Charles Van Wilke, aged twelve years, son of James Van Wilke, fell over the high bank of the Niagara river just near the mills and was dashed to death on rocks, 120 feet below.

WELCOME TO PALMER.

The New Commander Receives a Rousing Reception.

ALBANY, Aug. 11.—Commander in Chief John Palmer received a rousing welcome on his arrival here from the west last night. All of the G. A. R. posts and Sons of Veterans and many other organizations of the city turned out to do him honor. On the arrival of his train at 7:45 he was immediately escorted to Harmanus Bleecker hall. The streets were profusely decorated, and the entire line of parade was lighted brilliantly with red fires and fireworks. At the hall Captain Blasse welcomed the commander on behalf of the G. A. R. and also the chairman of the common council welcomed him on behalf of the city government.

Governor Hill then gave him a most cordial welcome on behalf of the state. He spoke of the G. A. R. as a grand organization. He felt proud to be in a position to offer greeting to an honored member and one of its most faithful servants. He had always been pleased to co-operate with him in securing assistance to such a worthy organization. Commander Palmer made an appropriate reply.

BALFOUR'S PLEA FOR IRELAND.

His Ideas Concerning Her Local Government Must Rule.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—In his speech at Plymouth Chief Secretary Balfour outlined the ideas of Irish local government which the government proposed to ensure. He said he had heard that the view expressed by Mr. Morley that it was a small home rule bill. He argued that local government should not be introduced into Ireland for two reasons—the first, a sentimental one, because it had already been given to England and Scotland; the second, because it had been repeatedly promised to Ireland.

It would be madness to allow councils to administer the funds of any class not represented in such councils by a controlling voice. Mr. Balfour exonerated his opponents from the charge of obstructing his measures for the benefit of Ireland.

No Hope for Drew.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—In answer to an inquiry, Cassey, of the Currency, Lacey said in reference to Bank Examiner Drew's letter to Secretary Foster; "Mr. Drew has been treated with entire fairness and consideration. He was heard in his own defense by letter and in person." He has deservedly lost the confidence of the department and the public, and his usefulness as a national bank examiner is at an end."

Levy Charged with Fraud.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Moses S. Levy, of Levy Brothers & Co., who recently failed for several hundred thousand dollars, has been arrested charged with grand larceny by Butterfield & Co. and the Assabet Manufacturing company. They claim among other things that the firm paid to Samuel Levy, a relative, $100,000, and that he was not a creditor.

Stole Over $26,000 from Denver.

DENVER, Aug. 11.—The committee investigating the office of city treasurer reports that the city was defrauded of $26,148.45 by the individual members of the Scully Bonner Place. The report is said to implicate every member of the old city administration except ex-Mayor Londoner. The report will be placed in the hands of the grand jury.

Legislated Out of Office.

PROVIDENCE, Aug. 11.—The World's fair bill—Senator Holden's—legislated themselves out of office. A bill was passed increasing the appropriation from $10,000 to $25,000, but the clause requiring the appointment of members of the board within thirty days was retained from the old bill, thus necessitating the reappointment of the board.

The Union Pacific Syndicate Scheme.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Union Pacific stock was shaky on the Stock Exchange owing to a report that a syndicate composed of directors of the road and bankers would guarantee necessary funds for five years, dropped 1½ per cent. yesterday because of a well authenticated report that the syndicate project had fallen through.

Looking for Bardsley's $923,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—A meeting of council's investigating committee is being held this afternoon at 3 o'clock. The mayor's experts will be the chief and, perhaps, only witnesses. The committee is also trying to find out what became of the $923,000 which Mr. Bardsley said he deposited in the Keystone National bank.

To Test the Eight-Hour Law.

OMAHA, Aug. 11.—Guy C. Barton, president of the Omaha and Grant smelter, has been arrested charged with violating the eight-hour law. He will receive a jail sentence and apply to the supreme court for a writ of habeas corpus on the ground that the law is unconstitutional. This will be made a test case.

Pizarro's Body Removed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—At Lima, Peru, the remains of Francisco Pizarro, who led the conquest of Peru, were removed from a vault under the altar of the cathedral to the chapel of the viceroys in the same building. The body was admirably preserved, although it is 336 years since Pizarro died.

To Pay $1,000,000 for a Site.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 11.—President McLeod, of the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company, has concluded the negotiations for the settlement in the market companies at Twelfth and Market streets, and will pay $1,000,000 for the site.

The Fatal Results of a Fit.

BEDFORD, Pa., Aug. 11.—Jacob May, a prominent farmer, living eight miles from here, who was subject to fits, was found in the house with a lantern, was taken with a fit and fell to the floor. The lantern exploded, burning the house and the unfortunate man.

A Bradford Physician's Suicide.

BRADFORD, Pa., Aug. 11.—Dr. T. H. Stewart, a prominent physician of this city, shot himself in the temple with a revolver at 4 o'clock. The dead man was about seventy-five years old. He leaves a widow and two children at Erie. Ill health and despondency caused the act.

She Cannot Marry the Prince.

PARIS, Aug. 11.—Mlle. Vacaresco, who is here, denies having attempted suicide on account of the breaking of her marriage engagement with Prince Ferdinand of Roumania. She has resigned any idea of marrying the prince, and intends to enter a convent.

Five Naval Men Drowned.

BERLIN, Aug. 11.—Owing to the capsizing of a boat at Duntzig the captain, lieutenant, surgeon and two seamen of the German war vessel Zieter were all drowned.

SHARP CHICAGO CROOKS

VICTIMS IN NUMEROUS STATES.

Only Seventeen Loans Were Actually Made, One in Each of Seventeen States, but the Projectors of the Scheme Took in Many Thousands of Dollars.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—Alfred Downing, N. H. Tollman and three young women clerks, employees of the office of the "National Capital Savings, Building and Loan association of North America," room 415 Rookery building, have been arrested by United States marshals and the entire epistolary contents of the place taken to the office of United States District Attorney Milchrist. Downing and Tollman were charged with using the mails for fraudulent purposes and placed under $2,000 bonds for a hearing. The three clerks, Misses Downing, Bartholomew and Wadley, were notified that they were wanted as witnesses at the hearning.

Swindling by Wholesale.

It is charged that the men who have been conducting this association have swindled thousands of people from every state in the union and taken in from $200,000 to $350,000 and given not one penny in return. There are still two men at liberty who, it is believed, got away with most of the funds. The strangest part of the whole gigantic swindle seems to be that it was induced by the leading commercial agencies of the land.

Did Not Stop at Forgery.

The conductors of the nefarious scheme did not stop at forgery either, as among the papers found in the office is a paper signed by the "Auditor of Public Accounts of Chicago," to the effect that the concern was a substantial one and did a good business. There is no such officer in Chicago. For six months and more letters have been received from all parts of the country protesting in the association was not what its proprietors represented it to be, and that it was collecting money and making no loans.

Inspector Stuart took charge of the matter about four months ago and has worked ever since to make a case against the officers of the association.

Gigantic in Its Reach.

He found that the concern was gigantic in its reach, and had agents in every state in the Union, who were selling the $40,000,000 of stock the company was selling. At the time Quigley, the alleged head of the case the head man of the association was Louis F. Mortimer, the general manager and secretary. Mortimer proved to be a responsible man and handled all the cash. Several weeks ago Mortimer and his father disappeared, and neither has since been heard from.

A short time ago Captain Stuart sent Inspector Gardner to Lincoln, Neb., where the harvest seemed to be the richest. Here Mr. Gardner found George G. Ferguson, who represented about sixty people that had been swindled. Mr. Ferguson came to Chicago with Inspector Gardner and the result was the arrests already made.

How It Was Done.

Mr. Ferguson explained the modus operandi of the gang. "They were representing $40,000,000 of bonds," said Mr. Ferguson, "who acted in good faith. The people of Nebraska are very much in favor of the building and loan association plan, and the office of the concern was snapped up quickly. It sold shares for fifty cents each, with a payment of $1.10 each month for ninety-six months, at the end of which time a $1,000 loan would be paid for. Then there was a membership fee of thirty dollars, an appraisement fee of twenty dollars and forty-five dollars for three months' payment in advance, thus making ninety-five dollars. The concern made one $300 loan that was genuine, and this was just enough bait to lead others to invest. Hundreds sent their money to Chicago, and on the strength of the loan they expected to make contracts for houses and stores were let and building begun, but the money never came."

Indorsed by Dun and Bradstreet's.

A rough estimate of the amount of money the association received is $175,000 in the year and a half the association has been in existence. Only seventeen loans were made, one in each of seventeen states.

One of the peculiar features of the case is the indorsement of the scheme by the Bradstreet and Dun agencies. The officers of both agencies examined the association, but the evidences of prosperity were so great that the agencies made favorable reports. Indiana, Kentucky, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New York and Western states were worked, but the bulk of the victims live in states west of the Mississippi.

ATTACKED BY A WILD MOB.

Wrecked Italians Attempt to Kill Several Trainmen.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 11.—One of the most serious railroad accidents that have occurred on the Shore line division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad for years is that which happened at Branford, seven miles east of this city, yesterday. A wild engine ran into a work train containing 300 Italian laborers and injured ten of them, two fatally.

The accident was made worse by the conduct of the Italians, who made an assault on the engineer and fireman of the rear train. They got it into their heads that Engineer Benjamin and Fireman Sheppard were responsible for the accident, and would have taken their lives were it not for the determined stand made by the train men. Engineer Benjamin was so severely injured by the mob this morning at the scene of the accident that he is unable to leave his house, 6 John street.

Bridge Officer Smith Arrested.

NEW YORK, Aug. 11.—Patrick J. Smith, the Brooklyn bridge officer charged with killing Joseph Patterson, of Paterson, N. J., has been arrested. Smith says the man was drunk and got in his way. He pushed him aside, and did not know he had hurt him until his arrest.

Failed for $200,000.

BOSTON, Aug. 11.—The Glendon company, which has been engaged in the general brokerage business, has failed. Liabilities of $200,000 and assets of $400,000. E. L. Jewett is president of the company and N. M. Jewett treasurer.

Minister Douglass Has Resigned.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—Frederick Douglass has tendered his resignation as United States minister to Hayti. The letter of resignation is dated July 30, and is a formal one, giving no reasons for the writer's action.

GRAVE ROBBERS DRIVEN AWAY.

A Daring Attempt to Steal the Body of the Late Congressman J. B. Packer, Sunbury, Pa., Aug. 11.—A daring attempt was made to secure the remains of the late Hon. J. B. Packer at Sunbury, but the fortunate appearance of a brakeman spoiled the grave robbers' plans. Detectives are at work to secure clews in order to arrest the guilty ones. Soon after the congressman's millionaire's remains were laid to rest guards were placed over the grave to prevent a possible attack by ghouls. A week ago the family residence was taken to necessity for guards and they were discharged.

The cemetery is opposite the lower yard of the Pennsylvania railroad. About 1 o'clock Brakeman Myers was walking down the tracks when he heard a noise in the cemetery. Listening attentively he heard the rattle of dirt and clicking of picks. He was startled for a moment, but finally arrived at the conclusion that the sexton had chosen the cool hours of early morning to do his work. Not being satisfied, Myers leaped over the fence and proceeded in the direction of the noise. It was dark, and in walking by a grave fifty feet from the sounds he tripped and fell.

The fall made considerable noise, and when he arose Myers was startled by three men, who ran rapidly past him and into the underbrush. He hastened to the station to the railroad, and calling several companions, once more invaded the graveyard and found a number of picks and shovels over the grave of Packer. A foot of earth was excavated from the grave. No trace of the would-be body snatchers could be found. The work of the ghouls was the most daring thing ever perpetrated in Sunbury.

WHY THEY RESIGNED.

Mr. Dudley's Law Partner Talks About Dudley and Quay.

CHICAGO, Aug. 11.—"The many published statements to the effect that Senator Quay and General Dudley resigned from the Republican national committee in order to be free to defeat President Harrison's nomination are not founded on fact," said Colonel Dudley Saxton, of Philadelphia, Mr. Quay is Dudley's law partner. "Both men," he continued, "have been the subject of much bitter and adverse political criticisms, but in all truthfulness I can say that what its proprietors represented it to be, and that it was collecting money and making no loans.

About Darning.

Darning, as it was taught by our grandmothers, is almost unknown in our day. Life is so full nowadays, and machinery has so nearly superseded hand labor, that the old laborious and neat mending, seems almost a waste of time when new garments may be had at such a small cost. But handsome damask will probably always be costly, and those who keep a well stocked linen closet should often take a careful personal supervision of the table napery. The first great principle of darning, a careful old housekeeper tells us, is "Never darn a hole;" this is the same moral that is set forth in the well known and somewhat contradictory axiom of good breeding, "Never make an apology." The meaning when applied in that sense is obvious—"Never do anything that requires an apology," and in this instance the old lady's dictum would, therefore, be simply, "Never leave an article so long unexamined as to find it worn into a hole." Another useful resolution is to buy a set of table linen and some extra napkins every year.—Lewiston Journal.

Why Women Should Be Thankful.

Women have great reason to be thankful for their general ignorance; the less a woman knows of medicine she is. Our heads are not confused and distressed with the mists and mazes of politics; we, with a few painful exceptions, are blessed in unconsciousness of the world we shipwrecked and the world overturned if B is elected and C is not; we do not have to contend in conscience with the conviction that society is that the country has gone on and the government endured though B was made its chief ruler and C disappointed; the world we wage is the world of our trade, and we don't meddle with its revolutions because we don't know how or why. Yes, had I been blessed—or t'other thinged—with conscientious daughters, I should earnestly have prayed that they might every one be beautiful and silly, so that they should have made early and happy marriages, been sure always of "their own, safe corner by the household fire."—Rose Terry Cook.

WAR VESSELS FOR CHINA

The Charleston and Marion to Protect Americans.

MISSIONARIES ATTACKED BY MOBS.

The Emperor of the Flowery Kingdom Issues Imperative Orders That the Outlaw Leaders of the Recent Riots Be Caught and Put to Death.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 11.—On account of the perilous position of Americans in China because of the religious riots there orders have been issued at the navy department directing the Charleston and Marion to join the Asiatic station. The Charleston will sail from San Francisco for Yokohama and the Marion will go direct from Behring sea to China. When the Marion was ordered to Behring sea she had instructions to join the Asiatic station as soon as she could be spared. The orders of the Alert were similar to those of the Marion, and she will also join the Asiatic station as soon as her duty in Behring sea is completed. She will not go at present. The Charleston will be docked at San Francisco and her bottom painted. She will then leave for Japan.

The Emperor's Decree.

The state department has received a copy of the official decree issued by the emperor of China concerning the outrages on foreign missionaries in that country which have caused the navy department to order the two additional vessels to Chinese waters. The decree is as follows:

"The Teung Li Yamen (or council of ministers) has memorialized us in regard to the missionary cases that have occurred in the various provinces asking that we issue stringent instructions to the governor-general to lose no time in devising means for a settlement thereof. It is also represented by the yamen that in the month of May the missionary premises (Catholic) at Wuhu, in the province of Anhui were fired and destroyed by a mob of outlaws. At Tan Yang Huen, in the province of Kiang Su, and at Wusueh, in the province of Hupeh, similar outrages have been committed, and it is now necessary that the miscreants should be arrested and unrelenting measures taken in good time to provide against further outrages. The propagation of Christianity by foreigners is provided for by treaty and imperial decrees have been issued to the provincial authorities to protect the missionaries from time to time.

The Work of Powerful Outlaws.

"For years peace and quiet have prevailed between Chinese and foreigners. It is evident that among the rioters there are some powerful outlaws, whose object is to secretly contrive to fan discontent among the people by circulating false rumors and causing them to become agitated and excited, during which excitement they have an opportunity to rob and plunder, and reasonable and law abiding citizens are enjoined to join them, resulting in a tremendous uprising."

The Emperor's Orders.

The emperor then orders the various governors to at once issue orders to the civil and military officers to cause the arrest of leaders of riots, try them and inflict capital punishment upon them as a warning and example to others in the future. He adds: "Since the doctrine of Christianity has for its purpose the teaching of men to be good, Chinese converts are subjects of China, and are amenable to the local authorities. Peace and quiet should reign among the Chinese and the missionaries. The Tartar generals, governors general and governors issue proclamations warning the people not to listen to idle rumors or false reports which lead to trouble. Should any person secretly post placards containing false rumors with a view to beguile the minds of people, strenuous steps must be taken to cause his arrest and vigorous punishment be meted out to him. The local authorities must protect the lives and property of foreign merchants and missionaries and prevent bad characters from doing them injury. Should it transpire that the measures taken to protect them have not been adequate and trouble in consequence ensues, those officers who have been truly negligent are to be reported to us for degradation. In the matter of all missionary cases that are still pending let the Tartar generals and governors cause a speedy settlement of them."

A BIG ALLIANCE SENSATION.

Business Agent Wynne, of Georgia, Over $30,000 Short.

ATLANTA, Ga., Aug. 11.—The Journal says that J. O. Wynne, business agent of the Georgia State Alliance exchange, is over $30,000 short in his accounts. The directors appointed W. A. Broughton, treasurer of the exchange, to examine the books, and the shortage was discovered. Wynne is under a $50,000 bond. Bondsmen have met to arrange the payment of all the shortages.

It is said that the shortage is an out and out defalcation, but Wynne makes the statement that the shortage was due to clerical errors and lost vouchers. The affair is creating a tremendous sensation.

Escaped Like the Nicolys.

SOMERSET, Pa., Aug. 11.—Five prisoners escaped from Somerset's new county jail at noon. The hole from which the Nicely boniface escaped last March had been bricked up in a loose manner, and when the prisoners had gained an entrance to the attic it was the work of but a few moments to punch the brick out, and with a rope made from the cell hammock slide to the ground, a distance of forty feet.

They Think It Was Murderer Almy.

WATERBURY, Conn., Aug. 11.—Frank C. Almy, the Hanover murderer, hired out with a farmer in South Ford last week, but left suddenly a few days later. The description tallied exactly with the one sent out by the New Hampshire authorities. He gave his name as Frank Anderson and had a large handled knife and revolver.

The Potter, White & Bayley Failure.

NORTH ABINGTON, Mass., Aug. 11.—The real estate in Plymouth county owned by Moses N. Arnold has been attached by the creditors of Potter, White & Bayley, of Boston, for $100,000. Mr. Arnold once belonged to the firm, but cannot understand upon what grounds the suit is brought.

Blaine Calls on Tracy.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 11.—Secretary Blaine, Mrs. Blaine and Mrs. Damrosch, made a call on Secretary Tracy on the Dispatch. They were there nearly an hour, after which Mr. Blaine called upon John F. McLean, of The Cincinnati Enquirer. He remained with Mr. McLean a long time.

THE WORLD OF SPORTS.

Pritchard After Fitzsimmons — Gray Breaks the Shot Putting Record.

LONDON, Aug. 11.—Ted Pritchard, the champion pugilist of England, has announced his willingness to meet Bob Fitzsimmons for the middleweight championship of the world, $5,000 a side and the largest purse offered in England or America. Pritchard has posted a forfeit of $500 to bind a match.

The Pelican club, of New Orleans, has offered a $10,000 purse for the fight, and Pritchard has accepted this offer.

George Gray Breaks Records.

ST. CATHERINES, Ont., Aug. 11.—At the first annual games of St. Catherine's Amateur association George M. Gray, of the New York Athletic club, put the 16-pound shot 46 ft. ¾in., or 1¾ inches better than the world's record. In the 21-pound shot contest Gray scored 39 ft. 11½ in., beating the world's record by 1 feet 1½ inches.

Pettit Defeats Boakes.

The Minneapolis Club Disbands.

MINNEAPOLIS, Aug. 11.—The Minneapolis Baseball club has been disbanded on account of poor business and hard luck. The franchise reverts to the Western association, which, under the National agreement, owns the players for ten days. President Von der Ahe, of the St. Louis club, immediately telegraphed to several players of the disbanded team with a view to securing their services.

The Western Association All Right.

DENVER, Aug. 11.—President Packard, of the Denver Baseball club, was seen to day in regard to the threatened disruption of the Western association. He said that if Minneapolis and Milwaukee dropped out the association would continue with six teams, and as they were the Denver club would play ball as long as they could find a club to play with.

The Victorious Yachts.

Editor McKnight Victorious.

HELENA, Mon., Aug. 11.—The supreme court has decided that Editor J. A. McKnight, of the Helena Journal, was not in contempt for refusing to tell Judge Mc-Hatton, of Butte, who furnished the information in an article reflecting on McHatton's alleged partiality in the Davis will case. The court also assessed costs to Judge McHatton.

WOMEN AND PROGRESS.

LINES ALONG WHICH THE SEX SEEMS TO BE ADVANCING.

E. W. Higginson Discourses on the Efforts of Women as Observed in the Accounts of Their Doings—Sensible Criticism of the Exclusiveness of Clubs.

Opening a daily newspaper I found in three parallel columns three different series of notices in regard to women, and they seemed like so many detached lines in which the women of the present time were marching on into the future. Each represented strenuous labor, personal effort, organizing ability and in many cases unselfish industry.

In one column there was a report of proceedings at a woman's college; in another a record of a convention of working girls' clubs, and in the third a series of items of what is called Society Intelligence—a dinner party at Mrs. A.'s, a theater party of Mrs. B.'s and "a very pretty wedding" at the charming country house of Mrs. C., on which occasion "the presents were numerous and costly."

Of these three classes, that which is the theme of the society paragraphs is, on the whole, the least interesting to the scientific observer, though often the most attractive for purposes of social intercourse. It is, indeed, for this function of social intercourse that it exists—to preserve "the manners" of the present time, and the standards of cultivated intercourse.

VALUE OF SOCIAL USAGES.

It is of immeasurable importance that this should be sedulously done, that the world should keep all that it has got in the way of neat personal habits, kindly and courteous observances, and delicate tastes. Even "the gospel of good gowns" is, as Mrs. Moulton long since pointed out, by no means to be despised. Fine social intercourse is really the finest of fine arts; and if painting and sculpture and architecture are worth cherishing, so is that higher standard of manners without which these things are merely a misplaced fringe for barbarism.

It is true that manners joined with nothing better are disappointing. It is true that a hungry man would rather dine with a boor on venison than with Duke Humphrey on his proverbial dinner—that is, on nothing. But if the boorishness destroys one's appetite, where is the good of venison? And "a dinner of herbs, where love is"—or even where refinement is—turns out the better bill of fare.

The true charm of fine manners is best seen in poverty, when attainable there; but wealth is doubtless the better school for them at first, and quite in one season why men are tempted by wealth. The English word "means," or the phrase "a man of means," is very instructive, for a view of progress; but in a means toward something more important. And though many men go no further than the means, yet it is well that the world has got this great truth recognized in language. So all the love for fashionable novels is really an expression of a longing after the refinements of life.

And though the "society columns" are often made up largely of the doings of the socially unworthy, and though the morally prominent usually try to keep out of them, yet they are no doubt a humble school for good manners to those readers who distrust themselves. The young girl who with vague admiration reads of Mrs. A.'s and Mrs. B.'s entertainments perhaps acquires the wish that when she also is announced to some matrimonial lotter of the Hohelot, she also may have an attractive house.

KINDLY CRITICISM.

Yet, after all, the society gossip column that records the convention of working girls' clubs has a heartier sound and a deeper interest than these society paragraphs. Here are girls who have had the "home and sinner" of the community, or would be were it made up of men. It is a pleasure to look on a gathering so hearty and so free from all that I know as hoity, toity, society in the making. There is a fearless simplicity in the words "working girl;" although the writer of these items of these who seriously objected to the word "saleslady," since that on its side represented, like a somewhat excessive bonnet, the longing already described for the refinements of life.

But the other is the solider term, and has the merit also of going beyond caste, because many of these clubs are founded by those who do not fit the common sense of the word belong properly to them, and who often in organizing them have been in the very hardest haste working girls. There is something fine and wholesome in the success with which the more favored young women thus often work for the benefit of the less favored, and thus spiritually benefit themselves most of all.

The present writer has once or twice addressed these working girls' clubs, and has found in their rooms a piano, a little library, a good attendance and a cordial hearing. They are often composed of a mixture of nationalities most perplexing, and thus do a good which the ordinary parish or guild organization cannot accomplish, and help toward that fusion in these republics which is the only safeguard of our institutions.

Sometimes, I fear, they show a little spirit of exclusiveness in their own way, as where they take in those employed in shops and omit those who work in factories, or where they include compositors in printing offices, but not those who achieve their compositions with the aid of a cooking stove or a broom—in other words, what are technically called "livin' out girls."

This seems to me quite unreasonable, and like the attitude of that barber in Dickens' "Nicholas Nickleby" who declined to shave a coal heaver because it was necessary to draw the line somewhere, and he drew it at bakers. But these lingering bits of conventionalism are not, probably, the prevailing practice, and will soon be outgrown.—T. W. Higginson in Harper's Bazar.

Working Women in Foreign Lands.

Working women in other lands seem to fare even worse than in our own. In Austria they are employed as boilermakers. With their heavy loads of brick and mortar on their shoulders they trudge up and down narrow planks or climb ladders from 7 o'clock in the morning until 9 o'clock at night. For this they receive twenty cents a day. Girls working in the match factories of England become permeated with the sickening salts and fumes. The sulphur sometimes eats their jaws in the most painful and disgusting way. Their wages average $1.50 a week.—New York Recorder.

How Confederate Money Dropped.

At first Confederate money commanded a slight premium. It then scaled down as follows: June, 1861, 90 cents. Dec. 1 1861 80 cents. Dec 15, 1861, 75 cents. Feb 1 1862 60 cents. Feb. 1 1863. 20 cents. June, 1863, 8 cents. January, 1864, 2 cents. November, 1864, 44 cents. January 1865, 24 cents. April 1, 1865, 15 cents. After that date it took from $800 to $1,000 to buy a one dollar greenback.

How to Prevent Stoves from Rusting.

Rub them with a rag dipped in kerosene before putting them away for the summer Hardware and farming implements should be treated in the same way before you store them for the fall.

How to Measure Hay.

About 500 cubic feet of well settled hay, or about 700 of new mown hay, will make a ton Ten cubic yards of hay in mow weigh a ton. When the hay is taken out of old stacks eight or nine yards will make a ton. When dry eleven or twelve cubic yards of clover make a ton.

How to Take Bruises Out of Furniture.

Wet the part with warm water. Double a piece of brown paper five or six times, soak it in warm water and lay it on the bruise. Then apply a warm flatiron to the paper until the moisture is evaporated. If the first application does not remove the bruise, repeat the process. The dent or bruise generally comes to the surface after two or three applications.

How to Prevent Parasites in Bird Cages.

It is not generally known that many of the diseases of singing birds—in cages—are caused by the presence of parasites in the cage. Should your canary or other bird have the "pip" or look sickly, remove it at once, and make an examination of the roof of the cage. In nine cases out of every ten you will see a kind of grayish red rust clinging to the corners and roof. Look closer or with a microscope and you will observe that this rust is comprised of myriads of animalculs. They are bird parasites. Burn them out with sulphur and wash the cage with diluted salicylic acid and your bird will soon be restored to health.

How to Cure Corns.

To cure corns, soak the part in boiling or hot (as hot as you can bear) water, to which mustard has been added, before going to bed, wear a stocking on the foot to prevent catching cold and bathe the foot in cold water in the morning Continue this three or four times after which the corn will peel off bodily—dead.

How to Put on Violin Strings.

Put the small end of the string nearest the tail piece. Don't tie the string when adjusting it to the peg; put it through the peg, dig it once under toward your right hand, when by turning the peg the string will become fastened without further trouble. No superfluous string should be left dangling around the head. It is a mistaken idea that such portions are useful, since that part of the strings which comes in contact with the pegs or tail pieces loses all tone from being jammed and twisted.

How to Temper Steel.

Heat to a cherry red and then plunge in cold water Drills and graver's tools are tempered by plunging into a lump of resin or quicksilver Different degrees of hardness are required for different purposes. For very pale straw color, 430 degs., for lancets; a shade of darker yellow, 450 degs., for razors and surgical instruments. darker straw yellow, 470 degs., for penknives; still darker yellow, 490 degs., for iron cutting chisels; brown yellow, 500 degs., for axes and planes; brown yellow slightly tinged with purple, 530 degs., for table knives and watch springs.

How to Tell How Fast a Train Runs.

The number of miles per hour at which a train is running is the same as the number of rails passed over in twenty seconds, which can be ascertained by the "click" produced by the wheels at each joint.

How to Make Corks Good for Stoppers.

Corks steeped in vaseline are excellent substitutes for glass stoppers. They are not affected by acids, and never become fixed through disuse.

How to Disinfect a House.

Of the many ways which are in common use for disinfecting rooms and houses, none so easily recommends itself to the senses and to common sense as the coffee process Upon a shovelful of red hot coal throw a handful of ground coffee, and walk with it through the parts of the house where the foul smells exist or where you desire to disinfect. The volatilized essential oils of the coffee will instantly correct the evils, for they have the peculiar properties of deodorizing and disinfecting at the same time.

How to Disperse Black Ants.

About the most effectual way of dispersing those pests is to scatter a few leaves of wormwood among their haunts.

How to Make Molasses Candy

Take two coffee cups of molasses, add a teaspoonful of vinegar half a tablespoonful of butter and half a cup of sugar Boil until the candy hardens readily when dropped into cold water Before removing from the fire stir in rapidly a quarter of a teaspoonful of finely crushed soda, which will agitate the color of the candy and give it a better texture. For sheet candy turn out in buttered pans. "pull" for stick candy

The Dunker Women.

The Dunker women have a picturesque dress. They wear a little cap, well back on the head, and, if they are widows, they have black threads in this cap. Over the cap they have a hood or bonnet, as the case may be, which is bearded stiff, but cut shorter than the Quaker bonnet. It has a couple of ribbons, which are tied behind.

A clean, pure, white face in one of these hoods or bonnets looks like the pretty, old pictures of Holbein. But the young Dunker women, being given some margin of coffee to choose from, are getting dangerously near the beauty of the world's adornments; they wear some shades of red, some greens, and I even saw flowers in a bonnet color. Their little jackets are almost fashionable, and their fitted bodices or waists and dresses, frequently fluted to the feet and of nice material, make them look like characters on the theatrical stage. Indeed, in attempting to escape from costume, they have unconsciously preserved the only strict costume in our country, for the Quakers are growing scarce.

Of late the Dunkers, I understand, have ceased to patronize mills which make cloth and shoes and hats for them, and they buy where they can buy the cheapest and best. Here and there in this large congregation I could see a pretty woman, and at times one almost a beauty; again I could see a middle aged woman, perhaps a widow, who was comely and amiable; in few cases I saw female faces absolutely dignified and almost sublime.

The prosperity which the Dunkers necessarily have, their frugality, good farming and laborious lives, give advantages by which their race which are improved as far as liberty can allow. Very little of the harshness of the males appears to be seen in the female sex. I suspected a good many dark eyed people in this sect, which made me think that there was considerable Holland admixture among them, for in Holland was a French strain frequently black eyed.—Hagerstown (Md.) Letter.

Women and a Knowledge of Plumbing.

In conversation with several leading plumbers, each gave as a result of his experience the opinion that women are woefully ignorant where plumbing is concerned. One declared: "I have on several occasions given plain directions on how to act in case of a leak or other casualty until the plumber arrived, but as often have found when the time for action came they had been entirely forgotten. Even the simple expedient of turning on the water in the kitchen or laundry, which of course would prevent the water running in upper floors, is usually quite overlooked."

Another said, "I never have any success in explaining the intricacies of plumbing to a woman, whereas to the masculine contingent I have no difficulty." From this it would seem that the intelligence of woman is unable to cope with what is so easily understood by man. A third plumber remarked: "Women are always in fear that the hot water boiler will collapse if the water is cut off, even for the reason as much as any they hesitate about tampering with the faucets. Whereas a very slight knowledge of the subject would convince them that the only result of their turning off the water the sink faucets are opened so that air can reach the boiler no damage can result."

While each plumber admitted that a knowledge of the fundamental principles of plumbing on the part of women would often save considerable expense and damage, none was enthusiastic, evidently preferring ignorance to an enlightenment which would perhaps curtail his opportunities.—New York Post.

In Some Kitchens.

In cooking meats, the water is thrown out without removing the grease, or the grease from the dripping pan is thrown away.

Scraps of meat are thrown away.

Cold potatoes are left to sour and spoil.

Dried fruits are not looked after, and become wormy.

Vinegar and sauce are left standing in tin.

The tea canister and coffee box are left open.

Bones of meat and the carcass of turkey are thrown away, when they could be used in making good soups.

Sugar, tea, coffee and rice are carelessly spilled in handling.

Soap is left to dissolve and waste in water.

Dishtowels are used for dishcloths, napkins for dishtowels and towels for holders.

Brooms and mops are out long up.

More coal is burned than necessary by not closing dampers when the fire is not used.

Lights are left burning when not in use.

Tin dishes are not properly cleaned and dried.

Good, new brooms are used to scrub the kitchen floors.

Silver spoons are used in scraping kettles.

A Woman's Powers.

The talent of dissimulation is in woman a fair equivalent for the gift of strength. Brute force wins a way in the world after its kind; intrigue has to struggle along in the wake of this apparently superior power. Often, indeed, the latter trips the former and usurps its position in the race. There's no need to tell how Delilah sheared Samson of his locks, or how the small mouse was able to do more than the lordly lion could.

We see, if so, in the commonest places of everyday life. In the poverty stricken houses of the East End, where tragedy is always brewing because misery there so greatly abounds, who learns calamity the better—the man or the woman? Why surely, as a rule, the woman. And yet she does not feel it less than her husband. Her capacity for dissimulation is here a distinct blessing. It enables her often to comfort the man when he is at that last stage in the drama of ruin—bestiant only. Waterloo bridge or the razor which a malcontent tempter has put within reach of his hand.

Here, too, in the commonest places of everyday life, a woman makes her a ministering angel to man, even though she may at the heart be suffering torture beyond the power of words to describe.—All the Year Round.

Royalty with Simple Childhood.

The German empress, like the Princess of Wales, is one of those ladies whose "destiny to wear a royal crown" comes after a childhood and early youth passed in a very simple, unpretentious bourgeois home. The three Danish princesses, of whom the Princess of Wales was the eldest and the most beautiful, were their own dressmakers in their youthful days; the father of the German empress, Prince Frederick, of Schleswig Holstein, was too poor to keep a private carriage, and when a drive became a necessity it was taken in an ordinary hired equipage.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Bathing Suits.

Sunah silk of shiek quality and broadly twilled is now in great favor for bathing suits. It is claimed that it does not retain as much water as the flannel suits, and that it does not cling so closely to the figure. Black and navy blue are the colors most used, though there are fanciful swimming suits of white sunah, light blue, pale yellow, and also of mauve trimmed with white silk. The more modest dark suits are made with a yoke waist and drawers in one, cut in continuous pieces or attached to the same belt; a separate skirt is then buttoned on this belt. The highnecked waist has a turnover collar in sailor shape, and a cravat of the silk to be knotted by the wearer. The drawers fall below the knee and are quite wide, with a rubber in the hem to draw them into shape. Short sleeves, reaching only to the elbows, are most liked and are always used by swimmers. The skirt is gathered evenly all around and trimmed with many rows of braid. White silk tape, like the lacing strings, is set in border rows on some of the pretty blue and black sunah suits, and the bodice has the collar rolled away low to show a sailor shirt front of white silk.

Wiry stiff cheviots of coarse quality are preferred to the flannels formerly used for bathing dresses. They are made with the princess garment combining waist and knickerbockers, and a short skirt is belted on.

Jersey wool suits do not shrink and are commended at the best houses. The waist and skirt are in one piece in these dresses, and the skirt is made much fuller than these formerly worn. The sleeves are close fitting, like equestrian tights, and have stockings woven with them.—Harper's Bazar.

Doing Up Lawn Dresses.

The best way is to obtain suds by dissolving shavings of soap in a basin of hot water, then adding the solution to the wash water. This is especially to be done with black lawn, which should be quickly washed in the suds and immediately rinsed in water made quite dark with bluing. It should be dried in the shade and ironed while damp either with the usual sprinkling of starch is used it should be made very blue and diluted till quite thin. The dress should be dried in the shade, then starched, and while still damp ironed on the wrong side. It is often advisable to set the colors in other lawns by soaking in a pail of salt and water, or in a pail of water in which a little piece of lead has been dissolved; this latter especially to prevent blues from fading.

Ice Cream.

Some recipes for ice cream are both costly and troublesome. The following is said to be satisfactory for family use: Boil one quart of milk, add a tablespoonful of arrowroot stirred smooth, half a pound of sugar and two eggs well beat like custard; when this is cold add a pint of cream, a teaspoonful and a half of vanilla extract and freeze.

Fine Steps.

A great many steps are now made in brocade and satin, and a new stuff is the silk coutille. Very little patterns are best in the brocade, and the petticoat should be a very plain one. They should be introduced to the very best hands, and great care should be taken in wearing. They need silk bands to dresses, and a petticoat bodice should be worn over them.

Injured on Bicycles.

John Murray of North avenue met with a painful accident on Monday. He was riding a bicycle, took a "header" and badly cut his face and dislocated his left shoulder. He has so far recovered from his injuries, however, as to be able to attend to his work.

Charles Mason, a grandson of Mr. John M. Schorb of East Front street, was painfully injured yesterday afternoon. He was riding a tricycle when in some unaccountable way the machine was overturned and in falling young Mason's head struck the sharp edge of a projecting stone and a deep gash was inflicted in his forehead. His left wrist was also badly sprained. A physician was summoned and sewed up the wound in the lad's forehead.

Brunswick vs. Plainfield.

The first of the ball games to be played by the newly-organized New Brunswick Base Ball Club will be played on Wednesday at the new Rutgers grounds. The game will be a good one, as the Brunswick's opponents will be the Crescents of Plainfield, one of the strongest teams in the State. The Crescents have just completed a tour in the New England States, where they met with success.

Saturday the Crescents met the West Ends, of Somerville, whose battery, Kennedy and Harkins, is the same as the Brunswicks. The Plainfielders won by a score of 7 to 6.—New Brunswick Home News.

A Narrow Escape.

David Allen, a member of Warren Engine Company No. 1, of North Plainfield, had a narrow escape from a painful accident last evening. The members of the Company took the steamer out for a wash, and when they were ready to return home, one of Mr. Allen's feet, in some way, got caught in one of the wheels. The limb was not seriously injured, but the shoe was badly cut and torn.

A FATAL SUNSTROKE.

William Allen of Somerset street, North Plainfield, died from the effects of the heat at about seven o'clock last evening. Mr. Allen was in the employ of Mr. Eugene Hoerster, the beer bottler on Grove street, but yesterday he was assisting a butcher named Ruppert to move.

At about four o'clock Mr. Ruppert and his wife noticed that the deceased was acting in an unusual way. A few moments afterwards he began to stagger like a drunken man. Mr. Ruppert inquired what was the matter and received an unintelligible reply. He assisted Mr. Allen to a near-by barn and then it was discovered that he was suffering from sun-stroke. Dr. Carman was summoned and did all in his power to save the life of the prostrate man but without success. Before smalling and he died at seven o'clock last evening, as above stated. His remains were taken to the residence of his father on Somerset street.

Mr. W. Douglass, an employe of Mr. A. D. Thompson's Exchange Stables on North avenue, was also prostrated by the heat yesterday.

The Funeral of Thaddeus Avery Van Zandt.

[From the N. Y. World.]

Five minutes after the midday hour yesterday the big organ in old Trinity church began in slow monotones the first notes of a funeral anthem. From the left of the chancel a surpliced minister walked slowly down the aisle to the rear of the church. The folding doors leading to the little reception-room for the dead opened, and four young men came out bearing a coffin.

The deep tones of the organ were stilled. With measured pace the minister led the way up the aisle, reading aloud the first passages of the Episcopal burial service, the pallbearers followed. From out the rear pews deeply-veiled women and sombre-clad men joined in the procession to the chancel. The black coffin was placed in the railing and the minister ceased his reading. Again the deep-toned organ boomed. The echoing the funeral strain, six white-surpliced boys raised their voices in an anthem for the dead.

There was no pomp, no parade in this mid-day funeral at old Trinity yesterday. Only a few mourners, only a few awed white flowers on the coffin. Not one well-known New Yorker was there. The body to be buried was that of a man whose ancestors had been as notable years ago as old Trinity itself.

Immediately back of the brown-stone monument to Capt. James Lawrence an old gray stone was inserted as a vault and an opening left for the coffin. On the Lawrence monument this phrase is inscribed: "His bravery in action was equalled only by his modesty in triumph." On the stone moved away was inscribed simply: "Thaddeus Van Zandt, twenty-fifth of his line, was soon to rest with his forefathers."

Thaddeus Avery Van Zandt died last Saturday at his home in Plainfield, N. J. He was eighty-seven years old. Only last May the old family vault was opened for the reception of Mr. Van Zandt's eldest son, Elsworth. The family now consists of Mrs. Du Plon, of Plainfield, a daughter of Mr. Van Zandt's first wife; Mrs. R. L. Montgomery, of Owego, another daughter; Ernest, a son, and the unmarried daughters, Lulu, Elsie, Jennie and Gracie.

The vault now about to be filled has been in the last resting place of the Van Zandts since the old Knickerbocker days. It is on the south of the lower entrance to the cemetery. It is one of the two besides that of David Coutant and L. Carson within the iron railing that divides the cemetery yard from the little stone-flagged piazza leading to the church door.

The people who attended the funeral yesterday were nearly all from Plainfield, N. J., and neighboring towns. Thaddeus Van Zandt lived in Plainfield since boyhood. His father, William Van Zandt, was born in this city and left a comfortable fortune. The property, consisting of real estate, was located chiefly in Brooklyn and New Jersey.

The funeral services yesterday were conducted by Dean E. M. Rodman, of Trinity Church, assisted by the dead man's pastor. The family vault needs some repairs, and in consequence the body was not placed in it yesterday. The body will be kept in the church a day or two until the vault is repaired. The last niche in it will then be filled and old Trinity churchyard will receive no more of the Van Zandts.

Cranford's Venetian Carnival.

The Executive Committee of the Cranford Boating Association are busy perfecting their arrangements for the Grand Venetian Carnival to be held on the evening of August 19th. On the Railway river. This event will undoubtly eclipse any of the previous efforts of this wide awake and enterprising association. It is proposed to illuminate all the bridges within the limits of the village, also both sides of the river from the entrance at the dam near the Union avenue bridge.

At eight o'clock the flotilla consisting of about one hundred boats and canoes tastefully decorated with Chinese and Japanese lanterns will collect at the dam and form in line, and at a signal from Commodore Chas. Leo Abry the procession will, amid a grand shower of pyrotechnics and a blaze of colored fire from either shore, move up the river. On the completion of the trip to the starting point there will be an open air stereopticon exhibition at Bookhout's dock under the direction of Mr. E. W. Austin, who, being an expert artist has been untiring in his efforts to get it together in a very grand collection of both comic and miscellaneous pictures which will appear upon a canvas containing about five hundred square feet suspended over the river.

Barlow's celebrated Bound Brook band will be in attendance.

Visitors from neighboring towns will be amply paid for a visit to Cranford on the evening of the 15th.

In case of rain, Carnival will be postponed to next fair Saturday.

CONSIDERED TO APPLY TO PLAINFIELD.

How the People Indignant Finally Treat Combines in Western Towns.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—I enclose a clipping from the Evening Post (editorial) of yesterday, showing the way the people of a Western town dealt with a "combine." It may be of interest to some of your readers, although we law abiding people would hardly recommend such violent proceedings.

A READER.

The Common Council of Kansas City had a narrow escape last night. A mass meeting of eight hundred indignant taxpayers, thoroughly possessed of the not altogether incredible notion that their rulers had been influenced improperly to vote in favor of a proposition to pay an exorbitant price for an electric light plant, turned itself into a mob and started in a body for the Council Chamber, shouting "Lynch them!" "Hang them!" The city fathers were assembled for the final vote on the proposition when news of the advancing column reached them. They saved their necks by taking to their heels. When the mob reached the Council Chamber, not an Alderman was to be found, the last one escaping just in the nick of time. The taxpayers took possession of the room, organized an indignation meeting, denounced their rules as a set of thieves and cowards, and then went home without doing anybody any harm. What the effect of the demonstration will be upon the Council remains to be seen. Alderman Lynch, empowered to hang every member of the City Council convicted in mass-meeting of corrupting to boodle influence, supplies a new and startling remedy for misgovernment, but it can scarcely be called a surprising one. There are plenty of cities in the country whose Common Councils ought to be "pulled" by the police as regularly as the gambling-houses are, and if the police cannot obtain sufficient help to do it, the people may be goaded into taking the work into their own hands.

Sympathy for the Italians.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—Several of the residents on the streets where the Italian laborers have been working have noticed the overbearing, not to say brutal, manner in which the men are treated by their (so called) bosses. One of them was heard to say to another "boss," with an oath, make the devils work—what else are they good for? And if the men don't move quickly enough to suit them they don't hesitate to strike them, in some instances, simply. "Where is my Zandt, twenty-fifth of his line, was soon to rest with his forefathers.

THE STORM WE DIDN'T GET.

And How It Effected Our Neighbors.

The sprinkling of rain in this city yesterday afternoon was from the edge of a severe storm at the other end of the county, reported in the annexed dispatch:

ELIZABETH, Aug. 11.—This city was struck at one o'clock to-day by a fierce electrical storm, which raged for more than an hour and deluged the streets with hail and rain, while the electrical display was remarkable. The peals of thunder were terrific and the lightning sharp. One hundred and ninety telephones were burned out. The pole in front of the Postal Telegraph office was splintered, but the wires were only slightly damaged. In the telegraph and telephone office the operators were thrown from their keys. A horse belonging to Ferdinand Decker was killed by a thunderbolt in Centre street, and Frank Neil, the driver, was stunned and knocked flat off his seat.

The spire of the Methodist church attached to Trinity church was partly shattered by a ball of fire. The house of Michael Byrnes, a builder, in Orchard street, was set on fire by lightning, as also was the barn of J. R. Blake, on Madison avenue. Several fine shade trees were shattered in different parts of the city.

The wind blew a gale on Staten Island Sound, and several small craft narrowly escaped destruction.

At Elizabethport there was a very heavy fall of hail, and the size of the stones was extraordinary. The oldest inhabitants never saw anything like it. At Rahway and Perth Amboy the electrical storm was equally destructive to the telephone service, and it will take some days to get it in working order.

—The Holy Cross choir are home again from a week's outing in Connecticut.

—Any persons who fishes on Sunday is liable to a fine of $25 if the law is enforced.

—The Borough Council will meet in adjourned session Friday evening at eight o'clock.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—Fine catches of weak fish are being made at Boynton Beach daily. The crabbing is also said to be excellent.

—The funeral of Michael O'Neill took place from St. Mary's church this morning. Interment was made in St. Mary's cemetery.

—The members of Winfield Scott Post G. A. R., are arranging for a grand excursion to Rockaway Beach during the latter part of this month.

—While engaged loading ice last Monday, a colored man named Ira Beaumont, let one of the large cake of ice fall on his right foot and serveral of his toes were badly crushed.

—It required ten passenger coaches to convey the excursionists that accompanied St. Mary's T. A. B. Society on its annual excursion to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove yesterday.

—The members of the Exempt Firemen's Association, the Firemen's Relief Association and all the active firemen are invited to attend the funeral of their late brother firemen, Clarkson B. Hope.

—A scientific person has made the discovery that if you suck a lemon in front of a brass band while it is playing you will stop the noise entirely. The remedy is cheap and may come in handy some time.

—About ten o'clock last night a lamp exploded in a house on Race street, North Plainfield. The house went into the street. A passer-by saw the blazing oil and ran to Warren Engine house and rang the firebell.

—At about eight o'clock last evening Policeman Fredrickson arrested a tramp who was annoying persons in the vicinity of the Pullman. The fellow was begging money and if his request was refused he became very insulting.

—Yesterday a thunderbolt struck a tree near Otto's Mills at New Market. Persons who witnessed it say that just previous to its striking the bolt looked as though it separated, a portion of it striking the tree and another portion ploughing the ground to the depth of several feet.

—When you read of the discomforts people are suffering at the seaside and at other places where they are Summering, ain't you glad you are at home? There are few homes, indeed, in Plainfield that do not offer greater comforts than these people get abroad. But then that is the fad, and you must be in fashion, or at least that is what people think.

—"There is," says a horticulturist, "hardly an instance in natural history of a plant so universally detested by the animal world as the castor-oil plant. No sort of bird, beast or creeping thing will touch it, much less eat it. It seems to be a rank poison to all the animal world. Even a goat will starve before biting off a leaf."

—Mr. Louis Callman, that sterling Plainfield merchant, is to open Saturday, Aug. 15th, his well-named Bee Hive, at No. 40 West Front street, which it will be remembered was burned out a few months ago through a fire in an adjoining store which spread into his place. If he gets all the success he deserves, as we are sure he will, it will be even greater than it was before.

Died.

ALLEN—Suddenly in North Plainfield, August 11th, William Allen, in his 34th year.

Funeral services from the residence of his father, John Allen, 254 Somerset street, North Plainfield, Tuesday, Aug. 12th, at one p. m. Friends and relatives are respectfully invited. It*

New Market Notes.

Mr. Thomas Ingham, one of the oldest members now living of the New Market Baptist church, paid his old home a visit during July. His familiar face was a welcome sight at the prayer meetings of the young people, to whom he gave some good advice as to their life and work in the church. Mr. Ingham now resides with his son, Dr. L. T. Ingham, at West Stockbridge, Mass.

Mr. and Mrs. E. S. Ingham, of Clinton, N. J., spent a few days in New Market in July. Mr. Ingham was formerly President of the Young People's Society of the Baptist church, and of course feels deeply interested in its welfare. He thinks that the Christian Endeavor plan of organization has been very beneficial in the case of the New Market society, as, indeed, it is everywhere, when faithfully and prayerfully adhered to.

Rev. A. A. Cubberley, pastor of the Baptist church, has been enjoying his usual Summer outing. During the year he visited Hamilton Square, N. J., Saratoga Springs, N. Y., and other places. During his absence July 26 and Aug. 2 Mr. W. H. Stelle, formerly of Stelton, and Mr. Lewis E. Berdan, the latter a member of our Christian Endeavor Society and a theological student at Colgate University, occupied the pulpit. On communion Sunday, Aug. 9, Rev. L. O Grenelle conducted worship in the morning. In the evening he addressed the Young People's Society. Rev. D. Dewolf, superintendent of Missions of the New Jersey Baptist State Convention, will preach on Aug. 18.

The New Market Baptist C. E. Society was invited to attend a Summer Night's rally under the auspices of the Dunellen Epworth League on August 4th. This new organization is in a flourishing condition, and, under the leadership of the energetic young pastor of the Methodist church, Rev. W. Kinsey, it promises to be a great help to the work in this vicinity. Mr. Kinsey has lately been giving a series of illustrated Sunday evening lectures in his church.

Miss M. M. Carpenter, Corresponding Secretary of the New Market Baptist C. E. Society, has been ill for several weeks. Under the care of Dr. Nelson she is now slowly regaining health and strength.

Master Frank J. Sims, or Brooklyn, N. Y., sang a number of solos during service in the New Market Baptist church on Sunday, August 9th. He is a member of the well-known male choir of Garden City Cathedral.

An interesting addition to one of the Sunday evening prayer meetings of the New Market Society in July was the presence of a party of five Christian Endeavorers from Trenton. One of them Mr. Joseph Hammond, is President of the First Baptish Church C. E. Society. The others were N. B. VanHorn, Edgar D. Coleman, Samuel J. Prince and Frank S. Tuesday. The party spent about ten days camping out in a grove along the brook in the rear of Lake Lenox (Lake). They called the spot Camp Lenox in honor of their President. Their visit to the New Market Society was much enjoyed.

A. W. Vars and J. Duer Randolph have resigned from the Union Publishing Committee. Mr. W. L. Terry has been elected Mr. W. R. Larkin, and the Presbyterian society Mr. W. L. Terry, to serve in their steam.—Christian Endeavor Union.

Against Melons and Tomatoes.

By the weather crop bulletin issued by the Weather Bureau at Washington, on Saturday, it is shown that in New Jersey the excessive cloudiness and cool weather has retarded the ripening of melons and tomatoes.

Corn is in good condition and earing well. Grapes and orchard fruits continue good. Ploughing for fall seeding has begun.

—A despatch from Paris informs the world that chromic acid dissolved in 100 parts of water is a sure cure for viper bites. The Academy of Medicine has awarded the Orfila prize to Professor Kaufman, of the Veterinary College at Attort, for discovering the valuable lotion.

—In commenting upon the depreciated business of the watering places this season one unique cause for the lack of patronage crops up in the fact that many thousand people invested the money they intended using for Summer jaunting in "short term" ventures, confidently anticipating a three-fold return within a few months. The money is still so invested and the Summer outing is one of the misty problems of the future.

—That much despised beverage, the humble buttermilk, is now beginning to assume importance as one of the medicinal agents in commedial agent especially in cases of Bright's disease. There are a great many quite high toned people who, if they could overcome their repugnance to the truck, would plead guilty to a sneaking liking for buttermilk, which is about as healthful and refreshing a beverage as a thirsty person can get outside of. It is at once food and medicine, promotive of good digestion and invigoration to the whole system.

If a law could be passed against drinking buttermilk, the habit would be more prevalent than the beer or whisky habit and the world would be perceptibly improved.—New Brunswick Home News.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company will be Ready on and after the 15th inst. to supply water to parties residing along the lines of its mains.

Three California Girls.

Not the least of California's remarkable products promises to be in the future her people, particularly her girls. In 1880 a widow, Mrs. Klumphe, arrived in Paris with her four young lady daughters, born in San Francisco. They were poor in worldly goods, but boundlessly rich in ambition to excel. They went to Europe from San Francisco for the purpose of developing and training the talent these high spirited girls felt they possessed.

A family every member of which is so gifted has seldom indeed been seen. The eldest daughter studied medicine. She was so brilliant as to at once attract the attention of the medical faculty. She was at length admitted as practicing house surgeon in the Paris hospital, the first woman who ever received such an appointment. She studied on indefatigably and with such successful recognition that this year the Academy of France gave her silver medal in return for a thesis she wrote. No less successful in love than in her profession, she at length accepted an offer of marriage from one of the most distinguished physicians of France, with whom she still has the happiness of following her chosen profession.

The second sister chose the artistic career. Nine hours a day she sketched and painted till she attained wonderful skill in drawing the human figure, a field of art in which American artists as a class are deficient. The young artist teaches also, to add to her income. She has exhibited pictures in the French salon every year since 1882, and received honorable mentions and a medal.

The third sister, Dorothea Klumphe, ran naturally to science. Mathematics was her forte especially, including astronomy. She attended the great University of the Sorbonne and studied indefatigably. Besides her mathematical attainments she was a brilliant scholar in languages, understanding French, German, Latin and Greek. She is the first woman student ever admitted to the Paris observatory. Her skill in taking observations of the stars is so notable that she is employed as one of the French government astronomers.

The fourth sister has already made great progress as a musician.

No wonder Europeans consider American girls remarkable.

Edward Atkinson calls attention to the fact that cotton fires on board ships containing American bales are on the increase alarmingly, and that they are much more frequent than on ships packed with India cotton. The reason he finds in the slovenly way in which American cotton bales are packed. They contain all manner of refuse and trash, even to matches and gun cartridges, and to cap it all are insufficiently covered. Cottonseed oil oxidizes rapidly, and this frequently causes spontaneous combustion where inflammable material is saturated with it. Often a lock of cotton fiber thus saturated gets caught into a bale near the edge, where air can reach it. Spontaneous combustion is then as apt to ensue as when rags saturated with linseed oil are left by careless painters in obscure corners only to burst into a blaze a little later. The remedy for cotton fires will be found in care and cleanliness in packing.

An ordinary workman in the armor plate mill of Carnegie, Phipps & Co., at Homestead, Pa., has covered himself with honor by inventing a sand mold that turns out an armor ingot weighing 32,000 pounds. His name is Timothy McKay. All honor to him. When the big ships of the navy ride at anchor in the harbors of the world and command the admiration of the nations, let his countrymen not forget Timothy McKay.

It is quite the thing now for the race of decaying, degenerate, enervated European nobility to ally themselves by marriage to vigorous American families that have made themselves millionaires by their own exertions. It is all very well for the physically and mentally declining families of the European aristocracy thus to bolster themselves up with the infusion of warm, rich young American blood, but it is rather tough on the Americans.

There is no doubt that millions of acres of farms will yet be opened to cultivation through irrigation. Irrigated lands, moreover, often prove the most fertile that can be cultivated. Crops are certain from them. In eastern New Mexico already 600,000 acres of arid ground have been turned into rich farms by means of storage reservoirs and irrigating ditches.

The Boston Herald (Ind. Dem.) says that the declaration of the Ohio Democratic state convention in favor of a graduated income tax may prove to be an ominous symptom.

In 1879 the money of the country amounted to twenty dollars per head of the population. In 1889 it was twenty-eight dollars to each individual of the population.

On the whole, there are more sunshiny days than cloudy ones.

TO STUMP THE COUNTRY

Fifteen Democratic Orators Will Make a Big Tour.

MANY CLUBS ARE TO BE ORGANIZED

Interesting Session of the Executive Committee of the National Association of Democratic Clubs at New York. The Members Divided on Issues.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—At the meeting of the National Association of Democratic Clubs Chairman William S. Wilson, of West Virginia, presided. Ex-Lieutenant Governor Chauncey F. Black, of Pennsylvania, president of the association, was also present. The chief business of the committee consisted in listening to a report by Secretary Gardiner as to the condition of the clubs in all parts of the country. The convention of the association will not be held until sixty days after the regular national Democratic convention next year. The Democratic state committee will meet Wednesday to fix the time and place of the state convention.

Work in the Northwest.

Various encouraging reports of the growth of the organization were read. Chairman Wilson gave an account of his tour to the northwest. The work accomplished by clubs in Utah led to the election of the Democratic ticket. The most complete organization in any state was in the new state of Washington. This organization is to hold a convention on Sept. 1, at which delegates from every state in the line of the Northern and Union Pacific will be invited to attend. It has been decided to organize a missionary itinerary composed of fifteen of the leading Democratic orators connected with the National association.

CHAUNCEY F. BLACK.

The party will leave the city of Washington on Sept. 12 and will make a complete circuit of the northwest, stopping one day at Chicago. From there they will go direct to Helena, Mon., and there organize a league of Democratic societies for that state. They will reach Spokane Falls in time for the state convention of clubs. Among the party will be Congressmen Bynum and Kenna and Chauncey F. Black. The others have not yet been decided upon.

Divided on Silver.

The committee has appointed correspondents in every county of the United States, from whom it has received ten dollars for the support of the order and the propagation Democratic doctrines. Questions of party policy were warmly discussed and the silver question came in for a heated debate. The committee are sorely divided on this point, but it was decided that free tariff would be made the leading feature in the south and west.

Personnel of the Committee.

The committee is composed of W. L. Wilson, of West Virginia, chairman; Lawrence Gardner, secretary; Congressman Henry W. Rusk, Maryland; R. G. Monroe, Roswell P. Flower, E. B. Whitney, New York; A. T. Aukney, Minnesota; Chauncey F. Black, Pennsylvania; Harvey N. Collinson, Massachusetts; George H. Lambert, New Jersey, and Charles Ogden, Nebraska.

Carlisle Talks Politics.

NARRAGANSETT PIER, R. I., Aug. 12.—Senators Aldrich, Carlisle, Harrison and Allison are here as members of the senate subcommittee on finance. Mr. Carlisle yesterday talked about the political situation as follows:

"The Farmers' Alliance is a gradual atrophy, a marasmus which indicates that the organization will not, in all probability, be a serious factor in the election next year. I can see no danger in Democratic success from the Alliance."

Speaking of the probable candidates for the presidency in 1892, Mr. Carlisle said: "The Republicans will nominate President Harrison if Mr. Blaine will not consent to stand. The influence of the ladies of his family may deter Mr. Blaine, but there is a tremendous pressure upon him from his old party friends to run. He would sweep the convention, I think. No Republican is as strong as Blaine. I do not think that he will consent to run.

"If I am Cleveland, in fact, I think, I still the strongest Democratic candidate. He may have offended the extreme pro-silver men by his veto of the Bland two coinage, but he enjoys a wonderful reputation among the people."

Senator Quay's Plans.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Senator Matthew S. Quay and his son Richard arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel last night. They came on to meet the senator's son, Andrew Jackson Curtin Quay, who is expected aboard the City of Paris today. The senator said that he had experienced great relief since severing his connection with the national committee. He is not out of politics, and does not intend returning to his home in Beaver until after the Pennsylvania state convention.

Will It Be Flower or Sheehan?

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—It looks like Saratoga, Sept. 15 or 16.

It also looks like Flower and Sheehan.

Such are the indications regarding the time and place for the Democratic state convention and the ticket it will bring forth. The Democratic state committee are in session at the Hoffman House today.

Red Men Meet.

UTICA, N. Y., Aug. 12.—The twenty-fourth great council of the Improved Order of Red Men of New York state was opened here. There was about 250 delegates in attendance. There are now 134 tribes in this state, twenty-eight new ones having been instituted the past year.

Fatal Explosion at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 12.—An explosion occurred at the works of the Atlantic Refining company at Point Breeze. Two men—James Neely, twenty-four years old, and Richard Carberry, forty-nine years old, both married—were fatally injured Wed.

A New Haven Distillery's Troubles.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 12.—A receiver has been asked for the Old Colony Distillery company, whose affairs appear to be hopelessly entangled, in favor of local creditors.

PROBING BARDSLEY'S AFFAIRS.

No Less Public Money in Amounts from $25 to $25,000.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 12.—The Bardsley investigating committee resumed their work Tuesday afternoon and held a long session. Much of the matter relating to Bardsley's loans has never been made public, and it was in relation to these matters that the mayor's experts, Lawrence E. Brown and Taylor Faunce, were called upon to give their evidence. District Attorney George S. Graham sent a communication to the committee in which he declines that he had suppressed any evidence, as alleged by newspapers. He was perfectly willing that everything discovered by the experts should be made public, except the correspondence which had passed between Auditor General McCamant and himself, which he stated he did not desire, for obvious reasons, to become public until the issue between the city and state came to trial.

Expert Lawrence E. Brown testified that the entire deficiency of Bardsley to the city treasury, aggregated the sum of $600,000, the amount of the due bills in the Keystone bank, was $553,985.89. He would not, however, state what share of that amount was due to the city and how much to the state. He was then requested to give an account of all of Bardsley's loans and payments of public money to individuals, whether the money had been paid back or not. There are hundreds of these transactions, ranging in amounts from $25 up to $25,000, the latter amount being the largest mentioned. The greater part of these loans were advances on salaries of clerks and officials of the city, and nearly all of them were paid. The largest loan was one of $25,000 made to William M. Singerly on Aug. 18, 1890, which was paid Dec. 31, 1890. As collateral for this loan 800 shares of The Record Publishing company were put up as security according to Bardsley's memorandum book.

The other large transactions were with Laughlin & McManus, the bankers and brokers, and were loans advanced on the certificates of the public building commission. There were quite a number of these, the largest being $93,372.25, and all were repaid. Expert Brown said that Bardsley had credited Laughlin & McManus with $93,372.25 interest. The item he said he could not explain, and thought that it should be in vestigated. At 6 o'clock Expert Brown had only begun his long statement, but the committee decided to adjourn until next Monday afternoon at 3 o'clock, when it is anticipated interesting developments will occur.

SIR HECTOR STEPS DOWN.

A Scandal Causes the Canadian Minister to Resign.

OTTAWA, Ont., Aug. 12.—Interest in the proceedings of the privileges and elections committee in investigation of the charges against the department of public works in awarding contracts and the relation thereto of the Hon. Thomas McGreevy culminated in the announcement of the resignation of Sir Hector Langevin, minister of public works. While the announcement created quite a sensation in political circles, the public mind was not altogether unprepared for it. The testimony of several witnesses before the committee caused an ever widening conviction that the charges against Sir Hector of receiving commissions from the awarding of contracts had more than a shadow of foundation. Even were he entirely innocent himself, the evidence showed a shameful neglect of the public's interest in the management of the department's affairs.

HECTOR LANGEVIN.

Civilians for Second Lieutenants.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—The secretary of war has issued the rules that will govern the examination of civilian candidates for appointments of second lieutenants in the army. The educational conditions are the same as those provided for the last examination, with the exception that geometrical progression is taken out and plane trigonometry is added. No candidate will be passed by the board who has not attained a general average of at least 75 per cent.

Married at the Pistol's Point.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Much gossip has been occasioned in the American colony here by an action brought by Mrs. Walter Berkeley Crane, formerly Miss Alice Cooper, of New York, who is seeking to procure the annulment of her marriage. She claims that Crane made her marry him at the point of a pistol. The couple never lived together. Crane denies that any force was used.

THE EDISON DEATH FISH

Successful Test of the New Marine Torpedo.

UNDER CONTROL TWO MILES AWAY.

How the Sims-Edison Monster of the Deep Will Set About the Destruction of the Ironclad—The Machine Traveled Two Miles in About Four Minutes.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—The official trial of the Sims-Edison electric torpedo, which took place under the direction of Colonel King, engineer in the Naval department, and Scott Sims, the inventor, at Willis' Point yesterday afternoon proved a great success. On arrival of the government steamer Chester A. Arthur, which carried a large number of army and navy officers and several representatives of foreign governments, the torpedo was lowerd into the water.

Description of the Death Fish.

Its neat appearance made a favorable impression. The float measured twenty-eight feet and the fish thirty-three feet.

The diameter of the fish was 26 inches. After the torpedo had been taken out of the dock and placed alongside the pier, fifteen feet from the shore, Mr. Sims went to the keyboard. At the word "Go" the torpedo started with great velocity. The course had been plotted and stakes placed at intervals of 2,500 feet.

A Zigzag Course.

Describing a zigzag course, following gracefully every intended movement, starboard or port, the death dealing engine passed the first stake. It was only followed by the silvershed line which it traced on the limpid waters of the sound. Its speed was highly increased after the first post, and after the second stake had been passed it turned in a radius of 250 feet on the homestretch.

Quicker and quicker went the craft, until after a run of little over two miles it lay motionless near the starting point. Time 6m. 25s. Mr. Sims was cheered and afterwards highly complimented by the large and critical assembly which had witnessed the trial.

It Is Absolutely Controllable.

The dynamo, which is of the new Edison starting type, was afterward inspected. It was placed in one of the government buildings away from the dock. The dynamo is extremely powerful.

The capacity of the dynamo is 1,800 volts and 30 amperes, of which only 1,300 volts and 23 amperes were used. The horse power absorbed by the propelling and steering apparatus registered 42. It is almost certain that a higher rate of speed could have been attained. The chief point of the demonstration was to show that the torpedo is absolutely controllable, even after a run of over two miles. Mr. Sims' invention is the fruit of fifteen years' study, and those who saw the trial say it is superior to any other torpedo at present. The price of the torpedo is $12,000, but it is said it can be built cheaper.

WHY THEY SEIZED HER.

The City of Panama Had Political Refugees on Board.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—It has been learned that the Pacific Mail Steamship company steamer City of Panama was seized by the San Salvadorans at La Libertad because there were political refugees on board. General Latonga is a passenger on the City of Panama. He is a political refugee, bound from Corinto to San Jose de Guatemala. How this concerns the San Salvadorans is not stated, but they demanded his surrender at La Union. Captain White refused to comply with the order and the commandant of the port refused clear his papers. He sailed without them.

Captain White no doubt had to stop at La Libertad to let off passengers. There he was told his ship would be confiscated unless he gave up the refugees, whose names were not given. He again refused to deliver up the men, who were under the protection of the United States flag, and he was not allowed to proceed on his way. The matter has been referred to the state department at Washington. In some manner the City of Panama has at least temporarily settled the trouble, for today's advices state that she has sailed direct to San Jose de Guatemala.

Judge Graves' Death.

LITCHFIELD, Conn., Aug. 12.—Henry A. Graves, one of the prominent lawyers of this state, died here of congestion of the lungs, aged sixty-eight years. He has been a judge of probate, clerk of the state senate for eight years, secretary in 1850 and clerk of the superior court and county court in 1854 and 1855. He has been seven times a member of the state house of representatives as a Democrat.

Young Men Guests Waited on Table.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 12.—The servants at the Norwood Arms, Avon-by-the-Sea, managed by Mrs. J. J. Davison, struck for more wages and fewer hours. Their demands being refused, they left the house. Mrs. Davison and her daughters did the cooking and the young men guests filled the places of the waiters at dinner.

Rollins Has Assigned.

NO HOPE FOR LOWELL.

His Physician Says the End May Come Any Moment.

BOSTON, Aug. 12.—Dr. Henry P. Walcott, James Russell Lowell's physician, says: "Mr. Lowell is a very ill man. No report of his alarming condition can be exaggerated. Up to within the last three weeks his condition was not serious, though he has not been strong for over a year. He has been suffering for a long time, but he is a man of strong resolution and great courage and he has time and time again been present at entertainments when any other man would have been in bed, and where he should have been.

"He has suffered greatly from sciatica and at times his agony has been intense. He has borne his sufferings patiently and has been thoughtful and considerate for those about him. As to the nature of his present illness I am not willing to speak. As to whether it is a general failure of his system or not I will not say. About three weeks ago Mr. Lowell's condition became alarmingly worse. His sufferings were so great that it was necessary to use opiates constantly. How long it will continue I do not know, but you can say without fear of contradiction that Mr. Lowell's condition is such that the worst may be expected at any moment."

THAT AFFAIR OF HONOR.

Fought by the New York Yacht Club's Guests.

BOTH THE MEN USED CUTLASSES.

How M. De Bardeau Is Said to Have Avenged an Insult to His Wife—He Knocked Down an American and Got Stabbed in the Shoulder.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—The report of a duel having taken place at Glen Cove, L. I., last Tuesday morning between two gentlemen who were guests on board one of the yachts of the New York Yacht club squadron is difficult of confirmation, but there seems to be no doubt but that such an encounter took place. Duels in this section of the country are so secretly planned and carried out with due regard for a probable afterclap in the shape of a contest with the law. Such a course, it would appear, was adopted in this instance, and full knowledge of it is possessed by but seven persons, none of whom will talk.

Only an accident revealed to an eighth person the meager facts which have been given publicity. The French gentleman is said to be M. Maurice De Bardeau, a Parisian, lately arrived in this country.

The Story of the Duel.

The details of the duel, as related to your correspondent, are as follows: Dinner was served on board a yacht of the New York club squadron at 8 o'clock in the Monday evening preceding the duel. As usual in such occasions wine freely flowed, and conversation took on a license which would not have been permitted in more sober moments.

He Felled the Amerikan.

One yachtsman used some slighting language when he spoke of Mme. Marie Q. De Bardeau, and M. Bardeau called him to task for it. This led to a wordy altercation, which was followed by blows, the Frenchman felling the American to the table. The American, it is said, is noted for his cleverness with his fists and with weapons, and he challenged the Frenchman to fight it out on shore in the morning. The Frenchman, being the challenged man, had the choice of weapons, and chose swords. Cutlasses being the only weapons aboard the yacht, they were forced to agree on them.

They Used Cutlasses.

A cutlass is a very heavy weapon, and is the blade of a strong man can be used most effectively. The fight is said to have been a very spirited one, neither man escaping unscathed. The Frenchman's wound, which disabled him and brought the conflict to a close, is said to be a cut in the right shoulder, extending downward across the muscles of the chest. He was carried out with the wound, and a physician was summoned from New York to attend him. The doctor pronounced the wound dangerous on account of liability of blood poisoning.

In order to avert suspicion, the story goes, it was decided to proceed with the squadron on the cruise to if nothing had happened, the doctor remaining on board to care for the injured man. So when the squadron sailed at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon, the yacht having the wounded guests on board proceeded with the rest of the squadron. Since then, it is said, it has parted from the fleet and is somewhere between New York and Vineyard Haven, still having the duellists on board.

She Says They Fought.

Mme. De Bardeau is about twenty-four years of age. She says the duel was fought about four years ago and she is said to have been the cause of a duel between her husband and a gentleman named Edward C. Le Bourgeois, who now lives in New York but at the time was a resident of New Orleans.

FRED DOUGLASS TALKS.

He Denies the Report That He Was Asked to Resign.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 12.—Ex-Minister Frederick Douglass denies the statement that his resignation from the Haytian mission was requested. "In no manner whatever," he said, "has the president or the state department ever intimated to me that my resignation would be acceptable. On the contrary I have received only the kindest treatment from both the head of the administration and the department to which I was immediately connected. The labors at Hayti had become onerous to me and my resignation therefore followed. When I was here last year I stated to the president, that I would only be able to stay in Hayti one more year." The question of color, he said, did not detract from his usefulness as minister to Hayti. On the contrary, he believed that his record and long labors for the advancement of the negro were a tremendous advantage to him. As to his future plans, Mr. Douglass said he was going to be free once more to go here and there and to resume many of the lines of labor which were sundered by leaving the country.

The Grand Circuit at Rochester.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 12.—The Rochester meeting of the grand circuit opened yesterday with one of the hottest days of the season. The track was in first class condition but the attendance, as usual, very large. In the 2:16 pacing race Grant's Abdulla won, defeating Maggie R and others.

The event of the day was the 2:30 trot for a purse of $10,000. Happy Bee won. Best time, 2:15¾.

Merlin and Owenee Aground.

Slavin Will Fight Sullivan.

LONDON, Aug. 12.—Frank P. Slavin says he will cover the $10,000 now posted by Sullivan at New York and fight the American pugilist. He adds: "I am now considering whether I will send the money before I go or wait to meet Sullivan in New York. I have not the slightest doubt as to the outcome of the fight with Sullivan."

Hanlan and O'Connor's Challenge.

BURRIE, Ont., Aug. 12—Hanlan and O'Connor authorize a double scull challenge to the world. They will row three miles against any other double for from $500 to $5,000 a side, giving or taking expenses.

Walker Curtis Coming.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Harry Curtis, England's champion amateur walker, has taken passage on the Teutonic. Curtis will remain in America permanently and intends to join the Manhattan Athletic club.

Racine Breaks the Record.

SARATOGA, Aug. 12.—Racegoers here were treated to a splendid contest when Racine beat Eon in the first race on the card and lowered the record for the distance, one mile and seventy yards, by half a second.

The Junior Champion Stakes.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The race for the junior champion stakes, distance three-quarters of a mile, with $10,000 added money, was won at Morris park by Sir Matthew, Dagonet second, and Rashford third.

Tennis at Newport.

NEWPORT, Aug. 12.—The score in the four-handed exhibition match at court tennis at the Casino yesterday, was: Standing Lawrence and Wrenn beat Pettit and Metcalf 4-6, 6-4, 6-3, 6-2.

Sullivan Challenges Stonebarn.

NEW YORK, Aug. 12.—Sullivan, the champion oarsman of New Zealand, has challenged James Stansbury to row for £300 and the sculling championship of the world.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

A mob nearly lynched the mayor and aldermen of Kansas City, Kan., because the council was accused of accepting bribes from an electric light company.

The reception of the Grand Duke Alexis in Paris, although he arrived unexpectedly, was of the most enthusiastic character.

John Amelman, an old negro criminal, dragged a woman into the woods at Great Neck, L. I., assaulted her and only escaped after life on being given fifty or sixty dollars.

The chateau of President Carnot at Prieux, which was occupied by his mother, has been looted by burglars.

A high ecclesiastical authority in Germany says that there is no obligation to believe that the Holy Coat of Treves was ever worn by Christ.

John G. Plumer, doing business as J. M. Plumer & Co., wholesale dealer in rubber goods, Boston, has filed a petition in insolvency.

Started with Non-Union Men.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 12.—The Pottsville Steel and Iron company, which shut down a long time ago on account of a strike, has started two furnaces with non-union men.

Factory Inspectors Meet.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 12.—The fifth annual convention of the International Association of Factory Inspectors has begun here. President Wade, of Boston, will probably be re-elected.

The Weather.

Probably fair to partly cloudy and much cooler.

TWO BOLD SEA FIGHTS.

WHERE AN AMERICAN FRIGATE WHIPPED CRACK FOREIGN SHIPS.

Commodore Truxtun and the Constellation in the Hostilities with France—The Insurgente Was Captured and the Vengeance Beaten with Heavy Loss.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

If fortune always favored the side having the most guns there would be no use in any battles to write about, for in that case antagonists would simply come together and parade their armament, and, the question of the best man being decided by the show, would shake hands like two old-fashioned pugilists and go home. No nation cares to fight for the fun of the thing when she knows she is certain to get the worst of it. The battle is for always to the strong, when strength is counted by the number of cannon and men. It requires daring men, however, to stand up and try the issue out when the show of odds is heavily against them. America was never born a warlike nation, but she has been favored in every crisis with men having the nerve to face anything on sea or land.

It was to have been supposed that the long war of the Revolution had exhausted the fighting courage of the patriots, and doubtless France took this view of it when she violated neutrality laws in American waters and allowed her privateers to ruin our commerce by seizing merchant ships, as she did at the outset of the last century. Such was not the case, though, and when diplomacy failed to redress the wrong, the newly established department of the navy took up the quarrel. After providing for coast defense four squadrons were sent to the French cruising grounds in the West Indies. The squadron of five vessels headed by the frigate Constellation and commanded by Commodore Thomas Truxtun, roamed in the vicinity of Porto Rico, and two fights of the Constellation alone, against crack vessels of the enemy's navy, displayed the virtue of simple nerve in deciding which is the better of two antagonists.

France was a strong naval power. America had nothing to depend on but her forests and her hearts. The people, whose business was in danger, supplied the money to bring the "hearts of oak" and live oak together, and then their beginning of the navy—for that is what it amounted to—stood ready to face the first class war vessels of the Old World.

The Constellation was a first class vessel for that day, but she hadn't proved it yet when her commander sighted her first enemy. It was in February, 1799, off the island of Nevis. Truxtun here flown on the stranger, paying no attention to her hails and signals until his vessel was abeam of the Frenchman, and then delivered a broadside. The enemy proved to be the frigate L'Insurgente, one of the fastest ships in the world, and as good a fighter as either. She answered the Constellation

PORTER SAVING THE MAST.

The Insurgente carried 40 guns and a complement of 409 men. The Constellation was of 38, with a crew of 300 men. The former vessel was badly cut up, while the American had suffered chiefly in the rigging. In this case the Constellation mounted the heavier guns of the two, having 24-pounders on her main deck, while the Insurgente carried twelves; but the commander did not know that at the outset and he sought the conflict and forced the fighting with that courage and determination that wins even in the face of odds.

Even after winning their prize the Americans had a struggle to get her to the nearest haven of the Guadeloupe, distant more than three days' sail. As soon as the Insurgente struck her colors Lieut. Rodgers and young Porter boarded her with a force of fifty cleve men to take possession and remove the prisoners. After but few of the crew had been removed, and while 173 still remained on board, it began to blow, and in a short time the victor and vanquished had parted company. Rodgers found the situation critical, for the decks of the Insurgente were covered with wreck, and the French seamen showed a disposition to rebel against the action of their commander and rise against their captors.

The hawk gratings had been thrown overboard and there were no means left to prevent a rush of the unruly, but personal courage will often make up for lack of material things, and Rodgers placed sentinels at the hatches with orders to shoot down any man who attempted to appear on deck. All the firearms of the vessel were secured and put out of reach of the Frenchmen, and then began three days of unceasing anxiety and vigilance for Rodgers, and young Porter, who seconded his chief with a big heart in a slender body. The prisoners were constantly alert to seize some chance to rise and overpower the dozen men who stood over them, but they were held down to their confinement in the lower hold and had to submit. At the end of three days the wrecked prize joined her captor, and Rodgers and Porter divided the honors of the affair with the commodore, whose daring example had not been lost on his subordinates.

When next the Constellation engaged the enemy her heavy guns had been exchanged for eighteen pounders as better suited to her size and strength than the twenty-fours with which she fought the Insurgente. Thus freshly equipped she was cruising off the island of Guadaloupe in February, 1800, when a strange sail attracted the commodore's notice. The vessel disregarded all signals, and the Constellation gave chase, and notwithstanding that closer inspection showed the stranger to be a heavy frigate mounting fifty-four guns Truxtun cleared his decks for action. The frigate, which soon ran up French colors, avoided the contest and made off before the wind, which favored her, and a race lasting thirty-six hours tested the speed and seamanship on both sides. At the close of the second day the wind favored the American, and at dark the vessels were within speaking distance. Truxtun prepared for a night battle, and instructed his officers to have the guns aimed with coolness and to make bull shots exclusively, "and fire as fast as possible when it could be done with effect."

Having made ready, the plucky commodore was about to demand surrender, when the enemy, taking everything with stealthy calmness, opened with her stern and quarter guns and sent a crashing volley into the rigging of the Constellation. Commodore Truxtun replied in a few minutes with a broadside, and the two vessels closed in for the most desperate sea fight of the war.

DEATH OF LITTLE JARVIS.

The action was about 8 o'clock and it was long after midnight when it ended and the Frenchman drew out of the contest. Meanwhile, for more than five hours, the vessels ran free side by side, often within pistol shot. The guns of the Constellation were well handled, and the enemy, which proved to be the Vengeance, received nearly two hundred shot in her hull. She was also heavily and substantially built to be wrecked by the terrible cutting, and succeeded in getting away.

When Truxtun found that Frenchman was hauling off he ordered everything made ready to resume chase. Just then it was discovered that the mainmast of the Constellation was in danger of falling, all the rigging supports having been cut away in the engagement. The men were ordered from the guns to repair the rigging and secure the mast, for without that the vessel would be useless in the chase. It was too late, however, and in a few moments mast and all fell with a crash. Several men were in the rigging, and shortly before it went down an old sailor called to the midshipman—James Jarvis—a mere boy and the youngest officer on board—that the mast would surely go. The young hero answered with the spirit of the hour, "I cannot leave my station," said he. "If the mast goes we must go with it."

All hands went over the side with the spars, and little Jarvis was lost. The Constellation was now out of the race, and the Vengeance was out of the fight because she had spars to enable her to run off.

The French vessel had suffered severely in her crew, losing 50 killed and 110 wounded. The Constellation had 14 killed and 25 wounded, 11 of these mortally, so that the deaths proved 25 in all. The French commander made the best fight he could, but was able to place twenty-six guns in a broadside, and when his crew was disabled he mustered the passengers on board to quarters.

The Constellation won a glorious victory, for the Vengeance was the superior vessel in so far as men and material count. The Vengeance was reported to have struck her colors several times during the action, but owing to the darkness this was not observed on board the Constellation, and the fight went on. Truxtun would have captured her but for the loss of the mast of the Constellation, and of course the Frenchman got the credit of robbing her of that important factor in the contest.

The battles of Truxtun with the Insurgente and the Vengeance made him famous on both sides of the water. For the first victory the London merchants sent him a present of plate valued at 600 guineas. For the action with the Vengeance congress ordered a gold medal to be struck. A resolution of congress also approved the gallantry of young Jarvis, "who preferred certain death to an abandonment of his post."

A few months after the affair with the Vengeance a treaty was made with France and hostilities came to an end.

The troubles with France ended in promise by Napoleon of indemnity for losses sustained by merchant vessels on account of the privateers. But a long time the indemnity had not been paid, and "Old Hickory" favored issuing letters of marque in retaliation. Eventually the sum was paid, but a batch of claims has been handed down through several generations, and was finally disposed of favorably to the claimants at the close of the last congress.

How to Make Essence of Beef.

Chop one pound of lean beef fine and place it with a half pint of water in a bottle, which they will only half fill. Agitate violently for half an hour, then throw on a sieve and receive the liquid in a jug. Boil the undissolved portion in a pint of water for twenty minutes. Strain and mix with the cold infusion. Evaporate the liquid to the consistence of thin syrup, adding spice, salt, etc., to suit the taste, and pour the essence while boiling hot into bottles or jars or tin cans, which must be closed up airtight and kept in a cool place.

How to Make Transfer Paper.

Take some thin post or tissue paper, rub the surface well with black lead, vermillion, red chalk or any coloring matter. Wipe the preparation well off with a piece of clean rag and the paper will be ready for use.

How to Estimate Discount by Premium.

First fix in your mind that 100 per cent. is all that there is of anything, and therefore nothing can ever decline in value more than 100 per cent., though it can advance any number of thousands. Above 100 the premium is exactly in the same figures as the per cent., but below 100 the corresponding discount is only the difference between 100 and the minor sum to which that per cent. must be added to bring it up to 100. Thus, when gold was at 60 premium, paper was at 37½ discount, because a paper dollar was worth but 62½ cents. That is, it took 62½ cents worth of paper and 60 per cent. more of 62½ cents—that is, 37½ cents—to buy a gold dollar. If gold were at 1,000 per cent. premium paper would be within a minute fraction of 91 per cent. discount.

How to Take Grease Spots from Carpets.

Lay a piece of blotting paper over the spot and set a flatiron just hot enough not to scorch on top. Change paper as often as it becomes greasy. After most of the oil has been extracted apply whiting. Brush off the whiting after a day or two and the spot will be gone.

How to Converse.

In conversation it is always well to remember the old saying "The language of fools oftentimes abounds in wisdom." No matter how wise we are we can learn from the expressed thoughts of others. Therefore it is well not to endeavor to monopolize a conversation. It is still more unmannerly to force your own opinion against that of others, especially older people. Offer your opinion respectfully and politely; if it is not accepted, hold your own counsel. Listen to the opinions of others, even though they are less enlightened than you on the subject under discussion. You may learn much from their ideas.

How to Fold an Umbrella.

Many umbrellas are broken by the careless manner in which they are folded and put aside after using in the rain. When folding an umbrella the cover should first be shaken out until all the folds lie free from the ribs. Then catch the ends of the ribs near the handle in the right hand, and closing the left hand firmly around the cover near the point, push the umbrella through it, gently turning the entire structure from left to right until all is neatly folded. After using an umbrella in the rain it should be allowed to dry, handle downward.

How to Treat a Beggar.

Chateaubriand was once asked, "Would you recommend me to apprentice my son to so and so?" and he replied, "Learn how this merchant treats the poor and then use your own judgment." There was a wisdom in this reply that should sink deep into people's hearts. Our treatment of the poor and unfortunate is the truest indication of our character. All that can be added to this excellent parable is, When one who is in want applies to you for assistance, imagine yourself in his place and "do as you would be done by."

How to Eat Radishes.

Everybody knows how to eat radishes raw with salt. But here is a plan by which a delicious breakfast dish can be made of them: Select some young round radishes, boil them for twenty minutes and serve with hot buttered toast.

How to Make Acorn Coffee.

"Acorn coffee" is much used in Germany, and preferred by some to the ordinary coffee. Some scientists claim that it is preferable to the coffee of commerce, as it does not possess the same drying properties. It is made in this way: The acorns are dried, shelled, split and roasted. When perfectly roasted a little butter is added, and then the berry is ready for brewing. In the raw state acorns are very astringent, but they lose this property in the process of roasting.

How to Expel Insects.

All insects dislike pennyroyal; its odor kills some and drives away others. Make a decoction from the green leaves of the pennyroyal plant, or, if these are unobtainable, procure some of the oil at a druggist's. Steep some pieces of cotton in either liquid and strew them where the pests exist or are suspected to be. Repeat the operation when necessary.

How to Clean Varnished Walls.

In cleaning varnished wood, paper or walls it is injudicious to use soap, as it frequently causes dull blotches or streaks to form upon the varnished surface. The best plan is to mix about a quart of vinegar to two gallons of water and wash with the solution, using a soft cloth. This will effectually clean the varnish and renovate the paint or papering.

Of What Conversation Consists.

Conversation lessons are as yet purely an American branch of study which may be classified among the arts. The teachers are as a rule disposed social leaders in reduced circumstances. The schools and reading over which neophytes are taught to avoid are long-winded anecdotes, personal and family affairs, sarcasm and scandal. The great fundamental principle taught is that a successful intelligent listener has already learned the magic secret in developing a good talker. The art of selecting suitable topics, making pleasant remarks on the affairs of the moment, laughing correctly with agreeable modulation and without giggling, all are included in the art of successful talking in which all women indulge—but in which few excel.—New York Letter.

The Collection of a Princess.

Princess Maude of Wales has a curious hobby for collecting ivory. At Marlborough House she has quite a collection of ivory curios. She has the tusks of elephants shot by her father and uncles. The emperor of Russia has enriched her museum by sending the teeth of wild boars which have fallen to his guns. There are also in the princess' collection the "ivories" of walruses, lions, tigers, sharks, seals and alligators. When the Duke of Edinburgh was a midshipman he succeeded in capturing a monster hammer head shark, the teeth of which are now in the Marlborough House museum.—London Tit-Bits.

Stewed Steak.

An economical family dish which warms up well, being even better the second day, is stewed steak. Remove all fat from two or three pounds of beefsteak and cut into pieces of convenient size for serving. Put into a stewpan with a quart of lukewarm water, two carrots cut in pieces, half a dozen peppercorns and allspice, half a teaspoonful of salt and a pinch of curry powder. Let it boil up and skim well. Then cover the stewpan and stew two hours. Take out the steak, rub into a dessert spoonful of flour as much butter as it will take up, stir this thickening into the gravy and let it come to the boil. Add a teaspoonful of mushroom or tomato catchup and stir. Return the steak to the stewpan and let it simmer in this gravy for ten or fifteen minutes.

The Care of an Oil Stove.

The preventive for a bad smell in an oil stove is to use good oil and to have the wick entirely and perfectly clean. Every day the fines over the burners must be thoroughly cleansed. Several thicknesses of old soft cotton cloth tied around a stick answer for this purpose better than any brush. The oil reservoir must on no account be filled to the brim, or the oil oozes out and creates a bad smell. Once a week it is well to wash every getatable part with hot water and soda. This thoroughly takes off any oily soot which may have accumulated and which is the chief cause of smell.

A Corner Cupboard.

Corner space may be utilized in an attractive manner as follows: A row of triangular shelves is fitted in from the floor up to a convenient height, the top being ornamented with a scroll of very pretty design. The inside of the cupboard is painted a deep yellow. A glass door closes on one-half the shelves; it is decorated with a border of ox-eye daisies painted in oil, while dainty china is nicely displayed against the bright background. The lower parts, used as a receptacle for books and magazines, has a curtain of yellow India silk, powdered with single daisies.

PERSONAL.

Mrs. C. Sandford and Miss E. Sandford of this city are at Watch Hill, R. I.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Milliken of Central avenue left yesterday for Saratoga.

Ex-Mayor VanWinkle, wife and son of Duer street, North Plainfield are at Asbury Park.

Mr. James Alpaugh of East Third street left yesterday for Clinton, N. J., to be gone two weeks.

Miss Clara B. Denton and her sister Mrs. E. W. Bliss of Hillside avenue have gone on a ten days' visit to Middletown, N. Y.

Mr. Charles Smith and family have returned to their West Front street home from a week's visit to friends in East New York.

Dr. H. K. Carroll of Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield, is at the Mountain Meadow House, Pine Hill, Ulster County, New York.

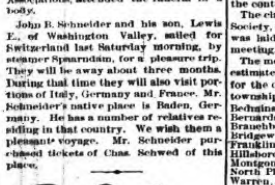
The family of Mr. Charles D. Wadsworth have returned to their home on Central avenue from their outing at Washington, Conn.

Miss Florence Marsh, of Plainfield avenue, in company with Mrs. Thomas Behn of New York, have gone upon a two weeks' vacation for the benefit of their health.

Miss Josie Caspar, daughter of Mr. Frederick Caspar of East Front street, and Mr. Stiglitz were married last evening at the residence of the bride's parents. A reception followed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Stiglitz will reside on West Front street.

The funeral of the late Clarkson B. Hoff took place from his late residence this afternoon at half-past two o'clock. The members of the various fire companies, as well as the members of the Exempt Firemen's and Firemen's Relief Associations, attended the funeral in a body.

John B. Schneider and his son, Lewis E., of Washington Valley, sailed for Switzerland last Saturday morning, by steamer Spaarndam, for a pleasure trip. They will be away about three months. During that time they will also visit portions of Italy, Germany and France. Mr. Schneider's native place is Baden, Germany. He has a number of relatives residing in that country. We wish them a pleasant voyage. Mr. Schneider purchased tickets of Chas. Schwed of this place.



—Margaret Bunsworth, a well-known character in this city, was arrested at Asbury Park yesterday for using profane and indecent language.

—The members of the Sunday-school connected with the Emanuel Mission, colored, went on their annual excursion to Boynton Beach to-day.

—The Crescents will cross bats with the Plainfield Athletic Club's nine in a game of base ball on the grounds in this city next Saturday afternoon.

—The decision of the Supreme Court of Montana upon what constitutes contempt of court is sound sense and good law. The court practically decides that contempt of court is disobedience to its process or any act in the presence or immediate vicinity of a judicial tribunal which interrupts or disturbs its proceedings. The idea that a newspaper reflection upon the integrity or ability of a judge is a contempt in the legal acceptation of that term is pronounced unwarranted.

—The borough of North Plainfield is to have a water works problem similar to that which has created so much trouble in Plainfield. J. M. Low, who has obtained Plainfield's water contract, has applied for the North Plainfield contract. The Plainfield Water Supply Company yesterday gave notice that it will turn on water in Plainfield on Saturday, and also announced its intention of extending its pipes into North Plainfield whether the Council wills it or not.—N. Y. Tribune.

—A short time ago a little daughter of Policeman Fredrickson purchased a large brass ring from an itinerant peddler. The ring resembles a gold wedding ring. A few evenings ago Mr. Fredrickson exhibited the ring to Special Policeman Glaentzer and told the latter officer that he found it. Mr. Glaentzer agreed to purchase the ring for one dollar and a half. He took the ring and went it. Last evening he returned it to Mr. Fredrickson with the astounding explanation that it was brass as it discolored his finger. The latter laughed at him. In order to square things up, however, Mr. Glaentzer sold the ring to an East Fourth street tailor for the same price as he had paid for it. The tailor thought he had a bargain but he was sadly mistaken and when he was informed of the sell he agreed to treat providing his money was returned. His offer was accepted.

The Smith Picnic.

Senator Keys received a letter, yesterday, from Gov. Abbett, saying that he would accompany the Senator to Peapack on the 26th, the day of the Smith family reunion.

CAPITAL STOCK $1,250,000.

The Duluth Manufacturing Company Will do a Large Business.

The Duluth Manufacturing Company filed articles of incorporation yesterday with the County Clerk of Union County at Elizabeth. The capital of the Company is to be $1,250,000 of which $500,000 is to be preferred and the balance in general stock. Shares are $100 each. The preferred stock is subject to redemption at par and is to be redeemed out of the net proceeds of any real estate sold by the Company. Holders of this stock are to receive eight per cent. divided yearly, to be paid in preference to any dividend on general stock.

The Company will engage in the manufacturer of railroad cars and railway supplies and equipments of all kinds, including locomotives and other rolling stock. It will do business in the States of New Jersey at Summit, New York at New York City and Duluth in Minnesota. The stockholders are: Col. Archer N. Matrin, of Summit; Stewart L. Woodford, of Brooklyn; Lucien G. Matthews, of Pee Wee Valley, Ky.; Haley Fiske, Summit; Charles W. McLellan, New York; Omar H. Simmonds, Duluth.

Board of Freeholders.

The regular monthly meeting of the Somerset County Board of Freeholders took place Tuesday at the Court House in Somerville. All the members were present.

The Finance Committee reported the expenditures for the current year (beginning May 16) up to date to be $18,715.77, which report was approved and ordered placed on file.

On motion of Mr. Vreeland the County Collector was authorized to borrow for county purposes a sum not to exceed $10,000, in anticipation of taxes.

At the afternoon session a notice was served upon the board that the title to land upon which the Sandford-avenue bridge, North Plainfield, is proposed to be built is at issue. The notice was referred to committee, with instructions that no work be done by this board until the controversy is settled.

The claim by the Millstone Vigilance Society, which was presented last month, was laid over until the next regular meeting.

The members submitted the following estimates of probable costs of bridges for the current year, in their respective townships:

Bedminster	$2,000
Bernards	2,600
Branchburg	1,500
Bridgewater	5,000
Franklin	2,000
Hillsborough	2,000
Montgomery	2,500
North Plainfield	3,500
Warren	2,200
Total	$25,300

Mr. Vreeland moved that the sum of $70,000 be raised by taxation for county appropriations for the current year. Carried.

A Suspicious Visitor.

Some evil minded person endeavored to effect an entrance into Mrs. Henry Sawyer's sleeping apartments on West Front street at about nine o'clock last evening. Mrs. Widemeyer heard the fellow, and when she inquired what he wanted she received no reply. She then ran to a front window in the house and shouted police as loud as she could. Her screams caused a large crowd of people to congregate. Policeman Cooney heard her cries for aid and ran to her assistance. He searched the premises thoroughly but failed to find any trace of the intruder, and it is thought that he made his escape down the back stair case.

Some believe that the fellow ascertained that the woman was alone and intended robbery. Mrs. Widemeyer's husband is a bar-tender in Mr. Jos. Blatz's Hotel and does not get home until a late hour nights, and to that cause the fellow's early visit is assigned.

Attractions at Boynton Beach.

For the Benefit of the Children's Home.

About fourteen young Misses, who reside in North Plainfield, held a fair at the residence of Miss Kate Powers, yesterday afternoon, for the benefit of the Children's Home. Those who had charge of the affair were Misses Edith Conover, Rosie Haynes, Minnie Gulick, Sadie Taylor, Mattie Smith, Flora Smith, Carrie Dentz, Mamie Philpitt, Bertha Philpitt, Mamie Katzenbach, Powers, Julia Williams and Belle Williams.

Fell in a Fit.

Fred. Willowbaugh, a young man residing on Liberty street while awaiting the return of the U. A. B. Society's excursion at the depot last evening, was seized with fits. The unfortunate young man went from one fit to another. In all he had thirty fits. It required the combined effort of several bystanders to hold him. When he had sufficiently recovered he was taken to his home in a carriage.

Special Letter From Washington on Various Topics of Public Interest.

WASHINGTON, D. C., Aug. 10, 1891.

It appears that after all has been said about Grover Cleveland and Jerry Simpson going to Ohio this Fall, neither of them will go there. This is sad. It seems that Simpson has employment elsewhere and Grover don't like the Democratic platform, and refuses to go.

The Treasury Department is informed that the revenue steamer Bear, Capt. Dealey commanding, sailed from Dunalaska and touched at the seal islands for the purpose of leaving instructions to the treasury agents to limit the catch of the Alaska Commercial Company this season to 7,500 seal skins. It is learned from other sources that this Company has already secured this number of skins, and that open sealing has been entirely suspended for the season.

If silver advocates could understand that free coinage of silver would contract instead of increasing the circulating medium, they would demand that the coinage thereof should be stopped instead of increased. They will see that that is the case by and by. If it does not contract the circulating medium by driving gold out of the country, then the men who have made a life-long study of finances are all mistaken.

The bureau of American republics is in receipt of information from Lieut. Sawyer, U. S. Navy, special commissioner of the World's Fair to Brazil, which indicates that interest is being manifested among the north provinces in behalf of the World's Columbian Exposition. The governor of Para, Senor Laure-Saudre, received Lieut. Sawyer and the Brazilian commissioners who were appointed to accompany him, with great cordiality, and placed at the disposal of the commissioners a room in the palace, where they are to do their work and receive collections which may be sent from the Upper Amazon ports.

Attorney General Miller has given an opinion to the Treasury Department to the effect that no authority now exists in law for the payment of interest on refunds made in conformity with judgments obtained in cases of appeal from decisions of the board of general appraisers under section 15 of the customs administrative act.

Democrats can never forgive Quay for electing Harrison President. He managed the Republican campaign well and knew more about the management of the Democratic committee than Brice, its chairman, did. His successor, W. F. Clarkson, is another quiet but shrewd politician and the Democrats will need an abler man than C. S. Brice to cope with him.

A statement prepared at the Pension office shows that during the month of July last there were issued 28,107 pensions, aggregating in first payments $3,576,855.23, of which the average to each pensioner was $127.26.

Last week it was discovered at the Brooklyn navy yard that frauds were being committed on the government in the docks and yards bureau by means of duplicate pay checks. The discovery was made by Paymaster George B. Griffin. Capt. Erben, commandant of the yard, at once created a board of investigation, composed of Commander Shepard, Lieutenant Commander Lillie, and Paymaster Pearson. The findings of the board are in the hands of the Secretary of the Navy.

Referring to this matter Assistant Secretary Soley said that while the board had not been ordered to continue its investigations into other bureaus looking for "loose places," it was likely that such an order would be issued. He regarded to Brooklyn. He then added: "The board will not be dismissed just yet."

From the drift of Assistant Secretary Soley's remarks it was thought that the impression would obtain this board to examine all the navy yards on the Atlantic coast, including the Washington yard, for "loose places." The board is already in existence and its experience at the Brooklyn yard would be of great help to it in an investigation into the methods of other yards.

Acting Secretary Nettleton has telegraphed the collector of customs at New York to release seizures in mails, without fine, whenever duty does not exceed 25 cents, lottery matter, however, excepted.

NO LEGAL EXISTENCE.

Citizens of Cranford Define the Standing of the Water Company.

The newly-organized Union Water Company "is without legal existence, and all of its acts under its organization are null and void." That is the edict promulgated by the committee appointed at Tuesday's mass-meeting of the citizens of Cranford.

The committee also decided the company a "menace to the natural interests of Cranford."

Here is the finding of the committee: The Union Water Company as organized in 1876 was and is a live corporation at this date, and that the attempt at organization recently made by Messrs. Ham, Cahill, Voorhees, Bergen, Kane and others, under the style of the Union Water Company, has no legal standing.

The legal company had no representative present. Lawyer H. Wilbur stated for the old incorporators, who opposed the new company, that they held 700 of the 1,100 shares of the original stock. These 700 shares they would hand over to trustees without money and without price, and the people of Cranford could subscribe for them. The idea of disposing of the stock was to get money to pay the expenses of a legal contest. The original stockholders were willing to stand their share of the expense by resubscribing for stock, but they did not propose to fight the battle for the people single-handed. If the people did not take the stock outsiders would, but at any event an effort would be made to prevent "those men from Elizabeth stealing the Rahway river."

Mr. Hale thought that the charter was a dangerous one in the hands of any set of men, for under it they could lay pipes in any street in the village without even saying to the people "if you please."

Lawyer Wilbur admitted that was so, and further, in his opinion, the charter compelled the company to take water from the Rahway river until that supply was exhausted.

Alden Bigelow said the charter was originally obtained to prevent the city of Elizabeth taking the river water.

It was resolved to take subscriptions for the stock and these men subscribed:

Edward Beadle, 20 shares; John Hagaman, 20; E. W. Austin, 10; Capt. H. A. Warren, 20; F. D. Van Benum, 10; J. C. Hunt, 5; Charles Leo Abry, 3; E. B. Horton, 5; Upton O. Grow, 10; L. Wood, 5; H. Wilbur, 5; R. E. Clement, 5; A. E. Madden, 5; Kenyon Messick, 5; James Rogers, 5; R. Imbhorst, 5; Alden B. Bigelow and W. D. Bigelow, each 50, and 50 additional if necessary; L. P. V. Bryner, 5; J. A. Hibben, 5; T. W. Berger, 1; W. V. Redfern, 5; James H. Partridge, 10; G. E. Brown, 5. Total 271, and 100 conditionally.

The meeting then broke up, the new company said the action taken by the people in subscribing for the stock, or any other action they might take, would not make the least difference to the new company, for it was the only company legally organized to act under the charter, and it would go on with its work at the proper time. It is conceded that the matter will have to be settled by the courts.

BLOCKED THE ROAD TO THE FARM.

Suit for $10,000 Damages is Brought Against the Railroad.

Sarah E. Seaton and Amelia E. Benedict, of Union Township, brought suit yesterday in the Union County Court, at Elizabeth, against the Newark and Bolyden Coal Company, a branch of the Lehigh Valley, for $10,000 damages. They charge that the Company seized and filled up an embankment twenty feet high, a private road that led direct from the public road through the plaintiffs' farm to the dwellings, granaries and other buildings on it.

The plaintiffs jointly own a farm of 100 acres in Union Township on the road leading from Roselle to Cranford.

The railroad company has built a wall of earth along part of the highway after securing by condemnation proceedings all the land wanted for the railroad. It is claimed that by an agreement with the owners of the farm the private road to it was to remain undisturbed.

One Sunday recently, however, when the occupants of the farm got up, to their dismay and astonishment they found that during the night a gang of railroad men had blocked the only avenue leading to and from the farm by piling earth on it.

The railroad company opened another road across its tracks, about half a mile below the farm. By this circuitous route the dwellers on the farm, if they wished, could carry their farm products.

Mrs. Seaton was not disposed to submit tamely to the barrier to the road that had been built nearly a century for the benefit and convenience of the farm. She conferred with Mrs. Benedict and instructed her lawyer, Congressman Parrot and ex-Judge Alward, to bring suit against the railroad company for exemplary damages.

The papers in the case were served on the railroad authorities yesterday.

Attempted Suicide.

A man employed by W. H. Alten, on one of the Veghte farms, near Somerville, acted rather strangely Tuesday. He procured a revolver and shot himself three times in the head. He did himself serious injury, but escaped inflicting a few bad scalp wounds. Dr. Stillwell was called, but before he arrived at the house the man had packed up his apparel and left. His mind was considered affected.

Gen. Butler Not Dead.

BOSTON, August 13th. (Special.)—The story in circulation that General Butler died last night, and published throughout the country, is without any foundation in fact, as he is alive and well.

THE PLEBEIAN ANGLER.

Who shall say that the plebeian angler does not enter upon the untangling of his cotton lines, the trimming of his new cut pole and the digging of his worms with as much zest as his brother of the finer cast on the testing and mending of lacewood or split bamboo rod, the overhauling of silken lines and leaders and assorting of flies?

Considering the younger generation of anglers, one finds more enthusiasm among those who talk learnedly of all the niceties of the art. They scorn all fish not acknowledged as game. They plan more, though they may accomplish less than the common sort to whom all of fishing tackle is a pole, a line and hook. To them fishing is but fishing, and fish are only fish, and they will go for one or the other when the signs are right and the day propitious.

Descending to the least and latest generation of anglers, we see the conditions reversed. The youth born to rod and reel and fly is not so enthusiastic in his devotion to the sport as the boy whose birthright is only the pole that the craftsman never fashioned, the kinky lines of the country store, and hooks known by no maker's name, for it is not in the nature of a boy to hold any nicety in sport of any sort, and this one, being herein unrestrained, enters upon the art called gentle with all the wild freedom of a youngsavage or half-grown mink.

For him it is almost as good as going fishing to unearth and gather in an old teapot the worms that swarm every one of which is to his sanguine vision the promise of a fish. What completeness of hapiness for him to go fishing with his father or grandfather, or the acknowledged great fisherman of the neighborhood, a good-for-nothing set, by the by, but wise in all the ways of fish and their taking, and very careful and kind to little boys.

The high-hole never cackled so merrily, nor meadow lark sang sweeter, nor grass and grain greener, nor the shoe brighter than to the boy when he goes a fishing has accomplished. To him is welcome everything that comes from the waters, be it trout, bass, perch, bullhead or sucker, and he hath pride even in the abominable but toothsome eel and the uneatable bowfin.

PARADE AND INSPECTION.

First Regiment, U. R., K. of P., Will Visit Plainfield.

The annual parade and inspection of the First Regiment, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, Col. George H. Rhodes commanding, will Plainfield, on Wednesday, September 16, and is expected to be of unusual interest to all members of the Order.

Headquarters will be established at Plainfield, where commandants of Divisions will report. The line will be formed promptly at one o'clock.

The Grand Lodge, K. of P., of this State at its last session appropriated $100 as drill prizes to be distributed as follows: First, $50; second prize $30 and third prize $20, to be given to the three best drilled Divisions in the Regiment.

The eleven divisions comprising the regiment are Palestine No. 1, of Jersey City; Damascus, of Elizabeth; Bush Prince No. 4, of Newark; Friendship No. 5, of New Brunswick; Red Cross No. 6, of Long Branch; Monmouth No. 9, of Red Bank; Ortygia No. 10, of Phillipsburg; Excelsior No. 11, of Trenton; Crescent No. 18, of Plainfield and Oulanthe No. 14 of Asbury Park. Each division will parade 400 men all told in line, and will make a handsome appearance.

Division No. 18, of Plainfield, is making extensive preparations for receiving and entertaining the Sir Knights.

Base Ball.

In commenting on the ball game between the Crescents and West Ends, last Saturday afternoon, the Somerville Messenger has the following to say:

It is a funny thing that, in spite of the fact that the West Ends outplayed and outbatted the Crescents, yet they did not win—but that is the funny part of base ball.

The credit for the Crescents winning must all be given to the only man who knows anything about ballplaying in Plainfield—the great and only "Tee Kay," for the past week the team has been under his able and efficient guidance, and to say that he makes them play ball, that's the same as telling the truth. Their improvement in batting was marked indeed, and the placing of the men in the field certainly reflects credit upon him.

In Saturday's game Freddie Jones in center field put up a game of the gilt edged or ler, while at the bat he waited. He therefore made a home run in winning the game to the extent of two runs and a pretty single.

Tee Kay Bonner has at last been persuaded to don the protector while catching, and I am inclined to think that the reason he was not in one of the eastern games of last week, he found the ball to be a little too hard. Bonner, in time, will no doubt be a first-class man but just now he seems to be a little anxious. To see him snatch the ball off the ground reminds one of a fakir in a dime museum, who picks up a red hot piece of iron, and is only too willing to drop it. Bonner is quickness personified, and it is a wise move in allowing him to catch.

Wm. Huston, engineer, Weehawken N. J.: 'I know that Dr. Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy' is an honest preparation. I su. ered from Dyspepsia and Kidney Complaints for years and was cured by 'Favorite Remedy'."—Adv.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company will be Ready on and after the 15th inst. to supply water to parties residing along the lines of its mains.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS, PLAINFIELD, N. J., THURSDAY, AUGUST 13, 1891.

Chicago to New York—Unless you answer Brooklyn we will pass you in the race for population before 1900.

The Majestic, queen of the ocean, with her new record of 5 days 48 hours and 8 minutes from Queenstown to Sandy Hook, is all very well. It is thirty-six minutes faster than the City of Paris, the now deposed queen, could make, and will stand as very good traveling for a steamer made of steel and iron. But just wait till we get aluminum ships. It will not require 300 tons of coal a day to propel them through the ocean, or five days for them to cross it.

In his graciousness to the American World's fair commissioners, German Chancellor Caprivi even goes so far as to hint that Emperor William himself may visit our exposition. If he should it will be the first time that any of the crowned heads of Europe have deigned so visit us, although Louis Philippe did so during an interim when he was out of a situation. If the little kaiser should come, however, we will welcome him splendidly and give him some lessons on the liberty of the press that will do him good all the rest of his life. For the first, perhaps the only time, in his imperial life he will find himself in a country where the newspapers will say what they please about him, under his very nose.

Negroes for Liberia.

Five times since the war an attempt has been made to induce a great migration movement of Americans to Liberia, and four times it has failed. Ex-Senator Bruce declares the fifth experiment is going to fail, too, but perhaps Mr. Bruce does not know.

Certain it is that Benjamin Gaston, a colored citizen of Liberia, but a native of the United States, is now in this country, traveling through the south making speeches, endeavoring by all means in his power to stir up among the colored people an enthusiasm for Liberia. His headquarters are in Washington. Mr. Gaston is agent for the Liberian Emigration company, of which President Cheeseman, of the republic of Liberia, himself is president. With Gaston is Captain Murray, of a Liverpool steamship line, which wants the job of transporting American colored people to Africa.

Captain Murray declares his company has in Liberia a thousand miles of land waiting for colonists, and the soil is productive, and the climate healthful. The best mahogany wood in the world is comprised within this thousand miles, and there are many other sources of vast wealth. In brief, these gentlemen eloquently urge the colored man to migrate to Liberia, where he can be somebody, and not only that, but a rich somebody.

Reciprocity With Spain.

The new American doctrine of reciprocity with other nations is bearing fruit all over the western continent. The most important step gathered in Europe as yet is the international copyright law. But a long step has also been taken in the new reciprocity treaty with Spain. This, to be sure, only covers Cuba and Porto Rico, but it may mean ultimately the annexation of Cuba to the United States. This was what Spain feared, and therefore stated as long as she could before coming to the point, but yielded gracefully at last.

In 1872 coffee from all over the world was admitted free into the Union. But nearly all our coffee comes from Brazil, so that this staple is supplied from the western continent. When, now, by the reciprocity treaty with Spain we get free sugar from Cuba and Porto Rico, we shall have what England has not even yet—a "free breakfast," since most Americans take coffee with sugar in it at breakfast. From and after Sept. 1 all ports of entry in the Spanish islands of Cuba and Porto Rico will be open free of duty to a long list of articles from the United States, chief among which are fish, lard, tallow, all cereals except wheat, and all kinds of salt or preserved meats except jerked beef.

A curious relic of government polity shows how Spain clings to the past. When America was first discovered the sole end and aim of that discovery was considered to be the enrichment of Spain. New colonies in the western hemisphere were planted only to be squeezed to the utmost to pour wealth into the coffers of Spain. Much of the same idea prevails to this day. The inhabitants of Cuba are quite as much Spanish subjects as those at home in Spain. Yet their government treats them as foreigners. It would be to their interest to get American wheat and flour free. But that would prevent Spanish farmers from sending these articles to Cuba at extortionate prices; therefore wheat and flour are excepted from the free list. The duty on these goods, however, been so much modified that, in connection with free machinery, oils and all material for public works, this country will get a very good equivalent for letting molasses, sugars, hides and coffee in free from the Spanish West Indies. The duty on American flour sent to Cuba will be at the rate of about one dollar per barrel.

KILLED BY THE CYCLONE

Many People Crushed to Death by a Barge's Roof.

FOURTEEN IS THE NUMBER DEAD.

The Steamboat Crystal Stream and the Barge Republic, Loaded with Excursionists, Meet with Disaster at Cold Spring Grove, L. I.

HUNTINGTON, L. I., Aug. 13.—The employes of Theodore Hayner, a Brooklyn dry goods merchant, gave an excursion to Warpes' Grove, Cold Spring Harbor Wednesday afternoon by the excursion steamer Crystal Spring and the barge Republic. The party, which numbered nearly 600 souls, had a very pleasant day's enjoyment, and about 3 o'clock they embarked on the vessels for the journey home. Just as they were leaving the dock a violent cyclone struck the party on the land and struck the barge. The awning of the upper deck was wrenched from its fastenings, lifted high in the air and fell with a terrific crash and destructive force upon the crowded deck.

A Wild Panic Ensued.

A scene of wild confusion and panic ensued which beggars description. The screams of the women and children, of which the excursion party was mainly composed, were heard above the roar of the storm and the groans of the wounded and dying could be plainly heard above the rumbling of the thunder. Inky black clouds made it almost as dark as night and at every lightning flash those on board the steamer saw a great mass of persons struggling to extricate themselves from the debris of the wreck and ruin of the awning. The boats were hastily tied up to the dock again and those on the steamer, aided by the villagers and hurried to the scene, began the work of rescuing those on board the barge.

Fourteen Dead Bodies.

The debris was soon cleared away and the bodies of the dead and the injured were taken from the barge and put on board the steamer, where the wounded received every attention. Fourteen persons were found to have perished by the storm which had sprung up with such frightful suddenness, changing a scene of gayety to one of grief and suffering.

The Barge Owner Censured.

The coroner immediately summoned a jury, and after an examination permitted the removal of the bodies. The jury in its verdict strongly censured the owner of the excursion barge for carelessness, as the vessel was found to be as rotten as punk and totally unseaworthy. The bodies of the dead were sent to their late homes in Brooklyn last night. Among the killed are the following:

A List of the Dead.

"Coonie" Goots, twenty years, daughter of Joseph Goots, furniture dealer, Ewen and Stagg streets, Brooklyn, E. D.

Joseph Hoffman, forty years.

Miss Katie Goots, twenty years, daughter of William Kauts, 127 Graham avenue, Brooklyn, E. D.

Bertie Landgraf, twenty-eight years.

Mrs. Anton Leberbinck, thirty-two years old, 126 Graham avenue.

Mrs. Caroli Prins, fifty-three years, 214 Driggs street, reenpoint.

Pauline Prins.

Lizzie Schembat, nine years old, daughter of Charles Schoenhut, 214 Driggs street, Greenpoint.

Mrs. Charles Schneider, 414 South Fifth street, Brooklyn, E. D.

Millie Schneider, about four years of age.

Robert Schlüter, the pilot of the barge.

Unknown woman, about twenty years of age an unknown child.

Fifteen or twenty were injured, some of them so badly that they cannot recover. The majority of these were taken to a hotel at the scene of the disaster. The following were brought to Williamsburg on the Crystal Stream:

Miss F. Isselman, of 109 Skillman street; leg broken.

Taken to friends at 86 Lorimer street:

Miss E. Weber, of Middle Village; right arm broken and cut head.

Adolph Lutz, 163 Graham avenue.

Caught the Wind's Full Force.

Captain Michael Ryan said he saw the squall coming and made every preparation possible to secure the safety of his passengers. The curtains were lashed down all around, and the fact is a pocket was formed of the canvas, which caught the full strength of the wind. It was some time after the first crash, and while the work of rescue was going on, that it was said several people had been swept off the barge by the wind or falling timbers, and were either struggling in the water, which was beaten almost to a foam by the wind, or had been carried away. But no bodies were washed ashore, and although boats were put out no one was found alive in the water.

Scenes of the Horror.

The place where the disaster occurred is at the head of Cold Spring harbor, not far from Laurelton. It is a favorite picnic ground. The bodies of the dead on the barge and the sad results that followed are, it is said, due entirely to the rotten condition of the supports. Many of the bodies carried home with them pieces of the center posts, which show that they were rotten at the core. The barge itself, it is said, is unsafe in other particulars.

The News Received in Williamsburg.

The news of the accident reached Williamsburg at about 7 p. m. The particulars in the excursion hailed for the most part from that section of the burg known as Dutchtown. The residents of the locality were panic stricken.

By 8:30 o'clock probably a thousand people were on the pier at South Fifth street. The majority of these were women, and their suspense was most pathetic. But there were plenty of men, too, who, white faced and haggard, watched the dark river beyond with straining eyes. When the Crystal Stream was in sight sighted several women fainted, and the police had all they could do to keep the crowd from rushing pellmell upon the steamer when she reached the pier.

A Survivor's Story.

George Peters, of 101 Ewen street, who was slightly bruised about the body, said: "Everybody had gone on board both barge and steamer and they were just preparing to cut off the hawsers when a cyclone struck the barge and threw it over to one side. They had just pulled down the canvas on one side to protect those on board from the rain which was commencing to fall, when a fearful gust of wind lifted the roof off and carried it, with the pilot house and everything else, over against the side nearest the dock. A number of people were crushed between the edge of the roof, which dropped down when the supports broke, and I think most of those that were killed had their lives crushed out in that way."

THE POET LOWELL'S END.

He Was Anxious for the Coming of the Great Reaper.

BOSTON, Aug. 13.—The funeral services of James Russell Lowell, who died Aug 13, will be held in Appleton chapel, Cambridge, at noon Friday. Bishop-elect Phillips Brooks will officiate. The exact cause of Mr. Lowell's death is not determined, but it is understood that gout brought on liver trouble and led to complications too serious for a man of Mr Lowell's age and feebleness to resist. On Sunday bowel trouble developed, making the case hopeless.

The poet was taken ill about five weeks ago. About two weeks ago he became delirious, and until Monday last was conscious only at brief intervals.

He Met His End Resigned.

The sudden appearance of hot weather had a very bad effect upon the patient. On Monday afternoon, when the nurses were changing the bedding, he suffered so much when moved, and finally said "Oh, why don't you let me die!" These words were his last. He seemed from that time to lose consciousness, and gradually he faded away. Few outside the members of his own family knew how severe were his physical sufferings the past year. These few knew also with what heroic patience and fortitude he bore them.

Good Stories About the Deceased.

Houghton, Mifflin & Co., who had been Mr. Lowell's publishers for more than thirty years, say the manuscript was always in his own handwriting, was perfectly legible and had few erasures, was a charming model and did not write these in short, informal note without making it bright, witty and characteristic.

His Influence with Gladstone.

A person who claims to know the facts says that Mr. Gladstone declared to an American visitor that it was to the unanswerable arguments and the flawless logic of Mr. Lowell that his own conversion to home rule for Ireland was due. The same gentleman states that so far from any decline having taken place in Mr. Lowell's republican principles during his residence in England, he was, if anything, more intensely American than ever.

Lowell and Cleveland.

Lowell also entertained a warm feeling of friendship for ex-Secretary Bayard. The incident has been already in print of Mr. Lowell's famous call upon President Cleveland to pay attention to Bayard, the man who had come "with his head under his arm" to have the service of the executioner. Mr. Lowell then called upon the secretary of state and a conversation like this ensued: "Bayard, your party has put a pretty wise, clear headed man into the White House. "Oh, you have made that discovery, have you?" remarked the secretary. "Yes, I did make that discovery, but it was the only one I did make, for after we had talked together about a couple of hours I found he had pumped me dry and still kept me in utter ignorance of what was in his own mind."

James Russell Lowell's Career.

Had Mr. Lowell lived until the next Washington's Birthday he would have been just seventy-two years of age. He was graduated from Harvard College in 1838, in a fine old colonial mansion called Elmwood, a house which his father before him had purchased of Elbridge Gerry, one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and which was in Mr. Lowell's possession at the time of his death. The family, from the first American ancestor, Percival Lowell, who came from Bristol, England, in 1630, was always remarkable for literary gifts and for a rare vigor of intellect.

When young Lowell was only sixteen years of age he was already prepared and had entered Harvard college, and in 1838 he was graduated. It seems to have been the original plan that Lowell's career should be at the bar, and he studied at the Harvard law school and was admitted to practice.

The Bigiow Papers.

He very soon deserted his Blackstone, however, and at twenty-one, while deeply in love with Miss Maria White, published his first volume of poems. He married Miss White in 1844. She had a great influence upon his career and made a strong abolitionist of him. She died in 1853.

In 1845 his name appeared as corresponding editor of The Anti-Slavery Standard. In this paper his poems from 1843 to 1848 were generally first printed. But it was in the Boston Courier that the first of the celebrated "Bigiow Papers" appeared. They began in the issue of June 1, 1846, and ended in 1848.

This remarkable satire was the foundation of Lowell's literary fame. Its success was immediate and universal. The work consisted of a series of poems in the Yankee dialect, ostensibly written by Hosea Bigiow. In the main it was a satire on the Mexican war, but there was scarcely any oant or sham particularly prevalent at the time which did not come in for a keen thrust. In it the then despised abolitionists found a champion who turned the gibes of enemies into homerangs, which bruised sorely wherever they hit.

The Outbreak of the War.

In 1864 he produced his second volume of poetry, containing thirty sonnets and thirty-three miscellaneous poems. Among the poems was the "Legend of Brittany," and among the sonnets were those addressed to Wendell Phillips and Joshua R. Giddings. The next remarkable production of Lowell was "The Vision of Sir Launfal," one of his very best productions. It was composed at a single stretch of work of more than forty-eight hours' duration, during which he neither ate or slept. In 1846 there appeared another volume of poems, and the same year he published the "Fable for Critics," an amusing hit at American poets in which the writer hit himself as hard as he hit his neighbors.

In 1860 a collected edition of his poems in two volumes was published. In 1855, however, Mr. Longfellow resigned the professorship of modern languages and belles lettres in Harvard university and Mr. Lowell was appointed to the vacant chair. Mr. Lowell was also the first editor of The Atlantic Monthly. The outbreak of the war found Mr. Lowell's anti-slavery ardor, and there was very soon a revival of the famous "Bigiow papers" in The Atlantic Monthly. The papers were as great a success in their way as had been their predecessors. They went straight to the heart of the people of the north. Like the first of the Bigiow series, this slavery war chapter is destined to last as long as the history of the republic is told.

His Political Career.

In 1876 Mr. Lowell was a presidential elector and in the year following, 1877, he was appointed him to the Spanish mission. He remained at Madrid until 1880, when he was transferred to the Court of St. James. How brilliantly successful was Mr. Lowell's representation of the country in England is still fresh in people's minds, and was as honorable to him as it was to the republic.

His life there, however, was saddened by the prolonged illness and finally death in [illegible] of his second wife, which he had married in 1857. She was Miss Frances Dunlap, [illegible]

Mr. Curtis read recalled Mr. Lowell in 1885.

Bret Harte's Tribute.

LONDON, Aug. 13.—Bret Harte writes to the United Press representative, relative to the death of James Russell Lowell: "To my pride as an American in the grand attainments and living appreciation shown for Lowell's intellect and character, personally here I have to add my own sorrow for the loss of one of the most fastidious and cultured professors of my calling, and one of the gentlest, yet manliest critics."

GEORGE JONES' OBSEQUIES.

The Famous Editor Will Be Buried on Friday.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The body of the late George Jones, editor of the New York Times, who died Aug. 12 at Poland Springs, was brought home accompanied by his family at 11 o'clock last night, and was taken to his residence, No. 58 West Thirty-seventh street. The funeral services will be held at 10 o'clock Friday morning at All Soul's Church, Sixtieth street and Lexington avenue.

George Jones was born of Welsh parentage at Poultney, Vt., Aug. 12, 1812. He was an orphan at the age of thirteen, and began to make his own way in the world as an errand boy in the country store of Amos Bliss at Poultney.

Mr. Bliss also published The Northern Spectator, and had Horace Greeley as an apprentice. Mr. Jones and Mr. Greeley then formed a friendship which lasted long. At the age of nineteen Mr. Jones came to New York, renewed his acquaintance with Mr. Greeley and was for a time employed in the business department of The Tribune. Here he formed the acquaintance of Henry J. Raymond, at that time an editorial writer on The Tribune, with whom he subsequently joined, with others, in founding the New York Times. After a short stay in The Tribune counting room Mr. Jones moved to Albany, where he established a news agency.

Mason and Mr. Raymond had made some strides in politics and made his mark as a member of the assembly and speaker, and had kept up the talk with Mr. Jones and other friends as to the starting of a new newspaper. The result was that the New York Times was started in 1851 with a capital of $100,000.

While Henry J. Raymond lived he controlled the editorial policy of the paper. After his death Mr. Jones got to be counted the state and a conversation like this caused

HIS BODY IN THE WELL.

Mrs. Short Dreamed Where Her Husband Lay.

SHE FREQUENTLY SAW HIS GHOST.

Where She Died the Well Was Explored, and at its Bottom Lay the Remains of Her Late Lord and Master—A Strange Story from Long Island.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The sudden death of Mrs. Ellen Short, of Jamaica, L. I., and the result of the investigation of a vision she claimed appeared to her, have cleared up a mystery which has puzzled the residents of that quiet town for over a year.

Mrs. Short died last Monday at her home on Washington street, and shortly before her death repeated to one of her children the story of a dream she had often had. It was that she saw the body of her husband, who had mysteriously disappeared on July 14, 1890, lying at the bottom of a big well in the Long Island railroad round house. A search party found the body.

William Short was car cleaner in the employ of the Long Island railroad. On the morning of July 14 he was left alone in the engine house and was never seen alive again. Mrs. Short was left to provide for a family of seven children.

Cause to Her in a Dream.

It was believed at first that Short had abandoned his family. Mrs. Short did not believe it, and soon afterward a vision appeared to her while she slept which quieted her disbelief. One night, she said, she was awakened from a sound sleep and saw plainly in the dim light of the moon her husband, who told her to have some one look in the well, into which he had fallen.

She Had a Hard Struggle.

Mrs. Short repeated this story to some of her neighbors, but they were unsympathetic. The railroad officials were told about it. They refused to investigate. The oldest boy of the family had for some time held a position in the telegraph office of the railroad. He was discharged soon after his father's disappearance, and the loss of his income was a serious one to his mother. She tried every kind of work to provide food for her children, even working for farmers in their fields. It was no unusual thing for her to spend an entire day seeking work and then have to send the children to bed without a bit to eat.

Death Relieved Her.

On Monday, after such an unsuccessful day, she came home utterly worn out and dropped into a chair hardly able to speak. She sent one of her daughters out to get some coffee. Several others of her children who climbed into her lap and then leaned back in her chair. The children played around softly so as not to disturb her. Finally, when she did not get up to prepare the supper one of the youngest pulled her by the dress. There came no answer from the white lips and when the daughter returned with the water she saw that her mother was dead.

One of the boys told the coroner that the day before his father died she had had another sight of her husband's ghost. The coroner had not heard the story before, and he interested several men in it and got up a search at midnight.

They Found His Body.

William Magale, who was in charge of the engine house at 1 o'clock yesterday morning, volunteered to go down the well. It is about fifteen feet wide and sixty feet deep. A pair of rickety stairs circle about the sides, and the descent was dangerous. Magale, lantern in hand, finally reached the bottom and looked about.

The first thing to catch his eye was the body of a man lying at full length, with a piece of timber across it. Two or three others descended and saw the same fearful sight. By the clothing it was known as Short's. The bodies of husband and wife will be buried together.

Editor Crossdale's Funeral.

NEW YORK, Aug. 13.—The funeral of W. E. Crossdale, the late editor of the Standard, the single tax organ, took place from the rooms of the Manhattan Single Tax club. The services were conducted by Father Huntington and Henry George. The latter paid a high tribute to his deceased collaborateur. The remains were interred at the Fresh Pond crematory. Louis F. Post will for the present succeed Mr. Crossdale as editor of The Standard.

The Charleston May Go to Salvador.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 13.—Edgar Lauterbach, of New York, attorney for the Pacific Mail Steamship company, has seen the president about the seizure of the steamship City of Panama by San Salvadorian authorities. The president telegraphed to the state department for full particulars and to the secretary of the navy to keep the United States steamer Charleston at San Francisco in case she be needed for active service.

A Jeweler's Clerk Robbed by a Woman.

OMAHA, Aug. 13.—Chief Detective Haze, of this city, received a telegram from Denver asking him to look out for Maria Sebes, wanted on a charge of stealing $5,500 worth of diamonds from a Denver jewelry firm. A clerk who bought the diamonds to her house was drugged by the woman, who then fled with the gems.

Scotch Crofters for Vancouver.

WINNIPEG, Man., Aug. 13.—Colonel English and Major Clarke are here en route to British Columbia in connection with a scheme to settle 6,000 Highland Scotch crofters on Vancouver island. These crofters are all members of the royal naval reserve, and John Bull wants them here in case of emergency on the Pacific coast.

Dr. Scott Leaves Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13.—The Rev. Dr. Scott, the father-in-law of President Harrison, has left the city. Washington newspapers say he has gone for a visit to his son, Judge John Scott, in Portland, Ore. It is alleged, however, that he and the president have had trouble.

Mr. Scott Getting Better.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 13.—Ex-Congressman Scott's condition is slightly improved. His physician said: "I am confident that Mr. Scott will recover. I consider that he has passed the turning point. I shall strongly urge that he go abroad during the presidential campaign.

SHE IS IN THE BALLET.

A Buffalo Society Woman Leaves Home for the Stage.

BUFFALO, Aug. 13.—Society circles are all agog over the announcement that Mrs. Emma Crosby, wife of Dr. John Crosby, a prominent physician of this city, had joined the Carlton Opera company as a chorus singer, and that she appeared on the stage in Washington last night as a student in "Amorita" dressed in tights. Mrs. Crosby is a very handsome blonde, and is of almost perfect physical proportions. Her husband enjoys a large practice and she had almost everything that could be desired.

She became infatuated with the stage and when the Carlton Opera company was in this city she applied for a position in the company. She was told that she must study at the Lexington last night at 8 o'clock. Her husband objected, but that did not deter, her and on Sunday she left with the company for Washington. It is said that Dr. Crosby is much distressed over his wife's conduct. His office was closed today and the doctor could not be found.

Mill and Bulkeley's Acquisition.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Aug. 13.—Sheriff Brown went to Albany with requisition papers for James Mill, indicted for highway robbery. Governor Mill told the officer that he saw no reason for changing his opinion, previously given the people of Connecticut concerning Mr. Bulkeley. The sheriff told him that Governor Russell, of Massachusetts, and Governor Brown, of Rhode Island, had recognized Governor Bulkeley, and that Judge Seymour, of the supreme court, had declared him de facto governor. Governor Mill said he never read of the supreme court decision, and asked that a copy be sent to him.

They Won't Go to Liberia.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 13. — Ex-Senator Bruce has the faith in Liberia as a place of refuge for the freedmen of America. "This is the fifth distinct effort that has been made since the war," he said today, "to induce the colored people to cast their fortunes with the denizens of Liberia, but I predict that its failure will be quite as dismal as was the failure of the four preceding ones. The colored people are not in sympathy with it."

He Eloped with Two Women.

ANNANDALE, Minn., Aug. 13.—Charles W. Winslus, a barber hailing from Minneapolis, has eloped with two pretty women at the same time, both of them married to prosperous men and each of them the mother of three children. They are Mrs. Samuel Wells and Mrs. Leander Watts.

WOMAN'S HOME

HOME ENTERTAINMENT.

A Frank and Sensible Discussion of the Part That Dancing Takes in It.

My appeal is addressed to the upper middle class, in whose hands the progress of the community really lies. There is good reason to believe that with this class dancing has less firm hold than would appear, and, indeed, that it only keeps its place because no more reasonable form of social intercourse has been devised. Certainly, with them the practice is not specially framed for the objectionable features which are peculiar to the modern style, and no protest would be raised against any change that would preserve the social usefulness.

Two things are needed—the round dance must give place either to the minuet and other old dances, or, if possible, to new forms where there is no greater familiarity than the touching of hands; and the total amount of dancing must be brought into a better proportion with other kinds of social entertainment. The second of these demands is, perhaps, the more serious, for it involves the difficult question of what is to fill up the blanks.

It is so convenient when you get all your friends together to set them dancing till it is time for supper. You have not asked them to meet each other because you fancied that they had any ideas or tastes in common, but simply because they have entertained you and you must repay them. The only thing you know they can all do and care to do is to dance. Now, why not put an end to all this fictitious kind of entertainment? To a large extent it is the result of indolence.

Parents find it the easiest way to amuse their daughters. It is too much trouble and perhaps expense to take them to concerts, to the theater, to lectures. The sons can find amusement for themselves, but for the daughters—let us give a dance. And then all the people we ask will ask them back, and quite a number of evenings will be disposed of. The dancing party at present is largely usurping the place that should be filled by the means of public entertainment and culture. Let us narrow our circle of friends to the people whom we really wish to see for their own sakes, and we shall then not only have more leisure for other pursuits, but find less difficulty and more satisfaction in giving our guests a pleasant evening when we do invite them.

What, then, is the ideal of an evening party? Surely, if there has been even the slightest selection of the guests on the ground of common sympathies, conversation will fitly absorb a good deal of the time. A certain amount of well chosen music will be always acceptable, even in a general company. Games will probably be suitable entertainment to some, and dancing undoubtedly ought to have a place wherever there are young people. The pleasures of rhythmical motion give a most desirable relief from the effort of talking or listening, and a more decorous style of dancing will offer little temptation to crush out the quieter forms of later courses.

If such a plan were to admit of more frequent social gatherings where young and old could meet together, that would be to some an additional reason for seeking to recommend it to public favor.—Westminster Review.

The Poor Woman's Parlor.

If you have ever visited at the home of a poor woman you will remember that one of the doors opening into the hall was always closed. "Past women, ever heard if the house will tell you, "is not furnished yet. Mother is saving it for the parlor." Some day you will visit there again, a great many years hence, and see the shrine the realized ambition of a woman's life—her parlor. The pride that her wealthier sisters take in furniture that cost a sum larger than the poor woman ever heard of is not as great as the pathetic air of pride and awe with which she will unlock the door opening into the hall, step softly across the floor of a very dark room, pull up a blind a few inches, and ask you what you think of it.

If you are young and thoughtless it seems but an ordinarily furnished room to you. If you are older, in the light of the satisfied pride that you see on the woman's face near the window, it is the loveliest room you ever saw. She sits down, after inviting you to do the same, and you notice that she sits on the extreme edge of the chair, as though afraid to sink back into it out. The carpet is of a bright and cheerful color. Her life has probably been devoid of the cheerfulness that now shows up in the carpet she saved so many years to buy.

Every little article in the room has its history. The mat on the floor was bought with egg money. The bright chromos on the wall were bought with a little extra money saved by taking a few boarders. The wonderfully embroidered table cover, she will tell you, was made by a neighbor.

"I can't do such work," she tired, proud voice will say, "but Mrs. Larkin 'lowed she could make it for me, if I would pay for it in butter." Her face may stop softly on the carpet when she crosses the room, as though she was afraid heavy shoes were too hard for it, and you have an impression that she would have taken them off at the door and walked in in her stocking feet if you had not been with her.

She wipes her hands carefully on her apron before she picks up a few ornaments on the table to show you. When you leave the room she puts the chairs carefully back against the wall, picks a piece of lint off the carpet, pulls down the blind, takes one last proud look at her parlor and locks the door. You remain there months longer, but unless death visits the house the front parlor will never be opened to your sight again.—Atchison Globe.

For Nothing.

Self sacrifice comes natural with women. Much of it is born in them, and what is not is ground in them from their childhood up. Generation after generation of home duties a girl gives up amusements and privileges which her brother would never be expected to forego for the like reason. As she grows older this spirit grows, encouraged by all tradition and outside influence. Often its power masters her altogether, and her life becomes one long devotion to endless labor and acceptance of unpleasant things, that the pleasant part of living may be kept sacred for the rest of the family.

The prety useless side of this endless self abnegation must sometimes strike the beholder. Such effacing of individuality is not uncommon, and it gives as little real needs to the family as it does to the individual.

Putting aside the moral effect on the younger members of a family brought up to regard their mother as a machine run for the family service, does the woman who so gives herself for their sakes in order to family ends accomplish all she designs? If she work without pause or slackening lay in and day out does she always feel satisfied, after counting costs, that it is the noblest way to so spend her health and energies? If she renounces all recreation and higher life for herself, and gives up all connection with the world and spirits with her husband and children, is the reward adequate that is paid to them in a better kept house, a more bountifully supplied larder or handsomer clothes?

If overfatigue causes her to become petulant or complaining, is not the atmosphere of home more greatly injured than the added cleaning and cooking can repair? If she is too worn out to give sympathy and help to the children's joys and sorrows what do the immaculate floors and furniture obtained avail? And if, as sometimes happens, outraged nature gives way, and shers must step into the breach, do their own work and the played out woman's as well, and take care of her into the bargain, what has she gained by her extreme efforts that she has not lost by the breakdown?

A life laid down in a worthy cause is not lost, but gained; but is this cause worthy? —Harper's Bazar.

Rules for Walking with Comfort.

Is the reason why many women find walking fatiguing because they do not know how to walk? Certainly the carriage of the shoulders has much to do with the ease with which one gets over the ground. One set of directions for getting in good position is this: Stand erect, head thrown back, with arms rigidly at the sides, shoulders dropped as low as possible, palms forward. Then lift the arms, keeping the rest of the body in the position thus obtained.

Stand before a mirror and lift the shoulders up and drop them, the arms hanging loosely. Do it over and over again till the shoulders are perfectly limp. Now, as this limpness may extend to other muscles, straighten the backbone (don't let the shoulders rise with it) and walk about the room for four or five minutes, with the spinal column as erect as you can carry it, but not rigid, and the shoulders and arms levitalized, hanging as though lifeless. Now straighten the head and neck by drawing in the chin, but do not hold the head stiffly, rather poise it, keeping the chin in, so that you can turn it easily from side to side.

After the above points are mastered take slow, deep inhalations (say eight to a minute), permitting only the chest to expand and fall, not the shoulders (this, too, to be a habit). And finally adopt all this in walking, holding the body a little forward, taking care, however, not to lift the lower limbs by the thigh muscles, but let them come up themselves by a slight spring in the knee and fall to the foot from over the ground. This gait and carriage of the body, if practiced until habitual, will make walking a delight to hundreds to whom it is now a burden.—Zion's Herald.

What a Woman Has to Bear.

What would a man do, I wonder, if things went so irretrievably wrong with him as they do with some of us women? A woman has to clinch her hands and grit her teeth and bear her lot. And yet you tell us a man is the stronger. I tell you, my dear, I know a dozen women who could discount any soldier that ever fought in the Crimea were for downright suffering and pluck. Where do you find the man who is willing to wear shabby clothes and old boots and a seedy hat that his boys may go fine as fiddles?

Where do you find a man who will get up cold mornings and make the fire, tramp to work through snow, pick his way through flooding rain, weather northeast gales, and go hungry and cold that he may keep the children together which a sad and wayward mother has deserted? First thing a man would do in such a case would be to send the children out with convenient relatives. How long would a man brace up under the servant question? How long would he endure the insolence and the flings of cruel and covert enemies because the children needed all he could give them, and only along the thorny road of continual harassment and trial might he attain the earnings needed to render them happy and comfortable? If a man is insulted he settles the insult with a blow straight from the shoulder, and that is the end of it. He would never be able to endure, as some women do, a never ending wound of persecution that would whiten any hairs on a sealskin jacket!—Chicago Herald.

Coral Hanging Baskets.

I have been making an old fashioned imitation of a coral hanging basket with very good success. Years ago I made a number of baskets for Fifth Ave. bed, although the work may not be the latest "craze" in fancy work, one who takes the very small amount of trouble to make one will have a pretty and serviceable basket. The foundation of the basket may not be as easily obtained now as it was years ago, when hoop skirts were worn; however, I found no difficulty in procuring hoops with the covering on.

These I bent in a pretty shape for a basket and tied with wrapping twine, leaving the ends of the twine long enough for a inch long. When the basket was well shaped I covered it with knots and ends of strings, arranging them about an inch apart all over the basket, leaving ends of irregular length, but none longer than an inch, and tying knots of different sizes. When my basket was decorated all over in this manner I melted half a pound of beeswax in a shallow pan and stirred in enough Japanese vermilion to get the desired coral color. When this was well melted well in the melted wax it adhered to the knots and hoops and completely covered them.

When the basket became cool I had a very pretty ornament and a useful one. These baskets are very durable, and will even stand the test of being exposed to the weather for a number of seasons.—Prairie Farmer.

Boiling Meats.

In boiling meats never put them in cold water, but put them into that which is boiling briskly. This will coagulate the albumen on the outside of the meat and thus prevent the water from soaking out the juices. If salted meats need freshening let it be previously done with cold water and frequent changing of the cold and cheap pieces can be made very tender and palatable as follows:

Put into the pot with a little more water than will be finally needed. Set into the top of this pot a pan containing cold water. Have this pan fit the pot closely. If the meat is to be eaten when boiling bring it out and add cold water from time to time. Boil the meat until it gets tender. The steam and flavor of the meat will be condensed on the bottom of the pan containing the water, and drop back into the pot and be retained.

When the meat is well done remove the pan and let it simmer down slowly until it is thick enough to jelly when cold. Now remove the meat, take out the bones, place in a crock, place over it the boiled liquid and lay over it a large plate and place a weight on it. When cold it is excellent cut down for tea. Tough fresh meat or corned beef used in this way is superior to meat boiled in an open vessel from which the flavor has escaped.—Exchange.

Size of Hands and Feet of Ancient Women.

An interesting fact was brought out at the historical exhibition in Paris, where specimens of gloves were seen dating back to those of the Grecian empire. The sizes of these gloves were proof indisputable that among the belles of ancient days, and even those of the Middle Ages, the tiny hands so common among the women of today were entirely unknown.

A visit to the Rohemendyers museum will convince any one that the small foot was equally rare in earlier times, and that, judging from their slippers, the feet of the famous Prussian queen and princesses would do credit to a dandy in the Grenadier Guards. Only the beautiful Queen Louise possessed delicate and pretty feet, the satin shoe belonging to her lamented and revered majesty seeming like those of a child beside the square toed No. 6 slippers of the Empress Augusta and the No. 9 wedding slipper belonging to the ex-Empress Frederick.—New York Sun.

Things That Will Lighten Work.

Flour canned be too cold for pastry, cookies or kindred doughs, while for yeast bread it should be warm enough to favor the growth of the yeast plant. For the same reason warm water should be used with yeast, while with cream tartar and soda it would hasten the escape of the gas, and cold liquids only are allowable.

Dredge that stick or rolling pin, board and hands in a hot kitchen should be set away till thoroughly chilled, but all trouble might have been saved by using cold fat, flour and liquid at first, and the texture of the dough would have been better.

Potatoes are boiled and drained, and then closely covered, instead, of being shaken in a draft of air to become white and floury by parting with the superfluous steam.

Whites of eggs may be beaten to a stiff froth by an open window when it would be impossible in a steamy kitchen.—Arthur's Home Magazine.

Live Like Lovers.

Married people should treat each other like lovers all their lives—then they would be happy. Bickering and quarreling would soon brush off love affairs; consequently lovers indulge in such only to a limited extent.

Women should grow more devoted and men fonder after marriage if they have the slightest idea of being happy as wives and husbands. It is losing sight of this fundamental truth which leads to hundreds of divorces.

Yet many a man will scold his wife who would never think of breathing a harsh word to a street queen, and many a wife will look glum and morose on her husband's return who had only smiles and words of cheer for him when he was her suitor.

How can such people expect to be happy? —St. Paul Pioneer Press.

The Woman Who Laughs.

For a good, everyday household angel give us a woman who laughs. Her likeness may not be always just right, and she may occasionally burn her bread and forget to replace dislocated buttons, but for solid comfort all day and every day, she is a paragon. Home is not a battlefield, nor life one long, unending row. The trick of always seeing the bright side, or, if the matter has no bright side, of shining up the dark one, is a very important faculty, one of the things a woman should be without. We are not all born with the sunshine in our hearts, as the Irish prettily phrase it, but we can cultivate a cheerful sense of humor if we only try.—Rural New Yorker.

Neat Ways of Cooking Eggs.

One time when I was poaching eggs for an invalid a plan came to me. I put in the pan a couple of muffin rings, first rubbing some butter on them, then dropped my eggs each inside of a ring. When the eggs were cooked I lifted off the ring and had the satisfaction of taking up something that looked very nice.

I tried the same plan when frying eggs and was equally pleased with the result. Like all novices, I did not think water boiled unless it boiled violently, and my eggs were torn by the tossing. To poach eggs the water should not boil violently.—Cor. New York Tribune.

Where to Put Plasters for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia in the face has been cured by applying a mustard plaster to the elbow. For neuralgia in the head apply the plaster to the back of the neck. The reason for this is that mustard is said to touch the nerves the moment it begins to draw or burn, and less of the most can must be applied to the nerve centers or directly over the place where it will touch the affected nerve most quickly.—Washington Star.

Deep frying is loudly inveighed against by those who have not the inclination to discover that less fat is absorbed by pieces of fish plunged in deep fat than those which are turned from side to side in a limited quantity, and that the intense heat of the fat cooks it more thoroughly than is possible by any other method, and if carefully drained on paper little fat remains.

The emeralds of Mrs. August Belmont, of New York, the widow of the banker, were for years the talk of the town, but finer ones are now owned by Mrs. Astor and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, the former's being probably the costliest and finest in the United States.

It is said that milk is made especially nutritious if it is put in a jar and stood in a moderately hot oven for eight or ten hours. It is then called "baked milk," and has become thick and creamy.

The hands may be kept from perspiring by powdering them with finely pulverized starch, orris root, fine oatmeal, or sandal wood powder, or anything else that may be preferred.

To extract paint from clothing, saturate the spots with spirits of turpentine, let it remain several hours, then rub it and it will come off.

To clean ceilings that have been blackened by smoke from a lamp, wash off with rags that have been dipped in soda water.

Yellow spots on the linen or cotton produced by the iron may be removed by setting them in the broiling sun.

FASHIONS

A Cycling Costume.

Since cycling has become so much the rage for women, who find it more convenient to ride a bicycle than to indulge in other forms of exercise, many efforts have been made to secure a skirt that should be comfortable and pretty and at the same time answer the purposes which are required for a cycling suit. It must be of material suitable for rain or shine; it must fit, and yet not be too tight; it must be well armed, and yet, like a riding habit, be able to "give" in case of accident to the rider, and withal it must be becoming to her when seated upon the cycle ready for action. A costume which is a kind sort of cycling suit just brought out is made of a light woolen fabric and has a divided skirt, which, however, is sufficiently full to look like an ordinary walking dress when the wearer is standing or simply seated upon the cycle. The hem is cut out in vandyke lobe and braided. The bodice is a loose fitting jacket and is worn over a pretty silk waistcoat or a blouse.

The New Hat and Bonnet Pins.

Handsome hat and bonnet pins are now among the things essential to a fashionable toilet. The fleur de lis and the bowknot, especially in steel, are much in favor; but there is a number of novel devices, such as a bird's wing, insignia of different kinds, colored pearls, turquoise and coral in oblong bars, and the Maltese cross, especially popular, both in gold and in stones. Less costly hat pins have moonstones and chrysoprase cut in pretty shapes; others are merely lapis of silver and gold.—Elsie Bee in Jewelers' Circular.

Corselets and High Collars.

Some wonderful embroideries are used for the corselet bodices and for the interior of high medici collars, but the most fashionable people abjure the collars cut on the cross, with a seam down the center of the back, that are unsightly and burlesque of aspect when seen from the rear. The smartest high collars stand out broad at the side, with an edging of feather, forming a becoming background to the neck, a reproduction of the fashions of the Venetian dames in the Middle Ages.

Favorite Perfumes.

One of the daintiest scents for this season is peach blossom. It is delightfully refreshing to tired nerves, and a few drops sprinkled about on the carpet will make a room delicately fragrant. White lilac, heliotrope and wood violet are the most fashionable scents.

A Disinfectant.

One-half ounce of the spirits of lavender and a lump of salts of ammonia, placed in a wide mouthed fancy jar or bottle and left uncovered in a room, acts as a pleasant deodoriser and disinfectant, filling the room with a delicate perfume which is soothing to the nerves and senses.—Ex.

Paint splashes may be removed from window glass by a very hot solution of soda, using a soft flannel.

Parties leaving town for the Summer may have THE NEWS mailed to them without extra charge. The address will be changed as often as desired.

PERSONAL.

Miss Augusta Rohland of New York is visiting Mrs. Frank Wolff of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield.

Mr. Thomas J. Hughes has returned to his home on East Second street from a pleasant visit at Atlantic City.

Father Freeman, the former pastor of St. Joseph's church, but now of Millstone, visited friends here yesterday.

Miss Bertha Lorenzen of New York, formerly of Plainfield, is visiting Miss Pauline Penton of Hillside avenue.

Miss Susie Woodland of Duer street North, Plainfield, has returned to her home from an enjoyable visit with Miss Florence Thorn of Elizabeth.

Mr. W. J. Blakeley, formerly of Buffalo, but now of New York city, is visiting his friend, Mr. Wm. B. Rogers, of the firm of Rogers Bros., the shoe merchants.

Mr. Lewis R. Brown has returned to his home on Broadway from a pleasant stay at Atlantic City. Mr. Brown is the popular time-keeper at the Scott Press Works.

During Monday night the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Vail, who reside on their farm over the mountain, awoke complaining of cramps, and seemed to be in a high fever. Its name is Annie May Vail and it is not yet three years old. It was apparently in its usual good health and spirits upon retiring. The child, in fact, had been an unusually bright and healthy one. There was no doctor within about three miles, and Mrs. Vail concluded she would nurse her pet until morning, not dreaming it to be seriously ill. She gave it the usual remedies for bowel trouble, and exercised it in hot water to reduce the fever, that being the most approved practice. At daylight Mr. Vail hurried for a physician, who arrived in due time and prescribed, calling a second time early in the afternoon. But later the child went into convulsions twice, the second convulsion occurring about four o'clock, and proving fatal. Death was so unexpected that the shock was unusually severe to the parents, who have the sympathy of their large circle of friends. It is only a few months ago since their home was burned down, and the work of rebuilding was in progress, when the new trouble occurred.

—A fine legal point has been raised in an Ohio law court at Cleveland. It is this: Is a man guilty of intoxication if he is not boisterous or fighting drunk?

—"The Green Bag," a monthly magazine for lawyers, has in the August number, an interesting article on "The Supreme Courts of New Jersey by John Whitehead, Esq."

—While returning from the funeral of the late Clarkson R. Hope, yesterday afternoon, one of the wheels of the carriage in which Mr. Thomas Carty and family were seated, collapsed. The occupants escaped injury, however.

—While what is known as blood poisoning may be produced by the most trivial causes, it is a well established fact, medical authorities say, that in most of the instances in which it has proved fatal, the victims have been drinkers of beer or other intoxicants. It is a noticeable fact that men are much more subject to the disease than women.

—As already reported in THE NEWS there have been several persons prostrated with the heat in this city. In this connection it is proper to say that the method of treating a sunstruck person, where medical attendance cannot be immediately procured, is to take him into a cool place with plenty of pure, fresh air; strip off his clothing to the waist and place him in a recumbent position; pour cold water upon the head and breast, also upon the wrists, and give small doses internally of brandy or some other stimulant.

The Veterans of the Thirtieth.

At a meeting of the committee having in charge the arrangements for the reunion of the Thirtieth regiment to be held at Somerville, it was decided to change the time for the event to September 3, in order not to conflict with the Smith picnic. Captain Cook resigned as Chairman of the Committee, and Joseph W. Ballantine succeeded to that position. The following sub-committees were appointed:

On Music—Jas. B. Brown, R. H. Brokaw and A. P. Sutphen.

Clambake—J. R. Betts, C. S. Hoffman and Senator Keys.

Invitations and Speakers—John T. Van Cleef, Jas. J. Bergen and J. D. Bartine.

Reception—Oscar Conkling, J. D. Vandervoort, G. S. Cook, L. A. Thompson, W. J. Keys, A. A. Clark and J. H. Mattison.

Police—A. S. TenEyck, Job C. Kinyon and B. S. Totten.

Grounds—J. R. Betts, J. D. Lathrop and G. H. Miller.

Railroad Transportation—C. S. Hoffman.

Printing—J. H. Mattison, Jas. Gaston and A. S. TenEyck.

The U. A. R. posts in the county will be invited to participate, and an invitation was extended to Company B, and accepted. Contributions of chickens, turkeys, sweet corn, potatoes and fruit are solicited.

NOW DESERTING THEM.

THEIR ORGAN HAS NO MORE USE FOR THE COMBINE.

Forcseeing the Fate in Store for the Public Wrong Doers, It Frowns on Them on the Sly.

At the meeting of Common Council, held recently, the combine adopted on its final reading an ordinance granting a water works franchise to J. M. Low & Co. The mayor has vetoed the ordinance, and last week filed his objections with the city clerk as required by the charter. THE NEWS became aware of the matter, but it was not deemed proper to refer to the document until it had been presented at a public meeting of the Common Council, to which it was addressed, when it might then be fairly considered public property.

It at last came to the ears of a reporter on the organ, which has fattened on the "combine" through liberal official patronage in return for upholding them in all their wrongdoing, and the reporter, being also correspondent for the New York Times, sends to New York the following which appeared in to-day's issue of that paper:

FRAUDS MAY BE UNEARTHED.

A FIGHT AGAINST A SEWERAGE SCHEME IN PLAINFIELD.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Aug. 13.—Plainfield is about to be plunged into an important litigation over the right of the Plainfield Sewerage Company to construct and operate sewers in the city. The head of the sewerage company is J. M. Low of Kingston, N. Y. His scheme to sewer the city has all along been opposed by the "Big Six" combine which has ruled the Common Council this year. The remaining five of the council, whose men prominent in business and professional life in New York City, have from the start opposed the plan of Low and his associates.

The "Big Six," in spite of public feeling and opposition, have granted to Low's company a franchise for the sewer works, and ordered the Mayor and City Clerk to sign the contract between the city and the company, so that the work of construction may be begun. A Times correspondent was to-day assured that the Mayor's decision would be not to sign. Mayor Gilbert is one of New York's best-known trunk makers, a man of the utmost discretion and integrity. It is asserted that his decision not to sign the contract was made after a most thorough investigation in the course of which he and the majority of Common Council have said made some interesting discoveries.

Inducements were made of a big "job" in the sewerage contract, and the Mayor is said to have good cause to view with suspicion the desperate haste the contract and of the "Big Six" on the city. The "Big Six" are said to be ready to act as soon as the Mayor's refusal to sign the contract is officially announced. They will at once seek a writ of mandamus to compel him to sign. This he will contest. The opponents of the sewerage scheme hope then to be able to make some startling exposures which will involve the company and the "Big Six" in disgrace.

This may indicate that the combine organ, after getting all the "pap" it can through the combine out of the public treasury, is deserting them. The Plainfield Times deserted some months ago. THE NEWS all along from the outset has exposed the gang, regardless of the consequential loss of the official patronage which they control, when we became satisfied that they were endangering the interests of the city. "Public feeling" referred to above was represented in the only newspaper in Plainfield which had the courage to create "public feeling" from the outset, although we take no special credit for what ought to be the course of every public newspaper. The Plainfield Times of late, however, has done yeoman service in atoning for its past sins of omission.

At the last meeting of Common Council, it will be remembered, the "combine" rescinded the contract to J. M. Low & Co. —we do not know the "& Co." by name —and thus it will be observed that Mr. Low was made liable to be fined $1,000 for each and every street he refused, after due application of the property owners, to run his pipes through. He did not want this in, and had some other objections, whereupon the contract and ordinance were rescinded to oblige him and remodeled and passed as he desired it, leaving the fines out except in a single trivial instance. Then again the Big Five were not, we understand, allowed by the Little Six combine to see the contract at the meeting so that they could examine it carefully in the city's interest. Now the Mayor has refused to sign it and will fight the matter out in the courts in behalf of the city, when the combine will be extinguished as they have in every instance before. During the few remaining months of their existence they will not be likely to do much further public mischief before they are kicked out of power they have so disgracefully misused.

BECAME VIOLENT IN HIS CELL.

Alexander Gordon to Be Taken to Morris Plains To-Day.

Alexander Gordon, the furnishing goods merchant of Elizabeth who became insane yesterday from business troubles and mosquito bites, was in a perfect frenzy this morning in the Union County Jail. His hands were left free for a few moments and he tore every particle of clothing off his body, and when Warden Dodd got back to the cell Gordon was dancing around stark naked. He tried to dash out his brains against the cell door, and with great difficulty was overpowered and strapped down on a cot.

Gordon's uncle, David Kaufmann, of 312 Spring street, was sent for, and it was decided to remove the insane man to the Morris Plains Asylum, as it is feared he will do harm to himself or somebody else if left another day in the jail.

Gordon formerly resided in this city and is well-known here.

GABLE GIVES BONDS.

Compelled to Contribute to His Deserted Children's Support.

John B. Gable, the upholsterer who deserted his wife to run away with the wayward wife of William B. Avery, of Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield, has been compelled to furnish bonds to contribute to the support of his children.

Tuesday morning Mrs. Gable, accompanied by a detective, went to a house in New York, to which place the detective had traced the guilty pair.

They did not have to wait, however, for Gable soon came out with a pitcher to go for some beer. He was at once arrested and locked up. Later he secured a bondsman, who went surety for him on his promise to pay his wife $5 per week. Then he was released. This morning he paid a flying visit to Plainfield, returning later to New York. There he goes by the name of John V. Smith.

Gable offered to live with his wife again, but she refused to have anything further to do with him. The justice kindly cautioned her that he could not compel Gable to support her and would be compelled to release Gable if she refused to live with him. She said she did not want to have anything more to do with him, that she could support herself, but that she wanted him to support their children so the judge bound him over that way.

State Notes.

The Burlington Freeholders have set aside $30,000 for a new drawbridge at Bridgeboro.

The yacht Mary of Salem, with a party of four on board, capsized on August 12 off Ship John Light. The party was rescued.

The workmen on the Mt. Holly street car line struck on August 11 for $1.50 instead of $1.25 per day. Their places were supplied.

Elijah A. Martin, employed as a brakeman by the Atlantic City Railroad Company, had his right leg badly hurt, both above and below the knee, by a train August 12.

John H. Gibson, a blacksmith of 1621 Fillmore street, Camden, on August 12, at the Cooper Hospital, had a piece of steel removed from his arm that had been there two years.

The largest catch of bluefish ever known on Long Beach, it is stated, occurred on August 10, at Beach Haven. Torpedoes drove the fish to the beach, and thousands were caught.

James Gillmore, the seven-year-old son of Patrick Gillmore of Gloucester City, picked up a dangerous plaything on the run over by a cart loaded with gravel. The boy may die. His father was the driver.

James W. Staley, a compositor on the Daily Star of Cape May, was rescued from drowning, on August 12, by Augustus Edwards, a boy of 16 years. Staley was exhausted when brought to shore.

A number of men employed in the dye house of the Mount Holly Carpet Mills at Mount Holly, have quit work, owing to the company refusing to grant their demand for an increase in wages.

A collision between an express and a freight train took place near Woodstone, Salem County, yesterday, and a very narrow escape from death was the result. Five freight cars were derailed.

During a violent thunderstorm Wednesday afternoon Elizabeth the bather shed attached to the Crescent Ship Works was struck by lightning and the roof shattered. Seven men had sought shelter from the storm under it were knocked flat and two of them stunned so badly that it was at first thought they were dead. They were carried to the office of the works and later revived.

The Executive council of New Jersey Sanitary Association met at the Coleman House, Asbury Park, yesterday afternoon and arranged the programme for the annual meeting, which will be held in December, at Lakewood. E. O. Chapman, the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, who is president of the association, has so arranged that considerable attention will be paid to school sanitation.

Plainfield's New Water Supply.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Aug. 13th.—The city of Plainfield will have the advantage of of a first-class water works system before another day, when the mains and pipes of the Plainfield Water Supply company will be filled with water from the high standpipe at Netherwood. The rival water company, of which J. M. Low, of Kingston, is president, secured the franchise it obtained from the city, and with which it threatened to fight the old State charter under which the Water Supply Company has completed the works, and it is understood that Mr. Low has abandoned the contest, so far as Plainfield city is concerned. In the borough of North Plainfield, however, the two rival companies anticipate a bitter fight. Each is seeking to get a water works monopoly there.—N. Y. Times.

It is to be hoped to add that there is nothing in this so-called fight, as the Borough Council is all Republican and no combine flourishes there, so that Mr. Low "isn't in it."

Dynamite in Jail.

A package addressed to John Walker, one of the pair of desperate men who maltreated John Toms, was received by Jailer Wilson at the Somerset county jail on Tuesday. Mr. Wilson opened it and found two spools of thread, some needles and a curious substance which he did not like the looks of. This was submitted to Druggist R. L. Day who thought it was dynamite. Dr. Dorland gave the same decision. Walker was evidently going to use some more dangerous means to effect his escape. The time of trial is approaching too near. Walker declares that the stuff is chewing gum.

THE NINTH DAY OF AB.

THE BLACK FAST OF THE HEBREWS.—SERVICES IN THE SYNAGOGUES.

The Worst Disaster That Befell the Jewish Nation.—Calamities Commemorated by Religious Rites To-Morrow.

Yesterday was black day in the Hebrew calendar, says the Newark Journal, from which the account is taken. It commemorates the worst disaster that befell the Jewish nation. On the ninth day of the month of Ab the city of Jerusalem was pillaged by Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, the Holy Temple was burned to the ground, and the inhabitants, comprising those who had been governed by Zedekiah, the King of Judah, were carried into captivity, where they remained until set free by Cyrus, King of the Medes and Persians, who conquered Babylon and permitted the exiled Jews to return and rebuild their temple, which event occurred seventy years later.

On the same ninth day of Ab, centuries after, Jerusalem was again laid waste by the destroyer, its temple razed, tens of thousands of its inhabitants put to the sword or delivered over as a prey to wild beasts, and the remainder sent into captivity among heathen nations, by Titus, afterwards Emperor of Rome. Five or six decades subsequent to this the last fortress in Judia—Bither—was captured, during the reign of Hadrian, Roman Emperor, and its defenders subjected to the tortures and death.

It is even said that at the same period in the year 1492 the Hebrews were driven from Spain, and numerous other direful events are said to have occurred on this day in different ages. Ten of the most eminent of the ancient Rabbis were put to the sword, burned at the stake or roasted alive, by order of Hadrian; and Hannah and her seven sons were cruelly murdered by Antiochus Epiphanes, King of the Syro-Grecians, because of their refusal to bow to the heathen idol. While these last two horrors were not all committed in the month of Ab nor during the same century they form the subject of laments on the day set apart for national mourning.

LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

Wednesday evening after sunset the synagogues were opened, and pious worshipers are then gathered to hear the Lamentations of Jeremiah, the mournful elegies of religious poets, and other sorrowful compositions written for this occasion. The service yesterday morning was of a more extended character, for these are the most revered Hebrew writers having contributed to the liturgy of the day, which, however, is different among the Sepherdim (Spanish or Portuguese Jews) and the Ashkenazim (German, Polish and Russian Jews). The synagogues are heavily draped in black. The Ark containing the Scroll of the Law is likewise covered; also the reading desk, and a separate table used instead at these two services. The synagogues are darkened at the end, each congregant holding a lighted candle. The scene is sombre and impressive. In some houses of worship, in accordance with the ritual, the minister or reader proclaims:

"Our brethren of the House of Israel! It is because of our sins and the sins of our fathers that we reckon this day 1823 years from the time that our sanctuary was destroyed and our temple was burned. Therefore doth Zion weep in bitterness, and Jerusalem lift her voice, 'My heart my heart yearneth for their wounded; my being, my being is pained because of their slain.' And we, in our bitter captivity, exclaim: 'The joy of our heart hath ceased—our dancing hath changed into mourning; the crown of our head hath fallen. Woe unto us that we have sinned!'"

THE MOURNING REMOVED.

Such are features of the service on the eve and in the morning of the Feast of the Ninth of Ab. At the afternoon service, however, the service is of a comforting character, inspired utterances of the Prophet Isaiah and others constitute and essential part of the ritual. At the conclusion of this service and the evening prayers, the congregants repair to their homes and break their fast when the stars appear.

In this country the fast is, perhaps, most marked among immigrants from Russia, who think of their persecuted brethren in the modern Egypt, and lament national dismemberment, with tears coursing down their cheeks, and prayers to the God of Israel for a restoration. True as Americans, or as adopted citizens of this free land, they pray for those who still suffer thraldom, believing, in common with all orthodox Hebrews, that Israel's safety will never be secure against tyranny and despotism until the national banner is once more planted upon Mount Zion.

Smalley Brothers Get the Contract.

The Board of Trustees of the North Plainfield School recently advertised for proposals for macadamizing the school grounds. The bids were opened a few days ago and Smalley Brothers' proposal of $1,200 for the most satisfactory they were awarded the contract. This enterprising young firm are doing a flourishing business.

SOMETHING ABOUT CLUBS.

Not Social, but the Kinds Wielded by by the Police Force.

Among our kaleidoscopic population there is a certain contingent whose craniums are in a more or less unenviable condition through little misunderstandings with the police force. A rap over the head with a patrolman's night stick, or "locust," lingers for years in the memory of the recipient.

As the hours of night creep onward, the restless sleeper hears the resonant club sounding out its signals on the pavement. It is with a sense of security that he then turns over and slumbers, while on the other hand evildoers slink into the dark corners or disappear in the gloom, for the signal is not a welcome one to them.

As armies use signal of fire by night, so the vigilant officers convey messages to each other by means of their clubs as explicity as if telegraphed or wired.

The instrument is simple, being merely a billet of locust wood, well seasoned, between twenty and thirty inches in length, and nearly two inches in diameter. About eight or ten inches from the handle end is a hole, through which is inserted a deer thong, which forms a handle or string that can be hung over the wrist.

When delivered to the officers the locust is generally longer than when seen in active service. One of the first things they do is to saw it off to a convenient length, and it is turned down and then they are in shape to suit the individual. While this is not strictly regular, it is tacitly allowed by the department.

THE LOCUST FOR PARADE.

On parade or dress occasions the locust gives place to a finely turned ornate baton of rosewood, with a silk cord, and tasseled. This implement is heavier than the nightstick, but, though more beautiful to look upon, is nowise more soothing to its effects than its every-day companion. It, together with the nocturnal weapon, is a dangerous affair in the hands of the stalwart guardians of the peace. It is of a weight which allows it to be wielded easily and with unholy unction.

Coupled with these persuaders is the stubby, wicked little "billy." It is not recognized by the police authorities in the sense that a club is not prohibited. The William—as those not intimately enough acquainted with it to call it "billy," should respectfully term it—is constructed of rose and iron woods, cocobola, etc., and is shaped like a diminutive base ball bat. It will rest snugly in a breast or hip-pocket, and is an ugly and dangerously weapon at close quarters.

The entire trio wear for years, unless the recipients of extra hard usage, and are all fully qualified to break hundreds of heads as their humble prototype, the Irish shillelagh. Great care is taken in their manufacture, and when the owners retire from the force they will last for a generation or so in family use, being utilized on wash-day to beat the clothes in the wash-boiler and stir them about.—Newark Journal.

A CATASTROPHE BARELY AVERTED

And Yet the Plainfielders Don't Appreciate It.

One warm, sultry afternoon this Summer, a train started briskly out from Ninth and Green street depot, Philadelphia, headed for the great metropolis—New York. Seated in the smoking car enjoying their cigars, were a couple of gentlemen. One had been over the route before, the other was a stranger to it, and asked his companion to point out to him the prominent places along the route. The train bounded along like a flying fish on a good engineer at the air-brakes, and two porters in the parlor car, Philadelphia receded until it was but a speck in the distance, and finally vanished completely from view, and the man who had been there before noted the town as they passed them. One after about Trenton Junction, Somerville, Bound Brook and Dunellen. As the train whirled past Dunellen the stranger, who was sitting by the open window, turned and spit out. As he did so his friend sprang to his feet and then sank back in his seat nearly fainting. "What is the matter?" cried the other in alarm. "Gracious," exclaimed his friend as he regained his breath, "you nearly spit on Plainfield."—Westfield Leader.

BI. B. B. C. vs. Flemington B. B. C.

The record of a series of games of base ball will be played between the Plainfield Bicycle Club B. B. C. and the Flemington team, on the Park avenue grounds, on Saturday, Aug. 15, at 3:30 o'clock. The first game between those two clubs was played Aug. 1, at Flemington, and resulted in a victory for Plainfield by the score of 4 to 3.

—Another endowment order is about making a payment which shows that the members will receive $1200 for $1.20 in. Verily, the fool killer has still a large contract on hand.—Elizabeth Journal.

—The wheels of government do not move without creaking some of the time in North Plainfield. Twice the borough Council has endeavored to get a quorum for the transaction of business and twice it has failed to materialize the requisite number.—Westfield Leader.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company will be Ready on and after the 15th inst. to supply water to parties residing along the lines of its mains.

Applications addressed to the company, at No. 6 East Front Street, will receive Prompt Attention.

HOME ENTERTAINMENT.

My appeal is addressed to the upper middle class, in whose hands the progress of the community really lies. There is good reason to believe that with this class dancing has less firm hold than would appear, and, indeed, that it only keeps its place because no more reasonable form of social intercourse has been devised. Certainly, with this class the practice is not specially ruined for the objectionable features which are peculiar to the modern style, and no protest would be raised against any change that would preserve the social usefulness.

Two things are needed—the round dance must give place either to the minuet and other old dances, or, if possible, to new forms where there is no greater familiarity than the touching of hands; and the total amount of dancing must be brought into a better proportion with other kinds of social entertainment. The second of these demands is, perhaps, the more serious, for it involves the difficult question of what is to fill up the blank spaces.

It is so convenient when you get all your friends together to set them dancing till it is time for supper. You have not asked them to meet each other because you fancied that they had any ideas or tastes in common, but simply because they have entertained you and you must repay them. The only thing you know they can all do and care to do is to dance. Now, why not you sit and to all this fictitious kind of entertainment? To a large extent it is the result of indolence.

Parents find it the easiest way to amuse their circle of friends to too much trouble and perhaps expense, to take them to concerts, to the theater, to lectures. The sense can find amusement for themselves, but for the daughters—let us give a dance! And then all the people we ask will ask them back, and quite a number of evenings will be disposed of. The dancing party at present is largely usurping the place that should be filled by the means of public entertainment and culture. Let us narrow our circle of friends to the people whom we really wish to see for their own sakes, and we shall then not only have more leisure for other pursuits, but find less difficulty and more satisfaction in giving our guests a pleasant evening when we do invite them.

What, then, is the ideal of an evening party? Surely, if there has been even the slightest selection of the guests on the ground of common sympathies, conversation will flow, and that is a good deal of the time. A certain amount of well chosen music will be always acceptable, even in a general company. Games will probably be suitable entertainment to some, and dancing undoubtedly ought to have a place wherever there are young people. The pleasure of rhythmical motion gives a most desirable relief from the effort of talking or listening, and a more decorous style of dancing will offer little temptation so crush out the quieter forms of intercourse.

If such a plan were to admit of more frequent social gatherings where young and old could meet together, that would be to me an additional reason for seeking to commend it to public favor.—Westminster Review.

The Poor Woman's Parlor.

If you have ever visited at the home of a poor woman you will remember that one of the doors opening into the hall was always closed. "Come in room," the daughter of the house will tell you, "is not furnished yet. Mother is saving it for the parlor." Some day that room will be opened again, a great many years after, and will be shown the realized ambition of a woman's life—her parlor. The pride that her wealthier sisters take in furniture that cost a small larger than the poor woman ever heard of is not as great as the pathetic air of pride and awe with which she will unlock the door opening into the hall, step softly across the floor of a very dark room, pull up a blind a few inches, and ask you what you think of it.

If you are young and thoughtless it seems but an ordinarily furnished room to you. If you are older, in the light of the satisfied pride that you see on the woman's face near the window, it is the loveliest room you ever saw. She sits down, after inviting you to do the same, and you notice that she sits on the extreme edge of the chair, as though afraid to wear the plush out. The carpet is of a bright and cheerful color. Her life has probably been devoid of the cheerfulness that now lights up in the carpet she saved so many years to buy.

Every little article in the room has its history. The mat on the floor was bought with egg money. The bright chromos on the wall were bought with a little extra money saved by taking a few boarders. The wonderfully embroidered table cover, she will tell you, was made by a neighbor.

"I can't do such work," the timid, proud voice will say, "but Mrs. Larkin 'lowed she could make it for me, if I would pay for it in butter." Her feet step softly on the carpet when she crosses the room, as though she was afraid heavy shoes were too hard for it, and you have a suspicion that she would have taken them off at the door and walked in in her stocking feet if you had not been with her.

She wipes her hands carefully on her apron before she picks up the few ornaments on the table to show you. When you leave the room she puts the chairs carefully back against the wall, picks a piece of lint off the carpet, pulls down the blind, takes one last proud look at her parlor and locks the door. You remain there months longer, but unless death visits the house the front parlor will never be opened to your sight again.—Atchison Globe.

For Nothing.

Self sacrifice comes natural with women. Much of it is born in them, and what is not is ingrained in them from childhood by education. For the sake of her home duties a girl gives up amusements and privileges which her brother would never be expected to forego for like reason. As she grows older this spirit grows, encouraged by all tradition and outside influence. Often the poorer members of a family gather, and her life becomes one long devotion to endless labor and acceptance of unpleasant things, that the pleasant part of living may be kept sacred for the rest of the family.

The purely useless side of this entire self abnegation must sometimes strike the beholder. Such effacing of individuality is not uncommon, and it gives as little real merit to the family as it does to the individual.

Putting aside the moral effect on the younger members of a family brought up of regard their mother as a martyr and the handy servitor, the woman who so gives herself for the well being of her family really accomplish all she desires? If she work without pause it can better lay in and they out does she always feel satisfied, with admiring onlookers, that it is the noblest way to so spend her health and energies? If she renounced all were expected, would she not be surprised? First thing a man would do in such a case would be to board the children out with convenient relatives. How long would it remain a bone of contention, this question?

How long would he endure the insolence and the flings of cruel and covert enemies because the children supplied all he could spend only along the thorny road of continual harassment and trial might be attain the earnings needed to render them happy and comfortable? If a man is driven to the settles the insult with a blow straight from the shoulder, and that is the end of it. He would never be able to explain, as sometimes happens, outraged nature gives way, and the woman must grin for the bearing, do their own work and the played out woman's as well, and take care of her into the bargain, what has she gained by her extreme efforts that she has not lost by the breakdown?

A life laid down in a worthy cause is not lost, but gained; but is this cause worthy? —Harper's Bazar.

Rules for Walking with Comfort.

Is the reason why many women find walking fatiguing because they do not know how to walk? Certainly the carriage of the shoulders has much to do with the ease with which one gets over the ground. One set of directions for getting in good position is this: Stand erect, head thrown back, with arms rigidly at the sides, shoulders dropped as low as possible, chins forward. Then lift the arms, keeping the rest of the body in the position thus obtained.

Stand before a mirror and lift the shoulders up and drop them, the arms hanging loosely. Do it over and over again till the shoulders are perfectly limp. Now, as this limpness may extend to other muscles, straighten the backbone (don't let the shoulders rise with it) and walk about the room for four or five minutes, with the spinal column as erect as you can carry it, but not rigid, and the shoulders and arms levitalized, hanging as though lifeless. Now straighten the head and neck by drawing in the chin, but do not hold the head stiffly, rather poise it, keeping the chin in, so that you can turn it easily from side to side.

After the above points are mastered take slow, deep inhalations (say eight to a minute), permitting only the chest to expand and fall, not the shoulders (this, too, to be learned), and finally adopt all this in walking, inclining the body a little forward, taking care, however, not to lift the lower limbs by the thigh muscles, but let them come up themselves by a slight spring or pressure of the toes as the foot leaves the ground. This gait and carriage of the body, if practiced until habitual, will make walking a delight to hundreds to whom it is now a burden.—Zion's Herald.

What a Woman Has to Bear.

What would a man do, I wonder, if things went so irretrievably wrong with him as they do with some of us women? A woman has to climb her trouble hill and bear her lot. And yet you tell us a man is the stronger. I tell you, my dear, I know a dozen women who could discount any soldier that ever fought in the Crimean wars for downright heroism and pluck. Where do you find the man who is willing to wear shabby clothes and old boots and a weather hat that his boys may go fine as fiddles?

Where do you find a man who will get up cold mornings and make the fire, tramp to work through the snow, pick his way through flooding rain, weather northeast blasts and go hungry and cold that he may keep the children together which is the very best thing a woman has to contend for? First thing a man would do in such a case would be to board the children out with convenient relatives. How long would it remain a bone of contention, this question?

How long would he endure the insolence and the flings of cruel and covert enemies because the children supplied all he could spend only along the thorny road of continual harassment and trial might be attain the earnings needed to render them happy and comfortable? Use of Hands and Feet of Ancient Women.

An interesting fact was brought out at the historical exhibition in Paris, where specimens of gloves were seen dating back to those of the Grecian empire. The sizes of those gloves were proof indisputable that among the belles of ancient days, and even those of the Middle Ages, the tiny hand was not common among the women of today were entirely unknown.

A visit to the Hohenzollern museum will convince any one that the small foot was equally rare in earlier times, and that, judging from their slippers, the feet of the famous Prussian queens and princesses would do credit to a sample in the Grenadier Guards. Only the beautiful Queen Louise possessed delicate and pretty feet, the satin shoe belonging to her lamented and revered majesty seeming like those of a child beside the square toed No. 6 slippers of the Empress Augusta and the No. 8 wedding slippers belonging to the ex-Empress Frederick.—New York Sun.

Things That Will Lighten Work.

Flour cannot be too cold for pastry, cookies or kindred doughs, while for yeast bread it should be warm enough to favor the growth of the yeast plant. For the same reason warm water should be used with yeast, while with cream tartar and soda it would hasten the escape of the gas, and cold liquids only are allowable.

Doughs that stick to rolling pin, board and hands in a hot kitchen should be set away till thoroughly chilled, but all trouble might have been saved by using cold fat, flour and liquid at first, and the texture of the dough would have been better.

Potatoes are boiled and drained, and then closely covered, instead, of being shaken in a drafty dish to become white and floury by parting with the superfluous steam.

Whites of eggs may be beaten to a stiff froth by an open window when to would be impossible in a steamy kitchen.—Arthur's Home Magazine.

Live Like Lovers.

Married people should treat each other like lovers all their lives—then they would be happy. Bickering and quarreling would soon break off love affairs; consequently lovers indulge in such only to a limited extent.

Women should grow more devoted and more careful in the marriage life than have the slightest idea of being happy as wives and husbands. It is losing sight of this fundamental truth which leads to hundreds of divorces.

Yet many a man will scold his wife who would never think of breathing a harsh word to his sweetheart, and many a wife will look glum and morose on her husband's return who had only smiles and words of cheer for him when he was her suitor.

The Woman Who Laughs.

For a good, everyday household angel give us a woman who laughs. Her mirth may not be always just right, and she may occasionally burn her bread and forget to replace dislocated buttons, but for solid comfort all day and every day, she is a par agon. Home is not a battlefield, nor life one long, unending row. The trick of always seeing the bright side, or, if the matter has no bright side, of shining up the dark one, is a very important faculty, one of the things no woman should be without. We are not all born with the sunshine in our hearts, as the Irish prettily phrase it, but we can cultivate a cheerful sense of humor if we only try.—Rural New Yorker.

Best Ways of Cooking Eggs.

One time when I was poaching eggs for an invalid a plan came to me. I put in the pan a couple of muffin rings, first rubbing some butter on them, then dropped my eggs each inside of a ring. When the eggs were cooked I lifted off the ring and had the satisfaction of taking up something that looked very nice.

I tried the same plan when frying eggs and was equally pleased with the result. Like all novices, I did not think water boiled unless it boiled violently, and my eggs were torn by the tossing. To poach eggs the water should not boil violently.—Cor. New York Tribune.

Where to Put Plasters for Neuralgia.

Neuralgia in the face has been cured by applying a mustard plaster to the elbow. For neuralgia in the head apply the plaster to the back of the neck. The reason for this is that mustard is said to touch the nerves the moment it begins to draw or burn, and to be of the most use must be applied to the nerve centers or directly over the place where it will touch the affected nerve most quickly.—Washington Star.

Deep frying is loudly inveighed against by those who have not the inclination to discover that less fat is absorbed by pieces of fish plunged in deep fat than those which are turned from side to side in a limited quantity, and that the intense heat of the fat cooks it more thoroughly than is possible by any other method, and if carefully drained on paper little fat remains.

The emeralds of Mrs. August Belmont, of New York, the widow of the banker, were for years the talk of the town, but finer ones are now owned by Mrs. Astor and Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt, the former's being probably the costliest and finest in the United States.

It is said that milk is made especially nutritious if it is put in a jar and stood in a moderately hot oven for eight or ten hours. It is then called "baked milk," and has become thick and creamy.

The hands may be kept from perspiring by powdering them with finely pulverized starch, powdered orris root or sandalwood powder, or anything else that may be preferred.

To extract paint from clothing, saturate the spots with spirits of turpentine, let it remain several hours, then rub it and it will come off.

To clean ceilings that have been blackened by smoke from a lamp, wash off with rags that have been dipped in soda water.

Yellow spots on the linen or cotton produced by the iron may be removed by setting them in the broiling sun.

FASHIONS

A Cycling Costume.

Since cycling has become so much the rage for women, who find it more convenient to ride a bicycle than to indulge in other forms of exercise, many efforts have been made to secure a skirt that should be comfortable and pretty and at the same time answer the purposes which are required for a cycling suit. It must be of material suitable for rain or shine; it must fit, and yet not be too tight; it must be well worked, and yet, like a riding habit, be able to "give" in case of accident to the rider, and withal it must be becoming to her when seated upon the cycle ready for action. A practical, go ahead sort of cycling suit just brought out is made of a light woolen fabric and has a divided skirt, which, however, is carefully full to look like an ordinary walking dress when the wearer is standing or simply seated upon the cycle. The hem is cut out in vandyke tabs and braided. The bodice is a loose fitting jacket and is worn over a pretty silk waistcoat or a blouse.

The New Hat and Bonnet Pins.

Handsome hat and bonnet pins are now among the things essential to a fashionable toilet. The fleur de lis and the bow are especially in favor, as are the most graceful, but there is a number of novel devices, such as a bird's wing, insignia of different kinds, colored pearls, fancy pins and coral in oblong shapes. Sword hilts are especially popular, both in gold and in stones. Less costly has pins have moonstones and chrysoprase cut in pretty shapes, others are merely knots of silver and gold.—Elsie Bee in Jewelers' Circular.

Corselets and High Collars.

Some wonderful embroideries are used for the corselet bodices and for the interior of high medici collars, but the most fashionable people adjure the collars cut on the cross, with a seam down the back and a fold of the back, that are unsightly and burlesque of aspect when seen from the rear. The smartest high collars standing broad at the side, with a ruching of feathers, forming a becoming background to the neck, a reproduction of the fashions of the Venetian dames in the Middle Ages.

Favorite Perfumes.

One of the daintiest scents for this season is peach blossom. It is delightfully refreshing to tired senses, and a few drops sprinkled about on the carpet will make a room delicately fragrant. White lilac, heliotrope and wood violet are the most fashionable scents.

A Disinfectant.

One-half ounce of the spirits of lavender and a lump of salts of ammonia, placed in a wide mouthed bottle or jar of bottle and left uncovered in a room, acts as a pleasant deodoriser and disinfectant, filling the room with a delicate perfume which is soothing to the nerves and senses.—Exchange.

Paint splashes may be removed from window panes by a very hot solution of soda, using a soft flannel.

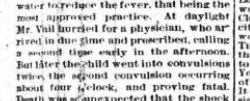
Miss Susie Woodland of Duer street North Plainfield, has returned to her home from an enjoyable visit with Miss Florence Thomas of Elizabeth.

Mr. W. J. Blakeley, formerly of Buffalo, but now of New York city, is visiting his friend, Mr. Wm. B. Rogers, of the firm of Rogers Bros., the shoe merchants.

Mr. Lewis B. Brown has returned to his home on Broadway from a pleasant stay at Atlantic City. Mr. Brown is the popular time-keeper at the Scott Press Works.

During Monday night the only child of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Vail, who reside on their farm over the mountain, awoke complaining of cramps, and seemed to be in a high fever. Its name is Annie May Vail and it is not yet three years old. It was apparently in its usual good health and spirits upon retiring. The child, in fact, had been an unusually bright and healthy one. There was no doctor within about three miles, and Mrs. Vail concluded she could nurse her pet until morning, not dreaming it to be seriously ill. She gave it the usual remedies for bowel trouble, and emersed it in hot water to reduce the fever, that being the most approved practice. At daylight Mr. Vail hurried for a physician, who arrived in due time and prescribed, calling a second time early in the afternoon. But later the child went into convulsions twice, the second convulsion occurring about four o'clock, and proving fatal. Death was announced that the shock was mainly severe to the parents, who have the sympathy of their large circle of friends. It is only a few months ago since their home was burned down, and the work of rebuilding was in progress, when the new trouble occurred.



—A fine legal point has been raised in an Ohio law court at Cleveland. It is this: Is a man guilty of intoxication if he is not belligerous or fighting drunk?

—"The Green Bag," a mouthy magazine for lawyers, has in the August number an interesting article on "The Supreme Court of New Jersey by John Whitehead, Esq."

—While returning from the funeral of the late Clarkson B. Hope, yesterday af., ternoon one of the wheels of the carriage in which Mr. Thomas Carty and family were seated, collapsed. The occupants escaped injury, however.

—While what is known as blood poisoning may be produced by the most trivial cause, it is a well established fact, medical authorities say, that in most of the instances in which it has proved fatal, the victims have been drinkers of beer or other intoxicants. It is a noticeable fact that men are much more subject to the disease than women.

—As already reported in THE NEWS there have been several persons protracted with the heat in this city. In this connection it is proper to say that the method of treating a sunstruck person, where medical attendance cannot be immediately procured, is to take him into a cool place with plenty of pure, fresh air; strip off his clothing to the waist and place him in a recumbent position; pour cold water upon the head and breast, also upon the wrists, and give small doses internally of brandy or some other stimulant.

The Veterans of the Thirtieth.

At a meeting of the committee having in charge the arrangements for the reunion of the Thirtieth regiment to be held at Somerville, it was decided to change the time for the event to September 3, in order not to conflict with the Smith picnic. Captain Cook resigned as Chairman of the Committee, and Joseph W. Ballantine succeeded to that position. The following sub-committees were appointed:

On Music—Jas. B. Brown, R. H. Brokaw and A. P. Sutphen.

Clambake—J. B. Betts, C. S. Hoffman and Senator Keys.

Invitations and Speakers—John T. Van Cleef, Jas. J. Bergen and J. D. Bartine.

Reception—Oscar Conkling, J. D. Vanderveer, G. S. Cook, L. A. Thompson, W. J. Keys, A. A. Clark and J. H. Mattison.

Police—A. S. TenEyck, Job C. Kinyon and B. S. Totten.

Grounds—J. B. Betts, J. D. Lathrop and G. H. Miller.

Railroad Transportation—C. S. Hoffman.

Printing—J. H. Mattison, Jas. Gaston and A. S. TenEyck.

The G. A. R. posts in the county will be invited to participate, and an invitation was extended to Company H. and accepted. Contributions of chickens, butter, sweet corn, potatoes and fruit are solicited.

NOW DESERTING THEM.

THEIR ORGAN HAS NO MORE USE FOR THE COMBINE.

Forcseeing the Fate in Store for the Public Wrong Doers, It Frowns on Them on the Sly.

At the meeting of Common Council, held recently, the combine adopted on its final reading an ordinance granting a water works franchise to J. M. Low & Co. The Mayor has vetoed the ordinance, and last week filed his objections with the city clerk as required by the charter. THE NEWS became aware of the matter, but it was not deemed proper to refer to the document until it had been presented at a public meeting of the Common Council, to which it was addressed, when it might then be fairly considered public property.

It at last came to the ears of a reporter on the organ, which has fattened through the combine through liberal official patronage in return for upholding them in all their wrongdoing, and the reporter, being also correspondent for the New York Times, sends to New York the following which appeared in to-day's issue of the latter paper:

FRAUDS MAY BE UNEARTHED.

A FIGHT AGAINST A SEWERAGE SCHEME IN PLAINFIELD.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Aug. 13.—Plainfield is about to be plunged into an important litigation over the plan of the Plainfield Sewerage Company to construct and operate sewers in the city. The head of the sewerage company is J. M. Low of Kingston, N. Y. His scheme to sewer the city has all along been upheld by the "Big Six," Combine which has ruled the Common Council this year. The remaining five of the Council, whose men prominent in business and professional life in New York City, have from the start opposed the plan of Low and his associates.

The "Big Six," in spite of public feeling and opposition, have granted to Low's company a franchise for the sewer works, and ordered the Mayor and City Clerk to sign the contract between the city and the company, so that the work of construction may be begun. A Times correspondent was to-day assured that the Mayor's decision would be not to sign. Mayor Gilbert is one of New York's best-known bank cashiers, a man of the utmost discretion and integrity. It is asserted that his decision not to sign the contract has been made after a most thorough investigation, in the course of which he and the minority of the Council have, it is said, made some startling discoveries.

Intimations are made of a big "job" in the sewerage contract, and it is also said to have good cause to view with suspicion the designs of the company and of the "Big Six" in general. The "Big Six" are said to be ready to act as soon as the Mayor's refusal to sign the contract is officially announced. They will at once seek a writ of mandamus to compel him to sign. This he will contest. The opponents of the sewerage scheme hope then to be able to make some startling exposures that will involve the company and the "Big Six" in disgrace.

This may indicate that the combine organ, after getting all the "pap" it can through the combine out of the public treasury, is deserting them. The Plainfield Times came into existence months ago. THE NEWS all along from the outset has exposed the gang, regardless of the consequential loss of the official patronage which they control, when we became satisfied that they were endangering the interests of the city. "Public feeling" referred to above was represented in the only newspaper in Plainfield which has truly represented "public feeling" from the outset, although we take no special credit for what ought to be the course of every public newspaper. The Plainfield Times of late, however, has done yeoman service in atoning for its past sins of omission.

At the last meeting of Common Council, it will be remembered, the "combine" rescinded the contract to J. M. Low & Co. —we do not know the "& Co." by name, but it appears in the old contract that Mr. Low was made liable to be fined $1,000 for each and every street he refused, after due application of the "company," to sign his name through. He did not want this in, and had some other objections, whereupon the contract and ordinance were rescinded to oblige him and remodeled and passed as he desired it, leaving the fines out except in a few trivial instances. Then again the Big Five were not, we understand, allowed by the Little Six combine to see the contract at the meeting so that they could examine it carefully in the city's interest. Now the Mayor has refused to sign it and will fight the matter out in the courts in behalf of the city, when the combine will be extinguished as they have in every instance before. During the few remaining months of their existence they will not be likely to do much further public mischief before they are kicked out of power they have so disgracefully misused.

BECAME VIOLENT IN HIS CELL.

Alexander Gordon to Be Taken to Morris Plains To-Day.

Alexander Gordon, the furnishing goods merchant of Elizabeth who became insane yesterday from business troubles and mosquito bites, was in a perfect frenzy this morning in the Union County Jail. His hands were left free for a few moments and he tore every particle of clothing off his body, and when Warden Dodd got back to the cell Gordon was dancing around in a circle. He tried to dash out his brains against the cell door, and with great difficulty was overpowered and strapped down on a cot.

Gordon's uncle, David Kaufmann, of 512 Spring street, was sent for, and it was decided to remove the insane man to the Morris Plains Asylum, as it is feared he will do harm to himself or somebody else if left another day in the jail.

Gordon formerly resided in this city and is well-known here.

GABLE GIVES BONDS.

John B. Gable, the upholsterer who deserted his wife to run away with the wayward wife of William B. Avery, of Westervelt avenue, North Plainfield, has been compelled to furnish bonds to contribute to the support of his children.

Tuesday morning Mrs. Gable, accompanied by a detective, went to a house in New York, to which place the detective had traced the guilty pair.

They did not have to wait, however, for Gable came out with a pitcher to go for some beer. He was at once arrested and locked up. Later he secured a bondsman, who went surety for him on his promise to pay his wife $5 per week. Then he was released. This morning he paid a flying visit to Plainfield, returning later to New York. There he goes by the name of John V. Smith.

Gable offered to live with his wife again, but she refused to have anything further to do with him. The justice kindly cautioned her that he could not compel Gable to support her and would be compelled to release Gable if she refused to live with him. She said she did not want to have anything more to do with him, that she could support herself, but that she wanted him to support their children so the judge bound him over that way.

The workmen on the Mt. Holly street car line struck on August 11 for $1.50 instead of $1.25 per day. Their places were supplied.

Elijah A. Martin, employed as a brakeman by the Atlantic City Railroad Company, had his right leg badly hurt, both above and below the knee, by a train August 12.

John H. Gibson, a blacksmith of 1621 Fillmore street, Camden, on August 12, at the Cooper Hospital, had a piece of steel removed from his arm that had been there two years.

The biggest catch of bluefish ever known on Long Beach, it is stated, occurred on August 10, at Beach Haven. Porpoises drove the fish to the beach, and thousands were caught.

James Gilmore, the seven-year-old son of Patrick Gilmore of Gloucester City, was seriously injured August 12 by being run over by a horse and cart. The "Big Six" are said to be ready to act as soon as the Mayor's refusal to sign the contract is officially announced. They will at once seek a writ of mandamus to compel him to sign. This he will contest. The opponents of the sewerage scheme hope then to be able to make some startling exposures that will involve the company and the "Big Six" in disgrace.

Plainfield's New Water Supply.

PLAINFIELD, N. J., Aug. 13th.—The city of Plainfield will have the advantage of of a first-class water works system next Monday, when the newly-laid mains and pipes of the Plainfield Water Supply company will be filled with water from the high standpipe at Netherwood. The rival water company, of which J. M. Low is the head, has done nothing with the franchise it obtained from the city, and with which it threatened to fight the old State charter under which the Water Supply Company has completed its works, and it is understood that Mr. Low has abandon the contest, so far as Plainfield city is concerned. In the borough of North Plainfield, however, the two rival companies anticipate a bitter fight. Each is seeking to extend water works monopoly there.—N. Y. Times.

It is needless to add that there is nothing in this so-called fight, as the Borough Council is all Republican and no combine flourishes there, so that Mr. Low "isn't in it."

Dynamite in Jail.

A package addressed to John Walker, one of the pair of desperate men who maltreated John Toms, was received by Jailer Wilson at the Somerset county jail on Tuesday. Mr. Wilson opened it and found two spools of thread, some needles and a curious substance which he did not like the looks of. This was submitted to Druggist R. L. Day who thought it was dynamite. Dr. Dorland gave the same decision. Walker was evidently going to cause some more desperate means to effect his escape. The time of trial is approaching too near. Walker declares that the stuff is chewing gum.

THE NINTH DAY OF AB.

The Worst Disaster That Befell the Jewish Nation.—Calamities Commemorated by Religious Rites To-Morrow.

Yesterday was black day in the Hebrew calendar, says the Newark Journal, from which the account is taken. It commemorates the worst disaster that befell the Jewish nation. On the ninth day of the month of Ab the city of Jerusalem was pillaged by Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon, the Holy Temple was burned to the ground, and the inhabitants, comprising those who had been governed by Zedekiah, the King of Judah, were carried into captivity, where they remained until set free by Cyrus, King of the Medes and Persians, who conquered Babylon and permitted the exiled Jews to return and rebuild their temple, which event occurred seventy years later.

On the same ninth day of Ab, centuries after, Jerusalem was again laid waste by the destroyer, its temple razed, tens of thousands of its inhabitants put to the sword or delivered over as a prey to wild beasts, and the remainder sent into captivity among heathen nations, by Titus, afterwards Emperor of Rome. Five or six decades subsequent to this the last fortress in Judia—Bither—was captured, during the reign of Hadrian, Roman Emperor, and its defenders subjected to the torturers and death.

It is even said that at the same period in the year 1492 the Hebrews were driven from Spain, and numerous other direful events are said to have occurred on this day in different ages. Ten of the most eminent of the ancient Rabbis were put to the sword, burned at the stake or flayed alive, by order of Hadrian; and Hannah and her seven sons were cruelly murdered by Antiochus Epiphanes, King of the Syro-Grecians, because of their refusal to bow to the heathen idol. While these last butcheries were not all committed in the month of Ab nor during the same century they form the subject of lament on the day set apart for national mourning.

LAMENTATIONS OF JEREMIAH.

Wednesday evening after sunset the synagogues were opened, and pious worshipers are there gathered to hear the Lamentations of Jeremiah, the mournful book of sad poems, and other sorrowful compositions written for this occasion. The service yesterday morning was of a more extended character, some of the most renowned Hebrew writers having contributed to the liturgy of the day, which varies somewhat among the Sepherdim (Spanish or Portuguese Jews) and the Ashkenazim (German, Polish and Russian Jews). The synagogues are heavily draped in black. The Ark containing the Scroll of the Law is likewise covered; also the reading desk, and a separate table used instead at these two services. The synagogues are darkened on the eve, and each congregant holds a lighted candle. The scene is sombre and impressive. In some houses of worship, in accordance with the ritual, the minister or reader proclaims:

"Our brethren of the House of Israel! It is because of our sins and the sins of our fathers that we reckon this day 1823 years from the time that our sanctuary was destroyed and our temple was burned. Therefore doth Zion weep in bitterness, and Jerusalem lift her voice, 'My heart my heart yearneth for their wounded; my being, my being is pained because of their sins.' And we, in our bitter captivity, exclaim: 'The joy of our heart hath ceased; our dancing hath changed into mourning; the crown of our head hath fallen. Woe unto us that we have sinned!'"

THE MOURNING REMOVED.

Such are features of the service on the eve and in the morning of the Feast of the Ninth of Ab. At the afternoon service, however, the service is of a comforting character; inspired utterances of the Prophet Isaiah and others constitute and essential part of the ritual. At the conclusion of this service and the evening prayers, the cotogreauts repair to their homes and break their fast when the stars appear.

In this country the fast is, perhaps, most marked among immigrants from Russia, who think of their persecuted brethren in the modern Egypt, and lament national dismemberment, with tears coursing down their cheeks, and prayers to the God of Israel for a redemption. Unlike as Americans, or as adopted citizens of this free land, they pray for those who still suffer thraldom, believing, in common with all orthodox Hebrews, that Israel's safety will never be secure against tyranny and despotism until the national banner is once more planted upon Mount Zion.

Smalley Brothers Get the Contract.

SOMETHING ABOUT CLUBS.

Not Social, but the Kinds Wielded by the Police Force.

Among our kaleidoscopic population there is a certain contingent whose craniums are in a more or less unenviable condition through little misunderstandings with the police force. A rap over the head with a patrolman's night stick, or "locust," lingers for years in the memory of the recipient.

As the hours of night creep onward, the restless sleeper hears the resonant club sounding out its signals on the pavement. It is with a sense of security that he then turns over and slumbers, while on the other hand evildoers slink into the dark corners or disappear in the gloom, for the signal is not a welcome one to them.

As armies use signal of fire by night, so the vigilant officers convey messages to each other by means of their clubs as explicity as if telegraphed or wired.

The instrument is simple, being merely a billet of locust wood, well seasoned between twenty and thirty inches in length, and nearly two inches in diameter. About eight or ten inches from the handle end is a hole, through which is inserted a deer thong, which forms a handle or string that can be hung over the wrist.

When delivered to the officers the locust is generally longer than when seen in active service. One of the first things they do is to saw it off to a convenient length, have it turned down, and then they are in readiness to suit the individual. While this is not strictly regular, it is tacitly allowed by the department.

THE LOCUST FOR PARADE.

On parade or dress occasions the locust gives place to a finely turned ornate baton of rosewood, with a silk cord and tasseled. This implement is heavier than the nightstick, but, though more beautiful to look upon, is nowise more soothing to its effects than its every-day companion. It, together with the nocturnal weapon, is a dangerous affair in the hands of the stalwart guardians of the peace. It is of a weight which allows it to be wielded easily and with unholy unction.

Coupled with these persuaders is the stubby, wicked little "billy." It is not recognized by the police authorities in the code, but is not prohibited. The William—as those not intimately enough acquainted with it to call it "billy," should respectfully inquire it—is constructed of rose and iron woods, cocobola, etc., and is shaped like a diminutive base ball bat. It will rest snugly in a breast or hip-pocket, and is an ugly and dangerously weapon at close quarters.

The entire trio wear for years, unless the recipients of extra hard usage, and are as fully qualified to break hundreds of heads as their humble prototype, the Irish shillelagh, have great work owing to their manufacture, and when the owners retire from the force they will last for a generation or so in family use, being utilized on wash-day to poke the clothes in the wash-boiler and stir them about. —Newark Journal.

A CATASTROPHE BARELY AVERTED

And Yet the Plainfielders Don't Appreciate It.

One warm, sultry afternoon this Summer, a train started briskly out from Ninth and Green street depot, Philadelphia, headed for the great metropolis—New York. Seated in the smoking car enjoying their cigars, were a couple of gentlemen. One had been over the route before, the other was a stranger to it, and asked his companion to point out to him the prominent places along the route. The train bounded along like a thing of life, a good engineer at the airbrakes, and two porters in the parlor car. Philadelphia receded until it was but a speck in the distance, and finally vanished completely from view, and the man who had been there before noted the towns as they passed them. He told about Trenton Junction, Somerville, Bound Brook and Dunellen. As the train whirled past Dunellen the stranger, who was sitting by the open window, turned and spit out. As he did so his friend sprang up suddenly and then sank back in his seat nearly fainting. "What is the matter?" cried the other in alarm. "Gracious," exclaimed his friend as he regained his breath, "nearly spit on Plainfield."—Westfield Leader.

The record of a series of games of base ball will be played between the Plainfield Bicycle Club B. B. C. and the Flemington team, on the Park avenue grounds, on Saturday, Aug. 15, at 3:30 o'clock. The first game between these two clubs was played Aug. 1, at Flemington, and resulted in a victory for Plainfield by the score of 4 to 3.

Prayers for the Prince of Wales.

W. T. Stead speaks as follows in The Review of Reviews about the Church of England custom of repeating prayers for the royal family, preferring his remarks with the regulation prayer offered:

"Almighty God, the fountain of all goodness we humbly beseech thee to bless Albert Edward, prince of Wales, the Princess of Wales and all the royal family. Endue them with thy holy spirit; enrich them with thy heavenly grace; prosper them with all happiness, and bring them to thine everlasting kingdom through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen."

The Prince of Wales is now fifty years of age, and a grandfather. Since his birth, in all churches by law established, which comply with the plain ordering of the Book of Common Prayer, the prayer quoted above has been offered twice daily, morning and evening, for half a century. But as daily service is the exception rather than the rule, we may take it that the above prayer is only offered to the extent of fourteen times, more or less, a week, in each of the Anglican churches throughout the empire. As there are 29,000 clergy in England alone, there must be at least 20,000 churches at home and abroad using the Book of Common Prayer.

The last prayer for Albert Edward, prince of Wales, must, therefore, in the last half century have been said about 1,000,000 times. If in the archives at least 100,000,000 times since first the cannon thundered at the birth of the heir apparent to the British throne. It is a moot question how many in a congregation actually unite in the prayers that are read by the minister. But we shall not be over-estimating the average if, out of a congregation of a hundred, we suppose that ten intelligently follow the service so far as to experience a real wish that the petition sounding in their ears should be granted. Allowing ten persons in each church to be so with moderate fervor, but with a conscious desire, more or less rapid, that their humble wishes on behalf of the prince may be heard at the throne of grace, we have one thousand millions of prayers offered up to God that he would endue the Prince of Wales with his holy spirit and enrich him with heavenly grace.

Eight hundred and eighty millions of prayers, and no answer thereto the baccarat scandal of Tranby Croft!

Mr. Stead further remarks that as a prayer gauge, on the plan suggested by Professor Huxley, this result would hardly do much to strengthen popular belief in the efficacy of prayer. He thinks, however, that the regulation prayers ought to have been supplemented by some useful employment for England's heir in all these fifty years, and then he would not have had to fall back upon baccarat for knowledge to make him forget his dreary existence as a waiting prince with nothing to do. It has not been the British state policy to let the heir to the throne have any share in public business, and his life has been in consequence as stupid and dull a one as anybody could possibly have.

Desirable Naval Stations.

The New York Sun, urging the importance to the United States of naval stations in the West Indies, calls attention strongly again to the Mole St. Nicholas, on the northwest coast of Hayti. The reciprocity treaty with Spain makes the Mole still more necessary to the commanding position the United States is assuming as a chief naval power. If we had Mole St. Nicholas by either lease or purchase from the Haytian government, then we should have Cuba directly under our guns on each side. On the north of her would be the Florida coast, on the southeast, only thirty miles away, the powerful Mole St. Nicholas, with the stars and stripes floating above it.

There are two points where, if the United States had naval stations, it could command the entrance to the waters of the gulf and Central America. These two points are both on the island of San Domingo, one north, the other south. That on the south is on Samana bay. Of these The Sun remarks:

It may be said, indeed, that the two great international routes between Europe and the Gulf of Mexico and Central America are the Nona pass on the south side of the island of San Domingo, and the Mole St. Nicholas pass, or Windward pass, on the northern or Haytian side of the island. The power that shall occupy these two points, and establish there a sufficient system of fortifications, will control the principal highways between Europe and the Gulf of Mexico. In other words, were an interoceanic canal to be built across Central America, the occupation of both the Mole St. Nicholas and of Samana bay would prove to be of invaluable importance to the United States.

Many a veteran rubs his head and exclaims: "Bless my soul! Is it possible this was the twenty-fifth annual reunion of the G. A. R. boys! I don't believe it." Yet it is true, and the boys of '61 are themselves silver haired and grandfathers, not a few of them. As to the thinning ranks, however, it may be a satisfaction to them, now back in their homes, to remember that the procession of the brave old G. A. R.'s this year at Detroit had 14,000 veterans in its ranks, the largest procession that has marched at an annual reunion since the G. A. R. was organized. And the saddest feature of that grand procession was that so few leading generals of war time were there to review it. They have nearly every one gone over to the silent army.

The Pan-American Transportation company has at length got all its stock subscribed—$10,000,000—and the splendid new fleet of twenty steel steamships will be put upon the waters with characteristic American swiftness. Then will begin a veritable boom for our southern seaports. The steamers will carry freight and passengers between the southern ports of the United States and the West Indies, Central and South America. The United States will rule the wave in the western hemisphere. It is written in the book of destiny. Meantime, in the present instance, it is expected that destiny will be helped along considerably by the mail subsidy bill passed by congress.

BESIEGED BY AN ACTOR

Nat Goodwin Attempts to Dispossess His Wife.

FIGHT FOR A QUEEN ANNE COTTAGE.

Goodwin Used a Sledge Hammer on the Door, but Could Not Get In—Then He Endeavored to Slip Into the Mansion Disguised as a Messenger Boy.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Mrs. "Nat" Goodwin's home, 230 West End avenue, is at present in a state of siege. The attacking party is Mrs. Goodwin's husband, the comedian. The wife does not dare to capitulate, for she says the house belongs to her, and she means to hold on to it. Mr. Goodwin is equally positive that the house is his, and he intends to take possession of it. He has played a very extraordinary role this week in asserting his authority. Mr. and Mrs. Goodwin were married on Oct. 15, 1868, in Chicago, after she obtained a divorce from her first husband, a son of one of the wealthiest men in Buffalo, N. Y. Mrs. Goodwin, who was Miss Nellie Baker, of Buffalo, is a tall and handsome woman.

He Gave Her the House.

After her marriage to the actor they came to New York and roomed at the Hoffman House. Then Goodwin bought the house on West End avenue, paying $40,000 for it. Since then it is in fashionable and picturesque neighborhood the house, stripped of its furniture, is worth $40,000 today. The rugs, the old bronzes, the odd bits of china, the pictures, the costly mirrors, the silver trays, the conservatory, all lend an air of aristocratic comfort to the interior.

A Suit for a Separation.

There was a violent row in and his wife lived happily until last September. In May of this year she brought suit for a separation on the ground of desertion. In her complaint Mrs. Goodwin said that in September, 1890, she was driving in the park when the horse, which her husband had just purchased, became unmanageable and was thrown from the carriage and two of her ribs were broken. She sustained other internal injuries which culminated in a severe nervous prostration.

He Had Deserted Her.

At Goodwin's request she went to a sanitarium, was cured, but when she came home he asked her to go to the sanitarium. She did so under protest. She told him she feared he aimed at breaking up their home. He told her that she should have the house for her own and all there was in it. She sent word to him on March 30 from the sanitarium that she was coming home and asked him to meet her. He refused to do so. Shortly after that, in spite of his promise, he had removed some pictures and other things, including some furniture, to the Lambs' club, where he had taken an apartment for himself. She informed him that she was at home and asked him to come to her. In reply this letter came.

I have no home save the one I am now occupying, and the house you are now living in from May 1 belongs to somebody else.

But She Would Not Sign.

Later Goodwin announced that he had deliberately and finally resolved to live alone and wanted to see her at the Lambs' club, and that he wished she would leave the house in West End avenue, because he desired to lease it. He importuned her to sign with him a deed of a lease of the house, but she considered it belonged to her and would not sign. Since then Goodwin has turned heaven and earth almost to get into the house. He called her up, and when she refused to come down to the door, he threatened to break in the door. Then she discharged her servants, in case bribery should make them forget their loyalty to her. Goodwin came and tried to get into the house, but his latch key would not work. Then he went after a locksmith.

Baker, Mrs. Goodwin's brother, warned him away, at which Goodwin flew into a rage, grabbed the locksmith's hammer and aimed a blow at either his brother-in-law or at the window.

The Comedian's Wild Rage.

In his wild fury he struck the glass in the upper sash. It was very thick plate glass and it resisted Goodwin's first attack. Then he struck again and again, for he continued to shower blows upon it. Down came the hammer again, Goodwin leaning over the stoop and wielding it in a frenzy of rage. At last out went the window pane in innumerable pieces.

Baker cried to his sister, "Nell, you as owner of the house, must interfere yourself. One of the flying bits of sharp glass had cut Mrs. Goodwin's finger and the blood was dropping from it. She took two hurried steps to the window, and, leaning out, looked at the comedian who was playing then, against his usual habit, in a tragedy. She had not laid eyes on him before for seven months.

She Called a Policeman.

Mrs. Goodwin asked him to go away. Then she pulled down the window. Goodwin seemed to lose all control of himself. He flung one coarse epithet after another at his wife. He turned to one young man standing by and offered him money to raise the parlor window. Mrs. Goodwin raised it herself.

"If you touch that window," she said, "I'll have you arrested," and she sent the watchman who was on guard after a policeman.

Then the actor went away. Mrs. Good win then put more chains on the doors and barricaded the entrance with stout sticks braced against the sides of the vestibule. The parlor windows were also boarded up with pine, which stood out white and glaring yesterday, a blot on the handsome Queen Anne edifice.

Disguised as a Messenger.

At 11 p. m. Wednesday the actor grew desperate and, disguised as a district messenger boy, endeavored to get into the house. Mr. Baker came to the door and recognized the actor, who crouched, ready the instant that door was open to spring in the house and divide possession, at least, with his wife.

"You stand back, you ——," he yelled Baker, grabbing at a club which stood ready to his hand.

Goodwin jumped to his feet and bolted down the avenue as fast as his legs would carry him. The beleaguered house was garrisoned last night by three special officers, who were engaged by Mrs. Goodwin to resist any attack.

FELL DEAD AT HARRISBURG.

World's Fair Executive Commissioner Wolfe's Sudden Summons.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 14.—The World's fair commissioners met at the capitol Thursday. Governor Pattison presided at the meeting and announced the different committees. A sad incident occurred after the adjournment of the commission, and just as the members were leaving the capitol. Charles S. Wolfe, a prominent member of the commission, who had just been elected executive commissioner, dropped dead on his way from the meeting. The committees are as follows:

Executive—R. E. Pattison, L. A. Watres, R. E. Wright, Rodney Mercur, J. P. S. Gobin, C. C. Thompson, Benjamin Whitman, William McClelland, William Hasson.

Manufactures—G. N. Riley, J. M. Woodside.

Mines and Minerals—L. A. Watres, L. S. Lent and one vacancy.

Education and History—C. S. Wolfe, Robert Purvis, L. Clark Davis.

Women's Work—Mrs. H. A. Lucas, Mrs. Ida Elkins Tyler, J. M. Woodside.

Agriculture—J. A. Herr, A. B. Farquhar, J. Warner.

Live Stock—J. I. Carter, Thomas Bradley, J. A. Herr.

Horticulture and Floriculture—J. C. Walker, Miss M. E. McCandless, Mrs. J. E. Tyler.

Machinery—L. S. Lent, Simon Kuhr, E. H. Williams.

Railroads—P. A. B. Widener, A. W. Taylor and one vacancy.

Transportation—E. A. Bigler, A. W. Taylor, A. J. Barr.

Building Materials—J. K. H. Hall, A. G. Roenig, P. Foley.

Forestry and Lumber—E. A. Bigler, J. M. Guffey, J. K. H. Hall.

Labor and Invention—R. S. Searle, A. B. Farquhar and one vacancy.

Arts and Sciences—Mrs. T. M. Jones, Miss Mary E. McCandless, R. L. Brownfield.

Public Instruction—Clark Davis, R. L. Brownfield, C. S. Wolfe.

Oils and Gases—Lewis Emery, Jr., J. M. Guffey, William Hasson.

Printing and Publications—Benjamin Whitman, W. W. Glendenin, R. E. Wright.

A report from the committee on rules was read, which went into a general discussion of the plan and the scope of the work and the duties of the several officers. Reference is made to the importance of Pennsylvania's share in the fair, and it is suggested that the state building should be erected by Pennsylvania materials and by a Pennsylvania builder. The resignations of John Mundell and Messrs. Barnes and Powderly as members of the commission were received, and J. B. Oliver, Pittsburg; Mrs. M. Jones, Harrisburg, and H. J. McAleer, of Huntington, were chosen in their places. Rooney Mercur was appointed treasurer of the commission in place of John Mundell, resigned. Charles S. Wolfe, of Lewisburg, was chosen executive commissioner over several competitors for the position.

MRS. POLK DYING.

She Is the Widow of the Late Ex-President James K. Polk.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 14.—Mrs. Sarah Polk, widow of ex-President James K. Polk, was taken suddenly ill Wednesday night and is now in a serious condition. Her physicians do not expect her to live more than a few hours longer.

IT WAS A HIGH OLD ROW.

South Jersey Farmers Have a Regular Donnybrook Fair.

PENNSVILLE, N. J., Aug. 14.—The south Jersey farmers, with their families and friends, 5,000 in all, held their annual reunion here yesterday. The farmers came in wagons, and their number was augmented by several hundred persons from Philadelphia and 100 from New Castle. When all the south Jersey farmers and their families get together they number 20,000.

The dinner hour was hardly over when the liquor began to assert itself, and a single quarrel was enough to start a general fight. Only a Salem county youth had a fight with a Pennsville fourth.

A big mob surged around the boys and several fights were started. In an hour 300 men and boys were fighting along the shore of the Delaware river, on which Pennsville lies. In the hottest of the riot one of the ringleaders was knocked down and kicked in the head.

He is in a critical condition and his recovery is doubtful. Twenty men were so badly injured that the Pennsville physicians have had their hands full in dressing their wounds. When matters seemed to have quieted a Pennsville farmer started to get a Salem county's gold watch for a fight to a finish. They would well under way when the crowd began to fight again. At least 250 men were hurt.

He Has Bardsley's Book.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14.—City Treasurer Wright has gained possession of John Bardsley's private memorandum book for which he has been searching for nearly a month. Treasurer Wright has appointed ex-Detective Sergeant James Haggerty to replace the ten appointed by John Bardsley to collect the delinquent mercantile taxes.

Many Convicts Escape at Brieeville.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 14.—Seven convicts made their escape from the stockade at Briceville. It is charged that when a convict manages to get into the woods he has no trouble in finding some one who will provide him with citizens' clothes. Fourteen have escaped this week.

Stole $550 from the Purser.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 14.—The surplus money, amounting to $550, from the excursion to Coney Island of the St. Patrick's Young Men's Literary association was stolen from a bag in which it had been placed in the purser's office.

He Stabbed a Camden Jailer.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 14.—William Spellman, in jail awaiting trial on a charge of obtaining money on false pretences, stabbed Jailer Andrew Robinson, and then committed suicide. Robinson's injuries are not fatal.

THE SENAPUTTY HANGED

John Bull Avenges the Massacre at Manipur.

THE CRY FOR MORE BREAD ABROAD

Great Suffering in Germany Among the Poor People, but the Government Will Not Remove the Corn Duties—Many Persons Die from Lack of Proper Food.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—A dispatch from Calcutta says that the senaputty of the royal house of Manipur and the Tongal general, were hanged Thursday at Manipur for their part in causing the massacre of Grimwood, Quinton and other British officials at the time of the Manipur uprising.

Large Crowds Saw Them Die.

Large crowds witnessed the execution. There was no disturbance.

Away with the Corn Duties.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—The excitement is increasing in the manufacturing districts over the high price of bread, and the workingmen are clamoring for the repeal of the corn duties. The Social Democratic party is proclaiming everywhere that once in power it would sweep away all duties on food. The Socialists have also organized whose object is to secure the repeal of corn duties, and multitudes of workingmen are being enrolled.

Fears of a Riot.

The government is evidently disturbed by the situation, as it is feared that riots may break out in some of the districts where the suffering is greatest, and there is no doubt of the sympathy of the soldiers, and even of many of the police, with the nearly starving people. In Greis, it is said a family of four persons has been found that had only one small loaf of rye bread in three days to live on. They were out of work owing to industrial depression, and were ashamed to ask the authorities for relief.

Death Hastened by Starvation.

Among those who do seek relief painful cases are found. The death of a babe at Leipsic was due to starvation, caused by the mother having nothing to eat for many hours, and the deaths of many grown up persons have undoubtedly been hastened by the scarcity of food. The government, meantime, remains obstinate as to maintaining the duty on imported grain.

Starving in England, Too.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—Terrible wretchedness exists in the quaint old town of Workington, Cumberland. The manufacturers have shut down, and 6,000 people, which means all the able bodied population of working age, are out of employment. Hundreds of houses are deserted, their former occupants having gone elsewhere to get a living, and those who remain are pictures of misery and despair. Hollow eyed, sunken cheeked people can be seen on the streets who gaze famishingly at the bakeshops and other places where food is sold, but which they have no money to buy. The local relief funds are exhausted, and private charity has come in some degree to the aid of the unhappy people.

Crispi Scores France.

PARIS, Aug. 14.—Signor Crispi's published statement that France makes use of the Vatican to create the impression that an almost lively indignation in France, as does also his assertion that "Italy requires to be sure that France will not repeat the error of 1798 by sending expedition in support of papal pretensions." Signor Crispi lays on the Vatican the responsibility for Italy's having joined the triple alliance.

Commissioners Off for Russia.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—The American commissioners who are investigating the conditions of European emigration to America, and have been here several days, have gone to St. Petersburg. After finishing their inquiries in Russia they will visit Hamburg and Bremen.

The French Fleet's Visit.

BERLIN, Aug. 14.—The German newspapers are discussing the probable effect of the visit of the French fleet to England. The general expression is that France will have a chance to observe the superiority of the English fleet and be less anxious for a struggle in which the English fleet would take part.

Peace in Europe Guaranteed.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 14.—The Novosti, reviewing European politics, says that if England continues the present attitude toward France and Russia, the peace of Europe will be guaranteed for a long time to come.

Good News for a Disgraced Officer.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 14.—The president has commuted to one year's suspension from rank and duty on half pay the dismissal from the service rendered last month by a court martial against Captain William Davis, of the Tenth United States cavalry, at Apache, A. T. General Schofield joined in the numerous requests for commutation of sentence. Captain Davis was charged with being drunk while on duty.

Lost His Valuables in a Bathhouse.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 14.—J. J. Guiton, of Albany, N. Y., had his watch, diamond pin, diamond ring, and a large sum of money stolen in a bathhouse of the Asbury Park Bathing company. He had put his valuables and money in an envelope, intending to leave them at the office, but instead had left them on a seat.

A Close Call for Hahn.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 14.—Henry Hahn, son of Charles Hahn, a retired merchant, residing on North Seventh street, Philadelphia, narrowly escaped death from an overdose of morphine. He was found unconscious in Library park. After three hours hard work Hahn was saved from death.

Four Years for Tatro.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Charles Tatro, the Connecticut engineer, who, on June 16, abducted sixteen-year-old Augusta Ursinga and took her to New Haven, where he assaulted her in a lonely woods, was sentenced to four years' imprisonment. He pleaded guilty.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—The agents of the anthracite producing companies have ordered an advance of fifteen cents per ton to take effect Sept. 1.

THE DEADLOCK BROKEN.

Leslie W. Russell Nominated for Judge at Saratoga.

SARATOGA, Aug. 14.—The deadlock in the Fourth judicial Republican convention was broken last night on the 117th ballot. The convention went into committee of the whole and a compromise was effected. The Tappen and Badger men voted unanimously voted for Hon. Leslie W. Russell, of Canton, St. Lawrence county. Mr. Russell served one term as state attorney general.

Ten Thousand Hear McKinley.

SHELBY, O., Aug. 14.—Fully 10,000 people attended the Farmers' picnic at Blackman's grove. Major McKinley delivered an eloquent non-partisan address which elicited great enthusiasm. Mr. McKinley made a political speech in the town of Shelby last night.

Charged with Hass' Murder.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 14.—A coal dealer named Job Hass, aged sixty years, was found dead with his skull crushed in his office in Mount Airy. A club and hatchet covered with blood were found on the floor. A negro named Henry Davis was arrested on suspicion. He resisted the officers and eighty-two dollars in notes was found in his pocket.

MOSBY'S SHOT FAILED.

He Fired at Count Mitkiewicz but Did Not Hit Him.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 14.—Count Eugene Mitkiewicz, of this city, Beverly C. Mosby, of Warrenton, Va.; his sister, Miss Stuart Mosby, and "Shoebox" Miller, of Pittsburg, are the leading characters in a domestic drama enacted here, and which but for the poor marksmanship of Mr. Mosby would have ended in a tragedy. The details of the affair are full of romantic interest.

Count Mitkiewicz will be remembered as the man who secured a concession from the Chinese government for the establishment of an International bank with a capital of $50,000,000 several years ago.

Beverley Mosby is a son of General Mosby, of the Confederate army. His sister, Miss Mosby, is tall, stately blond with a face rather intellectual than pretty and a penchant for literature.

Miller came to Washington about six months ago with letters of introduction to Count Mitkiewicz from a syndicate of Pittsburg capitalists. The two became fast friends. Miller was frequently at the count's house. There he met Miss Mosby, and in time an engagement of marriage was formed between them.

Mosby came several weeks ago, investigated Miller's antecedents and found that Miller served a term of six years at the Riverside (Pa.) penitentiary for being implicated in a robbery at Brady's Bend, above Pittsburg.

He escaped from prison in a packing box used for the transportation of prison made shoes. He has prospered, and finished his term. From the manner of his escape he gained the sobriquet of "Shoebox" Miller. Mr. Mosby was also told that Miller was a bigamist, he having three wives living. Mosby came back to Washington with fire in his eye. Mosby at once upbraided Mitkiewicz for bringing about the betrothal of his sister and the count's friend.

The men had hot words. Mosby stepped back, drew a self cocking revolver, fired full at the count's chest. His unsteady aim caused the bullet to lodge in the wainscoting of the parlor, and before he could fire again he was disarmed. The matter was subsequently settled by a written apology on Mosby's part. His Mosby is true to her lover. She refuses to believe the stories about him.

DESPERATE MAN'S DEED

He Held Up Frayser in a Hotel Room.

COMPELLED TO INDORSE A NOTE.

Two Revolvers and Chloroform Played a Prominent Part in the Astonishing Affair, but the World Do Thief Got Very Little for His Trouble.

MEMPHIS, Aug. 14.—R. Dudley Frayser, president of the Security and the Memphis City banks, secretary of the Memphis City railway, principal owner of the Public Ledger, and one of the most prominent and wealthy citizens of Memphis, was last evening chloroformed and robbed at the Gayoso hotel by a man giving his name as John A. Morris and his residence as New Orleans. About 6 o'clock a man registering as "John A. Morris, New Orleans," was assigned a room at the Gayoso, for which he paid in advance, and occupied it at once. In the course of the morning he ordered a bottle of whisky from the bar, and a bellboy secured a bottle of camphor for him from the house drug store.

Invited to Call.

Mr. Frayser was sitting in his private office at the Memphis City bank when he received a note signed "John A. Morris," requesting Mr. Frayser to call on him at once on business of importance. Mr. Frayser was at the hotel in a few minutes. The writer of the note introduced himself as Mr. Morris, of the Louisiana Lottery company, of New Orleans. He said the lottery company had been antagonized greatly of late in that state; that its investments had been unprofitable and lottery property generally was unsafe, and he wished to consult him in regard to it.

He Had the Drop on Frayser.

Mr. Frayser gave him what information he could in regard to Memphis moneyed institutions, but would give no advice, and turned to go. Then Mr. Morris asked him to have a drink. He declined, saying he did not drink, but Morris insisted, and Mr. Frayser walked across the room to a window while Morris opened a satchel.

"Here!" said Morris, and as Mr. Frayser turned around he was greatly startled to find two revolvers, one in each of Morris' hands, aimed at his head. Said Morris:

Indorse or Die.

"I am a desperate man; I have no money; my family in New Orleans are in destitute circumstances and I must have money. (You must indorse a check for $5,000."

When Mr. Frayser had recovered from his astonishment he tried to argue with the man, telling him that he did not have so much money to give him. The New Orleans man stuck to it, however, and finally Mr. Frayser agreed to indorse a check for $800. The check was then drawn on the Hibernian National bank, of New Orleans, and Mr. Frayser indorsed it "R. D. Frayser," leaving the cashier at his bank would suspect something wrong and receive the cash it, as he always indorsed his checks "R. Dudley Frayser."

Held a Prisoner.

A bellboy was called by Morris and the check was sent to the Memphis City bank. Mr. Frayser being kept prisoner in the room.

After the boy had gone, Morris walked over to where Mr. Frayser was standing and slapped a napkin over his face. That is the last of his adventure Mr. Frayser can recall. Mr. White proprietor of the hotel was notified later that there was something wrong in Morris' room, as cries of "Murder!" and "Thieves!" could be plainly heard issuing from that room. He called a clerk, and they broke open the door of the room.

Mr. Frayser was found unconscious, tossing and turning on the bed, and the effect of chloroform was overpowering. His watch was gone, fifty dollars was gone and Morris was gone. The check lay on the table unpaid.

The Check Was Not Cashed.

The bellboy had taken it to the bank twice at Morris' request, payment, however, being each time refused. The police are greatly puzzled over the affair and are searching every corner of the city for Morris.

Will Play with St. Louis.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 14.—Secretary Munson, of the St. Louis baseball association here, accompanied by Darling, Rettger and McQuaid, of the disbanded Minneapolis club, and who have signed to play with the Browns, President Von der Ahe says the Louisville club will not sell out to Milwaukee or any other city.

He stated further that the League people wanted a compromise badly, and John T. Brush's visit here the other day was to try to effect one with the Association. Mr. Von der Ahe repeated the association's stand on the subject, and told Brush that the only agreement the Association would make with the League was for an interchange of players in the fall and respecting each other's contracts. Mr. Von der Ahe claims the interview came to naught, as Brush wanted the Association to vacate Sioux City, but, never believe, it believed here that there will be a compromise, and that before long.

Nancy Hanks in 2:12 1-4.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Nancy Hanks made an effort to beat her record of 2:14 for a purse of $2,000 here. The mare was in splendid form, and her work exceeded the anticipations of her most ardent admirers. Budd Doble was up behind the horse, and as he drove up the track he was forced to doff his cap again and again in response to the cheers of the spectators. Nancy covered the mile in 2:12¼.

Croquet Experts at Norwich.

NORWICH, Conn., Aug. 14.—The Croquet association continued its tournament here and some very fine games were played. In the first division Hall, of Hills, having now won seven games and lost none. In the second division Greenslit has a clean lead over all competitors, with six games won and none lost. Everett, also of Hartford years, is ahead in the third division with five games won and one last.

Zimmerman Broke the Record.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 14.—A. A. Zimmerman, of the New York Athletic club, lowered the half mile ordinary bicycle record to 1:08¾ in a trial against time on Hampden park this afternoon. The best previous record was that made by W. W. Windle at Peoria last fall, and was 1:10 4-5. M. F. Murphy tried to lower the two mile record but failed.

Gloriana Beats Sayonara.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 14.—In the race for the special cup for sloops, 46 feet, of the New York yacht club, the Gloriana won, having the lead nearly all the way. Gloriana wins first prize, $500 cup; Sayonara second prize, $150 cup, and Vira third prize, $50 cup.

To Match Dixon and Johnson.

LONDON, Aug. 14.—The National Sporting club has decided to hang up a $2,500 purse for a fight between George Dixon, the colored champion, and Fred Johnson, the featherweight champion of England. Dixon will be allowed $500 for expenses.

Pitcher Barr Knocked Senseless.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—Robert Barr, New York's new pitcher, was knocked insensible Thursday afternoon by a ball thrown from the grand stand while he was pitching his first game. His work in the box was very creditable.

Chesterfield the Victor.

BOSTON, Aug. 14.—At Mystic park the 2:20 pacing race was won by Chesterfield, with Hy Wilkes second. Best time, 2:17¾.

A Membership of Two Million.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 14.—At the session of the State League of Building associations Henry S. Marshall, editor of The Co-operative News, said: "Builders' associations in the United States number 6,000, embracing a membership of over 2,000,000, who make weekly deposits amounting to $1,250,000, an annual sum of about $65,000,000."

Union Pacific's Brighter Outlook.

NEW YORK, Aug. 14.—At another conference of directors and others interested in Union Pacific matters it was stated that matters were progressing toward a favorable conclusion, and that formal announcement of the settlement of the company's trouble would soon be made.

Winchell Will Be Free.

HAVERHILL, Mass., Aug. 14.—J. H. Winchell & Co., shoe manufacturers, who employ 600 hands, have announced that in future their shop will be a free one. Mr. Winchell says he has been dictated to long enough by labor organizations.

The Weather.

The weather will probably be fair and perhaps a little warmer.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have been repairing my lawn mowers for a number of years past. When returned they cut as good as when new. W. H. MARSH, Head gardener for T. C. Thaw.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired our lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction. WM. MCCANN,
Head gardener for J. T. Johnson

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
C. HUGHES, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
THOMAS CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KELLY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, so far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

CHOICE CUTS OF BEEF.

POINTERS FOR HOUSEKEEPERS WHO DESIRE GOOD MEAT.

Parts of the Animal That Are Growing Scarce and Dear—Some Cheap Portions That Have the Advantage of Nutritive Qualities Over Even Porterhouse.

The majority of housewives are likely soon to find it almost an impossibility to purchase them at all should the so called "best cuts" of prime beef continue increasing in price as they become more and more scarce.

The prime bullock used as beef in the New York market weighs on an average 1,600 pounds. Of this amount there are two sets of first quality ribs, containing seven ribs in each set and weighing about forty-five pounds each. There are also two loins, each weighing forty-five pounds, making a total of only 180 pounds of choice meat, leaving a balance of 1,420 pounds of beef, called—a misnomer—"rough or coarse meat," because it sells at lower prices.

So far as nutritive qualities are concerned, the advantage is much in favor of the cheaper cuts, but owing to false ideas on domestic economy we all demand a small quantity of the 180 pounds. We cannot tell just why we do, except by blaming "custom," so we force the wholesale and the retail dealers to make all of their profit on an almost end of this small amount of beef, causing him to run chances of disposing of the remainder at even cost.

It is the utilization of the chuck, the rump, the best parts of the round, the flank, plate and brisket of what is called prime cattle, wherein lies the future happiness of our households, true, a little more attention must be paid to preparing these joints for the table than is devoted to cooking the two choice cuts, but the endless variety of tempting dishes that may be made from them more than compensates for the extra trouble, not to mention the saving in expense.

PLAIN STEAK.

It may gratify the housewife to know that the men who are continually handling beef select for their own eating a flank steak, claiming it to be more savory and quite as tender as the tenderloin—a steak they rarely eat. This boneless piece of meat is found between the inside and outside layer of creamy colored fat in the flank, and when taken from well fed stock is excellent, although it may be bought at about ten cents per pound. It may be broiled whole or cut diagonally across the grain, then rolled or buttered before broiling.

Shakespeare used the word "chuck" as a term of endearment, but why the ribs under the shoulder blades are so called is not quite clear, among hotel employes it is a term of derision, chuck having been served them so often. Terrapin was looked upon with scorn by the old plantation negroes, because it was at one period served to them almost daily. Our housewives should take the Shakespearean view of this particular part of the animal. It seems almost incredible to me that so few housekeepers are familiar with the possibilities of this joint.

The close grained top piece over the shoulder blade is the best piece of meat in the bullock for making a dish of boiled beef to be served with horseradish sauce; it is also the best piece for piquant, braised, rolled, savory and a hundred other dishes made of beef, all of which are familiar to our thrifty German housewives, and should be known to American housekeepers, because they add variety to the daily menu. The most adhering to the ribs forms much more satisfactory steak than the so called sirloin, for which our butchers charge from eighteen to twenty-five cents per pound. This piece of meat may be broiled and served in fillet of beef. It is quite acceptable as a Mignon steak, sauce Bordelaise, and if the chuck ribs are not used as soup meat they are good enough for the most exacting epicure served as grilled or deviled bones.

RUMP BEEF.

Over one-half of the dealers in New York sell that part of the animal from the tip of the hip to the end which joins the round as sirloin steak. Notwithstanding their protestations and the fact that under the hip there is a short, thick piece of fillet, the joint in question is rump beef, nothing more, nothing less. Under its false name the dealers here manage to extort from our servants four or five cents per pound more than they would be able to do if sold by its proper name, though why this is so is inexplicable unless we realize that the sweetest portion of the carcass is the rump when cut across the grain. These steaks bend the knife in the hands of chief cutters at Boston caterers. In New York rump steak, the pride of England, cannot be found on the bill of fare of one of our first class establishments.

Properly cooked, if there is a better dish than a braised rump of prime beef I have yet to taste it. Select a six pound piece of rump cut from the end which joined the loin; see to it that it is of prime stock and has hung a sufficient length of time to become ripe. Do not remove the bone, for it improves the flavor of the meat when cooked together. Put the joint into a saucepan and pour over it boiling water, no hot than is about making steam; boil at least fifteen minutes, then remove it. This preliminary step is taken to coagulate the albumen of the beef and prevent the loss of juices in the final cooking of the meat.

Put into a braising pan a thin slice of bacon, an onion, three young carrots and two young turnips, all quartered; one fourth of a bay leaf, half a dozen each of whole allspice, cloves and peppercorns, a sprig of celery and parsley and a half teaspoonful of salt. Boil down a gallon of good beef broth to one quart, add to it the joint, together with a pint of ordinary light sherry; place the saucepan where it will simmer at 160 degrees for two hours, baste frequently, and when practicable keep the top cover hot with live coals or the hot stove cover.

Remove the meat and place it in the oven a few moments, strain the sauce and glaze the meat with it while it is in the oven. Serve by surrounding the dish with little mounds of young carrots, wax beans, cauliflower, etc.

The American housewife apparently has it in her own hands to decide whether or no the so called best cuts of beef shall sooner or later become good children's fare. If she will but stop to consider that there are cheaper and more profitable joints to be had and will use them the fatal hour will be put off indefinitely, if she still persists in having her share of the 180 pounds there will soon be such a scarcity of those joints that only the extremely wealthy can buy them; the majority will then be compelled to buy the others whether they want to or not.—Thomas J. Murrey in New York Herald.

Do not beat your rugs and upholstered furniture with sticks, but use a bent rattan beater made for the purpose, and which will not tear or roughen the article.

OUR YOUNG FOLKS

AFRICAN LIONS.

Characteristics of the Carnivorous Animal Kone of Them Have Lived for Many Years.

The African lion, which is the largest and most majestic looking of all the flesh eating animals, is well known to every one who has the privilege of visiting any zoological garden, or even a traveling menagerie, so many of these noble looking animals having been brought to this country, where some of them have lived for many years, apparently suffering little from their close confinement. The lion is easily tamed, at least when taken young, and if abundantly supplied with food is good natured and docile, and can be taught to perform many clever feats to the great admiration of its keepers.

This docility of the lion must have been known to the ancients, for we read that these animals were made to contribute to the barbarous sports of the Romans, many of them being imported into Rome for the supply of the amphitheater.

A LION MOURNING OVER HIS DEAD MATE.

The parental instinct seems to be strong both in the lion and his mate, as they both watch over and attend to their cubs, which are always hidden in some secluded retreat and remain in company of the parents for a longer time than is usual with the other carnivora.

A pair of these animals always remain constant to each other during the whole period of their joint lives, and their attachment to one another is very great. If any accident happens to either of them the survivor seems for a time inconsolable. In this respect, it is said, that the lion exhibits the greatest melancholy and the lioness the greatest fury. In our cut is shown a lion mourning over his dead mate.

An Intelligent Dog.

A Newfoundland dog owned by a New Orleans lady gave an entertaining illustration of the fact that he comprehends what is said to him. One day a lady called on his mistress, and during her visit Lion came in rather shyly, lay down on the parlor carpet and went to sleep. The conversation ran on, and the visitor finally said, "What a handsome Newfoundland you have." Lion opened one eye. "Yes," said the mistress, "he is a very good dog, and takes excellent care of the children." Lion opened the other eye and waved his tail complacently to and fro on the carpet. "When the baby goes out he always goes with her, and I feel sure that no harm can come to her if he undertakes to defend. Lion's tail thumped up and down violent ly on the carpet. "And he is so gentle to them all and such a playmate and companion to them that we would not take $1,000 for him." Lion's tail now went up and down, to and fro and round and round with great and undisguised glee. "But," said the mistress, "Lion has one serious fault." Total subsidence of Lion's tail, together with the appearance of an expression of great concern on his face. "He will come in here with his dirty feet and lie down on the carpet, when I have told him time and again that he mustn't do it." As the point had now doubtless been remonstrated if he could; but, being speechless, he arose with an air of the utmost dejection and humiliation, and slunk out of the room, with his lately exuberant tail totally crestfallen.

ALONG THE CENTRAL'S TRACKS.

A New Station and Other Improvements in Bayonne.

The New Jersey Central Railroad Company is making improvements along its tracks through Bayonne city, much to the delight of every citizen and taxpayer. In the Bergen Point section, from Avenue D to the Eighth street station, a complete transformation has taken place. The old dirt sloping bank, with its broken-down fences, has been replaced by a massive stone wall, and the dingy-looking Avenue D bridge has been replaced by a handsome, painted iron structure with massive stone pillars.

The old Eighth street station is being torn down to make way for a new one. The plans for the new structure provide for a commodious and pretty stone building with all modern appliances. It will be 73 feet long, surrounded by an overhanging roof. The roof will be highly ornamental and will increase the height over all to 94 feet. The width will be 35 feet. The interior will be beautifully finished in hard wood, antique fireplaces will be placed in each apartment and numerous other features will make it the finest way station in Hudson county.

CLAIMS HE WAS WAYLAID.

William Hall Says His Friends Attempted to Rob Him

William Hall, a resident of Nethergood, complained to Policeman Fredrickson Thursday night that two young men whose names he gave waylaid him on Craig place, North Plainfield, and attempted to rob him. He said he had been drinking with them in the various saloons and in paying for the drinks he had exhibited his money, about eighteen dollars in all. He further stated that his cries for help frightened them away.

The policeman advised the young man to go before a Justice of the Peace and swear out a warrant for the arrest of his assailants. No warrant has as yet been issued, however.

BOROUGH COUNCIL.

AN ADJOURNED MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company Wants to Extend Its Mains into the Borough.—Mr. Carrie Declines Councilmanic Honors.—Other Business.

The Borough Council met in adjourned session last evening at eight o'clock. Besides the Mayor, Councilman Buckle, Hegeman, Hummer, Needham and Sebring responded to roll call.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and approved.

Several petitions for electric lights were read and referred to the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps.

In a communication the Plainfield Water Supply Company informed Council that the work of laying the mains in the city would be completed by September 1st and that with the permission of Council they would extend their mains into the borough and agree to furnish water at reasonable rates. The company also requested that Council appoint a special committee to confer with them.

Magistrate T. R. Crossley reported that he had collected $12 in fines since July 1st. The report was received and ordered filed.

Mr. Hegeman called attention to the fire wells. He said there was but little water in them and that they were in a dangerous condition and should be attended to immediately. The Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps were instructed to see that they were put in proper condition.

On motion of Mr. Buckle the Committee on Streets and Public Health were instructed to borrow $75 for use on Somerset street.

The same gentleman moved that one hundred dollars be borrowed for borough purposes. The motion prevailed d The Mayor and Clerk were also authorized to borrow $500 for road purposes.

Mr. Sebring from the Committee on Fire, Water and Lamps reported that during the past week Warren Engine Company No. 1, had earned $25 for filling a tank with water and that he had given the members of the company permission to place it to the credit of the relief fund. His action was approved of by Council.

Mr. Robert I. Curtis, who was elected a short time ago to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. N. B. Smalley, in a communication said that owing to ill health he would be unable to act as Councilman and therefor declined the honor.

Mayor Place appointed as a special committee to confer with the Plainfield Water Company, in reference to extending their mains into the borough, Messrs. Hegeman, Hummer and Buckle.

The meeting then adjourned.

—The Grocers' Protective Association are arranging for an excursion to Boynton Beach, early in September, the par*ticulars of which will be duly advertised.* They usually make everybody happy on said affairs, which are consequently very popular.

—There were 215 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 218 in the preceding week, and 148, 177, 151 and 144 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to day is 7,588 against 6,503 in 1890.

—Bishop Burst, last Sunday, in announcing Dr. Chapman as the preacher in the Methodist church to-morrow, said, "I congratulate you on being able to secure this eminent divine. I have never known him before to preach to any other congregation than his own. Some strong force must have been brought to bear on him to induce him to depart from his custom and come here."

—For a wonder the Plainfield papers do not crow very loud over the victory of the Crescents last Saturday. They seem to realize that it was more chance than anything else. But when they compare their shortstop favorably with the West Ends', they are away off. Last Saturday Keeler was only most bad three times, at first, but almost everyone was either above Holly's head or else at his feet. Then he let balls go through him. Take it all through the game and Keeler played a boy's game compared with Mourchead.—Somerville Democrat.

—Mrs. Jacob Schneider called at The News office yesterday in great distress over the loss of $9.00, as advertised the day before. Said she "Won't you call the attention of the Christian people of Plainfield to my distress? I am fifty-seven years old, am crippled with rheumatism that I can not do hard work, and my eyesight is so poor I cannot do sewing, except the coarsest kind, repairing meal sacks, at which I earn barely enough to keep me from staring. I worked several days for that $9.00 and am nearly heartbroken over my loss." She Schneider is a German woman and speaks broken English. She pronounces yesterday, "yesterday," and rheumatism, "nermalagis."

THE RIVER CARNIVAL.

A Grand Spectacle Anticipated.—Preliminary Drill this Afternoon.

Arrangements are about completed for the carnival to be held on the Raritan River, at Bound Brook, on Tuesday or Wednesday evening, August 25th or 26.

The squadron will consist of six or eight companies of four boats, beautifully illuminated. Among decorations carried will be seen forms of an arrow, comet, domino, serpent, ship, beacon, scythe, star, heart, cornucopia, crescent, ace of clubs, etc. The boats will be manned by the young men of the town, and loaded to the gunwale with fairy forms. A drill of the whole fleet will be given, consisting of about twenty-five formations.

The bridge will be brilliantly lighted, and Prof. Bartow's Band, stationed on a float fifty feet below the bridge, will make the evening merry with music. Displays of fireworks will be given from the river banks, fleet, and the water surface.

The programme will be as follows:

1. National airs—Band.
2. *Cannon salute lasting about 15 min*utes.
3. Flight of rockets.
4. Great fire illumination on fleet and bridge.
5. Drill: Formations 1 to 4. Music, Band.
6. Fireworks on fleet.
7. Drill: Formations 5 to 6. Music, Band.
8. Race—Thomas vs. Cawley.
9. Flight of rockets.
10. Band concert.
11. Drill: Formations 7 to 10. Music, Band.
12. Display of water fireworks.
13. Drills: Formations 11 to 16. Music, Band.
14. Race—Cawley vs. Thomas.
15. Drill: Formations 17 to 25. Music, Band.
16. Fireworks on fleet. Music, Band, Flight of rockets, Greek fire illumination.

The End.

All oarsmen who are to take part in the carnival will report at Durling's boat landing, to-day at 5 p. m., for instructions in signals and preliminary drill. It is very important that everyone be present. One uninstructed oarsman would mar the whole performance.

State Notes.

An ordinance fixing a license fee of $10 a day on merry-go-rounds, skating rinks and similar amusements will go into effect in Bridgeton September 1.

At a meeting of Bridgeton City Council, held Tuesday evening, nearly one-half of the property-holders of the city were ordered to pave and curb their sidewalks inside of thirty days from official notification.

The Central Trust Company of New York has begun suit to foreclose a mort*gage of $250,000 on the plant of the Met*ropolitan Gas Company of Elizabeth. The gas company was put in the hands of a receiver recently.

James McDermott, a would-be labor agitator, was arrested in Camden yesterday by Contractor Ward while interfering with the latter's men and trying to persuade them to strike. On promising to leave town he was released.

A movement is on foot to start a local German Republican newspaper in Elizabeth. It is to be a daily morning news*paper, purely for political purposes, to* influence votes among the large German population in Union County in the next Presidential campaign.

The difficulty between President Isham, of the Agricultural Society, and the Pennsylvania Railroad, over the moving of a house across the latter's tracks at Hillsdale was amicably adjusted yesterday. The house will be moved over the tracks between 2 and 3 o'clock next Monday morning.

James Duffy, a drug clerk, while bathing at the Mansion House bathing grounds at Long Branch, was drowned yesterday afternoon. He was taken from the water in an insensible condition. Dr. Bennett, with the assistance of the life guards, worked vigorously for an hour to resuscitate him, but without success.

During the heavy storm Wednesday afternoon lightning struck the buildings of Daniel W. Sheppard, near Bridgeton, and totally destroyed them, together with their contents. The buildings consisted of two large barns filled with the season's crops and a hay-house also filled. *The loss is heavy with little or no in*surance.

Rev. R. A. Motley, of the Salem Baptist church (colored), Jersey City, has been granted leave of absence by his congregation. He will spend his vacation in the South, leaving for Baltimore this evening. Edward W. Hallinger, the negro murderer, whose spiritual adviser Mr. Motley has been, has confided his two little children to Mr. Motley's care. They will be left with Hallinger's aunt in Baltimore, who has agreed to take charge of them.

Thomas William Livesey and Frank Quinn, two Paterson boys, each aged ten, jumped from a coal train yesterday on the Lackawanna Railroad, on which they had stolen a ride, and were struck by the locomotive on the Hackettstown express. Livesey had his head cut entirely off in the air, one side of his head was crushed in and the brains and a part of the skull were scattered on the track. He died instantly. Quinn escaped with a few broken ribs.

Hunterdon's Big Peach Crop.

Alexander B. Allen, President of the New Jersey Fruit Exchange, Flemington, writes of the peach crop: "The outlook for peaches in Hunterdon county, N. J., is one of the best for the last five years, and it is generally anticipated by growers that the fruit will be fine. In order to meet the demands of parties wishing to buy Jersey peaches we have arranged to open exchanges at the following stations in the county: *On the Lehigh Val*ley Railroad, at Pattenburg, Landsdown, Clinton, Pittstown and Flemington; on the New Jersey Central Railroad, at White House and Flemington. Flemington is also on the Pennsylvania Railroad. Peaches from our exchanges can be loaded and given quick transportation in all directions. The estimate of the crop for the country is put as high as 3,000,000 baskets."

—The Bee Hive was re-opened to-day with a new stock of goods. Mr. Callman desires to inform his customers that he is selling just as cheap as ever.

$25,000 DAMAGES.

WANTED BY MR. HIGGINS FROM MESSRS. RAFFERTY AND NASH.

Whom He Accuses of Defamation, Conspiracy and Libel.—The Complaint Ready.

Mr. Michael Higgins, of East Fourth street, has retained Lawyer R. V. Lindabury to bring suit against saloon-keeper John Rafferty, and Justice V. W. Nash, for $25,000 damages, for defamation of character, conspiracy and libel, of which offenses he accuses them.

Mr. Higgins has several stage lines, and claims that through the stories circulated by the parties referred to his business has been greatly injured. He says that a few days ago Messrs. Rafferty and Nash went to several of his creditors at New Brunswick and other places and informed them that he was insolvent, thereby injuring his credit and causing him considerable trouble. Hence the proposed suit.

Mr. Higgins rents his stables and house from Mr. Rafferty. He says he built the stable himself at a cost of about $1,800. Mr. Rafferty stabled his horse there and at the end of every year they made a settlement. A few months ago Mr. Rafferty appointed Mr. Nash as his agent to collect the rent. Mr. Higgins says he was in the habit of paying it by checks, but when he went to do so, about two months ago, Mr. Nash refused to accept his check, although, he claims, there was money in the bank to meet it. He then went to the bank, cashed the check, and in company with a friend went to the office of Mr. Nash and liquidated his indebtedness to Mr. Rafferty. He considers that both Mr. Rafferty and Mr. Nash are persecuting him, and proposes to have redress.

One supposed effect of the stories is that foreclosure proceedings have been begun against Mr. Higgins by creditors whom the stories are said to have alarmed.

A CYCLING CAMP-MEETING.

Asbury Park to be the Scene of a Novel Encampment.

The Governing Board of the Asbury Park Athletic Association have decided to give a grand gathering of bicyclists from all parts of this and adjoining States, who will go into camp on the grounds opposite the North Asbury Park station and be governed by semi-military regulations.

The camp will be ready for the reception of wheelmen on the 27th, but will not be formerly opened until the morning of the 28th, when there will be appropriate ceremonies, including possibly an address of welcome by Governor Abbett, firing of a salute, raising of the camp flag and review.

An unusually attractive programme of races will be run on the afternoons of the 28th, and 29th, for a valuable silver trophy and individual gold medals.

On Friday night a lantern parade will be made over the principal streets of Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. Prizes for the best decorated wheel and for the club having the largest number of men in line will be given by the association.

Arrangements will be made for feed*ing the* wheelmen at the ground, in addition to furnishing them sleeping accommodations in tents, including a cot for each man.

The proposed encampment of wheelmen will be the first event of the kind ever inaugurated in this part of the country, and from information already received by the officers of the association it will be a success in every particular.

*A force of men will begin the enlarge*ment of Athletic Park, the building of a third-mile track and the addition of numerous attractive features.

—The troupe now giving exhibitions at the Elkwood will make their last appearance this evening. The proprietor says it is the best troupe that has ever appeared on the stage in that building.

—To alleviate the trouble arising from mosquito bites smear the affected parts over with a moist piece of soap, allowing the lather to dry into the skin. All itching and pain will be removed thereby in ten minutes.

—A gentleman who deals some in horses says that the general introduction of safety bicycles the past two years is one of the leading factors in cutting off the demand for horses. The horse market for ordinary animals has been, no doubt, greatly affected by the use of bicycles.

—Our cotemporary had not a word to say yesterday afternoon respecting the insinuations, yesterday morning, against the "combine" in The New York Times, of which its reporter is corresponden. If there is anything in the listing—and we think there is—we have positive knowledge, although we may regard the "combine's" conduct with suspicion—our neighbor has now a chance to make it known. The interests of the city are involved.

—Pinch Gut is the euphonious name by which our sister village of Plainfield was designated in olden time—so say the ancient records. It is supposed, says a musty volume of forgotten lore of the Diedrich Knickerbocker style, to have been given to it in derision by the servant girls of the hamlet, in order to express their scorn for the niggardliness of the good housewives of the place, which kept them on such short allowances in the matter of food and other necessaries of life. Be that as it may, Pinch Gut it was, and Pinch Gut it will continue to be, if our Plainfield brethren do not recognize the error of their ways, and atone therefor by a hearty recognition and a resolve to do better hereafter.—Westfield Leader.

GAMES GALORE AND FUN IN PLENTY.

Eighteenth Annual Festival in Which Thousands will Participate.

Thousands of jolly Germans from New York, Brooklyn, Newark, Jersey City, Plainfield, Elizabeth and various other cities of the States will go to Schuetzen Park, Union Hill, to-morrow to attend the opening of the eighteenth annual festival of the Plattdeutsche Volksfest Verein. The Association is composed of ninety German social and benefit organizations. In point of attractions it will exceed all previous festivals of the kind ever held in New Jersey. A small army of workmen are engaged in the park, preparing the stand and booths. The booths are elaborately decorated with flags and bunting.

The main dancing pavilion in the centre of the park has been overhauled and repainted. In fact the members of the various committees have left no stone unturned to make the festival a grand success both socially and financially. As the proceeds are donated to charitable institutions it is expected that a large crowd will be present. Huge Kroebel, the lessee of the park, has assisted the various committees in their work. He has spared neither pains nor expense in fitting up the park.

A large circus ring has been erected upon which horses, mounted by amateur jockeys, will run. A shooting tournament for prizes will be opened. Bowling clubs will compete for prizes. Various games for the amusement of boys will take place on the grounds.

At the lake Chris. Tangemann and his son will accommodate the masses with row boats. Mr. Tangemann has charge of the dancing pavilion.

There will be theatrical performances by well-known variety artists and a bullet under the personal supervision of Manager Clarke, in which about two hundred girls will appear.

In the evening the park will be illuminated with Japanese lanterns and there will be fireworks, athletic exhibitions and other attractions.

The profits of the festival, which usually reach $10,000, will be distributed to the charitable institutions in New York, Jersey City, Newark, Hoboken and other cities.

The following are the officers of the Plattdeutsche Volksfest Verein: Henry Kruger, President; William F. Greil, First Vice-President; Ernest Kuhlenbeck, Second Vice-President; Conrad Held, Secretary; Bernhard Meyborg, Corresponding Secretary; Frederick Gobber, Financial Secretary; George H. Wehrenberg, Treasurer; John D. Bullwinkel, Sergeant at arms.

The Honorary Presidents are Henry Clausen, Herman H. Hingsiage, George Landwehr, John C. Huser, Adolph Schreitmuller and John Reise.

"Yankee Whalebacks."

The above is the name given by the British Pall Mall Budget to the remarkable new type of freight ships invented by Captain Alexander McDougall, of Superior, Wis. Attention has been recently called to these vessels by the successful passage of one of them across the Atlantic ocean. This whaleback steamer, the Charles W. Wetmore, sailed direct from Duluth, Minn., to Liverpool, carrying a cargo of 95,000 bushels of grain.

One advantage of the whaleback is that it costs not nearly so much to build as the ordinary vessel. The first one made cost only $45,000. But the great and overwhelming point in its favor is that with the same expenditure of steam power it carries twice as much freight as the old style ship. This has been demonstrated beyond question.

Captain McDougall was himself a sailing master on the lakes and knew every inch of his ground. He knew also what comparatively few persons do, that the freight carried across our great inland lakes exceeds in one year that conveyed by all the Atlantic steamers combined. He built his model to meet the requirements of the occasion, and now it will be adopted for all ocean freight carriers.

When all is said and done, however, it must still be remembered that the whaleback vessel is simply another modification of Ericsson's Monitor. The pattern reverses the ordinary shape of a ship, and is flat bottomed and round decked. The part above the water when the ship is loaded looks something like an Indian's moccasin. It is not meant that anybody shall promenade the decks of the whaleback. As in the case of the Monitor, the water in the fiercest storm washes over the deck and slips off. The part that can be damaged is far under water, safe from wind and wave.

There are two kinds of whaleback vessels, steam propellers and steel barges for towing. The barges look very much like a monitor, the wheelhouse appearing on top like a turret. So rapidly are these vessels superseding the old ones that the company manufacturing them is preparing to launch a new one every week, fifty-two a year. When the whaleback vessel first appeared in the lake waters the seamen christened it the "pig," a name by which it is still known there. But undoubtedly it will be known in commerce as the whaleback, from its shape.

Child Wives of India.

The editor of The Review of Reviews wonders how long it will be before the United States of America will insist on taking a hand in the government of India. Then he quotes from a set of monstrous and fearful revelations made by Dr. E. B. Ryder in an American magazine, The Homemaker, on the subject of the baby wives of India. Dr. Ryder narrates in that paper how one old reprobate came to the physician and asked for medicine for his ailing child-wife. On being told the cost of it he went away without it, declaring it would be cheaper to let the girl die and get another one than to cure her.

The Review of Reviews thinks the American people will use "the constant pressure of opinion at first," instead of ironclads and diplomatic dispatches, unless the British government does something to remedy the sickening abuses of the Hindoo child-wife system. If the British nation answers that it is none of America's business how India is governed, then The Review would remind them that this was the exact kind of retort made by southern slaveholders when British sympathy was outspoken on the horrors of slavery.

As to what child-wifehood in India actually means, The Review quotes among other passages from The Homemaker the following:

> A man may be a vile and loathsome creature; he may be blind, a lunatic, an idiot, a leper, or diseased in a worse form; he may be fifty, seventy or a hundred years old, and may be married to a baby or a girl of five or ten, who by reason of her youth cannot refuse him, and her she must go, and the English law for the "protection of conjugal rights" compels her to remain in his power or imprisons her if she refuses. There is no other form of slavery on the face of the earth to-day to be named with the slavery as enforced upon these little girls of India.

Two French balloonists, M. Gower and Tissandier, have added new terrors to existence by discovering that there are holes in the air—places where the atmosphere is for some cause so rarefied that it will not support a balloon. They encountered one of these vacuum pits when they were a mile above the earth during a recent voyage from Paris to Fontenay. Suddenly, without any known cause, their airship began to fall with frightful velocity. They threw out ballast desperately, but so furious was their descent that they went down faster than the sandbags. At length, when only fifty feet above the ground, they were able to check the fall and save themselves from being dashed to pieces. So they say.

Heller, the revivalist, says he believes the times are ripe for an immense wave of moral enthusiasm to sweep over this country. He says further: "Christ never preached contentment to empty stomachs and bare backs. He first fed the multitude."

THE POLITICAL WORLD.

A Story That Harrison May Not Run Again.

TO WITHDRAW IN BLAINE'S FAVOR

A Chicago Democratic Paper Claims That the President, with Certain Reservations, Will Withdraw from Renomination at the Republican Convention in 1892.

CHICAGO, Aug. 15.—A special from Cape May to the Chicago Herald (Democratic) says: "President Harrison will, before the meeting of the Republican national convention of 1892, declare over his own signature in the most emphatic manner that he is not a candidate for the renomination to be made by that convention. The president decided upon this course within the last two weeks, and his purpose in calling hither a few days ago Chairman Clarkson, of the national committee, and Stephen B. Elkins was to tell those gentlemen that they might inform their Republicans who are taking sides either for or against the renomination of the president that they are doing so unnecessarily.

The President's Alleged Reservations.

"The decision of the president not to permit his name to go before the convention was made with some reservations. These reservations depend upon three conditions: First, if the present alleged opposition within the Republican party to Mr. Harrison's renomination shall continue till next spring he will withdraw. Second, if Mr. Blaine shall be well and strong enough to take the nomination and the party's demand for him continues as strong and sincere as it appears at the present time Mr. Harrison will withdraw. Third, if Mr. Blaine, having sufficient health and strength, shall be willing to take the nomination Mr. Harrison will withdraw.

And Blaine Knows It.

"The information that the president has reached this decision is from a source not to be questioned as to its accuracy and trustworthiness. Mr. Blaine knows that the president occupies this position. Mr. Tibbon, Mr. Elkins, Mr. Quay and Mr. Platt know it. Mr. Quay has been notified not to force his Blaine boom in Pennsylvania, and he has called a halt. The Harrison-Blaine programme is that no "movement" shall be instituted for a presidential aspirant, neither for the president, nor for Mr. Blaine, nor for any other man, if it can be prevented. The party is to make its own choice for the presidency."

A Reception to Ex-Speaker Reed.

PORTLAND, Me., Aug. 15.—Ex-Speaker Reed was tendered a reception by the Portland club. He was received with great enthusiasm. Mr. Reed spoke at length, referring to his recent travels abroad. Among other things he said:

"In no other nation upon the face of the earth is the average of comfort and happiness so high as it is in the United States. To my notion that distribution of wealth is made by the system which we call protection to American industries."

In an interview regarding the next speakership Mr. Reed said he favored Mr. Millis. "He has capacity for the place, is a good parliamentarian, and has the courage, a sincere and frank antagonist. Crisp I have always found a quick, ready man. Last session, when I was in the speaker's chair, this was true. I was myself, and did it very cleverly. He was Old K. It was good politics. I never said a word. I couldn't afford, officially, to notice a remark made by one Reed, a member from Maine, in a previous session of congress.

"I treated the matter as I would have done had another man's language in a previous congress been quoted in his absence. But I could have answered it, and can yet if I am ever asked. If the next speaker has 'the sand' he'll make us walk the chalked line. The last election spoke with considerable vigor regarding some matters, and the majority ought to hear the echo. But we'll make things interesting for them, nevertheless."

The Tour of the Orators.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—Arrangements are being made in this city for the trip of Democratic orators through the north-west under the auspices of the Association of National Democrats. It is proposed that the party leave this city Sept. 12, going direct to Chicago and thence to St. Paul and Minneapolis and following the line of the Northern Pacific, stopping at various points, where meetings will be held and speeches made. Senator Kenna, Representative Bynum, ex-Representative McAdoo and Governor Black have decided to join the party.

Wants the Democratic Convention.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—William Dickson, the Democratic national committeeman for the District of Columbia, is using every bit of influence he can command to insure the bringing of the next national convention to this city. He has already secured the written approval of three of his fellow committeemen.

YANKTON, S. D., Aug. 15.—Congressman John B. Gamble is dead. He has been active in politics and was elected Republican congressman from South Dakota last fall.

FOSTER CONSULTS SHERMAN.

The Senator and Secretary Talk Over the Financial Situation.

MANSFIELD, O., Aug. 15.—The condition of Uncle Sam's treasury occupied the attention of Secretary Foster and Senator Sherman at a conference here. When Charles Foster proposed the scheme of continuing the 4½ per cent. bonds at 2 per cent. the banks were generally willing to accept his proposition, but the people will had the 4½ per cents. were not, and, after several weeks of trial, only a little over $18,000,000 out of $61,000,000 were continued under the scheme of the secretary. He was not particularly content with this showing, and came here to see Senator Sherman. The conference lasted five hours.

Secretary Foster put some very interesting questions to Senator Sherman, which very soon demonstrated that the secretary did not agree with the present one about continuing the 4½ per cents. Secretary Foster took no pains to conceal the fact that his policy in endeavoring to coax continuing the 4½ per cents at 2 per cent. was to use the money in other directions for the relief of trade. He thought the stringency of the market could be prevented if the project could be carried into effect.

Senator Sherman did not share the secretary's views upon the subject. He thought that Secretary Foster should pay the 4½ per cents. The secretary's position was that the money already in the treasury and that would be spared from the sinking fund and that accrued in the meantime, would be sufficient to pay off the bonds when due.

Senator Sherman explained that the month of July, the first one in the new fiscal year, had been passed in safety, and that now gold would return to this country and that the movements of the splendid crops and the payment of new revenues would make things easy.

Thus the bonds could be paid or retired without difficulty or danger. The question of what effect the retirement of these securities that have been held by the national banks as a deposit for circulation would have on the banking system was naturally one of the features of the discussion. Senator Sherman did not think it would have any injurious result.

MRS. STEVENSON ALARMED.

The Novelist's Wife Says Affairs Look Equally in Samoa.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 15.—Mrs. Robert Louis Stevenson, wife of the famous novelist, writes to a friend in this city, under date of July 16, as follows:

"We live in constant tumult of threatened war and clamorous of the whites. There are no men-of-war here except one German ship, and that doesn't count, as it makes more trouble. I wish our country would send us a ship."

Consul Sewell Not Alarmed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The state department has received a dispatch from Consul General Sewell, at Samoa, in reference to affairs on the Samoan islands. The dispatch states that Chief Mataafa has been slightly restless, but no serious trouble is anticipated.

Backer's Strange Failure.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Abraham Backer, who failed Aug. 3 for $4,000,000, was examined at the Tombs court on the charge of John Harden, of Savannah, that Backer hypothecated $12,000 worth of Harden's securities sent as collateral with a $10,000 loan. Backer was held in $15,000 bail. Justice O'Brien continued the injunction obtained by H. Meyers & Brother, bankers of Savannah, Ga., against the Merchants' and Mechanics' Banks restraining them from disposing of $75,000 worth of the Meyers' securities hypothecated by Backer.

Goodwin Gives up the Siege.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Nat Goodwin has raised the siege against his wife's residence. It was quiet at 236 West End avenue yesterday. Mrs. Goodwin stayed at home all day and so did her brother, Charles Baker. Goodwin did not put in an appearance the whole day. A powerful man, with a face that suggested fight, guarded the basement door. Mrs. Goodwin doesn't propose taking any chances.

A Short Cut Across South America.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—"A short cut" across the continent of South America has recently been discovered by the celebrated explorer Carlos Fry. He declares that it will be a practicable route to the north-west under the auspices of the Association of National Democrats. It is proposed that the party leave this city Sept. 12, going direct to Chicago and thence to St. Paul and Minneapolis and following the line of the Northern Pacific, stopping at various points, where meetings will be held and speeches made. Twelve People Seriously Injured in a Wreck.

TWO OF THEM WILL PROBABLY DIE.

The Collision Was Between a Freight Train and a Fast Express on the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad at Egg Harbor, N. J.—A List of the Injured.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 15.—There was a thrilling scene of terror at the Egg Harbor station of the Philadelphia and Reading railroad, Atlantic City branch, last night. A collision occurred between the 6 o'clock down express and an up freight. At least twelve people were injured, two of whom, it is feared, will not survive.

The express was dashing along at a speed of about thirty miles per hour, which could not be materially checked owing to an alleged defect in the air brakes. The freight train was just turning off the south bound track when the locomotive of the express crashed into the tender, cutting it in two.

A Passenger's Story.

S. Schoenthal, a cigar and tobacco dealer of 1,540 Atlantic avenue, whose Philadelphia address is 718 North Seventh street, was sitting on the front seat of the smoking car when the collision took place. He was thrown bruised about the head and body. He said: "The train was going along at a lively rate, as we were four or five minutes behind, owing to some defect which was discovered in the air brakes. I was conversing with a young man, when suddenly I heard a terrible crash, and then it seemed as if the front of the car was smashed into splinters right over our heads."

"I was completely dazed, but on recovering my senses found that what was left of the car was turned over and that my face and head were covered with bruises.

They Yelled with Pain.

"The young man who sat by my side had a broken leg and was unable to move. Escaping steam and water were hissing all around us, causing the other occupants to yell with pain, but we were fortunately low enough to escape its direct rush. I assisted the young man with the broken leg out from the debris and turned him over to medical care. It was a miracle that we were not killed outright."

A Wife by Means of a Soap.

George S. French, of 6 North Thirty-eighth street, Philadelphia, was in the last car, and immediately after the collision hurried up to the wrecked cars. "When I reached the demolished smoker," he said, "the first man I saw pulled out of the wreck was an old friend named Harry Shee of West Washington street, Philadelphia. He appeared to be frightfully cut up and one of his legs hung together merely by the skin. His means of egress were blocked by steam and he was promptly cut off above the knee by the doctors, who were fearful that his injuries would prove fatal.

A Woman Frightfully Scalded.

"The most sickening scene was that of a poor woman whose name I could not learn. She was in the second car and was caught in the rush of steam and frightfully scalded. The flesh was actually hanging from her face in shreds. She had lost her reason, and was wandering around singing hymns, totally oblivious of her surroundings. There were quite a number of other ladies scalded."

Joseph Clark, an employe of the Pennsylvania railroad at Johnstown, Pa., was in the second car, near the rear. He was dashed through a window and had one of his hands badly cut.

A Brave Lot of Women.

"I have been in three other railroad wrecks," said Mr. Clark, "but I never saw such a brave lot of women as were in that car. Not one of them made a serious outcry, although several were badly scalded and a few of those in the front both bruised and scalded."

The names of the injured are:

W. T. Orton, of Philadelphia; broken nose, hand and lip injured.

Somers Ireland, Elmwood, N. J.; contusion of right wrist joint and lacerated wound on forehead.

W. Mahler, of Philadelphia; right arm, elbow and eye cut.

Henry Hoffman, Atlantic City; slight cuts and leg bruised.

W. B. Evans, Atlantic City; hand mangled.

Mrs. Otto Bettle, Philadelphia; scalded seriously.

Thomas Wilson, Camden, N. J., seriously injured about the body and legs.

Thomas Hartman, Camden, N. J., engineer of the express; both legs broken and otherwise injured.

Five other passengers were taken to the American hotel at Egg Harbor city and physicians summoned. One of these is believed to be fatally injured. Their names have not yet been learned.

The two trains met on the crossover switch, and until an investigation is made it cannot be learned who was at fault.

Bardsley Wants His Commissions.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—Robert Alexander, as John Bardsley's counsel, applied for a writ of mandamus to compel City Treasurer Wright to allow him to see Bardsley's books. Wright then yielded the point. The petition for the mandamus was in John Bardsley's name and was sworn to in prison by him. It discloses also that Bardsley will claim a large sum in commissions on the $3,650,652.34 of state moneys collected by Bardsley as city treasurer.

The Blaines at a Ball.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 15.—Mrs. George Pendleton Bowler gave a ball last night. Among the guests were the Blaines, Secretary Tracy, Mrs. Wilmerding, Admiral Gherardi, George W. Vanderbilt, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Clayton Brooks, of Philadelphia, and Senator and Mrs. Hale.

Hook Defeats Woodruff.

KNOXVILLE, Tenn., Aug. 15.—The Republican committee of this county met and canvassed the returns of Saturday's election. The figures as officially announced are: Houk, 13,285; Woodruff, 6,057. Houk's majority, 9,228.

Beaten to Death at Geneva.

GENEVA, N. Y., Aug. 15.—John Welch, aged seventy, was beaten to death by his landlord, Daniel Cameron. The trouble grew out of a demand for rent money, which Cameron was unable to pay.

An Insane Man Hangs Himself.

PERRY, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Hiram H. Owen, aged sixty-four years, a farmer living a short distance from Perry, committed suicide by hanging. Mr. Owen was insane.

MRS. POLK PASSES AWAY.

The Wife Once Mistress of the White House.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 15.—Mrs. James K. Polk, widow of the eleventh president of the United States, is dead. The end came peacefully. Sarah Polk, the widow of President James Knox Polk, was born near Murfreesboro, in Rutherford county, Tenn., September 4, 1803.

She became the wife of Mr. Polk when she was only nineteen. Her husband had just begun his promising career. He was a member of the Tennessee legislature at the time of his marriage, and in the year following he was elected to congress. He represented the same district for fourteen sessions, and was elected speaker of the house in 1835.

Mrs. Polk accompanied her husband to Washington, and being a lady of culture and of charming manners, she was very popular in society.

When Gen. Zachary Taylor succeeded to the presidency Mr. and Mrs. Polk quitted the White House and went to Nashville, where Mr. Polk had purchased a large mansion. Three months afterward Mr. Polk died, at the age of fifty-three. His remains were interred in the lawn adjoining the house and a marble shaft, with inscriptions commemorative of the statesman's life, was erected over his grave. It is there that Mrs. Polk's remains will be buried beside those of her husband.

Her declining years were happily passed. She loved to recall the memories of her husband's greatness.

Three Gamblers Held Up in a Room at Dayton, O.

THEN THE STRANGER ESCAPED.

He Had All the Daring and Desperation of the Murderous Bank Robber Who Killed One Man and Wounded Another at Columbus Grove, O., Recently.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 15.—A boldly conceived robbery, which has a touch of the Jesse James method, occurred about the noon hour. Samuel Wagner and son keep a palatial saloon, with gambling rooms up stairs, at 36 South Main street. During the past three days a stranger, who claimed Chattanooga, Tenn., as his home, has been playing faro bank and lost a large sum of money. Early in the morning he went broke and begged for a loan. Sam Wagner, Sr., accommodated him and the stranger signed "E. E. Poleng" to a receipt. Poleng went out and lost ten dollars against another faro bank.

He Held Up Three Gamblers.

With the remainder he bought himself a double action revolver. At noon Poleng entered Wagner's gambling rooms. Steve and Bill La Compte and S. Wagner, Sr., well known gamblers, were the only occupants of the room. Pulling out his revolver Poleng ordered Wagner to hand over the bank roll.

"I will kill two of you and then shoot myself," grimly said the robber. The roll, amounting to $190, was handed out and Poleng coolly made his escape, presenting his revolver at several persons who attempted to detain him.

Is He the Columbus Grove Murderer?

One remarkable feature connected with the robbery is the fact that Poleng's daring and desperation reminded every one greatly of the unknown robber who entered the Exchange bank at Columbus Grove, O., on Aug. 3, shot Cashier T. J. Maple severely and killed William Vandemark, a farmer who came into the bank while the robber was rifling things to suit himself. The robber got away with $1,300 in cash and was not captured, although hunted for several days by an immense posse of citizens and officers. As Poleng is a stranger he is probably either the Columbus Grove robber or an imitator.

Microscopists Choose Officers.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 15.—The American Microscopical society has elected the following officers: President, Marshall D. Ewell, Chicago; vice presidents, Dr. Robert Bayburn, District of Columbia, and R. J. Nunn, Georgia; members of the executive committee, Dr. J. A. Miller, Buffalo; R. W. Hoppin, Akron, O., and Dr. J. M. Lamb, District of Columbia. The secretary, W. H. Seaman, and the treasurer, C. C. Mellor, hold over until 1893.

A Society Belle's Sad Career.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The history of Mrs. Hugh McCullagh Bond, whose address was sought of the Casino manager by Senator Bell, of Indiana, seems to be a remarkable one. She was once a society belle in Indiana. She became stage struck, left her husband, came to this city and led a dissipated life. When last heard of she lived with a negro family in a Thompson street tenement.

A Young Girl's Awful End.

BOWLING GREEN, Ky., Aug. 15.—Clyde Ragland, the ten-year-old daughter of Squire J. P. Ragland, a wealthy farmer living below town, met death in a horrible manner. She was riding a spirited horse when it became frightened and ran away, throwing her from the saddle. Her foot hung in the stirrup and she was dragged and kicked to death.

Publisher Henry Hill Dead.

NORWICH, Conn., Aug. 15.—Hon. Henry Hill died last evening at Eastern Point. He founded the well known Henry Hill Publishing company and also the Hill Nursery in his native town of Ledyard.

Hanged Himself in His Cell.

NIAGARA FALLS, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Louis Snyder, forty-six years old, who had been arrested for wilful destruction of property, hanged himself in his cell in the police station here.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Ellsworth, Minn., has been wrecked by a cyclone.

Mayor Chapin, of Brooklyn, who is ill, is reported to be improving.

The following Philadelphia newspapers, which have published the mercantile appraiser's lists for the past two years, have been notified by Attorney General Hensel that they must refund the rebate of 40 per cent. paid as alleged agent of the state for securing the advertisements: Press, North American, Inquirer, German Democrat, Bulletin and Telegraph. The papers are given until Sept. 1 to refund the money.

Bacon Hirsch, who is at Carlsbad, has signed a document empowering Dr. Lowenthal and other gentlemen to purchase lands in the Argentine Republic to the value of 10,000,000 pesos.

Captain John Palmer, commander in chief of the G. A. R., has selected as adjutant general Colonel Frederick Phisterer, acting assistant adjutant general of the state of New York.

Dr. Baker, of Abingdon, Va., charged with the murder of his wife by poison, has been found guilty. The conviction was largely upon the testimony of Mrs. Gilmer, a woman of social prominence, who declared he had admitted killing his wife. The doctor has been intimate with Mrs. Gilmer.

At Cincinnati the furniture factory of Sallis & Duhlmeir was destroyed by fire. Loss, $100,000.

Judge Joseph P. Rowe, of the superior court of the city and county of San Francisco, is dead.

The United States steamer Pensacola is in such a bad condition that she will be put out of commission at Mare island shortly.

Samuel Ross was killed at his home in Ebensburg, Pa., and his murderer, who is unknown, escaped in a buggy.

J. A. Coulis, aged ninety-two, gave his wife a soffin, made by himself, as a present on her eighty-ninth birthday. They have been married seventy years.

It is now believed that the total liabilities of William E. Schmertz, of Pittsburg, will reach $500,000. Eastern creditors, it is said, will contest the assignment.

Dr. Roland H. Falkner, of the University of Pennsylvania, has been asked by the senate committee on finance to assume the direction of its coming investigation into the effect of the McKinley tariff upon wages and the cost of living.

King Kelly Goes to the League.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 15.—President Gillette, of the Milwaukee Baseball association, has received a dispatch stating that Louisville, St. Louis, Washington, Boston and Baltimore have assented to the proposed transfer of the Cleveland American association team to Milwaukee. Milwaukee men have wired their acceptance. It is said that the following players will be retained: "Lefty" Marr, Jimmie Cushman, Willie Mains, "Red" Dwyer, and possibly Carney. "King" Kelly has already gone to the National league. This move of Milwaukee's, without doubt, means the collapse of the Western association.

Marksmen at New London.

NEW LONDON, Conn., Aug. 15.—The four days' shooting tournament has ended. The affair drew over 100 sharpshooters, at the known angles, for a diamond ring and the individual championship, and the east and west team contest. Wolstenscroft won the first event and the western team, consisting of Wolstenscroft, Heikes, McMurchy, Apgar and Knowlton, secured the second after an interesting struggle.

Tennis at Bar Harbor.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 15.—The finals in the singles were played on the Mossley Hall tennis tournament. R. L. Hall, who won the tournament cup, defeated his brother, V. G. Hall, for the Mossley Hall challenge cup. Score: 6—3, 5—6, 6—3, 6—4. In the doubles for the two minor cups, Clark and Landreth beat Emmons and Thompson and the Hall brothers beat Brown and Orcutt.

New Haven and Providence Dropped.

ALBANY, Aug. 15.—At a meeting of the board of directors of the Eastern association at the Kenmore hotel last night the New Haven and Providence clubs were officially dropped from the league. The association is to continue with six clubs. The matter of the attached property of the association at Providence was not brought up.

Rosalind Wilkes Won.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 15.—At the closing meeting of the grand circuit Justina, Globe and Belle Hamlin made a miserable attempt to break their record of 2:14. Justina and Hamlin were off their best most of the time. Time, 2:20. Rosalind Wilkes defeated McDoel, Alvin and Mambrino Maid in three 2:30 trot. Best time, 2:15¾.

Saratoga Racing Association Sold.

SARATOGA, Aug. 15.—The property of the Saratoga Racing association has been sold to a syndicate represented by Gottfreid Walbaum, president of the Hudson County club, of New Jersey. The presidency of the new association has been tendered the Hon. James Marvin, of Saratoga. The purchase price is $250,000.

The Croquet Tournament.

NORWICH, Aug. 15.—At the croquet tournament Smith secured the championship by making eight of ten games won. The second place lies between Germond, Jacobus and Wambold. Knechs and Barrett lead in the third division.

Murphy Defeated Griffin.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—Advices from Sydney, N. S. W., state that the prize fight between Billy Murphy, of the Young Griffin for a purse of $250 and the featherweight championship of the world ended in Murphy winning in seventeen rounds.

The A. A. U. Championship Meeting.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The fourth annual championship meeting of the Amateur Athletic Union of the United States will be held at the St. Louis Jockey club's grounds, St. Louis, on Saturday, Oct. 3, 1891.

Harry Wilkes Failed.

BINGHAMTON, N. Y., Aug. 15.—Harry Wilkes was sent to beat the track's record of 2:13¾, but only made the mile in 2:23½.

Signed by Pittsburg.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 15.—Eddie May, of the Philadelphia club, and John Corkhill have been signed by the Pittsburg club.

The Whalebeck Steamer a Success.

NEW YORK, Aug. 15.—The new whaleback steamer Charles W. Wetmore has arrived here after a safe voyage to Liverpool with 72,000 bushels of grain. She looks like a big canal boat. The cost of the vessel is stated at one-third less than ordinary built vessels which carry the same load. On account of the peculiar construction of her decks, while she may ship water in rough weather, all the water runs off again.

Miss Fillmore Is 104.

BUFFALO, Aug. 15.—Miss Lavina Fillmore, a relative of the late President Fillmore, celebrated her 104th birthday at her residence in Clarence. A large company of friends and relatives sat down to an enjoyable repast.

FRENCHMEN ON STIMULANTS.

Opinions Expressed by a Number of Noted Men About Tobacco and Alcohol.

Tolstoi's wholesale denunciation of tobacco and alcohol, as agents that destroy the moral consciousness, has called forth various expressions of opinion, among which occur the following from noted Frenchmen:

Gounod thinks they cause sluggishness, and therefore affect the will, but not the conscience, which is a divine decree. He himself has abandoned smoking.

Zola says he does not drink wine for the reason that it does not agree with him. He disagrees with Tolstoi's opinions and regards the use of stimulants as a mere matter of bonhomie.

Dr. Charcot thinks Tolstoi's tenets exaggerated and false. He says stimulants are injurious, but may be used in moderation.

Daudet said he had found that smoking assisted and that intoxication prevented work.

Fruit Eating Animals.

The apple is highly appreciated by horses, cows, sheep, goats, hogs, deer, elephants, rabbits, squirrels, domestic fowls and many of the wild animals and birds. The pertinacity is greedily devoured in immense quantities by opossums and dogs. The fig is a favorite food among animals—horses, sheep, goats, hogs, camels, elephants and fowls greedily devouring it. The cherry, as our fruit growers well know, is a delicacy which the whole feathered tribe contend for. Peaches are only relished by a few animals, among which may be mentioned the rabbit. Grapes are eaten with great relish by horses, cows, sheep, deer, hogs, camels, elephants and sometimes by dogs and many wild animals. Dried fruits of all kinds are eaten with avidity by the Eastern dogs. Fruits, such as the orange, lemon, lime, shaddock, sour plum, green olive, etc., are shunned by nearly all kinds of animals, as they are by worms. Oftentimes, when they become thoroughly ripe, will readily be eaten by hogs, after they have once acquired the taste. The ostrich will eat many kinds of fruit with enjoyment. Nuts of nearly all kinds are relished and sought after by squirrels, monkeys, hogs, parrots and many other Rinds of animals and birds.

A Curious Question and Its Answers.

A curious question was raised by the Paris Figaro of its women readers. A novel entitled "Coeur de Mere" appeared in the paper. In this story a mother of strong religious convictions opposed the consent to the marriage of her daughter with the man she loves, because he is bound by a vow made to his dying father never to be married in any other than a religious ceremony. The girl dies broken hearted, and to the last the mother refuses the permission that would save her child from the grave. The Figaro asked its readers, "Was the mother justified in withholding her consent and thereby bringing her daughter to an early grave?" The editor received 1,621 answers. Of these 631 considered the mother justified in preferring her daughter's death to her dishonor in contracting a marriage unsanctioned by the church; 329 took the opposite view and blamed the mother; 200 expressed hesitancy, and 462 suggested various solutions to the problem. The editor expressed his admiration of the style in which the letters, as a rule, were written. Some disinterested women took part in the correspondence. Answers came from different parts of the globe. "I would lynch the mother," cabled an American woman.

The Royal Red Cross.

In the cut is depicted the decoration lately bestowed by Queen Victoria on Mrs. Grimwood, the Manipur heroine. The Royal Red Cross was instituted by royal warrant, April 23, 1883, for the purpose of rewarding services rendered by certain persons in nursing the sick and wounded of the army and navy. It consists of a cross, enameled crimson, edged with gold, having on the arms thereof the words, faith, hope, charity and the date of the institution, with the queen's effigy in the center. On the reverse side the royal and imperial cipher, and crown in relief are placed in the center.

THE RED CROSS.

The cross is to be attached to a dark blue ribbon edged with red, tied in a bow and worn on the left shoulder. The decoration is to be worn by the queen and by any of the royal family on whom it may be conferred.

The decoration is intended for any ladies and nursing sisters, whether subjects or foreign persons, who may be recommended to the queen's notice by special exertions in providing for the nursing or for advancing to sick and wounded soldiers and sailors, and, in the case of nursing sisters, for special devotion and competency which they may have displayed in their nursing duties with the army in the field or in the naval and military hospitals. Prominent among those who have received this decoration is Florence Nightingale.

An Approach to Perpetual Motion.

Optician calls attention to a clock to be seen at Brussels, which comes about as near being a perpetual motion machine as can be invented, for the sun does the winding. The following is the method by which it works: A shaft exposed to the solar rays causes an updraft of air, which sets the fan in motion. The fan actuates mechanism which raises the weight of the clock until it reaches the top and then puts a break on the fan till the weight has again come a little, when the fan is again liberated and proceeds to act as before. As long as the sun shines frequently enough and the machinery does not wear out, the clock will keep in perpetual motion.

The Widows of England.

There are over 800,000 more widows than widowers in England. The Westminster Review, in discussing the subject, attributes the disparity chiefly to the growing disposition of men to marry late in life, under which circumstances they generally marry persons younger than themselves.

SCIENCE AND PROGRESS

A METEOROLOGICAL QUESTION.

Why Thunder Is Slower Than Lightning. How to Calculate Their Distance.

The question is sometimes asked, and is of special interest just at this season of thunderstorms, "What is the reason that the thunder which follows the quick flash of lightning is not also quick? The lightning is a small part of a second, the thunder sometimes half a minute long." The thing is very clearly explained with the aid of the cut here reproduced from Country Gentleman.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING.

The flash is instantaneous, and the light comes from it to the eye in less than the thousandth part of a second, but the sound travels more slowly, or only a mile in four and a half seconds. We hear the noise from the nearest part of the flash first, then from the part more distant, all of which requires time. If the flash is three miles long there would be nearly a quarter of a minute between the nearest part and the more remote, and the thunder would continue all this time. The part of the flash represented at a, only a mile off, will be heard in less than five seconds; at b, two miles off, nine seconds will be required to bring the sound; at c, three miles away, thirteen seconds will elapse between the flash and the thunder. By a little practice in counting the seconds between the lightning of an approaching storm and the thunder following the flashes, the distance of storms may be known with some accuracy.

A New Death Dealing Device.

London Industries tells of a pneumatic shell invented and perfected by an Englishman which seems equally adaptable for naval, field or siege guns, and that with only a slight alteration of the breech and firing mechanism of ordinary guns. This pneumatic shell would appear to have the merit of being both simple in construction and efficient in action. It is carried in the ordinary tumbril of a field piece, and is perfectly safe, as it is simply a strong metallic cartridge containing the impelling charge of compressed air or gas at the rear of the chamber containing the explosive. When required to be used it is inserted in the breech of a gun in the usual manner, as in a quick firing gun, when a simple turn of a lever instantaneously releases the air or gas and the shell or projectile, which contains in the forward chamber a charge of dynamite or other high explosive, is sent with deadly effect in the required direction. In this operation no smoke is made, there is practically no noise and this gun works perfectly cool and clean. With this it is supposed that vessels will be able to fight practically without noise and absolutely without smoke or heating of the gun barrels while showering deadly missiles against the torpedo boat flotilla.

Preservatives of Iron.

According to The Industrial World, Professor Lewes' investigations of the effect upon iron of the various preservative substances applied to its surface have led him to the conclusion that protectives of the class of tar and its derivatives, such as pitch, bitumen, asphalt and mineral waxes, are among the best. This, however, is conditioned upon the removal of the small quantities of acid and ammonia salts which frequently occur in tar and tar products. If, in addition to this, the class of substances mentioned is applied hot to warm iron the bituminous and asphaltic substances form on the surface of iron an enamel which is not, like other coatings, microscopically porous, and therefore pervious to moisture. Spirit of naphtha varnishes are condemned by Professor Lewes; varnishes to which a body has been given by some pigment, generally a metallic oxide, are preferable to the latter class, if the solvent used is not too rapid in its evaporation, and if care has been taken to select substances which do not themselves act injuriously upon iron or upon the gums or resins that are to bind them together.

Dentition in Cats.

It has been a question with me, whether it is an established fact, that cats lose their teeth in the same manner as children, writes a correspondent of Popular Science News. Four kittens that were raised in the house, during the space of four or five years, lost their canine teeth at the age of three to four months, the second tooth often appearing next to the first, which finally dropped out. Sometimes the cat had four of the canine teeth for some time before the appearance of the second tooth. Two of our finest cats, now 6 years old, have lost their canine teeth in the same way. These teeth were the second ones, and this makes me presume that cats may suffer with toothache. Some old cats still have all their canine teeth. Next to the second dentition, I have asked friends if they had noticed the loss of the first teeth, and they had, but of canine only. I never saw anything mentioned in natural histories, and am curious to know whether the fact has been stated, also whether dogs have a second dentition.

Manufacturing Phosphorus by Electricity.

In a new process for the manufacture of phosphorus by electricity used by the phosphorus company, at Wolverhampton, England, says the London Engineer, the raw material and coke are all fed into a specially designed furnace, reduced to vapor by electric heat, and the vapor condensed into marketable phosphorus, the elaborate chemical material hitherto needed in dealing with the raw materials before putting them into the furnace thus being dispensed with. The estimated consumption of phosphorus throughout the world is only 2,000 tons per year, used chiefly for match making. Extensions are contemplated at Weehawken, which will ultimately, it is anticipated, lead to the company being able to make half this quantity at that place.

A Development in Flowerpots.

Flowerpots made of paper have been tried and are very favorably reported on. Their light weight and nonbibibility is an advantage that renders them peculiarly suitable for transport purposes, and a severe test proved their ability to withstand the necessary plamp.

GOOD HEALTH

THE FISH AND BRAIN FALLACY.

Fishing Communities Not Famous for Intellectual Acquirements.

As a result of personal experience, says a writer in Temple Bar, I may state that having some years since left off fish for a few days, so far as what is called solid food is concerned, solely on fish, with, of course, the addition of bread (no potatoes were eaten during the period), and discovered, before the forty days had expired, that fish was not the staff of life.

In the course of my experiment I not only lost flesh but also energy, nor did I feel my head clearer or my thoughts and feelings more alert than when subsisting on more varied food. While living upon fish only one feels "a want," a craving for "something you don't know what"—that is to say, you cannot give a name to your desire; nor does the desire cease if you continue the dietary; at all events, in my case "custom came not to the rescue."

One popular fallacy in connection with fish may be noticed, namely, the oft repeated assertion that the eating of that particular food increases brain power. No one who has studied the subject can possibly believe the assertion. A man might eat a huge portion of fish every day of his life, and on the day of his death, if the quantity of phosphorous (the brain invigorator) consumed were to become visible, it would not amount to more than might probably suffice to tip a couple of lucifer matches. Communities have existed that lived almost solely on fish, but these ichthyophagists were certainly not famous for intellectual attainments. Nor are our fisher villages, in many of which much fish is presumably consumed, the seats of any great amount of brain power. None of our fisherfolks are remarkable for genius, or even what is called common sense in their views of life and its responsibilities being shrouded in a haze of superstition which they lack sufficient strength of mind to see through.

No fishing community, so far as is known to the writer, has given to the world a great man. Men of mark—poets, preachers, lawyers, warriors, philosophers and physicians—have emanated, in Scotland at any rate, from all classes except the fishing classes.

Hysterical Vomiting.

An unique and successful treatment by Dr. Tyson, for hysterical vomiting, is recorded in The Medical and Surgical Journal: "A young girl, fourteen years of age, insisted that she vomited everything she swallowed, even water. Her statements were found to be true. She had every manner of treatment employed, but to no purpose. She was blistered, and received strong currents of electricity to no effect, and was finally discharged. She returned a few days afterward, claiming to be as bad as ever. The resident physician, knowing that all else had been tried, told her emphatically that whatever she vomited she must immediately swallow. To the surprise of all, her vomiting ceased, and since the order was given she has had no further trouble."

Hot Milk as a Stimulant.

Hot milk is recommended by a medical journal as an excellent substitute for beer, whiskey, or other alcoholic stimulants, in cases of great fatigue and great exertion of body or mind. Its reviving influence, when taken as hot as it can be sipped, is remarkable. Its effect is promptly felt, and lasting, and even those who have been accustomed to the use of alcoholic beverages will find this substitute remarkably satisfying. This is especially true of overwrought men, for whom physicians sometimes prescribe beer and other mild stimulants. The momentary exhilaration felt is only the whip applied to an exhausted body, while the hot milk is digested and gives nourishment and real strength.

ETIQUETTE

POINTS IN GOOD FORM.

Information That May Be Useful on a Variety of Occasions.

Harper's Bazar gives in answer to correspondents the following clear and practical hints to questions about a number of social matters:

Guests at a morning wedding do not remove their bonnets and hats. A gilt or colored gold rod most effectively for decorating your country house.

Hold your fork in your right hand, like a spoon; use your knife, certainly, to cut anything that cannot be cut with the fork; do not hold your knife while eating with your fork. Asparagus is usually carried almost to the mouth with fingers, though it may be eaten with a fork, simply eating off the tips. Lettuce you may tear with your fingers before putting on the dressing, and then eat with a fork; or you may manipulate it entirely with a fork—almost anything except mangle it with a knife.

White canvas shoes trimmed with patent leather, not with russet leather—are worn at the seaside by those dressing in mourning.

"Full dress" usually means the most elaborate toilets, decollete, etc. "Evening dress" is what the name implies, not necessarily decollete.

Write an informal note asking the parents of the children to give your little girl the pleasure of their company upon such date as you may decide.

In paying the call you mention send a card to the guest and one to each of the ladies of the family. You will send in the cards by the servant if the ladies are at home, or you will leave the same number if the ladies are out. You may call upon a bride any time after her return, unless you receive cards designating the days upon which she desires to receive her friends.

You need not leave cards at a wedding reception. You will, of course, pay a call afterward, leaving your card, with your husband's, will be left.

If circumstances compel you to admit a caller yourself, do it as informally and naturally as if it was your custom. Precede your man caller to the parlor and follow the ladies.

Order your dinner at a hotel as you would at home, quietly and simply. Nothing is more objectionable than sampling all the dishes upon a menu simply because they are to be had.

Invite your guests to "meet Mr. and Mrs. Brown." You should surely invite the husband of your acquaintance; in fact, it is not possible to do otherwise.

DECORATIVE SCREENS.

Hints for Making Some Pretty Specimens of These Convenient Articles.

Screens for fireplaces, for arranging the cosy corners that are now a fad, for sheltering invalids from drafts in country houses with their widely opened doors and windows, are prominent objects now in any well furnished room, and need not be an expensive feature necessarily.

Frames that are made of a plain band of thin wood need to be mounted with a piece of embroidered linen; silkolene shirred on or a pretty cretonne also answers the purpose nicely.

Spiders' webs are seen on many of the new screens. They can be managed by amateurs in this way: Over a plain panel of coral Roman satin draw from top to bottom a length of gold and coral twisted cord; repeat from side to side and corner to corner. Now weave the web of the same fine threads in and out the bias bands of cord that have been drawn across the panel. Each thread of the web should be at least an inch from the preceding one. This, with an artificial spider or insect of some, finishes the panels. Other panels may be of the coral satin or slightly embroidered with decoping sprays of a vine falling half way down.

A single screen, easy to make, is decorated as follows: Cut out the shape as a lyre or harp in cardboard and bind it over closely with soft or heavy cord, gild it and add strings of bright gold cord. Drape one side of the lyre with turquoise silk or gauze and catch into the strings quite carelessly a bunch of roses and leaves made of crape tissue paper.

A Useful Cleansing Fluid.

An excellent cleansing fluid, especially useful when men's garments require restoration, is prepared as follows: Dissolve four ounces of white Castile soap shavings in a quart of boiling water. When cold add four ounces of ammonia, two ounces each of ether, alcohol and glycerine, and a gallon of clear cold water. Mix thoroughly, and as it will keep for a long time, bottle and cork tightly for future use. This mixture will cost about eighty cents, and will make eight quarts.

For men's clothing, heavy cloth, etc., dilute a small quantity in an equal amount of water, and following the nap of the goods sponge the stains with a piece of similar cloth. The grease that gathers upon the cuffs of coats will immediately disappear, and the undiluted fluid will vanquish the more obstinate spots. When clean dry with another cloth and press the under side with a warm iron. According to Harper's Bazar, which is authority for the foregoing, this fluid is also useful when painted walls and woodwork require scouring, a cupful to a pail of water being the proper proportion.

How to Relieve a Fainting Person.

If the face is pale lay the patient flat on the back and raise the feet a little. If the face is red raise the patient to a sitting or easy reclining position. The pale face indicates that there is too little blood in the head; the red that there is too much. It is necessary also to be careful that a "black or blue" face is not mistaken for a pale one, for this dark hue indicates venous congestion, and in such a case the patient should be raised.—Exchange.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," MONDAY, AUGUST 17, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

A TERRIBLE ACCIDENT.

Frank Randolph Thrown From a Wagon and Nearly Killed.

Frank Randolph of New street met with a runaway accident last evening that may result fatally. He and a party of friends went out for a drive and were returning from Dunellen. Mr. Randolph's team is used for drawing steamer No. 2 to fires. Saturday he purchased a new horse and on the road from Dunellen he was showing his friends how fast the animal could run to a fire if necessary. In some unaccountable way the reins got crossed and when near Harbergers on West Front street, corner of Plainfield avenue, Mr. Randolph attempted to slow up, not knowing that the reins were crossed. He pulled on the wrong rein and in consequence the party was thrown out. Mr. Randolph's head struck the telephone pole and his scalp was literally torn away. Another member of the party, named Tom English was also badly injured. His right arm was cut and he was more or less bruised about the head and body.

Mr. Randolph was taken to his home corner of New street and Orchard place and a physician was summoned.

It required over forty stitches to sew up the gaping wound in his head. His friends have little hopes of his recovery.

City Court Notes.

Jacob Schneider was a prisoner in the City Court this morning, charged by his wife with using profane and indecent language and causing a disturbance in their home by upsetting the stove and doing other damage. The defendant pleaded not guilty. Mrs. Schneider was sworn and testified to the way he had treated her, claiming that he had even refused to give her drink of water when she was sick. The prisoner testified in his own behalf and contradicted nearly everything his wife said on the witness stand. After hearing the testi-of both parties the court said that in his opinion they were both equally guilty but in the case of the defendant he suspended sentence, warning him, however, that if he came up before him again, he would not get off so easy.

Lewis Peterson was charged with assaulting his brother's wife, Mrs. Henry Peterson. Lewis pleaded not guilty. He was given a trial. A number of witnesses testified pro and con. Judge Codington reserved his decision until Wednesday morning at ten o'clock.

PERSONAL.

Will B. Noble of Scotch Plains, has gone to Providence, R. I., for two weeks.

Mr. Peter McClusky of Connecticut is visiting his brother, Mr. Frank McCluskv of North avenue.

Miss Ida M. Weaver has returned to her home in North Plainfield, after a week's stay at Ocean Grove.

The Misses Emma and May Bennett of Brooklyn, and Miss Lulu Turner of Rahway are visiting their cousins the Misses Maggie and Mattie Bennett of Dunellen.

Messrs. A. M. Griffen and W. F. Arnold have returned to their homes in this city from a week's stay at Barnegat. They report good fishing and say they caught 1,400 pounds of fish during their week's outing.

A fourth operation was performed by his physicians yesterday afternoon on Gen. Fay at his home in Elizabeth. He stood it much better than was expected and rallied sufficiently to relieve the minds of his relatives of the danger of a sudden collapse. He was resting easily last night.

The New Jersey Sanitary Association.

At a special meeting of the executive council of the New Jersey State Sanitary Association, held at the Coleman House, Asbury Park Wednesday, arrangements were made for holding the annual meeting of the association at Lakewood, on December 1st. President Chapman, will make an address, comparing the sanitary laws of New Jersey with those of other states, and calling attention to the question of school sanitation. Among others who will read papers are: Prof. Watson, of Elizabeth; Dr. Samuel Lockwood, of Freehold; Prof. Raymond, of Lawrenceville Institute; Dr. E. M. Hunt, Prof. L. B. Ward, of Jersey City; Dr. J. W. Stickle, of Orange; Prof. Blackett, of Princeton College, and Judge Lanning of Trenton.

Not Dynamite.

The brother of James Walker, the man who is alleged to have received a package of dynamite at the Somerville jail for the purpose of blowing his way out, makes a statement that knocks all the sensation out of the case. "The statement that the stuff was dynamite is ridiculous," he said. "It was nothing but chewing gum of the most innocent and harmless character, which I got at Johnson & Johnson's factory in New Brunswick, where I work." Johnson & Johnson, when seen, said that a chewing gum such as Walker spoke of was made by them. Young Walker is employed at their shop and is a steady workman.

Fire at Rahway.

Fire last night destroyed the barn on Murray Perkins farm, on the outskirts of Rahway. One cow was burned and some of this year's crops, owned by Mr. Lewis Rushton, was destroyed. The fire was caused by a lighted cigar being thrown on the floor by an employee. Loss $2,500; partly insured.

CRANFORD'S BOATING CARNIVAL.

Saturday Night's Brilliant Event.—List of the Participants.

Cranford's first boating carnival took place on the Rahway River Saturday night. Ninety-five boats, tandem brought hundreds more from the back country.

Bound Brook Brass Band furnished the music for the occasion, and as the flotilla moved slowly aldng the river the band marched and played along the bank.

Commodore Charles Leo Abry was in command of the flotilla, Vice-Commodore J. A. Hibson acted as his aide, and E. G. Woodling acted as Flag Lieutenant

At 8:30 p. m. the flotilla was marshalled in line. A pistol shot rang out. Two hundred oars dipped into the water and the little fleet was under way. The craft went on their way steadily and without a break in the line to the end amid great cheering.

A new and pleasing part of the evening's programme was developed in the form of a stereopticon exhibition by E. W. Austin. He threw 120 views upon the canvas, which was suspended over the river. His pictures of local scenes and people were received with marked demonstrations.

Fully three thousand people attended the carnival festivities. Among those who had charge of the arrangements were Commodore Charles Leo Abry, Edward Bookhout, Jr., Charles H. Bookhout, G. Harvey Miller, P. D. VanSinderen, Vice-Commodore J. A. Hibson, L. Saphar, Edward Bedle, George G. Teller, E. K. Adams, A. P. Folk, E. G. Woodling, Elmer Moore, Howard Cox, Charles T. Bingham and G. A. Metcalf.

In the decorations of the river and boats over three thousand lanterns were used. Many of the houses in village were handsomely illuminated in honor of the occasion.

Among those who participated in the affair were Mr. and Mrs. Blake and the Misses Blake, Mr. Parks and party, Mr. Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Sword, Mr. and Mrs. T. W. Sutton, Miss N. H. Berry, J. A. Hibson, R. F. Hibson, and Mr. and Mrs. Applegate, Gilbert Marcus, Mr. and Mrs. L. Saphar, Miss de Groot, Miss Reeve, Dr. J. MacConnell, Mr. and Mrs. Wagstaff, Mr. Snow, Miss Bates, Mr. and Miss Seward, Rev. E. B. Bronley, Mr. Voorhees, George G. Teller, Miss Ida Teller, Mrs. Addie Brady, Edward Bookout, Jr., Charles H. Bookout, Geo. Miller, E. K. Adams, J. C. McIntyre, Howard Cox and Miss Cox, Elmer Moore and Miss Moore, S. J. Cox, R. E. Robinson, E. G. Woodling, E. J. Sutton, Miss Eaton, R. W. Blake and Mr. McIntyre.

Keeping a Close Watch on the "Big Six."

Day by day the citizens of Plainfield are becoming more and more disgusted with the municipal acts of the "Big Six" Democratic combination. Prominent Democrats as well as Republicans openly denounce the legislative methods practiced by the city's rulers and threats are made to expose the primary object the "ring" had when it awarded the two most valuable franchises the city owns, those for water and sewerage—to J. M. Low, of Kingston, N. Y. Low pays the city nothing for these two plums. While the Democrats have been granting Low every privilege he desires, the Republican Committee, most prominent in Plainfield and New York business and social circles, have done their utmost to block their plans. Early in the year, when the Council proceedings were carried with such a high hand, that parliamentary rulings were totally disregarded, the "Republican Five" employed two expert stenographers, whose duty it has been to make accurate record of every illegal move of the Council's rulers. These shorthand writers have been present at every meeting, and their notes undoubtedly will soon be read in court.

The Council will hold a meeting to, morrow night. At this session Mayor Gilbert will probably return to the Council his approval of the Low fer sewer works. It is rumored that the Mayor will return the document unsigned, thus making it void unless the Democrats protect their friend Low by successfully pushing mandamus proceedings in the courts. The Democratic contingent are anxious for re-election this Fall, but if they carry their case into court, the exposures resulting from a thorough inquiry into their proceedings are likely to result in an overwhelming Republican victory at the polls.—New York Tribune.

Lawn Tennis Tournament.

The Hillside Tennis Club announces a tournament to be held on the grounds of the Club, on Broadway, Saturday, Sept. 5, and Labor Day, Sept. 7. The events will include handicap for ladies' single and gentlemen's singles and doubles. Entries may be made to the Committee on or before Sept. 3. Valuables prizes will be awarded. The committee in charge is Howard W. Beebe, Charles E. Schuscely, Ernest L. Walz, Jr., and James P. Murray.

Attempted Burglaries.

A burglar entered the residence of Mrs. Clifton on Morris avenue early yesterday morning, but was frightened away before he succeeded in stealing any valuables.

The residence of Mrs. Geoghan on West Front street was also entered a few evenings since but the burglar was frightened away. Nothing was missing.

The Seventh Day Baptists Annual Conference.

To THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—This denomination will hold their anniversaries of their societies and general conference at Westerly, R. I., commencing Wednesday this week the 19th inst., and closing Sunday 23d. It is expected that about fifty will be attend from this place. Sabbath services at the church in this place will be dispensed with on Sabbath 22d, on that account. It is expected that a large gathering will be had from the different parts of the United States. The first Seventh-Day Baptist church in this country was organized at Newport, R. I., some 200 years since. It is expected that an excursion will go to Watch Hill after the close of the meeting, when big and little fish will have a flop in the ocean waves.

BASE BALL.

The Crescents Defeat the Westfields by a Score of 7 to 5

The match talked of game of base ball between the Crescents of this city and the Westfield Athletic Club's team was played on the grounds in this city last Saturday afternoon. A large number of people were present to witness the contest between the two clubs and it was one of the most interesting that had taken place on the grounds in this city this season.

The Westfield team succeeded in defeating the West Ends in two games and the latter club had defeated the Crescents, consequently the base ball fanatics were anxious to see the result of Saturday's game.

Promptly at 3.45 o'clock Umpire Berryman called "play ball." The Crescents went to the bat. Freddie Jones was the first man up and he succeeded in hitting the ball for two bases. Lufberry followed with a hit, so did Keeler, Tierney, McIndoe and Hammell. The result of the inning was that seven runs were placed to the Crescents credit. The Plainfielders yelled like Indians.

In fact the game was won in the first inning as the home team did not score after that. The Westfields succeeded in making five runs. Two in the first and three each in the second, third and seventh. That is all they could make, however, although they played a good up-hill game.

Hammell pitched for the Crescents and another Hammell pitched for the visitors. The Crescent's pitcher was a little wild at first and in consequence gave several men their bases on balls. All through the game the Crescents hit the ball but they could not place it safely and that accounts for the fact that no more runs were made after the first inning.

The features of the game were McIndoe's catch and Jones' two base hit. Lever also make a long hit to centre field, thereby securing two bases. Keeler, the new short-stop played his usual good game as did also Bonner, the catcher.

State Notes.

Donal Smith, of Lambertville, missed his footing while leaving a car in Trenton on Thursday night and fell under the wheels. Both legs were crushed.

Edward Schamb, an eight-year-old Paterson boy, was drowned yesterday afternoon while bathing in the Passaic near the Midland Railroad bridge. His body was recovered by his companions. He got beyond his depth and could not swim.

The Central Railroad has made several improvements in the service for peach growers this year. Instead of the 5 o'clock train from Flemington, Hunterdon county, to Jersey city. The run is made in one hour and fifty-seven minutes.

The woman's encouragement meeting at Ocean Grove yesterday was well attended. Mrs. Mary Sparks Wheeler, of Philadelphia, had charge of the exercises. Mrs. Mary Andrews of Japan also made an address. Last evening the last service was held, and an hour was spent in five minute testimonies.

The executive committee of the Dennis McLaughlin Association, Jersey City, after a careful examination of the books of the late absent ex-treasurer, James F. McKee, have announced a deficiency in his accounts of $6,273. Collector James Dennin yesterday notified members of the association that McKee's bondsmen would make good any deficiency in her son's accounts just as soon as the amount is definitely made known to her.

The Paulonists' monastery on West Hoboken Heights was the scene on Thursday afternoon of burial services over the bodies of two Paulonist priests. The Rev. Father Phillips, who died a few days ago, was one of the priests. The Rev. Father Gaudentius, who died also was carried to his final resting place by his fellow-priests. The caskets containing the bodies were deposited in the vaults in the basement of the monastery. There are now in the bodies of Paulonist priests in this crypts.

SAVE THE BABES.

How the Work of the Grim Reaper May be Arrested.

At every tick of the watch somebody dies. The average of human life in those parts of the world where life is made most bearable is supposed to be near thirty-three years. The fearful swath Death cuts among the babies keeps the average so far below the three-score years and ten to which healthy men and women might hope to attain. It is the reproach of parental care, of civilization and of medical science that one-fourth of the whole number of deaths are of children who have not attained the age of seven years.

Year after year medical and secular journals, boards of health and sanitarians attempt to stem the tide of mortality by publishing the means of care and cure for infantile ailments, but the resulting improvement is not as great as it should be.

SUMMER DISEASE.

Speaking of this subject, an intelligent city physician, who has carefully studied the matter, says that statistics prove that the greater number of deaths during the Summer months is due to disorders of the digestive tract. It is possible to keep this part of the human mechanism in perfect running order. The means are simple. Those who know how to do it, and who make use of their knowledge, may close up the broadest avenue by which babies find their way to the grave.

PROPER FOOD.

First look to the food—the quality, the method of preparation and the regularity with which it is given. Proper food properly prepared and properly administered will keep children healthful and make sick children well. One half the work of prevention has been done when a child is rightly fed.

Milk is the food of all foods for babies. Mother's milk is the best. No other should be tried, particularly during the Summer months, unless advised by a physician.

STERILIZED MILK.

When the child is not breast-fed a carefully prepared food must be used. Of all the artificial foods sterilized milk ranks first, and in the city there is no longer difficulty in getting it. Sterilizers are sold by druggists, with full directions for use. If this expense cannot be incurred, the milk carefully prepared is sold at the same price as ordinary milk. Sterilized milk is a boon to travellers and others who are unable to get fresh milk supplies. When in the process of sterilization the heating has been continued for thirty minutes the milk will keep perfectly sweet and wholesome for eighteen days.

BOILED MILK.

There is nothing to prevent the practice of boiling milk for babies either in city or country. Some physicians prefer this method to the less simple one of sterilization. The whole quantity during the day should be first boiled and then placed in a tightly-covered vessel in the coolest place attainable. Pour out at the hour the child is to be fed just the amount needed for that one time. Dilute with water that has been boiled, equal parts of milk and water, and add a tablespoonful of lime water. (Barley water is a better diluent where there is need for laxatives.) Sweeten "to taste," warm the whole mixture, pour into the bottle and give it to the child instantly. Never give a baby milk that has been standing cooling over five minutes.

ABSOLUTE CLEANLINESS NECESSARY.

Look after the bottles. Discard tubes. Use soft conical nipples. Have three bottles and three nipples so as to avoid using the same ones in succession. Throw out milk left in the bottle always. Brush the nipple off thoroughly with cold water; turn it wrong side out and brush again; then place it in cold water until needed for use. Treat the bottle to a washing, then scald several times with hot water, to which bicarbonate of sodium has been added. Before using again rinse with cold water.

Do not weigh a child down with unnecessary clothing. A layer of gauze flannel should cover the chest and abdomen. This protects against the danger of sudden chilling. The little dress is covering enough in Summer for other parts of the body.

WARM BATHING.

At night give the child a warm bath. All children perspire freely, and unless they are frequently bathed and freshly clad they become irritable, if not ill. A warm tub bath at night and a tepid sponging in the morning will help wonderfully in keeping little ones sweet-tempered. Unless a child is too sick to sleep, a warm bath will bring restful slumber.

AFTER TEETHING.

When the babies are so advanced that they are no longer to be sustained by a milk diet, new precautionary measures are necessary. Tommy can not and will not eat what Mary can and does. Their likings and dislikings within the bound of sanitary safety and parental means should be studied. It is well to have a competent physician outline a proper diet. If the Chinese fashion of paying doctors in time of health, and exacting pay from them during periods of sickness, were established in cities, it would doubtless give greater satisfaction.

FRESH AIR.

One word more must be said. There is one free thing that heaven sends, which no child, big or little, should be deprived of. Take them where they can get fresh air when they are well. When they are ill let them have fresh air at any price. The noble charity described in yesterday's Journal is doing much for poor children.

JERSEY'S FRUIT CROP.

The Conditions Continue Favorable for a Good Yield.

The observers and crop correspondents of the New Jersey Weather Service report for the week ending Friday, Aug. 14, that the temperature and sunshine have been above the normal in all portions of the State. The rainfall has been below the average, only light local showers occuring. These conditions have been most favorable to all crops, especially to corn and vine truck. The former has made a vigorous growth in stalk and ear, and the latter is maturing rapidly in all the districts.

Prof. Smith has made an examination of the vineyards at Hammonton; Egg Harbor and vicinity to get data as to rosebug injury, and has also noted the difference between such as were sprayed and such as were unsprayed by the copper mixtures. He finds that in all vineyards the vines have set a very heavy crop and will make a good fruit, sprayed or unsprayed. They are coloring up rapidly, and are now said to be out of danger.

At Hammonton, Niagara, which have never made a crop previously, are in fine sound condition where sprayed. All the large vineyards and many of the small ones were visited, and in all those that were sprayed the yield will be heavy and the fruit fine. Well bagged grapes were in uniformly good condition.

The cranberry bogs were found to have set heavily in most cases. There is already a beginning of scald noticeable on all of them, and in some the katydids have done injury to a small extent.

It is suggested that grape-growers spray at least once more, and that the carbonate of copper in a weak solution be used for this last spraying.

Fruit-growers who have sprayed their fruit for the codlin moth with London purple only unite in saying that this has also been effective in making smooth fruit free from rust or spot.

Peaches will yield well in most places examined, and where decently treated show no traces of the "yellows."

VETERINARY SURGEONS AT WAR.

Owners of Condemned Animals Urged to Invoke the Courts.

A lively warfare is now being engaged in by the two veterinary societies of New Jersey, between whom there has been a bitter rivalry ever since the New Jersey State Veterinary Society was formed by a number of dissatisfied members of the State Veterinary Medical Society. The split resulted from the hostility of those members who possessed diplomas from medical colleges to the admission of practitioners who did not.

The rivalry culminated in open war through the condemnation and slaughter of a number of cows in Newark last week by order of Dr. J. W. Hawk, Chief of the United States Bureau of Animal Industry of New Jersey. Dr. Hawk is a member of the original Society. After the animals had been killed, and after they were killed a committee from the rival Veterinary Society, consisting of Drs. L. E. Sattler and J. C. Corlies, of Newark; E. R. Ogden, of Orange, and J. N. Krowl, of Passaic, examined them and pronounced them perfectly healthy. The members of the committee wanted to be present at the killing, but Dr. Hawk took steps to prevent it. Dr. Corlies managed to get inside the slaughter-house, but he was forced to retreat.

Dr. Corlies then prepared a paper in which he advised owners whose animals are condemned to death to have mandamuses served on those who seek to destroy their property, and he offered the services of the committee to this end.

Dr. Hawk will not make reply to the paper. He says his duty is plain and he proposes to perform it. It is said, however, by a friend of Dr. Hawk that if he is further interfered with he will appeal to the Sheriff of the county and to the United States District-Attorney.

W. T. Stead says the trouble with the Prince of Wales is that he wanted "thrills," and there was nothing in the dreary, aimless life of the heir to the throne to give them to him, so he had to find them as best he could, in ways comfortable or otherwise. That is the trouble with many people—they want "thrills."

Last January there was in this country the largest sum of money per capita that was ever known in the history of the nation, although many individuals are sure they did not get their share of it. The amount per capita was twenty-four dollars. The large gold shipments have reduced it somewhat, yet even now, if it will be any consolation to you to know it, there is for you and every member of your family, though you are a country minister, $24.37.

Extracts from late news dispatches in the same paper: "It was rumored at Cattlettsburg, Ky., that a sheriff's posse, in trying to capture the Italians who murdered the Bromfield family in Wayne county, W. Va., was compelled to fire on the assassins and killed eight of them." "An Associated Press dispatch from Charleston, W. Va., says that the sensational dispatches sent out from Cattlettsburg about the murder of the Bromfield family in Wayne county, W. Va., by drunken Italians, are without foundation. The mail carrier who passed Bromfield's house this morning says the entire story is a fabrication." What good does it do anybody to lie like that?

Immigration Figures.

Since 1820 15,500,000 foreigners from Europe have settled in America. The largest number arriving in any one year was in 1882, when 788,992 immigrants landed upon our shores. The number seems to rise and fall in waves, without always any good cause. For instance, after the large figure in 1882 the number fell off to 334,000. Since then it has been gradually coming up again, till, for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, the immigration was 555,496.

Thus it will be seen that, not counting the descendants of these immigrants, there have actually landed on our soil from Europe a number of people almost equal to a fourth of the total present population of the United States. That we have been able to assimilate this great mass of unfamiliar humanity even as well as we have done speaks volumes of good, not only for Americans and their free institutions, but also for the foreigners themselves. An overwhelming majority of them came here sincerely seeking work and homes for themselves and their descendants, honestly identifying themselves with republican institutions, and glad to build homes in a land where they could aspire to the best and highest. Almost a third of our immigrants have been Germans, and from the beginning to the present time Germans have constituted the leading nationality. They outnumber at the present time even the swarming Italians. An odd feature of recent statistics is that in 1890 more English than Irish came to the United States.

Washing Them Up.

The experiment of providing baths for the inhabitants of the very poorest tenement house localities in New York city is about to be tried. One bathing establishment has been erected by the Society for Improving the Condition of the Poor. Their house will accommodate 200 daily. The tub or spray bath is provided for men, while tubs are furnished for women.

It has always been found best not to make a charity pure and simple out of anything when it can be avoided. For this reason the society will make a charge of five cents to each bather. This includes the use of soap and towel. One of the medical dispensaries of the big city—the Demill—will shortly have a bathhouse connected with its rooms for treating and dosing the sick poor. The doctors say they find that many of the ailments from which the poor wretches who come to them are suffering are caused simply from lack of bathing. At the same time it requires almost superhuman power to make the average ragpicker, scavenger or those in the lowest ranks of rough labor take a bath. When patients have come to the hospital and found that the first requirement for admission was a wash all over they have gone away and refused to enter. But the doctors will talk learnedly to their patients about the necessity of opening the pores of the skin, and hasope to overcome the natural, unregenerate man's aversion to water.

If any means under heaven can be found to make the poorest classes bathe themselves, the regeneration of society and the millennium of which reformers and prophets sing will be on us before we know it. Once people can be made to cleanse their bodies they will no longer be content with the miserable, filthy quarters in which they live. The one necessary step toward better things is dissatisfaction with things as they are. With the desire for the better will come the effort to attain it, and all the rest will follow.

THE SEAL AGREEMENT.

Russians Believe the Americans Are Violating It.

THE CORN DUTIES TO BE MODIFIED

The Distress Caused by the Increased Price of Bread May Lead to Bloodshed and Riot Unless Something Is Done. Starvation in Russia.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—A dispatch from St. Petersburg states that according to recent Russian advices from eastern Siberia the Russian sealers have already captured a considerable quantity of skins in the waters controlled by the Russian government, and there is no apparent cessation in their operations. The authorities are keeping a sharp lookout for trespassers in the Russian jurisdiction, and so far several have been chased but none captured. The sealing season has been excellent, no diminution of the number of seals being apparent.

No Faith in the Americans.

The Russians apparently feel under no obligation as to any agreement between Great Britain and the United States, and it is rumored that no confidence is placed by the czar's representatives in eastern Siberia in the good faith of the American Sealing company, in their claim, in taking advantage of the proviso allowing them to capture a certain number of seals to take all the seals they can get. The Russians, therefore, have been going ahead with their sealing as usual under the Russian flag, and with entire independence of any other national arrangement.

Corn Duties to Be Modified.

It is reported from Berlin that the government is preparing for a surrender to a certain extent on the question of corn duties. The cabinet has become so overwhelming that Chancellor Caprivi can hardly maintain himself against it. It is said that the kaiser has referred the matter entirely to the chancellor, to act in his discretion. Both the kaiser and the chancellor would rather give Austria and Hungary the preference benefit of the German demand for foreign corn under the commercial treaty soon to go in force, and this has been the chief motive for delay, but the people become so overwhelming that the high price of bread is so great and growing that prolonged waiting may result in riots and bloodshed. Hence a probable mitigation of the corn duties within a few days. The government itself feels the pressure of scarcity owing to the higher prices paid for grain for the army, and would undoubtedly be a large purchaser of foreign grain at lesser rates should a reduction of duties take place. The report that American farmers are sending grain now in little anxiety, not only in Germany but in all European countries, as it is felt that the demand from America this year will undoubtedly be large.

The Result in Russia.

Advices from Russia present the situation in no more favorable light. In Asiatic Russia, near the Caspian sea, several villages are reported to be almost depopulated, many of the people having died of hunger, and others have left for better favored regions. In Volhynia it is said that the commissariat branch of the army has found that no supplies can locally be obtained for the troops, and that all food will have to be brought from a distance.

A Novel on Irish Subjects.

William O'Brien, M. P., having, through the kindness of his wife's family, escaped the net of insolvency in which he had become involved, and thereby preserved his place in parliament, has retired to the west coast of Ireland to complete a novel on Irish subjects, which he began writing while in prison.

Dropped Dead While Preaching.

Considerable excitement was created in Ireland by the sudden death of Canon Carleton while preaching in Kilkenny cathedral. The reverend gentleman had progressed to some considerable extent with his sermon, when he was suddenly seen to reel and fall. Several persons rushed to his assistance, but he passed away almost instantly.

Continuing Fortifications for War.

The fortifying of Heligoland is proceeding with a rapidity that indicates the intention of the kaiser to have the island in a defensible condition as soon as possible. A large number of Italians are at work on the ruder branch of the labor and German stonecutters are busily engaged. The fortifications will be completed in 1893.

Mrs. Polk Laid to Rest.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 17.—In the presence of thousands of people the remains of Mrs. J. K. Polk, widow of the eleventh president of the United States, were placed in the vault beside those of her distinguished husband, who died in 1849. A detail of sixty police was necessary to keep open the graveled walk from the historic mansion to the tomb. The casket was covered with flowers and was carried by six stalwart negro men, preceded by the pallbearers, the relatives and immediate friends following. Short services were had at the tomb.

Ran Away from the Thetis.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—The sealing schooner G. H. White has arrived from Qunalaska. She is the vessel which Captain Hansborough reported having run away from the Thetis in Behring sea. The captain of the White says he had not received any notification to leave the sea, and when the Thetis drew near him he fled to avoid capture. He left the sea when he learned that it was filled with warships.

Died of Leprosy.

NEW ORLEANS, Aug. 17.—A death from leprosy occurred in the smallpox hospital Friday. The patient was a white woman named Mrs. Mary Holt. Dr. Beard, the physician in charge of the hospital, says there are half a dozen cases of leprosy in the city, and that the city authorities have taken no steps to separate them from persons to whom they might communicate the disease.

A Clubhouse Destroyed.

PLATTSBURG, N. Y., Aug. 17.—The Saranac Lake clubhouse, at the head of lower Saranac lake, was, with its contents, totally destroyed by fire. No lives were lost, but the guests lost all their personal effects. The loss is unknown. A defective flue caused the fire.

A Paper Dealer Assigns.

DAYTON, O., Aug. 17.—H. E. Mead, general paper dealer, doing business under the firm of H. E. Mead & Co., has failed. The assets will fully equal the liabilities. The personal estate of the assignor is listed at $50,000, and his realty at $5,000.

DONN PIATT'S CHARGE.

He Says James A. Garfield Was Treacherous to His General.

CLEVELAND, O., Aug. 17.—Donn Piatt, in a letter from Makonee to The Plain dealer, gives some personal recollections that throw a vivid light on the life of James A. Garfield and show his character in an unfavorable light. Among other things Donn Piatt says:

"Garfield's crime was this: When Lieutenant Colonel Garusche, General Rosecrans' chief of staff, was killed at the battle of Stone River, Garfield, through Salmon P. Chase, then secretary of the treasury, made application for the position. Secretary Chase got Rosecrans to make application for the assignment and Garfield was appointed Rosecrans' chief of staff. Rosecrans found Garfield positively lovable, for Garfield labored to secure his chief's confidence, and yet Garfield, in the midst of Rosecrans' troubles with the war department arising out of his demand for supplies and re-enforcements, wrote in the most servile attitude of his mind and wrote a confidential letter to Salmon P. Chase in which he denounced his general as an imbecile, utterly incapable of commanding such an army as that on the Cumberland. The letter in itself was treacherous, but in its results it was fatal. It hit Rosecrans' one available friend in the administration.

"Chase was at first stunned and then demoralized. He admired Stanton and felt a reluctance to interfere in his department, especially against his head. He dropped the contest and left Rosecrans to his fate and without the re-enforcements necessary to protect his flanks when he crossed the range of almost inaccessible mountains, a deep wide river and manoeuvered Bragg out of the grand gateway of the south that, when taken as Thomas had promised, brought the deadly conflict to a close. Had Rosecrans been given what he had a reasonable right to demand—the mounted infantry—he would have accomplished Chattanooga without the loss of a man. All the blood of those two awful days came from the one treacherous letter that deprived him of one friend and nearly destroyed the other."

HARRISON WANTS A RENOMINATION.

Private Secretary Halford Says the President Will Not Decline.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—A special to The Tribune from Washington says that President Harrison, through Private Secretary Halford, denies the story that he is about to declare over the telephone that he will refuse to be a candidate for renomination. The vigor with which Mr. Harrison's answer was given made it quite apparent that the statement that Mr. Harrison's friends say that while the president is not a candidate in the sense of chasing after a nomination, he desires a renomination over those that he will refuse to be a candidate for renomination. Attorney General Miller, who were here some days ago, are at present doing some good work in Mr. Harrison's interest. They have been quietly urging congressmen and other prominent and influential politicians relative to sending their representatives to attend the national Republican convention next year.

These two cabinet officers are now engaged in preparing a slate to suit their purposes, and by their combined efforts it is said the Maryland delegation has already been pledged to Harrison, Secretary Tracy and Congressman Mudd, of Maryland, having arranged affairs to their entire satisfaction. It is said that there exists an implied understanding between Mr. Harrison and Secretary Blaine to the effect that one of them will decline in advance should the other develop the greater strength. All of Mr. Harrison's friends seem quite confident of his renomination.

Fighting Among Themselves.

CLEVELAND, Aug. 17.—The race war which has been going on between the factions in St. Ledislas' Roman Catholic church has broken out again. At 12:30 o'clock the police were notified that a crowd of over 100 Hungarians had surrounded the home of Priest John Martony. The police found the interior of the house in a state of utmost confusion. The floor was strewn with stones and bricks, and every pane of glass in the house was broken in. The priest said that he was awakened about midnight by a crash and a heavy stone fell directly on his bed. As soon as the first stone was thrown the air was rent with cries of "Kill him! Murder the Slav priest!" etc., and during the uproar several shots were fired. Sergeant Griffin and a detail of officers were sent out, and as they approached the house the mob disappeared in the darkness and quiet was restored.

Government Should Control Railroads.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—In a paper read before a gathering in Association Hall on "Railway Murder" the Rev. Thomas J. Dixon, Jr., condemned the carelessness of railroad men, claiming that they held human life very cheaply. He pointed to the fact that the death rate by railroad accidents was increasing. It was his opinion that the railroads should be placed in the hands of the government.

Governor Pattison at Ocean Grove.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 17.—The attendance at the religious meetings at Ocean Grove was unusually large. At the morning service Governor Pattison, of Pennsylvania, was on the platform and was an interested spectator. The meetings at the Asbury Park auditorium were also largely attended. Prosecutor Charles H. Winfield, of Jersey City, made an address, in which he eulogized James Russell Lowell and George Jounal.

Army and Navy Veterans to Consolidate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—At a meeting of division No. 1 of the United States regular army and navy veterans a special committee was instructed to meet with the consolidation committee from the United States at Philadelphia on Aug. 22. The New York delegation will have full power to accomplish a national organization.

Exploring Steamer Damaged.

GREEN RIVER, Utah, Aug. 17.—The steamer Major Howell was seriously damaged and cannot start on the proposed trip in less than two weeks. In the meantime the exploring party will go down the river in small boats and the steamer will follow as soon as possible.

Confessed His Crime.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Charles Vernon, aged seventeen, of Chappaqua, N. Y., has been arrested for the robbery of the New York and Harlem railroad ticket office at Chappaqua. He confessed the crime.

French Frigate for Panama.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 17.—The French frigate Debourdieu, which has been lying in this port for some time undergoing repairs, has sailed for her station at Panama.

IT MAY HAVE BEEN ALMY

A Man Answering His Description in Connecticut.

HE WAS ALWAYS ON HIS GUARD

The Murderer of Christie Worden Believed to Be Tramping Through the Country as a Cowboy—His Suspicious Conduct While Working on a Farm.

WATERBURY, Conn., Aug. 17.—A thorough attempt was made to learn the facts regarding the visit to Southford of the man supposed to be Frank Almy, the murderer of Christie C. Worden, at Hanover N. H., July 17. The facts are as follows: On the arrival of the 2:20 train Aug. 3, a stranger got off and approached the store opposite, where he bought some crackers and cheese. He was dressed in a neat but cheap suit and a new pair of shoes. On his back supported by a cord was a bundle which, among other things, contained a lantern.

Conversed with the Sheriff.

After eating his frugal lunch he entered into conversation with Sheriff T. F. Wheeler, who has been mad enough to kick himself ever since, as he thinks how near he was to the big reward which might have been his for the asking.

The stranger told the sheriff that his name was Edward Smith, and that he came from Waterbury looking for work. He was directed to Mr. Roberts' stock farm when he said he had been on western ranches. When asked his name, after some hesitation, he said it was Frank White.

Used Almy's Expression.

When asked what pay he wanted he used the expression so often used by Almy in Vermont, "$15 a month and board." He was engaged, and proved to be a very good workman. He would associate with none of the men on the farm, and kept to himself. While at work he always seemed to be preoccupied and watched every new face anxiously. On the third day after his arrival Mrs. Roberts found a revolver of 44-calibre between the mattresses in his room. Becoming attached to his employer's little daughter, he showed her a horn handled knife on which the word "Castle" was engraved.

Always Went Armed.

It was remarked that White was never without both pistol and knife. One morning Mr. Roberts went to his door and calling him by name asked him to arise, but receiving no reply pushed open the door. He was not there. White was watching the door like a hawk. He was confused for a moment, but said that he had forgotten to answer. He familiar thing occurred the next night. He could never be found asleep. White eagerly scanned the papers, and after his departure many clippings concerning the Worden murder were found in his room. Saturday he disappeared, leaving an unsigned message saying that he did not like to be jawed.

Almy's Exact Description.

In many other ways White answers the description of Almy. Sheriff Wheeler still thinks he is in the vicinity and is organizing a number of searching parties to thoroughly scour the wild country about the Naugatuck valley.

Seen in Manchester.

MANCHESTER, Conn., Aug. 17.—A man answering Almy's description, as well as that of White, the Southford suspect, was in South Manchester last night and suddenly disappeared. The people are much excited and talk of a scouting party.

BENNINGTON'S BATTLE MONUMENT.

Everything in Readiness for the Celebration on Wednesday.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 17.—This city is one complete wave of bunting and flags in anticipation of the dedication of the Bennington battle monument and the centennial celebration of admission to the Union of the state of Vermont, which occurs this week. Midway in the city stands the triumphal arch. This arch bears on its eastern side the motto, "1701 Will the legacy of Vermont's first century is her noble daughter—1800." On the opposite side are the following: "1777 You see the red coats, they are ours, or Molly Stark sleeps a widow tonight," being the historic words uttered by General Stark as he rallied his men to fight on the field of Bennington. The other side of the arch has this inscription: "Peace hath her victories no less renowned than war—1891."

Among the prominent guests will be Colonel W. S. Vezey and wife, Colonel A. F. Walker and wife, General R. A. Alger and wife, General A. S. Webb, R. B. Roosevelt and wife, ex-Governor Rice, of Massachusetts. The presidential party will arrive Tuesday evening and will be entertained by General J. G. McCullough. Hon. Thos. Phelps, orator of the day, and wife are already in town.

The structure is an oblisk, built of native stone and faced with Sand Hill dolomite. Above the Tablet base to the capstone, is 301 feet 10¼ inches.

A Man and a Woman Drowned.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 17.—Four persons—two women and two men—started for Jamestown in a rowboat. The boat struck a rock and sank. Annie McCormick, of Providence, and Eugene Maloney were drowned. The woman's skull was found to be fractured, and an autopsy will be held. Maloney's body has not been recovered. The other couple were rescued by a passing sailboat.

International Labor Congress.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 17.—The international labor congress opened in Brussels. Mrs. Aveling was present and also numerous delegates from English trade unions. Messrs. Verrycken and Volders, in behalf of the Belgians, extended an earnest welcome. They urged the union of all socialist bodies, a sentiment that was heartily applauded.

Mr. Foster Visits the President.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Secretary Foster left Washington to visit President Harrison at Cape May Point, N. J. When he left he was undecided whether he would return to Washington before he joined the president on his trip to the Bennington (Vt.) celebration.

Joined the Squadron.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 17.—The United States ship Atlanta has arrived here and joined the other vessels of the white squadron at anchor in the harbor. The fleet will probably sail for Boston tomorrow.

The President Attended Divine Worship.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 17.—President Harrison and Postmaster General Wanamaker attended services at Beadle Memorial church, Cape May Point.

CASUALTIES.

A List of Accidents in Which Lives Were Lost.

CARNIE, Ills., Aug. 17.—A revolting tragedy occurred at Texas City, nineteen miles north of here. Mike Weitzel was in company with Mary Ballentine, on the northbound freight train. When near Texas City young Otis Johnson, aged seventeen, resented some remarks made by the woman. Weitzel knocked Johnson prostrate with a slungshot. Johnson got up and made a slash at Weitzel with a knife, cutting a deep gash across the abdomen, disembowelling Weitzel. The woman then picked up a hatchet and struck Johnson a fearful blow in the face. Both Johnson and Weitzel have since died.

Another Aeronaut Lost His Life.

SYRACUSE, N. Y., Aug. 17.—Professor De Ive, the noted aeronaut and parachute leaper, was drowned while giving an exhibition at Pleasant Beach, one of the pleasure resorts on Onondaga lake. From 10,000 to 20,000 persons witnessed the catastrophe. The body has not been recovered. The professor was from Manchester, England.

Down Two Thousand Feet.

TACOMA, W. T., Aug. 17.—Woodhull and Johnson, aeronauts, have been giving exhibitions here. Yesterday afternoon Woodhull was in the air when he met with an accident. When about 2,000 feet up he began to do trapeze acts. Suddenly he lost his hold and fell like a shot to the earth, a mangled mass.

Thrown Injured in a Railway Wreck.

LONDON, Aug. 17.—A serious railway accident is reported from Wales. A passenger train dashed into a special train loaded with volunteers between Pontypridd and Cardiff. The rear of the special train was wrecked and fifteen persons were injured, of whom some are expected to die.

Killed by Lightning.

VANDALIA, Ills., Aug. 17.—During the progress of a storm Friday a nephew of State Senator Farmer, of this city, took shelter under a tree with his team when a bolt of lightning struck the tree, killing the young man and both horses instantly.

Struck by an Electric Car.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 17.—A carriage containing Frank L. Gunn, his wife, Mrs. Preston and a child was struck by an electric car at the corner of Main and Union streets. Mr. Gunn was fatally injured and the others badly bruised.

Injured by the Elevator Falling.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—By the falling of a freight elevator at Libby, McNeil & Libby's canning establishment on the stock yards, William Clark and John Budwasch were fatally injured and John Gilbert seriously hurt.

Cottages, Fruit and Crops Destroyed.

HASTINGS, Neb., Aug. 17.—During one of the worst electrical storms known for years, which raged furiously last night, rain fell in sheets for hours. Hundreds of people took refuge in their cellars in anticipation of a cyclone. Fully twenty cottages in different parts of the city were wrecked, and immense damage was done to fruit and crops.

CHASING A MURDERER.

The Sheriff Drove Two Horses to Death in Pursuit.

THE OFFICIAL SECURE IN HIDING.

A Wanderer of Trio Whose Mission Was Robbery—Confronted by the Owner of a House He Was Shot Down—Two of the Gang Under Arrest.

LATROBE, Pa., Aug. 17.—Samuel Reese, an old soldier residing on the outskirts of Ebensburg, was shot dead on Thursday evening about 6 o'clock. Elmer Bruner, who has so far eluded the police, is the murderer.

The shot was heard by George McCoy, one of Reese's neighbors, who soon after saw a man, woman and boy driving like mad away from the house. The sheriff of Cambria county and Officer Cannon, of this place, were soon in pursuit of them.

Horses Driven to Death.

The officers drove a fine pair of grays all night, and on Friday morning they changed horses. The grays died from overexertion. Bruner managed to trade horses near Ebensburg and reached Pittsburg. There he sold his second horse and rig for nine dollars and disappeared.

The boy was arrested at Latrobe. He is Charlie Bruner, son of William Bruner, a painter, of Pittsburg. He is thirteen years old and has confessed. Policeman Cannon, who followed them to Pittsburg, has arrested the woman in the case on the advice and brought her here. She is now in jail.

They had been calling on friends in Pittsburg, and were returning home when arrested. On the way here she broke down and told the same story as detailed by the boy. The woman was taken before Squire Geiger here and made affidavit as follows:

The Woman's Confession.

"Bruner, the boy and I had been over east of Ebensburg, and on our return down toward the house of old man Reese, the loneliness of the place and the apparent absence of the occupant suggested that no one was at home.

"Elmer said he would go through the house, and possibly he would find something of value. He told me to hold the horse, and placed the boy, Charlie, on guard on the outside. Elmer had hardly entered the front door when old man Reese came up from the rear with his dinner bucket in his hand.

Shot the Old Man.

"Reese entered at the back door, meeting Elmer in the hall. Reese ordered Elmer out and the latter refused to go. Reese then started toward a gun which stood in the corner, but had hardly made a move when Elmer whipped out his revolver and fired, the old man falling dead at the back door.

"The boy, as soon as he heard the shot, entered the house and he and Elmer went through the house, finding nothing of value except a few trinkets which we threw away along the road in our flight.

The Murderer in Hiding.

"We left the boy at Latrobe and Elmer and I went on to Pittsburg, passing Greensburg and Irwin. Elmer is now securely hidden. This I swear to be a true statement."

The woman said Bruner told his parents of the shooting. They live on Center avenue, Pittsburg. On Friday evening he went to the Academy of Music and sat the side Detective Sol Coulson and another Pittsburg detective. She refused to give any clew to Bruner's whereabouts.

Stealing Was Their Trade.

The woman is known as Ann Jackson. She is a wretched looking hag, showing dissipation. She says she was brought up at Johnstown, and when three years old left her parents and never hear from home. At the age of seventeen, three years ago, she married Elmer. She says she, the boy, and Bruner have been traveling about for several months pilfering and horse stealing.

The Pittsburg officers have arrested a woman who kept house for Reese until three weeks ago. It was thought she was she woman in the case, and it was reported that she knew of some pension money Reese was to have received.

It seems to have been a mistake. Inspector McAleese had heard of the sale of the horse for nine dollars, and worked hard to catch Bruner, but has not succeeded.

A Girl Poisons Her Family.

WILMINGTON, Del., Aug. 17.—Agnes J. Jackson, a girl of sixteen, living at St. George's, has been arrested for poisoning her mother, half sister and half brother on Friday. While making some biscuits she poured a box of rat poison in the dough. After eating the biscuits they became violently ill and there is little chance of their recovery. Agnes left her home on the arrival of a physician, but was soon captured.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Henry Lagate, the prime mover in the scheme for municipal coal yards, has received a letter from Master Workman T. V. Powderly in which he indorses the plan.

James Boyce, a prominent bituminous coal operator and mine owner of Baltimore, died at his residence in Towson, in the sixty-ninth year of his age.

Mrs. Lavinia Munger, widow of the late Calvin Munger, of Saratoga, died suddenly at Asbury Park of heart failure. She was eighty-two years of age.

Philip P. Dunn, who was an officer in the embarrassed Star Rubber company and Trenton (N. J.) China company, died at Spring Lake. He was for twenty years president of the First National bank, of Trenton, but resigned after the financial crash here.

The Rev. Sam Jones addressed a large crowd at Prohibition park, Staten Island, and denounced the fashionable sins of New York people.

William L. Scruggs, United States minister to Venezuela, who is now in Washington, believes that country will soon be willing to negotiate a reciprocity treaty with this government.

Wholesale removals in the federal offices at Baltimore are recommended by Commissioner Roosevelt for violations of the civil service law.

A Contractor's Disappearance.

ATTLEBORO, Mass., Aug. 17.—George L. Titus, a prominent contractor of this town, has disappeared, and it is feared that he has taken his life.

Up Goes the Price of Flour.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 17.—In consequence of the recent advance in wheat local millers have put up the price of flour seventy-five cents.

Death of a Famous Wrestler.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—Matsada R. Sorakichi, the celebrated Japanese wrestler, died in this city Saturday night of consumption, aged 33 years old. Sorakichi was one of the foremost wrestlers of the time and in certain styles of wrestling had no peer. He came to this country several years ago from Japan, where he was looked upon as a phenomenon and was called the strongest man in the world. His first public appearance was in this city in a match with Duncan C. Ross and he subsequently met Michael Leon, Miller and all the other prominent wrestlers of the country.

Fast Bicycle Riding.

MILWAUKEE, Aug. 17.—Two thousand people witnessed the finish of the annual road race of the Milwaukee wheelmen from Waukesha. The distance was sixteen and two-thirds miles. C. W. Price, of Milwaukee, who had a handicap of seven minutes at the start, finished first in 58m. 30s. W. Breckenridge second, E. C. Prachthauser third and A. C. Morrison fourth. These four take the principal prizes.

The National Regatta.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 17.—Nearly all of the oarsmen who are to participate in the national regatta to be held here Tuesday and Wednesday have arrived in the city. The indications point to a grand struggle in the senior singles, in which the best amateurs of the country will take part, and great interest is being taken in this race.

Will Try to Beat Maud S's Record.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Aug. 17.—The stallion Nelson trotted a mile in 2:08 flat. The great stallion was accompanied by a runner. His owner is greatly pleased with the performance, and now believes that his horse will beat the record of Maud S before he leaves Independence.

Chicago's Grand Trotting Meeting.

CHICAGO, Aug. 17.—One of the greatest trotting meetings Chicago has ever had will open at Washington park today. All the star drivers, trotters and pacers of the east are here, together with a share of the eastern horses and experts.

Michael Harkins Free.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 17.—A cable message which reached this city gladdened the heart of Mrs. Michael Harkins, of 1,926 North Second street. The message was from the governor of Portland prison, England, and said, "Michael Harkins left Southampton on Norddeutcher Wednesday, free." This tells of the release of a man who was sentenced in 1887 to fifteen years' imprisonment at hard labor, having been convicted of being concerned in a dynamite plot. The release of Harkins will cause much joy among those interested in the Irish movement.

Damage by Storm.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 17.—This city was treated to a deluge such as has rarely been experienced. One and a quarter inches of water fell in fifteen minutes. The deluge was accompanied by a heavy thunder storm. The telephone lines were burned out and all over the city, and several houses were struck and greatly damaged by lightning. The house of Ben Williams at Independence, was struck and set on fire, being damaged to the extent of $2,000. Williams and his wife were rendered unconscious for a short time and barely escaped with their lives.

Father and Son Lynched.

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., Aug. 17.—A special to The Age-Herald from Cullman says: Four days ago Monroe Evans and his son John were arrested at Baileytown, charged with shooting Pierce Mooney last May. They were taken before a local justice who found no cause over without bail. They were sent to a neighbor's house and put under guard. About midnight a crowd overpowered the guard and hanged the two men to a tree. Mooney had recovered from his wounds and there was no excuse for the lynching.

The Plattdeutche Picnic.

NEW YORK, Aug. 17.—The eighteenth annual festival of the Plattdeutsche Volksfest Verein was commenced at the Union Hill Schuetzen park Sunday. Over thirty thousand people from Hudson county, this city and Brooklyn attended. The festival will continue until Wednesday.

A Volcano in Operation.

ELLENSBURG, Wash., Aug. 17.—Parties just in from Moonstash mines say that an active volcano was in operation thirty-five miles southeast of the mines. They say it gives a great light. They were close enough to see lava running down the sides.

A Spotter Stabbed.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 17.—Thomas Halstead, a "spotter" employed by the Law and Order league, was badly wounded by the drivers of beer wagons, which he had been spotting. Halstead received a bad knife wound over the eye and one on the head.

Ex-Congressman Scott Much Better.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 17.—Mr. William L. Scott's condition is so much improved that he spent a portion of the day with his family in the yard. He expects to go to New York next week, where he will stay until he fully recovers.

The Weather.

Fair to partly cloudy, further increase in temperature and with light showers in the morning.

FLOATING TO THE GULF.

AN ECHO OF THE ANDREWS RAILROAD RAID IN 1862.

How Wood and Wilson, Two of the Doomed Raiders, Broke Jail in Atlanta and Escaped to the Union Lines Off the Florida Coast.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

THE escape of eight Union soldiers of the Andrews railroad raiding party, Oct. 16, 1862, by breaking from the jail at Atlanta, where they were held to await execution as spies, was of a piece with the daring adventure that got them into the toils—the capture of a locomotive in the center of a Confederate camp in April of that year.

They had effected the seizure of the engine by stealing from the Union lines into the enemy's territory disguised as citizens, and having been taken in their borrowed plumage were condemned as spies. Eight died on the scaffold in June of 1862, and while the remainder, fourteen in number, lay in jail under military guard expecting the same dismal fate, the "telegraph" whispered that noose was preparing for them. As they looked for no mercy at the hands of their captors they were not at all morbid about showing the tender attributes, for they were in the heart of the Confederacy, fourteen against the million in arms between them and their own kind.

So one afternoon while the jailers were being fed under the personal direction of the jailer—a Union man at heart—they seized and gagged the unsuspecting man, snatched his keys away and unlocked all the apartments, freeing another batch of unfortunates, then ran to the military guards, overpowered and beat and stabbed them with their own weapons, vaulted a 10-foot fence and took to their heels in the open country. The reserve guard promptly turned out, and of the railroad raiders who had managed the affair eight got clear of the neighborhood on the jump.

The subsequent experiences of two of the latter in reaching some spot where the star spangled banner still waved, is told in this chapter substantially as given in the published narrative of one of the pair—"The Adventures of Alf Wilson" (National Tribune, Washington, publishers). The story will prove good reading for both "Yank" and "Johnny," and can hurt the feelings of none at this late day, not even those of the fellows who were outwitted by the runaways on their independent journey from Atlanta to the sea.

Wilson's companion adventurer was Mark Wood, a comrade of the same company, C, Twenty-first Ohio. They paired as chums before breaking jail, and leaped the fence together and fled to the woods. The comrades had had a bitter experience after the sad failure in April, in trying to escape north through the mountains of Tennessee, and this time concluded to try something on the line and make for the gulf. In their former attempt at escape they had nearly succeeded by floating on the Tennessee river, and with the persistence of adventurers cling to the hope that they could do better if luck gave them a second chance. They would find a river flowing south and seek the gulf.

After some narrow escapes from recapture by Confederate cavalry that scoured the country in pursuit, they took the north star—that old time friend of lost wanderers—for a guide and started southward, hoping to reach the Chattahoochee. They knew but little of the course of that river or of its destination, but would trust it to lead them to Union waters somewhere under the shining canopy. The first thing to do was to reach it. Safety demanded that they travel by night, that they were ragged and unkempt and would be objects of suspicion whenever seen.

The second night out they crossed a railroad, which confirmed their belief in the route chosen, and in overconfidence they sat down and ate up all their supplies.

The third night they passed through a cornfield and plucked a few ears to gnaw upon. The next night Wood, who was no better than an invalid, was obliged to crawl on his hands and knees. Wilson was discouraged by this, but heroically resolved not to desert his friend. At length when he found that they could not make another mile he heard the sound of running water, and it was an inspiration to both, and they pressed on and were soon on the bank of a broad stream flowing in the direction of the gulf.

Wilson gave their joy was unbounded and compares their sensations to those of the discoverers of the Pacific ocean and the Mississippi. It was a pathway to bring the wanderers home; it led to the sea where the old flag floated in indisputed triumph. They could have shouted their little strength away, but fortunately had in for fear of exposure. They followed down the current until they came to a boat chained to a tree. No time was lost upon discussions of the ethics of boat proprietorship; a stone soon smashed the connecting link between the craft and its last owner, and in a trice two highly tickled tramps were knocking their knees together and patting "jubas" with their bare feet as they glided away praying that they might never meet the victim of their larceny.

The fourth day hunger overcame their caution, and they tied up the boat and boldly applied at a planter's house for some supper, saying that they were Confederates on sick leave. A meal was prepared for them, and while they devoured it the planter talked glibly of the escape of the "engine thieves" from Atlanta prison. He declared that they all deserved hanging, while his guests dodged the point of his suggestive remarks by eating vociously and emptying the board, a remarkable feat for two sick men.

Even on the river traveling by day would have been risky, so they journeyed wholly by night, having frequent mishaps in the darkness. Once the skiff capsized on a ferryboat wire, but a fright and a good wetting were the only results. Again they floated into an immense cove and the boat thumped on the shore at all points, until Wood declared frantically that they had come to "the end of the river," but they probed around until the outlet was found. Next they encountered a mildlam and tried to shoot it with the usual experience, and kept on until they reached rapids, and the boat was drawn into a gorge from which they could not extricate it.

They reluctantly abandoned their faithful friend, and for three days clambered over desolate mountains, cheered only by the beating rays of the sun. Wood was so weak that his companion had to lead him. Their feet were bruised and cut on the stones and their sufferings altogether became nearly unbearable. Again they were about to give up the struggle when they saw in the distance a town that they supposed to be Columbus, Ga. From that point on they hoped to find the river free to the gulf.

A wide detour took them past the city, and on reaching the river again they stumbled upon a party of workmen constructing a Confederate ram. In the vicinity they found an old rowboat, which they confiscated, only to find it badly a-leak. But it floated them down stream into a nest of good skiffs moored along shore, and they quickly swapped for a better one. Just as they pushed off again the owner of the boats came in sight and began to express his opinions in strong language. Thinking that his anger was too lofty for such a little thing as a boat they determined to give him better excuse for it, and so cut all his boats adrift, and while he followed them down stream they rowed up against the current. The angry man got help, caught his boats and started in pursuit of the audacious robbers. Fortunately an island in the middle of the river enabled the runaways to dodge pursuit and turn back unseen, and go their way rejoicing.

The pair were now confident of reaching the gulf if they could hold out against hunger. This was becoming a serious thing. With strength to use the paddles they could make fifty miles a day. They could find no food along shore excepting corn. The river bottoms consisted of swamps and swampy forests, and in them snakes and alligators were abundant. The latter followed them like hounds and added to the fear. Finally, overcome by hunger, they left their boats and started in search of food. They secured a little and returned to find their boat had been carried off by others. "Now," says Wilson, "we fixed out ourselves the evils of boat stealing."

To add to their distress they saw that they were on the northern bank of another river flowing into the Chattahoochee, probably the Flint, and so could get no farther without a boat. They found a dry hummock and passed a woeful night. Hunger, with all its horrors, was preferable to being stranded in a swamp without means to continue their journey.

A day was passed wandering about the swamp, and at nightfall they saw a boat across the Chattahoochee. Some limbs and driftwood were spliced together with grapevines, to serve as a raft, and with this Wilson, half sunk in the water, managed to get across. To his joy the new boat was the best of all, and without a single qualm of conscience, save for the joke it would cause elsewhere, he confiscated it, took Wood on board and started full speed down the river.

When the current pressed again Wood remained behind to guard the boat while Wilson foraged the shore. He didn't get much that was edible, but finally found some fish and roasted them, and the problem of living was solved. Fish was abundant. Although compelled to devour it raw, they found an old rowboat, which they confiscated, only to find it badly a-leak. But it floated them down stream into a nest of good skiffs moored along shore, and they quickly swapped for a better one. Just as they pushed off again the owner of the boats came in sight and began to express his opinions in strong language. BOROUGH COUNCIL.

The Assessors Books Examined Last Evening.

The borough Council met in adjourned session last evening at eight o'clock. Besides the Mayor, Councilmen Runkle, Hegeman, Hammer, Needham and Scheibel were present.

The meeting was called for the purpose of examining the assessor's books and on motion of Mr. Hegeman the Council proceeded with the business of the evening.

Assessor Cooley said that he would be pleased to assist the Finance Committee with the work of examining the books and to answer any question they saw fit to ask in connection with the matter.

After the Council had examined the books, Mr. Hegeman reported that they were all right and moved that they be accepted as correct. The motion prevailed.

Mr. Needham introduced an ordinance to divide the borough into two election districts, the first to take in all that territory North-west of Emily street and the second that territory Southeast of the same thoroughfare. The ordinance was passed on its first and second readings and then laid on the table for the usual time, before its third reading and final passage.

The meeting then adjourned.

—A stage load of Plainfielders went to Boynton Beach this morning to spend the day.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—There were several good trotting events on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue Saturday afternoon.

—The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission chapel will hold its regular weekly meeting in the Sunday-school room of the chapel this evening.

—The annual outing of Y. M. C. A. workers at Boynton Beach will take place Friday of this week, Aug. 21st. All interested are requested to apply at once at the association rooms.

—A horse belonging to a farmer named Titus became frightened while left standing on Somerset street this afternoon and ran away. The animal was caught before it succeeded in wrecking the wagon.

—Every known form of poison has been tried on the "rose-chafer" at the State Experiment Station, and they have apparently relished and survived everything except hot water of a temperature of 120 degrees.

—The residents of New Brunswick are clamoring for a new bridge over the Raritan River at Albany street. They claim that the present structure is not safe, and are urging the Board of Freeholders to pass a resolution to build a new one.

—The next State Convention of the Society of Christian Endeavor will be held at Newark, and if the First church can be secured the date will be October 23d, 24th and 25th, beginning on Friday evening and concluding on Sunday, which is entirely a new departure.

—When the people now at the Summer resorts get back home how they will appreciate home comforts all the more. It is a good thing to go to a fashionable resort occasionally just to discover how miserably you may become there and how you will ache to get home again.

—One of the latest fads for a wedding gift is a rug on which the name will stand when the work is performed. In the corner is a silver plate on which the friend who presented it inscribes his name and the occasion of the gift, with the date, and the rug thus becomes an heirloom.

—How reconciling to "Jerseyites" to know that New York city is being besieged by extra large sized mosquitos. Possibly some Manhattanvillian has heard them singing "A life on the ocean wave," as they have paddled across the wash bowl on a raft, of matches and "worked" their lances.

—August 1st, was originally known as Lammas Day. An old encyclopaedia printed in 1742 says: It was so called because lambs then grew out of season, as being too big. Others derive it from a Saxon word signifying bread-mass, because on that day our forefathers made an offering of bread made with new wheat. This day tenants who formerly held lands of the Cathedral church, in York, were bound by their tenure to bring a lamb into the church at high mass.

—Plainfield is to be supplied with water pumped up from deep wells into a stand pipe or reservoir from which it is to be conducted by pipes through the town. This stand pipe is one hundred feet high and fifteen feet in diameter; this height will give sufficient force to the water in the pipes. Plainfield has a wonderful water reserve, in short, it is said the town is built on two "lake" separated by a stratum of very hard earth and rock. By drilling about twenty-five feet, the first lake is reached, whence is an abundant flow of water; then by drilling through this hard pan, a second lake is found which is an inexhaustible source of the purest, sparkling, cold water.—Rahway Union Democrat.

HUNG HIMSELF.

The Man Arrested for Horse Stealing Tired of Life.

Joseph H. Miller, the German arrested last Thursday night by Special Officer Dietz of Elizabeth, as a suspicious person, he having in his possession a horse believed to have been stolen, has confessed his guilt.

Miller says that he stole the horse from a man whom he worked for at Brooklyn, N. J. In extenuation of his offense he says that the man owed him money and that he knew no better way of getting it than by taking the horse.

Yesterday afternoon, while Lieutenant Peters was busily engaged at Police headquarters, his attention was drawn to an unusual sound proceeding from the room in which Miller was confined. On throwing open the door the Lieutenant was startled to find Miller suspended by the neck from a strap fastened to the cell door, the would-be suicide almost black in the face.

The Lieutenant severed the strap with a knife, and after a long time Miller was restored to his normal condition, and everything about him with which it was thought he could possibly harm himself taken from him. The strap Miller had used to fasten his trowsers about his waist.

The man to whom the horse belongs has been notified and is expected on today to prove his property.

THEY ALL PLAYED BALL.

IN GORGEOUS SUITS THEY SET THE PACE TO MUSIC.

One Player Sat on the Ball to Hold It.—Another Held It When He Got His Hands On It.—The Girls Greeted the Game With Great Applause.—The Basses Outplayed the Tenors.

That was a celebrated musical game of base ball played Saturday at Westfield between musical nines from the Westfield Musical Society.

The nine captained by Eugene G. Hanford was made up from the basses, while Capt. John W. Beebe's nine was selected from the tenors. The players said this game was unique, but he said, as Artemus Ward said about his army, they were all "captains."

Prof. Wiske, who strikes the tuning fork for the Musical Society when it gives its grand concerts, was the pitcher for the bassos, and "Gene" Hartford performed a like service for the basses.

The grand stand was filled with the elite of Westfield, who were bent on making the most of the occasion. The game was replete with fine play—horseplay, mostly, and the fair ones perched on the grand stand applauded the fine plays made by the players.

Prof. Wiske accidentally caught a fly ball, but he afterwards apologized for it, and atoned for the accident by giving the basses lots of bases on balls. Irving Love caught a good many balls as catcher and missed a good many more. John W. Beebe played a good game at first base, despite the fact that he got rattled whenever the ladies applauded him. S. Rice was a good player, but his suit was so padded that he looked like a perambulating bedtick. Lawyer James O. Cloud used to be a good ball-player, and he can hold the ball now when somebody throws up to him and puts it into his hands. Charles H. Day was natty, indeed, as he played, rigged out in the fatigue uniform of the Seventh regiment of which he is a member. He played good ball, too, and the women clapped their hands as they saw the spotless white trousers racing around the bases. Frank Rogers likewise played good ball and was so very attractive in his regulation suit that the women could not help applauding him. T. D. Bushnell walked upon the field arrayed most gorgeously. W. S. Hurst persisted in sending the ball away over into left field and played good ball generally. The girls greatly admired his abbreviated $1 trousers.

The basses were gorgeously arrayed. J. W. Sanson, Jr., called "Sawbones" by virtue of his oncoming diploma, was conspicuous by reason of his red and white stockings. Eugene Hanford was in a hurry to get the ball around, so he left home without his white coat properly sewed on his Scotch plaid cloth stockings, and they persisted in slipping down. Nevertheless, he played good ball. Clarence Howland was distinguished by the rapidity with which he moved his red, yellow and black stockings around the diamond. H. L. Brown was a very good shortstop for so long a man. When he could not catch a fly ball he managed to sit on it and thus keep it down. Robert Taylor played good ball, displaying on the regulation suit he wore. Bloodgood was made attractive by his bicycle pants and longshoreman's shirt. Charles B. Peddie was dressed like a civilian and was as sedate and prim as if he had been presiding over a Grand Army meeting. Robert Crosby looked natty in a Jersey bicycle suit. Andrew Smith, arrayed in bed-tick trousers and a coat of many colors, had difficulty in keeping his stove-pipe hat properly poised on his bewigged head. Will Sanson was the umpire.

The score by innings has it:

Bassos	0	3	7	0	4	1	8	0	4—27
Tenors	1	1	2	6	2	8	2	3	0—25

The players and their positions were as follows:

CRICKET SATURDAY.

The Plainfield Club Defeats a Paterson Club.

The St. George Cricket Club of this city played against the Paterson Cricket Club on Saturday, on the ground of the former corner Giraud and Willow avenues, North Plainfield, and defeated the visitors by the score appended. The game was well played, the home club showing up in splendid form in the bowling and fielding. The Paterson's are a noted club having lost but one match in the league series this season, and they were completely surprised by the brilliant playing of the St. George's, they having the impression of an easy victory before them when they struck Plainfield. The eight o'clock train took them away a sadder and wiser lot, and the next time Plainfield's Cricketers journey to Paterson they will meet the strongest team in this State, for Paterson will endeavor to wipe off the stain on her escutcheon. Extensive repairs are being made to all the bridges along the line of the Delaware River Railroad.

A wire rope belt, 2,000 feet long, is being made at the Trenton Iron Company's works for a coal mine in the Lehigh Valley. The belt has twelve interlaced strands.

The sixth annual re-union of the survivors of the Ninth New Jersey Veteran Volunteers will be held at Flemington on Thursday, September 17. The command will be received and entertained by the Ladies' Relief Corps of Flemington, whose guests it will be.

Professor George B. Merriman, of Rutgers College, has resigned the chair of mathematics to accept a professorship in the University of Vermont. Professor Robert Prentiss, until recently of Johns Hopkins, and connected with the Naval office at Washington, succeeds Professor Merriman.

Philip P. Dunn, one of the most prominent members of the Society of Friends in New Jersey, died yesterday at Spring Lake, in his sixty-seventh year. His death follows closely on a series of financial crashes that involved his good name. He was president of the First National Bank of Camden, and recently resigned because of the failure of the Star Rubber Company, Trenton China Company, Central Rubber Selling Company and several other concerns, in which he was financially interested. He became insane.

New Jersey's Highest Peaks.

An enthusiastic New Jersey geologist has just finished a compilation of high points in the State that will interest every native Jerseyman. Sussex county holds the honor of the State's highest eminence. It is High Point, in the Kittatinny Mountains, and rises to an elevation of 1,804 feet above sea level. The highest point in the highlands, three miles south of Vernon, is 1,496. Lake Hopatcong, near High Point, is recorded at 1,570 feet. Other high points in the State, the summit of Port Jervis turnpike, on the Blue Mountains, 1,291 feet; Round Pond, Kittatinny Mountains, 1,300 feet; summit of Allamuchy Mountains, 1,269 feet. Lake Hopatcong's surface is only 925 feet above sea level, while Greenwood Lake is but 625 feet. The summit of Bowling Green, Morris county, is 1,291 feet high. The Falls of the United States survey station on Mt. Olive is 1,151 feet above the sea. The summit of Bearfoot Mountain in Passaic county is another high point, being 1,490 feet high. The mountain on the Jersey side of the Water Gap is 1,456 feet high, and Mt. Motepinoke is 1,160 feet.

To-morrow's Game.

The rumor that soon spread around town last evening that the Norwich team had cancelled their game is reported untrue. In reply to a telegram sent to Norwich last evening, Secretary Dumont of the Norwich club said that his men would be here on the 16 a. m. train from New York on Wednesday, and sent on the following as the batting order:

Blansfield, 1 b.; Patchen, c.; Murphy, l. f.; O'Connell, 3b.; Long, s. s.; PonLee, r. f.; Moon, c. f.; Fenkel, 2 b.; Sullivan, p.

The Crescents will be as follows: Jones, Lafferty, Tierney, Keeler, McIndoe, Hammell, Holly, Lee, Bonner.

A Lineman's Sad Fate.

A lineman in the employ of the Western Union Telegraph Company while at work on the embankment of the Passaic River fell from the top of a pole sixty-five feet in height and was instantly killed. So far it has been impossible to ascertain his name.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

A $2,000,000 Fire.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Aug. 18th. (Special.)—A fire which consumed six blocks of the business portion of the city, occurred here last night. The loss is estimated at about $2,000,000.

Mt. Bethel Notes.

The bridge at Stirling is all complete and ready for travel. The neighbors seem well pleased.

Paul Wack, at the Highland House, is very sick and under the care of Dr. P. J. Zeglio, of Mt. Bethel.

Contractor John C. Cooper was awarded the contract for building a new bridge at Gladstone, over Apgar's brook.

At the road sale at Bound Brook Hill, Frederick Kirch was the successful man, his bid being $68.75 for the whole hill, which is about three-quarters of a mile long.

Last Friday, the Freeholders sold the bridge at Millington. Thomas Allen, of Waterloo, got the stone work at $5.50 per yard, and a Paterson firm the iron work for $1,650 for a low truss bridge.

Water Turned on.

Yesterday at the handsome residence of N. P. T. Finch of Netherwood Heights through the efforts of Carney Bros., sanitary plumbers, the Plainfield Water Supply Company tapped under pressure the first tap that introduced water in a private residence in this city. The President, Secretary and others present were delighted. The introduction of water undoubtedly makes Netherwood Heights the ideal spot of New Jersey. This handsome residence with its winding pathways, beautiful terrace, elegant tennis courts, magnificent scenery, its pure and wholesome water supply, indeed makes it one of the beautiful homes of New Jersey.

A Painful Injury.

Sunday afternoon, while L. B. Miller and son of Cranford were out driving, and when near Branch Mills, midway between Winfield and Westfield, the horse suddenly became frightened at the body of a wagon lying beside the road and ran away.

Before the horse had gone far in its mad flight the vehicle was upset and Mr. Miller and his son thrown to the roadway, Mr. Miller receiving a bad injury to his wrist, his son escaping all injury.

The horse ran for nearly two miles, when it became entangled in its harness and was easily captured. The animal was badly injured.

Dress Reform.

Dress reform receives a great impulse from Chautauqua, and the new crusade has the hearty endorsement of Miss Frances E. Willard, who has wheeled the whole W. C. T. U. in favor of the movement. Hereafter little figures of the Venus de Milo will doubtless replace the white ribbon. In an address recently Miss Willard said: "Death like, they, dangling in the air with her fingers the outline of a woman's waist squeezed into the shape of a sand-hour glass, "this line has filled more graves than whiskey." The great audience in the Amphitheatre applauded her to the echo.

Catholics in New Jersey.

The third church census bulletin, just issued by Dr. H. K. Carroll, of North Plainfield, contains the statistics of the Roman Catholic church. The communicants in New Jersey numbered 222,976, with 76 priests and 76 church edifices, valued at $6,050,582. There are 191 places of worship, with a seating capacity of about one hundred thousand. These do not include twenty-seven halls used by as many organizations.—Ex.

At Dunellen.

On Sunday Aug. 16th the services at the Church of the Holy Innocents (Episcopal) of Dunellen were unusually interesting. The music added greatly to the attractiveness, being rendered by a quartette, the members of which were evidently under superior musical training.

Next Sunday the same choir will give a choral service to which all are invited. Services at 3:30 p. m.

Injured While at Work.

A truck driver named William Kelly yesterday morning while unloading his truck at Westfield was in some unaccountable way struck on the head by a large piece of iron and was injured so badly that it was rumored that he died this morning.

—Peaches are coming into market, but they are of the forced variety, and consequently are prematurely ripe. They are a great many of this kind this year, thousands of baskets having been picked in the orchards of Hunterdon county, and put on the market during the past week. There will be very few first-class peaches in the market much before the first of September.

Died.

Original American Writers.

The international copyright law has given rise to speculation as to whether the gain would be all on the side of the British author in the workings of this law. It certainly will not. America is to be as great in literature as in commerce and political power.

Already we have authors that are purely and originally American. One of these is the unique Chicago poet, Eugene Field, with a reputation on both sides of the Atlantic. There, too, is Marie Wilkins, whose work is like a Meissonier picture. As a writer for children and young people Kate Douglas Wiggin has been pronounced the coming woman. The field she has chosen is one of the strongest and richest to be worked in literature. None but a downright genius can be a successful writer for young people.

The writers named have drawn nothing from English patterns in literature. Their work is as purely American as their own birthright. It is certainly equal to anything by living British writers of this generation, and has more force and originality than almost any British composition now put upon the market.

There, too, is the novelist-moralist, E. W. Howe, whose style is as strong, sweet and wholesome as the wind that blows across his own prairies. When his first novel appeared Frazier's Magazine (British) pronounced it "the greatest American novel." All his books abound in quaint, epigrammatic sayings, which it will do the British cousin good to read. They are such as this, from his latest work:

"There are many people who join churches as they join lodges—to have a warm place where they may spend idle time and meet others."

What Woman Has Gained.

In a late number of the Women's Journal, Henry B. Blackwell sums up the gains, legal and social, that women have made in the United States in the present generation. The gains would have been still greater than they are, in Mr. Blackwell's judgment, only for two causes—one in the north, the other in the south. The causes are the foreigner and the negro. As for the foreign immigrants, he says, will have to die and be born over again before they can rise to the American conception of human rights and duties.

In spite of these granite walls that have barred her way, however, woman has won this much:

Women have attained in the United States constitutionally, by the fourteenth amendment, an express guaranty of citizenship. "All persons born or naturalized in the United States" are declared to be "citizens of the United States, and of the states in which they reside."

Twenty-four states have conceded the principle of women suffrage by making women voters in school elections; three states have given women the right to vote on liquor licenses; Kansas has given women suffrage in municipal elections, and Wyoming, after twenty-one years of experience as a woman suffrage territory, has given women full suffrage and political equality.

In a majority of the states important legal changes in the status of wives, mothers and widows have greatly modified the legal subjection of women in marriage.

In the primary schools girls and boys stand every where on a footing of equality, and a majority of American colleges and universities are now open to women.

In skilled labor women are becoming free to earn an independent livelihood. Trades and professions are steadily opening to them. The social stigma against the married women is passing away. Young women no longer feel compelled to marry; they are no longer absolutely dependent before and after marriage upon fathers or husbands. Social standards are changing. A larger conception of womanhood is in the public mind. "Wider spheres of usefulness are viewed with satisfaction," even by the most conservative.

Aluminum is down to fifty cents a pound already. Likewise an aluminum boat has been built and successfully launched in Zurich, Switzerland. It is only twenty feet long and will be exhibited at the Frankfort marine exhibition merely as a miniature of the ship of the future. It is run by a two horse power naphtha engine, and its hull, screw and machinery are all made of aluminum. The little craft is entirely successful from every point of view. There is all reason to believe that we who now live will behold the ushering in of the age of aluminum. A beautiful shining age it will be, too; better than the fabled golden age.

The pity of it is that the missionaries cannot civilize and Christianize the Indian without the different denominations falling on one another tooth and nail and quarreling in a way suggestive of anything but a Christian spirit. The result will be perhaps that the government will be obliged to take the education of the Indian children altogether into its own hands and make the instruction secular.

The Chicago Tribune advocates with enthusiasm asphalt pavements for city streets. Granite pavements will do where hauling is heaviest, but the wagons in this case should be compelled by law to have tires on the wheels at least four inches wide. The attractiveness of Washington is due in great part to its nice, clean, asphalt streets, the Tribune says.

"The publication of Sunday newspapers is a sin," said Bishop Merrill at Ocean Grove, "and the reporters now before me are committing a sin."

A BIG BOOM FOR BLAINE

Pennsylvania Republicans Will Probably Indorse Him.

SENATOR QUAY AT HARRISBURG

Chris Magee Not There—Delegates Gathering for the Keystone State Convention, Which Meets Tomorrow—Gossip of the Candidates.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 18.—Delegates to the state Republican convention Wednesday are arriving from every quarter. The candidates are all here with the exception of General Gregg, who will remain away at the request of General Gobin, John Taylor, collector of taxes of Philadelphia, and soldier friends to pilot his craft to victory. Everything seems to point to the nomination of Price for state treasurer and Gregg for auditor general. Friends of Senator Mylin are disappointed at the sudden turn of affairs, and charge the newspapers with trying to create a sentiment against the latter's family. Senator Mylin is reticent and refuses to discuss the situation other than to assert that he is in the fight to win and will not retire under any circumstances.

Morrison Is Hopeful.

Probably the most hopeful candidate is John W. Morrison, who feels sure of succeeding State Treasurer Boyer. He came in from Pittsburg, and at once made it known that he was going to win. He relies upon the support of his soldier friends and the Pittsburg delegation to capture the nomination.

Senator Quay Present.

Senator Quay reached here last evening from Philadelphia, and soon after his arrival met a few friends in his rooms at the Commonwealth. Chris Magee will not come to this convention, it is said, and his friends are at sea. Senator William Flinn is chairman of the Pittsburg delegation, and Sheriff McCleery, of Allegheny, will be named Magee's substitute. The chairman of Lebanon, will place General Gregg in nomination, and A. C. Robertson, of Allegheny, will nominate Captain Morrison.

Elton Brewer, of Erie, will champion Price's cause. Speaker Thompson will be named by Representative Hays, of Venango, and Senator M. S. Quay has not yet selected his spokesman in the convention. Ex-Representative Harry Hall, of Mercer, is slated for permanent chairman of the convention. The temporary chairman will probably be General Frank Reeder, of Easton.

Blaine for '92.

The convention will undoubtedly adopt resolutions indorsing Blaine for president in 1892. There is more talk about the probable action of the convention with respect to the Blaine boom in this state than of the makeup of the ticket.

Unless the present programme is changed—and there seems no probability of such a thing happening—a resolution will be adopted declaring most emphatically for Blaine for the presidency, and placing Pennsylvania squarely and unequivocally in line for the Maine statesman.

Favored by Mr. Quay.

Senator Quay does not attempt to conceal the fact that he favors Mr. Blaine above all others, but he cannot be induced to say that he is for him. That the convention shall come out flat footed upon the question of the presidency.

The stature of statesmanship of the state committee may cause a little friction. Representatives James Fruit, of Mercer, and C. Wesley Thomas, of Philadelphia, are candidates for state chairman.

THE FLURRY IN WHEAT.

Great Activity All Over the World in the Market.

CHICAGO, Aug. 18.—The wheat pit yesterday was the theater of about as intense excitement and as violent fluctuations as were ever witnessed on the board of trade.

Before the echoes of the opening bell had died away December wheat had sold at $1.09 and $1.11. In a minute or so it went to $1.13¾, broke to 1.10¾, and then on another wild surge touched $1.14—all this in the first twenty minutes.

Everybody was frantic.

Old traders say they never have never known such wild excitement and such wide and rapid fluctuations.

A Wild Day at New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The wheat market yesterday was wild, erratic, violent and fluctuating. Before the opening gong sounded in the Produce Exchange there was evident uneasiness among the traders and brokers. It was said at the close that the German government had issued a decree allowing wheat to be delivered on rye contracts, to supply the demand of its army.

No Reduction in the Duties.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—It is reported that the government will reduce the income tax on certain classes in order to alleviate the distress arising from the Russian rye prohibition. At a cabinet council held yesterday it was decided that no necessity exists for a reduction of the duties on corn.

"Emperor, Give Us Bread!"

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—The corn duties agitation is giving rise to all sorts of popular cheap literature on the subject. Among the poems is one entitled, "Emperor, Give Us Bread!" The police have seized all the copies.

On Trail of Freese's Murderer.

BELVIDERE, N. J., Aug. 18.—The negro who is believed to have murdered Theodore W. Reese in a field near Hope, N. J., will probably be arrested soon. He was seen in Danville, Warren county, N. J., where he separated from his white man who was with him and who is thought also to have taken part in the murder.

Young New's Love an Actress.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Harry S. New, son of John C. New, editor of the Indianapolis Journal and United States consul general to London, will be married today to Catherine McLean, late of Kate Castleton's "Faust Up to Date" company. She will leave the stage.

Row at an Oswego Caucus.

OSWEGO, N. Y., Aug. 18.—A ward caucus at Oswego resulted in a row between the Democratic factions in the ward. Chairman Halleran used abusive language toward Mayor Kehoe and was knocked down. The ballot box was kicked over.

Fell with the Balloon.

DENVER, Aug. 18.—Mr. and Mrs. Sherman Bunn, a young couple who had determined to take their bridal tour in a balloon, fell with the busted balloon over a mile at Manhattan beach. By a miracle neither was hurt.

GEORGE JONES' WILL.

Disposition of the Late Newspaper Owner's Great Estate.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—The will of George Jones, of the New York Times, has been filed for probate, given in a long document. It was executed June 19 last and names his son, Gilbert E. Jones, his son-in-law, Henry L. Dyer, and Augustus Smith executors. There was no charitable bequests. The widow, Sarah M. Jones, is to have one house, 30 West Thirty-seventh street, for life and an annuity of $15,000. The residue of the estate, including the decedent's forty-six shares of The Times stock, to be held in trust pending the life of Mrs. Jones, and the income to be equally divided between decedent's four children, Gilbert E. Jones, Mrs. Mary Dyer, Mrs. Emma Ireland and Mrs. Elizabeth Lowell. On the death of Mrs. Jones, the widow, the estate, except The Times stock, is to be converted into money and divided into four parts, Gilbert and Mary each to get one-fourth and eleven shares of Times stock absolutely, one-fourth of the money and eleven shares of The Times are to be held in trust for each of the other two daughters, Emma Ireland, Mrs. and George Jones Dyer, grandsons, each get a share of Times stock on meeting their twenty-fifth year.

On the death of Emma her share in the trust estate goes to Gilbert and Mary or their issue in equal shares, but they are to pay Emma's daughter, Josephine G. Wing, or other issue, $100,000. Elizabeth's interest in the trust is also disposed of in the same way.

The son Gilbert and son-in-law Dyer are given full power to vote at elections of The Times association upon all stock held in trust by the executors.

Trouble Among Good Spiritualists.

ONSET BAY, Mass., Aug. 18.—A formal written notice has been served upon Mrs. Asa Roberts, of Rochester, N. Y., by the Onset Bay association, requesting that she leave the grounds of the association. Mrs. Roberts gave a seance in her cottage last Thursday to a party that included Mrs. Dr. Bland, of Washington, D. C.; M. H. Little, Glens Falls, N. Y.; Mrs. Little Wood and Mrs. F. B. Baker, of Topeka, Kan. Several of the ladies becoming hysterical as to some part of the seance made an examination and found a Miss Annie West, of Topeka, Kan., who had been posing as a spirit, secreted under a bed. Other evidences of fraud were found, and a report made to the officers of the association.

With the Presidents at Cape May.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 18.—President Harrison has appointed William O. Thomas, of Tennessee, consul at Bahia, Brazil; William H. Davis, postmaster at Middlebrough, Ky., vice H. C. Colson, resigned. In the case of Mary Elen, Washington, D. C., convicted of defrauding the United States government in a pension claim, the president will, for the present, take no action. Richard Cotts Shannon, minister to Central America, had a long conference with the president during the day.

Cloudburste on the Platte.

ST. JOSEPH, Mo., Aug. 18.—A special from Agency says a cloudburst in the vicinity of the junction of the Platte hundred and Two and the Platte rivers Sunday caused much loss of property. The river rose twenty feet in six hours and twelve or fifteen farms were ruined. Houses, barns and stock were swept away and crops ruined. No lives are known to be lost. Another cloudburst in the same place has occurred, but particulars have not yet been obtained.

Suicide Followed Arrest.

QUINCY, Ills., Aug. 18.—Hiram J. Baker, who has been here several weeks, and claimed to be one of the firm of Hiram J. Baker & Leo, New York importers, was sent to jail Saturday for attempting to defraud a hotel proprietor out of a board bill. Late Saturday night Baker cut his throat, from the effects of which he has since died.

He Was Present at Cronin's Trial.

BUFFALO, Aug. 18.—Dr. John Cronin, Sr., one of the most eminent practitioners of this city, claims to have accidentally been present at the trial of Dr. H. H. Cronin, of Chicago, by the "Triangle," at the Hotel Genesee, this city. He says Cronin had no part in the murder, who had walked into a trap and could not find the way out.

The International Labor Congress.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 18.—The international labor congress assembled at 10 a. m. in the Halle St. Michael. Seventy-eight reporters from various newspapers were present. Speeches were limited to ten minutes, and the second speech on each subject to five. Little was done beyond reading fraternal telegrams from various parts of the world.

A Walker Charged with Bigamy.

NORWALK, Conn., Aug. 18.—The champion ten hour walker of Connecticut, John J. Hampson, has been arrested at Norwalk on a charge of bigamy preferred by wife No. 2, who lives in Norwalk. His other wife is said to be the daughter of one of the city officials of Philadelphia.

Blaine Calls on Tracy.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 18.—Mr. H. L. Slater, of Webster, Mass., gave a dinner to Secretary Tracy last night at the Malvern, covers being laid for sixteen. Secretary Blaine called on Secretary Tracy on board the Dispatch in the morning.

Fired Upon by an Anarchist.

PARIS, Aug. 18.—While Deputy Lauer was leaving a meeting at the Cirque Hiver an Anarchist opened a revolver at him. The bullet grazed Lauer's coachman. The anarchist was arrested.

The Cashier Short $8,000.

News from Hayti.

PORT AU PRINCE, Aug. 18.—President Hippolyte has formed a new cabinet. Eighty Haytians were murdered by the fall of the St. Marc stone bridge near Port au Prince.

A Boy's Strange Suicide.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 18.—The body of a fourteen-year-old boy, who had strangled himself by death with a cord, has been found here. The clothing is marked "T. W."

Mr. Bulkeley at the Camp.

NIANTIC, Conn., Aug. 18.—Governor Bulkeley arrived at the National Guard camp yesterday afternoon, and, with his staff, was present at the dress parade.

Professor Koch Was Present.

BERLIN, Aug. 18.—The Institute, for Infectious Diseases was opened Monday in the presence of Professor Koch.

DEMENTED FROM DRINK

Theodore Roosevelt's Brother Elliott Wrecked by Rum.

HIS WIFE FEARED FOR HER LIFE.

He Is Now Confined in a Paris Asylum and Proceedings Have Been Begun to Secure His Removal to the Civil Service Commissioner Says.

NEW YORK, Aug. 18.—Elliott Roosevelt, brother of Civil Service Commissioner and ex-Assemblyman Theodore Roosevelt, is an inmate of an asylum for the insane, known as the Chateau Suresnes, near Paris, France, under the care of Dr. Saury. Upon the petition of Theodore Roosevelt, with the desire and approval of Elliott's wife, Mrs. Anna Hall Roosevelt, Judge O'Brien has appointed Peter B. Olney, Dr. Cyrus Edson and Edward V. Loew, commissioners, who with the aid of a sheriff's jury are authorized to take testimony and inquire into Elliott's sanity. The object of this proceeding is to have a committee of his person and estate appointed.

Notice of the proceeding is to be served upon Elliott Roosevelt, his wife and the doctor having him in charge, who is directed to bring with before the commissioners whenever required.

They Were Afraid of Him.

Elliott Roosevelt is the husband of Anna Hall Roosevelt, whom he married in December, 1888. They have three children, Elsa, six years old; Elliott, Jr., about one year old, and Hall Roosevelt, who was born in June last. Mr. Roosevelt and his wife went to Europe in July, 1890. His sister, Anna Roosevelt, joined them last January, remaining with them until the first of this month, when she and Mrs. Roosevelt sailed for the United States.

Upon the advice of several physicians they allowed Mr. Roosevelt to remain in the Chateau Suresnes, where he was taken on July 27 last. At that time his condition of mind and body was such that those with both his wife and sister became afraid of him.

What Theodore Says.

Theodore Roosevelt and his sister Anna make the affidavits upon which the commission in lunacy is granted. Theodore Roosevelt states that he believes that for two years past his brother has been of unsound mind, and that he is unfit to govern himself or manage his affairs. He owns real estate, bonds, stocks and other personal property in this city valued at $175,000.

Theodore declares that prior to Elliott's departure for Europe in July, 1890, he saw him habitually drinking, and believes that for at least a year before that time he was of unsound mind. "How far this was produced or aggravated by his habit of excessive indulgence in drink, or how far by other excesses, I am unable to state."

Very Apparently Insane.

Even before 1888, he says, he noticed that his brother was extremely excited and rambling in his conversation and unable to concentrate his mind upon any subject for any considerable length of time. For several years there seems to have been a general weakening of the power of self control, which weakening increased and became very marked. During the winter and spring of 1890, Theodore says, on almost every occasion when he saw his brother the latter was entirely irrational in his conversation and did not seem to appreciate what he said or did.

He Threatened to Kill Himself.

He was frequently violent and on three occasions threatened to take his own life. At times Theodore observed a complete failure of memory on the part of his brother, who would commence a story and then forget what he had started to say. During his stay in Europe Elliott was first placed in a private institution for treatment, and later at the Chateau Suresnes, where he still is.

He Drank Too Much.

Miss Anna Roosevelt in her affidavit states that for several years before Elliott left for Europe, and for more than a year previously whenever she saw him he appeared to be irrational.

She was under treatment in a private institution when she joined the family in the early part of this year. After he left the private institution he seemed to have lost all control of his actions. At last he became so violent that Mrs. Roosevelt was afraid to remain with him, and then he was placed in the asylum where he now is, and his wife returned to this city.

BAY STOLE $100,000.

A Clerk Charged with a Heavy Theft of Arkansas State Scrip.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 18.—J. L. Bay has been arrested on a warrant sworn out by State Treasurer Morrill, charging him with the larceny of $100,000 state scrip.

Bay is a clerk employed by the bondsmen to investigate the books of the defaulting ex-treasurer, Woodruff.

Scientists in Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—The first meeting of the great scientific body, the American Association for the Advancement of Science, will begin in this city on Wednesday. Already several hundred members from various sections of the country have arrived in Washington and three of the auxiliary societies have held meetings. These are the American Chemical society, the Association of Economic Entomologists and the Society for the Promotion of Agriculture. The sessions were devoted to reading and discussing scientific papers.

Virginia Farmers' Alliance.

RICHMOND, Aug. 18.—The state convention of the Farmers' Alliance is in session here. The leaders say no radical measures will be adopted. The Ocala platform will be indorsed and free coinage urged. Senator Peffer will be recommended for reelection. President Mann Page will advocate the creation of a state commission to regulate railroad freights.

They Can't Give the Exhibition.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—Superintendent Kimball, of the life saving service, says the story that the crew of the Crawfferry (Me.) station are to give an exhibition at Bar Harbor of rescuing men from a ship purposely wrecked is untrue. Permission for the crew to do so has been asked and has been denied by the treasury department.

Working at Lebanon Again.

LEBANON, Pa., Aug. 18.—The 13-inch train of the Lebanon iron works and the Lebanon rolling mills has commenced running. The sheet mill, forge and washer plant are running with a full force. Eight of the sixteen puddling furnaces at the Pennsylvania bolt and nut works are also fully manned.

GOVERNOR PATTISON ON THE STAND

He Speaks the Bardsley Investigators at Philadelphia.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 18.—The most prominent witness who appeared before the Bardsley investigation committee at their meeting yesterday was Governor Pattison. His appearance was a surprise to most of the members. The governor, however, stated that he had been unable to attend at the time he was requested to, and as he was in the city he wished to place himself at the disposal of the committee, as later on in the campaign he might not allow him to attend without great inconvenience.

As the opening of the session Governor Pattison, after being sworn, was informed that, according to the report presented to the committee by the mayor's experts, the Chestnut Street bank was accredited with having paid Bardsley interest on public money during the year 1889 to the extent of $714.60 and asked to explain it.

Governor Pattison replied that during 1887 to January, 1891, part of the time the bank had a deposit of public money, but never the pro rata it was entitled to. The bank was not a favored depository. Bardsley wanted 3 per cent. This rate he would not allow to be paid and Bardsley withdrew the certificate.

At the close of Governor Pattison's testimony he withdrew, and Expert Brown took the stand and resumed giving his testimony in relation to Bardsley's money loans. There were a great many of them, ranging from small sums to large ones, many of them to contractors and some to large politicians, friends, of them, however, mostly appearing to be paid.

Expert Brown then informed the committee of a number of banks to which H. H. Yeatman loaned the interest money intrusted to him by Bardsley amounting to $800,000. Expert Brown also testified that they had discovered that Bardsley had in his possession $1,000,000 in 1884, the proceeds of the sale of securities belonging to the sinking fund, which he had loaned out at interest.

After finishing with the expert's testimony for the present the committee went into executive session and decided to hold another public session Thursday and a private session tomorrow when they expect to receive the report of the expert account when they employed to go over the books of the Keystone National bank. They also decided to ask the district attorney to furnish them with certain letters in his possession relating to Bardsley's deal with the brokers and the interest which was paid him by the banks.

THE SONS OF TOIL MEET.

Annual Convention of the New Jersey Labor Congress.

PATERSON, N. J., Aug. 18.—The state labor congress of New Jersey held its annual session in Silk Workers' hall at Paterson yesterday. President Mellor, of Trenton, presided. Among those present were President Mellor and J. P. McDonnell.

The principal work of the congress was the reception of the report of Chairman McDonnell, of the legislative committee. He made the following recommendations, to be adopted by the congress: First—A declaration in favor of eight hours as a day's work in the public and private employments of the state. Second—The introduction of a bill at the next session of the legislature making eight hours a legal day's work for women and minors in all state, county and city employments. Third—A declaration by the congress against the candidacy of any person for or who have favored Pinkerton detectives. Fourth—A strict observance of Labor Day. Fifth—A declaration in favor of union made work and union labels. Sixth—The appointment of a state organizer of trades unions. Seventh—The preparation of a bill to establish the state contract printing system.

The officers chosen for the ensuing year are: Samuel Mellor, Trenton, president; J. W. Cook, Paterson, vice president; J. B. Solomon, Newark, secretary; J. Mears, Newark, assistant secretary; Hugh Clark, Newark, treasurer; Thomas McGovern, Newark, sergeant at arms. Hugh Cook, Jersey City, and George Thompson, Orange, auditors; J. P. McDonald, Paterson; Jacob Cook, Trenton, and A. T. Seal, Newark, legislative committee.

An enthusiastic meeting was held last night in Apollo hall to favor the early closing movement. Addresses were made by Governor Abbett, Father McGlynn, of New York; President Gompers, of the American Federation, and many others. The next annual session will be held in Trenton.

SPRING GARDEN BANK WRECKERS.

The Judge Defers Sentencing the Kennedys, Who Have Pleaded Guilty.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 18.—Judge Butler has deferred passing sentence upon Francis W. Kennedy, president, and Henry H. Kennedy, cashier of the defunct Spring Garden bank, for twenty-four hours.

Both pleaded guilty to the bills of indictment found against them by the grand jury Monday morning and both will on a month's grace. Henry Kennedy's counsel pleading that his wife was about to become a mother in a few days and could the receiver in unraveling the accounts much better out of jail than if he were in it.

Charles Lawrence, assistant cashier of the Keystone bank, pleaded guilty to charges of assisting to wreck the institution and will be sentenced for re-election. President Mann Page will advocate the creation of a state commission to regulate railroad freights.

HIS FRIEND ARRESTED HIM FOR MURDER.

PITTSBURG, Aug. 18.—Elmer Bruner, who murdered old man Reese at Ebensburg last Thursday, has been arrested here by Stephen Acor, a member of Company A, Fifteenth regiment, N. G. P. Acor was a personal friend of Bruner since boyhood. They met on the street near Acor's home. Acor told Bruner that it was his duty to arrest him, telling him that he was wanted for murder, which he did and took him to central station, where he was locked up. Bruner has been in Pittsburg since Thursday and Saturday night was at a theater, but neither the police nor detectives got their optics on him. Bruner claims that he went to old man Reese's house for a drink, when the old man picked a gun on him and he shot Reese in self defense. There is no doubt, however, that Bruner killed Reese to get the money and when Reese surprised him with his gun Bruner shot and killed the old man.

John G. Whittier in Good Health.

NEWBURYPORT, Mass., Aug. 18.—John G. Whittier, the poet, is staying at Cartland's farm. He is not personally in better health then at any time during the past six months, and is improving daily.

THERE IS NO NIGHT.

There is no night.
No darkness to the redeemed.
The worlds in sable shroud;
A light unseen by mortal eyes
How every planet moves
In sea of light;
One day's eternal tide
Flows on through ages wide:
Night is each planet's own,
And death its sleep.

There is no night.
O soul, God's face hasign
Is ever seeking thine;
God's love can make a radiant day
While the sun's in the way
Of Truth and Right;
Place but the golden vase,
Love's light shall shadows cast;
The shadows are false news,
And darken thee alone.

There is no night.
No night of death to her
Life's all transcending star;
O Love, why mourn apart?
Thou hast the heart
Hath found the Light!
Then cease to fear Death;
Life's harvest yet does breath
To tend the vale alone;
This cannot be Love's own.

TOO SERIOUS FOR JOKING.
"Smart Alec" sir their wit to those sufferers with fanny stories while heeding the warnings and virtues of some inert nostrum, but the misery of rheumatism, neuralgia, gout and carbuncles, the torments of dyspepsia and biliousness are no less all funny. It is more interesting to know that Ozomulsion will cure these maladies—some three sufferers by simply purifying the blood.

BENNINGTON'S BIG DAY.

Every Train Brings Crowds to Honor John Stark.

THE COMING OF THE PRESIDENT.

He Will Drive Over to Bennington from North Bennington Wednesday Morning. Some of the Elaborate Decorations the Patriotic Vermonters Have Erected.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 18.—The little town of Bennington is all ready for the celebration of the 100th anniversary of Vermont's statehood and the dedication of the monument to commemorate the battle of Bennington. The Vermont state troops are camped at the Soldiers' home and have been joined there by two battalions of Rhode Island artillery and several companies of New Hampshire infantry. Gov. Percy Pope has arrived and has his headquarters at the Soldiers' home. He has been busy all day with the members of the different committees preparing the programme in detail for the exercises of Wednesday.

The President's Arrival.

The president will reach North Bennington this evening, but will not come to Bennington until the following forenoon. He will be entertained at North Bennington tonight by General J. G. McCullough, who has tendered the hospitality of his home to the presidential party. North Bennington is only five miles from Bennington and the president will drive over on the morning of the celebration in a four horse carriage. The governor will probably be his escort, although this point of etiquet has not been determined finally. Every train that comes into Bennington today brings many excursionists and the town is crowded.

The Elaborate Decorations.

The decorations of the town are virtually complete. These consist of three arches adding to the light and airy and wide air of the scene, public decorations on buildings and in private residences. The town is ablaze with patriotic mottoes. Upon the first arch, through which the procession will pass on the way to the monument, are these words, "1776—Molly Stark was not widowed—1777," on the obverse side, "Wadsworth" done in flowers. Among the late arrivals were Secretary Proctor, President of the Day Veazey, Governor Tuttle and suit, together with the New Hampshire Annapolis cadets, Governor Russell, of Massachusetts, staff and suit, and the Knights Templars and Patriarchs Militant. The North Adams Light Battalion; Second and Third regiments Patriarchs Militant, of Massachusetts; a regiment of the Atlantic division, under the command of General Woodward, and the Tilden cadets, of Troy, will arrive at 8:30 a. m. Wednesday, just in time to participate in the festivities of the day. Distinguished guests of the state are arriving on every hour.

What It Is All About.

Tomorrow the monument which has been erected to memorialize forever the sanguinary battle of Aug. 1, 1777, is to be unveiled, and full honor is to be done to John Stark and the heroes who, under his command, here won the victory which a few weeks later led to complete fruition to Burgoyne's surrender. The battle of Bennington occupies none too much space in the reported history of the United States. It will be recollected that Burgoyne in his elaborately planned expedition against northern New York and ultimately the strongholds of the lower Hudson allowed his unswerving confidence in the loyalism of the people of "the Hampshire grants" to induce him to detach a portion of his army to go into this section and collect under the British standard the yeomanry.

He had also in mind the fact that at Bennington was located a depot of supplies, the destruction of which would seriously cripple the continental army. But his prime object was to block the route by which volunteers from eastern New England were hurrying to the help of General Gates.

It Was the American Marathon.

But the battle of Bennington spoiled it all. Not only did it result in the annihilation of the invading army but it kept open the American line of communication, and, above all, it resulted in the surrender at Saratoga. "The American Marathon it may well be called—this historic battle ground. John Stark was an independent warrior, only in such a condition that he should not be called to serve outside New Hampshire.

"The most active and rebellious race on the continent," as Burgoyne had called the people, rallied about Stark with a courage like that of the ancient Greeks, and with equal heroism they battled in defense of their homes and their country.

A Double Event.

It must be remembered, too, that Vermont was at this juncture struggling for independence not only of the king but of New York. The latter struggle had begun before the former, and while it had not resulted in actual warfare it had aroused a bitterness which continued the revolution and as a matter of fact kept Vermont out of the Union until 1791. Both anniversaries—the battle and the admission of Vermont to the Union—are to be simultaneously celebrated.

The President En Tour.

CAPE MAY, Aug. 18.—The president left on his Bennington (Vt.) trip this morning at 8:30 by special train in a Pullman car. Accompanying him are Private Secretary Halford, Russell B. Harrison, Howard Gale, of Indianapolis, a guest of the president; M. S. Tibbott, stenographer, and the president's valet. Miss Sanger remains at Cape May and takes charge of the official mail, communicating with the heads of the government if necessary. The family of the president will stay at the Cape May summer capitol during his ten days' absence.

Poisoned by Cakes.

GRAFTON, W. Va., Aug. 18.—Mrs. George Malcomes, niece and five children are lying in a dying condition from eating poisoned cakes. The lady made the cakes Sunday, and while absent from the house a few moments it is believed some enemy attempted to poison the entire family by placing arsenic in the dough. The death of one or two of the children is expected. Suspicion points to certain parties as the poisoners, and arrests may be made.

She Accuses Her Father.

LAMBERTVILLE, N. J., Aug. 18.—Joseph Cagle, of Lambertville, is wanted by the authorities on that place on a horrible charge. His daughter, aged seventeen, is the complainant. She alleges that six weeks ago her father chloroformed and assaulted her.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 18.—The war department has received the report of Lieutenant-Colonel Loder, U. S. A., who inspected the National Guard encampment at Peekskill, N. Y., from June 13 to Aug. 1, 1891. Colonel Loder says New York has reason to be proud of its National Guard. The discipline in the last few years has been so perfect that in case any regiment is called out their duties will be performed in a soldierly manner.

The Salton Lake Has Come to Stay.

SAN DIEGO, Cal., Aug. 18.—H. W. Patton, who undertook the exploration to determine the sources of the overflow on the desert known as Salton, says he is positive the lake will be permanent. One-fifth of the water in the Colorado river is flowing through the channel into the lake, but with the next heavy rise Mr. Patton says he would not be surprised to see almost the entire river turned into the channel.

CAN WOMEN KEEP STILL?

"WOMEN'S TONGUES" HUNG ON A TREE IN NASSAU.

Women Have to Talk Because Men Don't Know How—Does a Man Really Admire a Silent Wife?—A Suggested Experiment—The Dullness of Lovers.

Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.

One of the most frequent jibes of man kind against womankind is that it cannot hold its tongue, must have the last word in a controversy, as note the famous scissors dispute between a man and his wife, where he, irritated beyond endurance, threw her into the well, and she, too nearly drowned to speak, held one hand above the water and worked the fingers to imitate a pair of scissors, and so maintained her opinion not only with her last breath but after it was gone.

I know I have mentioned before, and yet I must mention again, my mingled amusement and indignation at a little incident of my visit to Nassau. In the town square of that pleasant little city stands a very large tree, I believe of the locust species. When we were there it was covered with long pods filled with seeds, which, as they ripen and dry clattered against each other in every breath of wind, producing a constant murmur and whisper, rising occasionally to a perfect babel of inarticulate voices.

Of course we inquired the name of so singular a tree, and I shall never forget the demure satisfaction with which the consul who accompanied us replied, "Well, they call it Women's Tongue, because, you see, the merest breath is enough to set it to talking."

Now, of course, this is a prejudice so deeply implanted in the masculine mind that it is quite hopeless to try to eradicate it, but is it a well founded prejudice?

My own impression is that the sexes in this, as in many other directions, share the foible about equally, and that there are as many male as female chatterboxes.

The public prints some time ago noted the death of a woman who certainly was a notable instance of the feminine power of silence.

Some thirty years ago this fair lady had a quarrel with her husband, at the close of which she solemnly exclaimed:

"Oh, do hold your tongue! I'm sick to death of the sound of your voice!"

"You are, are you!" retorted the wife, hurt through and through in the fashion only a woman can comprehend. "Well, you never shall hear my voice again."

And she kept her word. After a day or two of silence on her part the husband grew uneasy, and finally made advances toward reconciliation. These were received after a fashion—that is to say, the wife's face resumed its usual expression, she performed her household duties and looked after her husband's comfort; she was cheerful with her children, and soon taught them to understand her signs as well as they might have her language, but even to them, even to her little baby, she never spoke, never laughed aloud, never, in fact, allowed her voice to be heard, lest to whomever she spoke her husband might catch its sound. Then the man, really good to the core, conscious of the occasion, expostulated, commanded, begged, wept and pleaded upon his knees that his wife should break this terrible resolution. He brought the minister to intercede for him, he brought her second relatives, and he taught the oldest children to plead for him and for themselves.

But one course was as useless as another. The woman had but one reply, and that she wrote upon a slip of paper and presented to each petitioner.

"I said he never should hear my voice again, and he sha'n't!"

When, after several years' use, this paper became soiled and torn, the stubborn creature wrote out another, and never did she add a word or make any farther explanation of her course.

At last the husband lay upon his death-bed, and as his wife ministered to his needs he caught her hand, and in the hollow and broken voice of a dying man he begged his wife to forgive him if indeed he had offended her so deeply, and to speak to him, if only to say goodby, and bid him depart in peace. It was the last chance she would have, he reminded her, and those who needed forgiveness should be ready to make forgiveness.

She listened patiently, and then wrote for one of her daughters to read and repeat that she had nothing to forgive, and that she bade him an affectionate goodby; but she had said he never should hear her voice again, and he never should.

But, added she, neither should anybody else, for she never should speak again so long as she lived. And with this strange comfort she let him die.

Then began a new struggle, for the children pleaded that they had never offended her; there was no pretence of a cause for renewing her vow of silence against them, and begged and besought her to set it aside and come back from her terrible isolation to be once more their mother.

But still she shook her head, and only wrote out a new slip of paper.

"I promised him I never would speak again, and I won't."

And so she lived another ten years or so, and finally she died, dumb even upon her deathbed, in spite of the piteous entreaties of the children, who still loved her.

Now, after such an instance as that, does any man say that a woman cannot hold her tongue?

Of course I don't mean this as an example, nor do I think such persistency a womanly or amiable trait of character, but it surely showed strength of purpose, and from it we may fairly argue that if a woman has determined to hold her tongue she is quite capable of doing it.

Of course every one knows that a woman's tongue is far more nimble than a man's; that she has a great deal more to say, and thinks of a reply or a retort a great deal sooner than a man does; that her thoughts or fancies formulate themselves more readily, and she has a great many more of them; and for all these reasons it is all but inevitable that she should talk more than a man does, but that is not saying that she is unable to restrain itself if she pleases to.

Then again, women in society have to talk more than men do—that is to say, the average woman has to talk more than the average man, or those awful pauses ensue which are so fatal to a social occasion.

I appeal to my sister women to bear me out in the statement that 50 per cent. of the conversation of conversazioni (as the French call it) in society, or for that matter in private, except among the nearest relatives, is borne by our sex, and I'm sure I don't know what would become of society or of man in his social relations if the women, to refute the charge of being great talkers, should form "a trust" and put up the price of speech and hoard it in the treasury of their own brains for a while.

I tried it on once myself. It was at a reception, and I was tired and fagged and somewhat vexed at some joconse remarks some of the men had made about the loquacity of women and the impossibility of their keeping anything to themselves, so I suddenly took a resolution of silence, not so entire as that of the woman whose story I have told, but I resolved for once to let somebody else be at the expense of the conversation, and only to bear that burden of response and complacent listening usually assumed by the masculine party.

It was really most amusing; the very gentleman who had been so funny at the expense of woman's loquacity was presented to me, and I smiled and bowed. He made one of those brilliant remarks about the weather usually opening a conversation. I ascended to his statement and remained silent, with my eyes fixed upon his face in the expectant attitude I have so often noticed in my masculine friends; in fact this gentleman himself were it at that very moment. Hesiclearedhis throat, and said there was quite a crush in the rooms, and I smiled most amiably and replied, "Quite so." Then he began to fidget, glancing helplessly into my face, as much as to say, "Why don't you give me a lead?" But I remained blandly unconscious, and infused into my manner an air of waiting for him to speak that must have been simply maddening. At last he said:

"You must meet a great many people in the course of your travels."

"A great many," replied I, and closed my lips.

"And—and—I suppose you like to, don't you?"

"Like to—what?" asked I, with the same sort of judicial air I have noticed in men when they are replying to what they consider an irrational remark. And wasn't this irrational?

"Oh, as people you know, and—and all that sort of thing. Don't you like to see people?"

"Do you?" inquired I briefly, and the poor man, who thought he had at last started me off upon a topic congenial to my experience, wiped his forehead and stared aghast at finding it thus tossed back to him.

How the conversation, if you can call it so, would have ended I don't know, but it certainly did not last very long, and I afterward heard that Mr. So-and-So considered Miss ——the hardest person to talk to he had ever met. I only hope he may see this paper, and look for himself whether the self exciting questions most women make to keep up a conversation in society is matter of derision or of admiration.

And not in society only. In the family circle, when the head of the house comes home tired, rather cross and disposed to grumble at everything, does it cheer and recuperate him to find a silent wife and daughters, each occupied with her own thoughts or her book, and although ready to respond to his remarks with perfect amiability, originating nothing and relapsing into silence the moment his questions are answered?

I should like to see that experiment tried, and recommend it to any woman so happy as to possess a home, and whose husband is under the impression that women are too loquacious. Don't let him have any chance to call you glum or sulky or "in the dumps." Be perfectly bright and smiling, prettily dressed and with a good dinner punctually on the table, talk any more than is absolutely necessary; don't, according to your usual wifely fashion, bring out all the little events of your day, dressed up in a fancy garb of comic or pathetic or marvelous detail; don't tell what Mrs. Jones said about Mr. Brown, nor how queerly she was dressed; don't mention what you had for lunch, nor how the poulterer saved this pair of pheasants on purpose for you because last time you thankfully took the whole brood, cast off all superfluity of language and let your yes be yea, and your nay nay, in absolute strictness. I don't believe one woman in ten is able to do this a whole evening; not, mind you, because she couldn't, but because she wouldn't—her kind heart wouldn't let her; she would watch out of the corner of her eye the growing despondency, the gloom and the dullness overspreading the face of the man she loved, and at once the womanly love of her voiceless, laugh like a brook just breaking through the ice, perch upon her husband's knee, and bewilder him with such a sparkling freshet of chatter as that same brook may exhibit for the delight of the stately trees whose roots she refreshes and reinvigorates.

And that man, and many, many more of his kind, knows at his heart, whatever his tongue may say, that woman's facility of speech and willingness to use it rightly is the true sunshine of his home.

And in other relations of life. A man has a woman friend whom he loves to meet when he feels the need of a fresh impulse to his mental life and new hopefulness and cheer in his work, whatever that may be. It is she who does the most of the talking; sometimes he only sits and gazes at her in that helpless sort of fashion peculiar to tired men—a sort of mute appeal for aid from a discomfort too vague to put in words. Haven't we all some such friends? Don't we all repair to them as to a spring and a sympathy, and feel refreshed and invigorated when we have carried ourselves to talk so gayly and so hopefully as we could, perhaps openly upon the subject of our friend's own affairs, perhaps only in a vague and general way suggesting hopes and possibilities, and recalling bygone seasons and campaign, watching all the time for the moment when the unsuspecting victim of our arts begins to brighten, and straighten up, and plume himself, and resume his faith in himself and his destiny, until, when he begins to patronize and instruct us, we feel that the cure is accomplished for that time, and meekly accept the commendation he is apt to bestow upon our light heartedness and easy flow of language.

And even between lovers—yes, in that tenderest and least intellectual of relation between men and women—the nimble tongue and lively thought of the Juliet is of infinite service to Romeo. The fact of being in love and engaged to be married does not materially change the mental attitude of the sexes; the man still needs to be entertained, enlivened, taken out of his commonplace routine; he needs sympathy, encouragement, advice and expostulation, and how is he to receive them except from the lips of his betrothed?

In fact, if the girl is as silent as the jibes of men might tempt her to become, she fails of half the influence she ought to have over her lover, and worst of all, they both, in spite of their love making, will find a good many half hours hang heavily on hand, and he will remember the cigar in his pocket, and she will catch a little yawn and wonder what o'clock it is.

So down with the malicious and mistaken heresy that women's tongues are beyond their own control or that they run too fast! We could be very silent if we chose, but we talk out of pure charity to mankind, and women's tongues are to men's reason what champagne is to malt.

Don't you like champagne?

It is quite unnecessary to caution any child not to "eat with his fingers," since that is a physiological impossibility, and is a terrible breach of the rule of politeness to speak of "eating with one's fingers," when we mean to say simply the holding of food in them. But there is quite a respectable minority of those who, although the best manners, be held in the fingers when eaten instead of being lifted by fork or spoon; of course the knife is utterly tabooed. Post Intelligencer.

Olives, to which a fork should never be applied.

Asparagus, whether hot or cold, when served whole, as it should be.

Lettuce, which should be dipped in the dressing or in a little salt.

Celery, which may be properly placed on the tablecloth beside the plate.

Strawberries, when served with the stem on, as they are in the most elegant houses.

Bread, each one of all save an hot small cake.

Cheese, which is invariably lifted with the fingers by the most particular people.

Even the leg or other small pieces of a bird when to be eaten in the fingers at fashionable dinners, and at most of the luncheons ladies pick small pieces of chicken with out using a fork.—Exchange.

The Saving of Waste.

Mothers sometimes mistakenly insist that the child shall eat all upon its plate, to prevent it from being "wasted." It ought to be possible to remark that this is not to be commended. A child should early be taught not to waste food, nor should he ever be permitted to render valueless that which is of value to others. But to eat food when one has had sufficiency, to keep it from being "wasted," is not the way to manage child frugality.

Better, by far, to feed the stomach once more of food than it needs is to overtax it; and frequently overtaxing will lead to the rebellion of stomachs as well as of people. Then the services of the physician must be had; and before we can dispense with them, the value of a barrel of flour is gone to save an ounce of food. This is not economy; neither is it common sense.

It is better to help a child to food two or three times than to load his plate so that he be in danger of leaving any. Thus may health and frugality be secured at the same time.—Health and Home.

Danger in Milk.

Tubercular meningitis is a common disease among children in large cities, where the milk supplied is always old and otherwise open to suspicion. In the light of facts developed it is safe to assume that to a large proportion of cases the cause is the milk. That a certain milk does not unpleasantly affect the parents is no evidence that it is free from the harmful properties. Children are more susceptible to poisons than they, whether mineral, vegetable or the germs of disease.—Boston Herald.

Making the Victim Look Pleasant.

A photographer at the convention in Buffalo said a reporter of the Herald was in the west, when the man at the camera used to make the subject "look pleasant" by leveling a pistol at him and saying: "Look right square in the muzzle of this yer revolver, my man, and remember that I hain't again to hev this picture spoiled with any o' your foolin."—New York Sun.

PLAINFIELD EVENING NEWS.

ESTABLISHED 1884. PLAINFIELD, N. J., "THE COLORADO OF THE EAST," THURSDAY, AUGUST 20, 1891. PRICE TWO CENTS.

—The Harned Academy, boarding and day school will re-open Monday, Sept. 14th.

—The city clock in the Methodist Episcopal church is once more running on time.

Captain of Police George W. Grant has been confined to his house by illness for several days past.

—The Winfield Scott Post No. 73, G. A. R., will go on its annual excursion to Rockaway Beach to-morrow morning.

—The city Common Council will hold a meeting to-morrow evening to take action on the proposed sewerage ordinance.

—A horse attached to a light wagon ran away on Park place this morning. The animal was caught before it succeeded in wrecking the vehicle.

—Policeman Cooney arrested a man who was under the influence of liquor last evening. The prisoner was obstinate and Special Policeman Glantzer assisted in taking him to the station house.

—The sixth annual reunion of the Ninth New Jersey Volunteers will be held at Flemington, Hunterdon county, on Thursday, September 17. The command will be entertained by the veterans and Ladies' Relief Corps.

—Mr. George Tobin, a plumber, yesterday tapped one of the water mains in front of the residence of Postmaster Judd. Pope and filled a 350 gallon tank within eight minutes, to the satisfaction of the owner. Mr. Tobin says that this is something unprecedent in the history of Plainfield.

—Plainfield's concert halls, where beer-drinking is allowed, are to be closed. The Common Council on Tuesday night framed an ordinance to be engrossed that effectually prohibits all athletic exhibits and musical entertainments of any character in places where liquor is sold. The growth of these concert gardens has been rapid.—N. Y. Tribune.

—Readers of periodicals often complain because the leaves are not cut, but publishers have been driven to this backward step because when magazines are sent out with cut leaves, a great many are returned after having been partly read. Stationers and booksellers generally require customers to glance through the pages of a book or magazine so long as it remains undamaged, and thousands of periodicals are returned by stationers after the choice articles have been read.

—It is not often that the band which plays at the ocean promenade of Asbury Park treats the seaside pilgrims to the "Star Spangled Banner," but when it does the applause is furious. Strangers are surprised by the outburst until they learn that it was this band which was on the United States ship Trenton when she was driven ashore in the cyclone at Samoa, and which struck up the national anthem in the moment of danger, eliciting cheers from the British frigate that was drifting by. The band is composed chiefly of Italians, and its members are an unusually modest as well as melodious set of heroes.—N. Y. Sun.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Dennis Gavin of North Plainfield left to-day for a two weeks' stay at Asbury Park.

Mr. A. B. Warner of West Front street is enjoying a ten days' outing in Philadelphia and Cape May.

Firman Campbell, one of Plainfield's oldest and best-known residents, died this afternoon in his eighty-fourth year. He was one of the pioneer improvers of Washington Park real estate. He owned considerable valuable property there.

The Rev. G. K. Newell, pastor of Hope chapel, has returned from Paris where he has been for a month past for the benefit of his health. A very warm welcome was tendered him on Friday evening by the congregation and Sunday school at the close of the prayer meeting. His Sunday-school class presented him with a beautiful cane, after which refreshments were served by the ladies. Both pastor and people had a sociable time. Mr. Newell expressed himself as very glad to be back to Plainfield and the changed again.

A pretty home wedding took place at Scotch Plains last evening when Mr. Frank Putnam, the head salesman in Edsall's dry and fancy goods store in this city and Miss Ida C. Frentz of Scotch Plains were made man and wife. The ceremony was performed by the Rev. William Maxwell Reilly, the pastor of All Saint's Episcopal Church at Scotch Plains, and took place at the residence of the bride's father in the presence of the immediate friends of the contracting parties. Mr. and Mrs. Putnam went to Spring Lake on their wedding tour and upon their return they will make Plainfield their future home.

A Civil Suit For $10,000.

Messrs Clark & Reed, Mr. J. B. Miller's counsel, to-day instituted a civil suit against the editors and publishers of the Daily Press for $10,000 damages for publishing an article which he charges is libelous and published with intent to injure his character and business. Mr. Miller also has another suit pending, charging them with criminal libel. In the latter suit they gave bonds for their appearance if indicted by the Grand Jury, as reported in yesterday's NEWS.

SOME NEW DECISIONS.

Vice Chancellor Green on Desertion and Parole Evidence.

Vice Chancellor Green rendered decisions in two important cases on Monday. He says:

"Desertion cannot be considered as obstinate on the part of one when the separation is acquiesced in and entirely satisfactory to the other, who neither entertains nor manifests any desire that the separation or the causes which brought it about should cease. A wife who is presenting an action against her husband for divorce for alleged adultery cannot maintain that this separation during the pendancy of suit is obstinate on the part of the husband.

"While a trust in lands, created by parole trust, in an attempt to enforce the trust, must be manifested by writing duly signed, it is competent, after the trust has been terminated by a conveyance of the property by a trustee, to prove the trust by parole evidence. The true consideration of a deed may be shown by parole evidence though it vary from that expressed."

"The Milk in the Cocoanut."

The Daily Press, in referring to its attack upon Mr. J. B. Miller, which resulted yesterday in his action for criminal libel against the publishers, says that it had refused his advertisement a few weeks previously. As a matter of fact that paper alone has published his advertisement for several months, and nothing was too good to say repeatedly about him. Mr. Miller withdrew his advertisement voluntarily, and since then the paper seems to have lost no opportunity to attack him, resulting as stated. Who ever heard of it refusing anything? And who that knows would believe that it does not strain itself to secure anything in its power in the way of advertising regardless of its character? It is rather late in the day for it to assume a virtue it has not got. THE NEWS does not wish to be understood as a champion of Mr. Miller in this matter nor any other, nor to have him nor any one else consider that we would suppress anything proper to publish nor publish anything improper because of advertisements running in these columns. We do not sell our opinions. We don't do business that way. We don't undertake to guarantee our advertisers unqualifiedly, although we have endeavored to exclude objectionable advertisements altogether. We must of necessity allow the reader to have some discretion. We don't pretend to "know it all." There have been times when we think the law was not upheld regarding certain acts of Mr. Miller familiar to our readers, and we denounced the laxity and those responsible for it as we would again under similar circumstances, not because of personal feeling against any of those interested, but purely and solely in the public interest. In this later matter THE NEWS has pursued the same course it has consistently always followed, and the result seems to have justified the wisdom of our course. The Daily Press yesterday spoke of the alleged offense of Mr. Miller as only trivial, but the day before it held him up as guilty of a serious offense, as he would be if the statements published were true. Mr. Miller himself says they were without foundation, and until the charge is made and proved by the parties interested, his statement must go. We are unable to understand, however, how our cotemporary can reconcile its statements. If it is blinder in its first statement it made a greater blunder yesterday in referring to Mr. Miller's alleged offense as only trivial. It was, if true, anything but trivial.

Mr. Reed's Say.

Lawyer Chas. A. Reed has the following to say respecting the attack made on him in the Press of yesterday:

"I have written the publishers of the Press that the article 'Did Reed Draw the Complaint?' published by them yesterday, is wholly unwarranted and unworthy of any reputable newspaper, and unless proper retraction is at once made I shall take steps to obtain redress.

So far as the article published about Mr. Miller is concerned, there can be no doubt in the minds of any good lawyer that it is libelous. I am informed that the whole story is a fabrication pure and simple. That the woman Delmore, instead of being a young girl, is married and the mother of two children, aged respectively twelve and seven years; that she has no brother who is a New York business man, that no brother or pretended brother came to Plainfield or sought admission to the Elkwood. That no scene occurred there, nor was the pathetic remark, 'Daisy is very young,' etc., in fact made. Indeed it seems that the whole story published in the 'Press' had its only foundation in the imaginative brain of some newspaper employe pressed for 'news.'"

Mr. Miller came to me and employed me to take steps to have those responsible for the libel arrested, and I did so. I shall continue to perform my duty to my client to the best of my ability, and if any one imagines that through fear of scurrulous newspaper articles I can be bulldozed into any other course, let him try it on. So far as the statement that Messrs. Jackson & Codington and Mr. Hetfield told Miller the article was libelous is concerned, I am informed the statement is false; but I care not if it is true, in my opinion the article is grossly libelous."

Wm. Huston, engineer, Weehawken, N. J.: "I know that Dr. Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy' is an honest preparation. I su ered from Dyspepsia and Kidney Complaints for years and was cured by 'Favorite Remedy'."—ADV.

DON'T WANT A NEW BRIDGE.

The Middlesex Board of Freeholders Declines to Build One.

The Middlesex County Board of Freeholders met yesterday afternoon on the Albany street bridge. It is claimed that this bridge, which spans the Raritan at that place and is the principal entrance into the city, is weak, and the members who represent the city in the Board had asked for a new bridge.

When the members met planks were torn up which were shown to be bad, and it was found that the stringers and sleepers on the bridge were rotten. Nevertheless the Board took no action towards building a new bridge.

Freeholder Vanderbilt, who led the opposition to a new bridge, claimed that the apparent weaknesses were only on the surface and that the main structure was firm. The city members voted to consider immediately plans for a new structure, but the country members had a majority of two to one and voted to adjourn.

Base Ball.

On next Saturday the West Ends and Crescents meet on the latter's grounds and the people are now possessed of a big head. They have won a game from Somerville (by chance) and one from Westfield (by dead luck), and are therefore prepared to wager their shirts and socks that on next Saturday victory will perch upon the banners of the Crescents. Wait and see! With Harkins in the box and Kennedy behind the bat, they can't lose. And, friends, let me tell you. Put your last cent next Saturday on the West Ends.

CRESCENTS VS. WESTFIELD.

Who would have supposed that the Crescents would win from the Westfields, and in the first inning, too! The way they fell upon Hammill and sent the ball out of the lot must have been disouraging indeed. They hit him for two two-baggers and three singles, which, with a base on balls and a couple of rocky errors by Diven and Howe, netted the Plainfielders seven runs. It all happened before the Westfields in reality got in the game, and I am inclined to think that the whole team, headed by their twirler, got a case of dead rattles—the first, I am sure, they have had this season. But it is sure to come, and when it does, the overthrow is awful.

There were only two runs between them at the finish, but the runs belonged to the Crescents. Consequently everyone in Plainfield was satisfied. I tell you, they are hard boosers, and they delight to last. Their game with the battels might as well have tried to hit a fleeting will-o'-the-wisp, as the camel-backed curves that came from Hammill's shop.—Somerville Messenger.

New Brunswick is the only New Jersey town reported up to date that forbids ball playing within its limits. The new Base Ball league which next year will represent New Brunswick in the New Jersey League with the Plainfield Crescents, the Somerville West Ends, the Westfields, the New Jersey Athletic Club, and other nines, has announced its first game for Plainfield. The grounds are now prepared for a hard fight against the city ordinance which prohibits ball playing and kindred sports within 100 yards of any private residence except with the owner's consent. John Harkins, of the Somerville West Ends, is at the head of the New Brunswick club. He will lead his nine into the diamond prepared to submit to arrest, and give bail for violating the ordinance. Then a legal contest will ensue in which the constitutionality of the ordinance will be questioned.—Central N. J. Times.

Prize Winners at Netherwood.

The initial loto party of the season was held in the parlor of the Netherwood Hotel Monday evening. Messrs. Crossman Benary, Miss Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. Van Zandt, Mrs. Thomas H. Cullen, Little Eddie Cullen, Mr. and Mrs. McCredy, Mrs. F. L. Froment, Mrs. F. H. Richardson, Miss Richardson, Mrs. Frank Littlefield, Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Ogden, Mrs. E. G. Hine, Miss Ella Fielman, Mrs. H. Fielman, O. B. Bridgman, Master Eugene Froment, Master Vivian Froment, Mr. and Mrs. F. E. Miller, Mr. and Mrs. D. F. Whitney, Mr. Balch, George E. Thornton, L. H. Tobey, Mrs. Findley and Fred. Martin, Jr.

Chased the Thief up the Car-Track.

A burglar entered the house of Robert Hart, on South Second street Sunday night. Mr. Hart heard him and jumped out of bed. On going to the door he saw the burglar coming upstairs. Then the burglar said "oh" and ran down. Mr. Hart parently dressed himself and chased the intruder up the railroad track, but he escaped. He gained an entrance through an unfastened window.

A Tie Game.

Yesterday the West Ends of Somerville visited New Brunswick and played a game of base ball with the New Brunswick team. A number of Plainfielders were present and they say it was one of the most interesting games witnessed this season. The clubs played sixteen innings and when the game was called on account of darkness the score stood 2 to 2.

The Thirtieth's Re-union.

A large number of people will attend the re-union at Veghte's grove on Sept. 3d. The committee's arrangements are progressing, and every effort is being made to make the affair a success. The township committees desire further contributions.

THE ODD FELLOWS.

The Next Session to be Held in Buffalo.

The Grand Lodge I. O. O. F. in session at Kingston, N. Y., voted to hold its next session at Buffalo. Grand Secretary Terwilliger reported that during the year ending Dec. 31, 1890, there were 3,480 initiations; 885 admitted by card and 341 reinstated, or a total addition of 5,085. There were 2,621 suspensions, 205 deaths, 1,527 withdrawals, and 66 expulsions. The increase in membership over 1890 was 3,538. Total relief paid to members and widows and orphans was $650,022. One of the questions that will be discussed is the advisability of changing the rules so that lodges will be permitted to receive candidates for membership at the age of 18. The report of the finance committee shows a balance on hand August 1st of $2,335.04.

State Notes.

A mule forty-two years old, belonging to Charles Stella, of Cumberland county, died a day or two ago of old age. It worked until it dropped lifeless.

Fires were started in the Cohansey Bank furnaces at Bridgeton yesterday for the coming season. It takes twenty days to get a proper start at this glass works.

Fenfield grouse, quail and rabbits are reported as being plentiful this year throughout the State. Last Fall's heavy shooting does not appear to have diminished their numbers.

While bathing at Ocean Grove yesterday John Norcross, a retired wire merchant of Philadelphia, was taken ill and fell forward. He was taken out and partly resuscitated, but died on his way to the hotel. He was seventy-two years old.

A supposed mad dog belonging to Rule Kible, of Beverly, bit a number of other dogs on Saturday and Sunday. It was killed, and Mayor Fish issued a death warrant upon all dogs that had been bitten. Eleven were dispatched as a starter yesterday.

Woodglen, near Glen Gardner, in Hunterdon county, is becoming noted as a new Summer resort, and the Hoffman Medical Spring, near Flanders, Morris county, after being forgotten for over half a century will be made the attraction of a health resort.

William C. Foster of 237 Monticello avenue, Jersey City, who suffered from a cancer three years without medical attendance and believed that Providence would cure him, died at 6 a. m. on Monday. A doctor was called in on Sunday, but could only administer opiates.

President Thurston, of the Jersey City Bergen Railroad Company, recently withdrew the service upon the only electric rapid transit line in Jersey City, owing to the opposition of the city authorities to the extension of the line to the ferry. The line was an experimental one, about a mile long, on Montgomery street.

The Jersey City Street and Water Commissioners yesterday removed seven more employees, and it is said that during the week sixty more will be added to the number. The board has been so extravagant that the Board of Finance has forced this action to enable it to meet the expenses of the Street and Water Board.

It will be observed that there is an enormous increase in the expenses of government for the past two years. The city is now supporting nearly two increased revenues from license fees by the increased number of liquor saloons, which is not included in the above, and amounting in round numbers to $11,000 each year.

The total increase in Plainfield's valuation since 1870, is $3,302,025, or more than double what the entire valuation was in 1870.

The Editor Who Could Not be Bribed.

The refusal of a bribe of half a million dollars by the late Editor Jones of The New York Times was a case of honor and conscience that is rarely found outside of journalism. The bribe was offered to the editor simply to induce him not to go out of his way to tell the truth about some public rascals. There are high-toned members of the legal profession who have been heard to denounce the newspapers in withering terms.

But how many of these same high-toned lawyers would decline to accept half a million dollars as a "retaining fee" to keep their mouths shut on the same subject, and not deem the transition strictly in accordance with the ethics of their profession! In refusing a big bribe and doing battle against the Tweed ring Editor Jones had to fight a formidable array of eminent lawyers, and even judges on the bench who also had retainers from Tweed.—Newark Journal.

Junior Day at Asbury.

Yesterday was Junior's day at Asbury Park. A number of Plainfielders will wonder what that means. We will explain by saying that the members of an order known as the Junior Order of American Mechanics indulged in their annual outing. Thirty-four excursions visited the Park and it is said that 75,000 people were present. One of the residents of the place claimed that it was the largest number that had visited the Park this season.

IDENTIFICATION BY MEASURE.

A Story Which Shows How Mercilessly Sure the System Is.

A young man who had been arrested one morning for theft was called upon and measured then and there, says Chambers's Journal. The process is carried out by two men, one of whom applies the instruments and calls out the figures, which are entered on a card by the other, precisely as in a tailor's shop. The subject is barefooted and bareheaded. Ten measurements are taken in four minutes, together with the height standing, the height sitting, the length of the arms extended, the length and breadth of the ear. This finished, Mr. Bertillon, card in hand, interrogated the prisoner:

"What is your name?"

"Albert Felix."

"Have you ever been up before?"

"No; never."

"Quite sure?"

"Perfectly sure," with jaunty confidence.

As the young scoundrel was the leader of a band, this seemed highly improbable.

He was removed, and we proceeded to search. Section after section of the drawers was rapidly eliminated by comparing the figures on them with those upon M. Felix's card. At last we came to a single drawer, and then down to two cards. If he was there at all, it must be one of these. A look at the first at once showed discrepancies of one or more millimeters under some of the headings, and, as the most rigid gauging can be accurate to a millimeter, it could not be this one. There remained one card. M. Bertillion took it up, hiding the photograph on it.

THE FIGURES CORRESPONDED.

All the figures correspond exactly with those just taken of Felix. He was called and again questioned. He repeated his former statements, but obviously with less confidence. M. Bartillion uncovered the photograph, and there the fellow was to the life as he stood that moment before us. It was most startling. But he originally had no photograph on record called Alfred Louis Lemaire, and he had been in jail two years before. The card bore details of certain scars and marks on hand and body; they corresponded exactly with those on Felix. Our friend, the detective, edged up and watched the prisoner with professional delight. Again questioned, Felix stuck to his story, but his composure was gone; his eye was troubled, his lips trembled and his manner was that of a hunted. The photograph was shown him. "Who is that?"

"Not me; some one like me"—but very shakily.

"This is Alfred Louis Lemaire, and he was arrested," etc.

The fellow was down in an instant, as limp as wet paper. "Oi, c'est mon nom," adding, "I knew you would find it."

The astonishing thing was that out of that great round of cards not a single one corresponded or anything like corresponded with the measurements of the youth before us, except that particular one—his own. Mistake is impossible.

A Quarter Saved is a Quarter Earned.

A hanger-on around the post office accomplished a neat bit of thievery yesterday afternoon by which he was the gainer of a silver quarter. A well-known woman came out of the office with an open purse in her hand. As she stepped to the pavement the silver piece jingled upon the stone and rolled noiselessly toward the lounger. His quick eye noted its approach and he gently but dexterously allowed the coin to roll underneath, and then clapped down the No. 11 over it. With such a prodigious covering two dozen quarters might have remained undiscovered. The woman looked about a minute or two, but failed to find the coin, and therefore passed by the colored individual, whose benign countenance gave no indication of the visions of wealth which ran rampant in his brain.

Firemen's Meeting.

At a meeting of the Exempt Firemen's Association held last evening, a committee comprising representatives from Bound Brook, Westfield, South Plainfield, Somerville, Elizabeth and Plainfield was appointed to make arrangements for the Firemen's tournament to be held at Atlantic City, Sept. 29th, 30th, Oct. 1st and 2d. Mr. Fairmans was elected chairman of the Committee, and Mr. H. H. Brokaw, secretary. The committee propose running an excursion from this city at reduced with tickets good for six days. Further particulars later.

Injured While at Work.

Mr. John Ammon, a resident of East Fourth street, met with a painful accident Tuesday afternoon. Mr. Ammon is a carpenter, and while engaged sawing a board with a cross-cut saw, the tool slipped and nearly severed his right thumb. A physician dressed the wound.

CAN WOMEN KEEP STILL?

"WOMEN'S TONGUES" HUNG ON A TREE IN NASSAU.

Women Have to Talk Because Men Don't Know How—Does a Man Really Admire a Silent Wife?—A Suggested Experiment—The Dullness of Lovers.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association.]

One of the most frequent jibes of man kind against womankind is that it cannot hold its tongue, must have the last word in a controversy, as note the famous scissors dispute between a man and his wife, where he, irritated beyond endurance, threw her into the well, and she, too nearly drowned to speak, held one hand above the water and worked the fingers to imitate a pair of scissors, and so maintained her opinion not only with her last breath but after it was gone.

I know I have mentioned before, and yet I must mention again, my mingled amusement and indignation at a little incident of my visit to Nassau. In the town of Nassau, of that pleasant little city stands a very large tree, I believe of the locust species. When we were there it was covered with long pods filled with seeds, which being ripe and dry clattered against each other in every breath of wind, producing a constant murmur and whisper, rising occasionally to a perfect babel of inarticulate voices.

Of course we inquired the name of so singular a tree, and I shall never forget the demure satisfaction with which the colonel who accompanied us replied, "Well, they call it Women's Tongue, because, you see, the merest breath is enough to set it to talking."

Now, of course, this is a prejudice so deeply implanted in the masculine mind that it is quite hopeless to try to eradicate it, but is it a well founded prejudice?

My own impression is that the sexes in this, as in many other directions, share the foible about equally, and that there are as many male as female chatterboxes.

The public prints some time ago noted the death of a woman who certainly was a notable instance of the feminine power of silence.

Some thirty years ago this fair lady had a quarrel with her husband, at the close of which he irritably exclaimed:

"Oh, do hold your tongue! I'm sick to death of the sound of your voice!"

"You are, are you?" retorted the wife, hurt through and through in the fact that only a woman can comprehend. "Well, you never shall hear my voice again."

And she kept her word. After a day or two of silence on her part the husband grew uneasy, and finally made advances toward reconciliation. These were received after a fashion—that is to say, the wife's face resumed its usual expression, she performed her household duties and looked after her husband's comfort; she was cheerful with her children, and soon taught them to understand her signs as well as they might have her language, but even to them, even to her little baby, she never spoke, never laughed aloud, never, in fact, allowed her voice to be heard, lest to whomsoever she spoke her husband might catch its sound. Then the man, fully seized of the sentiments of the occasion, expostulated, commanded, begged, wept and pleaded upon his knees that his wife should break this terrible resolution. He brought the minister to intercede for him, he brought her nearest relatives, and he taught the oldest children to plead for him and for themselves.

But one course was as useless as another. The woman had but one reply, and that she wrote upon a slip of paper and presented to each petitioner.

"I said he never should hear my voice again, and he shan't!"

When, after several years' use, this paper became soiled and torn, the stubborn creature wrote out another, and never did she add a word or make any farther explanation of her course.

At last the husband lay upon his deathbed, and as his wife ministered to his needs he caught her hand, and in the holier and broken voice of a dying man he begged his wife to forgive him if indeed he had offended her so deeply, and to speak to him, if only to say goodby, and bid him depart in peace. It was the last chance she would have, he reminded her, and those who needed forgiveness should be ready to make forgiveness.

She listened patiently, and then wrote for one of her daughters to read and repeat that she had nothing to forgive, and that she bade him an affectionate goodby; but she had said he never should hear her voice again, and he never should.

But, added she, neither should anybody else, for she never should speak again so long as she lived. And with this strange comfort she let him die.

Then began a new struggle, for the children pleaded that they had never offended her; there was no pretence of a cause for renewing her vow of silence against them, and begged and besought her to set it aside and come back from her terrible isolation to be once more their mother.

But still she shook her head, and only wrote out a new slip of paper:

"I promised him I never would speak again, and I won't."

And so she lived another ten years or so, and finally she died, dumb even upon her deathbed, in spite of the piteous entreaties of the children, who still loved her.

Now, after such an instance as that, does any man say that a woman cannot hold her tongue?

Of course I don't mean this as an example, nor do I think such persistency of womanly or amiable trait of character, but it surely showed strength of purpose, and from it we may fairly argue that if a woman has determined to hold her tongue she is quite capable of doing it.

Of course every one knows that a woman's tongue is far more nimble than a man's; that she has a great deal more to say, and thinks of a reply or a retort a great deal sooner than a man does; that her thoughts or fancies formulate themselves more readily, and she has a great many more of them; and for all these reasons it is all but inevitable that she should talk more than a man does, but I did not argue that she is unable to remain silent if she pleases to.

Then again, women in society have to talk more than men do—that is to say, the average woman has to talk more than the average man, or there are awful pauses which are so fatal to a social occasion.

I appeal to my sister women to bear me out in the statement that 99 per cent. of the course of conversation (as the French call it) in society, or for that matter in private, except among the nearest relatives, is borne by our sex, and I'm sure I don't know what would become of society or of man in his social relations if the women, to refute the charge of being great talkers, should form "a trust" and put up the price of speech and hoard it in the treasury of their own brains for a while.

I tried it on once myself. It was at a reception, and I was vexed at some foolish remarks some of the men had made about the loquacity of women and the impossibility of their keeping anything to themselves, so I suddenly took a resolution of silence, not so much as to tell the women whose secrecy I have told, but I resolved for once to let somebody else be at the expense of the conversation, and only to bear that burden of repose and complacent listening usually assumed by the masculine party.

It was really most amusing; the very gentleman who had been so funny at the expense of woman's loquacity was presented to me, and I smiled and bowed. He made one of those brilliant remarks about the weather usually opening a conversation. I ascended to his statement and remained silent, with my eyes fixed upon his face in the expectant attitude I have so often noticed in my masculine friends; in fact this gentleman himself wore it as that very moment. He cleared his throat, and said there was quite a crush in the rooms, and I smiled most amiably and replied, "Quite so." Then he began to fidget, glancing helplessly into my face, as much as to say, "Why don't you give me a lead?" But I remained blandly unconscious, and infused into my manner an air of waiting for him to speak that must have been simply maddening. At last he said:

"You must meet a great many people in the course of your travels."

"A great many," replied I, and closed my lips.

"And—and—I suppose you like to, don't you?"

"Like to—what?" asked I, with the same sort of judicial air I have noticed in men when they are replying to what they consider an irrational remark. And wasn't this irrational?

"Oh, see people you know, and—and all that sort of thing. Don't you like to see people?"

"Do you?" inquired I briefly, and the poor man, who thought he had at last started me off upon a topic congenial to my experience, wiped his forehead and stared aghast at finding it thus tossed back to him.

How the conversation, if you can call it so, ended I do not remember, but it certainly did not last very long, and I afterward heard that Mr. So-and-So considered Miss —— the hardest person to talk to he had ever met. I only hope he may see this letter, and learn for himself whether the self exercising exertions most women make to keep up a conversation in society is matter of derision or of admiration.

And not in society only, but in the family circle, when the hum of the house grows somewhat tired, father cozes and dispozed to grumble at everything, does it cheer and recuperate him to find a silent wife and daughters, each occupied with her own thoughts or her book, and although ready to respond to his remarks with perfect amiability, originating nothing and relapsing into silence the moment his questions are answered?

I should like to see that experiment tried, and recommend it to any woman so happy as to possess a home, and whose husband is under the impression that women are too loquacious. Don't let him have any chance to call you glum or sulky or "in the dumps." Be perfectly bright and smiling, prettily dressed and with a good dinner punctually on it, but talk say more than is absolutely necessary; don't, according to your usual wifely fashion, bring out all the little events of your day, dressed up in a fancy garb of comic or pathetic or marvelous hue; don't tell what Mrs. Jones said about Mr. Brown, nor how queerly she was dressed; don't mention what you had for lunch, nor how the policterer saved this pair of pheasants on purpose for you because last time you thanked him so prettily; don't cast off all superfluity of language and let your yes be yes, and your nay nay, in absolute strictness. I don't believe one woman in ten is able to do this a whole evening; not, mind you, because she couldn't, but because she wouldn't—her kind heart wouldn't let her; she would watch out of the corner of her eye the growing despondency, the gloom and the dullness overspreading the face of the man she loved, and all at once she would think of her reticence, laugh like a brook just breaking through the ice, perch upon her husband's knee, and bewilder him with such a sparkling freshet of chatter as that same brook may exhibit for the delight of the stately trees whose roots she refreshes and reinvigorates.

And that man, and that many, many more of his kind, knows at his heart, whatever his tongue may say, that woman's facility of speech and willingness to use it tightly is the true sunshine of his home.

And in other relations of life. A man has a woman friend whom he loves to such a pitch when he feels the need of a fresh impulse to his mental life and new hopefulness and cheer in his work, whatever that may be. It is she who does the most of the talking; sometimes he only sits and gazes at her in that helpless sort of fashion peculiar to tired men—a sort of mute appeal for aid from a discomfort too vague to put in words. Haven't we all some such friends? Don't we all relish interviews when we have resorted ourselves to talk as gayly and as hopefully as we could, perhaps openly upon the subject of our friend's own affairs, perhaps only in a vague and general way, but with the same sympathetic and recalling to the successes and gaieties, watching all the time for the moment when the unsuspecting victim of our arts begins to brighten, and straighten up, and grow himself, and resume his faith in himself and his destiny, until, when he begins to patronize and instruct us, we feel that the cure is accomplished for that time, and meekly accept the commendation he is apt to bestow upon our light heartedness and easy flow of language.

And even between lovers—yes, in that tenderest and least intellectual of relation between man and woman—the nimble tongue and lively thought of the belle is of infinite service to Romeo. The fact of being in love and engaged to be married does not materially change the mental attitude of the sexes; the man still needs to be entertained, enlivened, taken out of his commonplace routine; he needs sympathy, encouragement, advice and expostulation, and how is he to receive them except from the lips of his betrothed?

In fact, if the girl is as silent as the jibes of men might tempt her to become, she fails of half the influence she ought to have over her lover, and even of all they both, in spite of their love making, will find a good many half hours hang heavily on hand, and he will remember the cigar in his pocket, and she will stifle a little yawn and wonder what o'clock it is.

So down with the malicious and mistaken heresy that women's tongues are beyond their own control or that they run too fast! We could be very silent if we chose, but we talkout of pure charity to mankind, and women's tongues are to men's reason what champagne is to malt.

Don't you like champagne?

The Position Occupied by Women's Clubs.

The words of a New York woman—who, by the way, is not a member of any club—are interesting. "I have been wondering," she says, "if French flats have not had something to do with the evolution of club life. Twenty years ago boarding houses were the homes of the large numbers of well to do New York families. If now the case of a friend of mine, and hers was only one of many. Her husband received a salary of $6,000 a year, yet she felt that she could not keep a home separate establishment to her liking on that, and the two—they had no children—paid seventy-five dollars a week the year round for a parlor and bedroom belonging to a fashionable boarding house. They were very particular where they went and who the other inmates of the house were, but having secured a desirable place, they easily found themselves in a circle of cultivated, refined people. Several years later, six or seven at least, she tried it again, the second time with better success, because, as she told me, she had no fear of social ostracism, having left her school alumnae had a New York circle.' Today that friend is a prized member of three clubs and one of the busiest women of the lot, and is ready to rise as if the history of her experience has a meaning in relation to the development of women's clubs."—Her Point of View in New York Times.

Always Dress for Dinner.

Dressing for dinner or the evening meal, whatever it is, has a decidedly moral effect. Not that an elaborate toilet is necessary; nor is this country where, in most families, the cook is a fixture, to rise at twelve o'clock and prepare a dinner of many courses; but there is requisite for a man to don his evening clothes. But if each member of the family is required to give ten or fifteen minutes' careful attention to the toilet, the result will surely be apparent in increased courtesy among the members of the household, and a certain home dignity that is very desirable. "But," says the tired housemother, "all this involves extra expense." A little extra trouble it may be at first, but this will be more than compensated by the restful feeling it will give. Let us help you by a few suggestions, one at least.

Keep regular evening home dress, and arrange every night the becoming dishes to brighten and freshen the corsage. Lace being both pretty and inexpensive, it involves a very small outlay. The draped parts of the dress may be made of white muil, which can be washed as often as required, or of any pretty color of soft China silk. Cuffs of the same lace should be basted in the sleeves, and even a shabby gown becomes a pretty toilette that will gladden the eyes of your family. For young girls a pretty silk shirt will give a becoming change from the daily dress usually worn.—Boston Transcript.

Suggestions to the Sick.

It is quite unnecessary to caution any child not to "eat with its fingers," since that is a physiological impossibility, and it is a terrible stretch of the use of language to speak of "eating with one's fingers," when we mean to say simply the holding of food in the fingers. It is quite a respectable list of things which a child, if not the best taste, be held in the fingers when eaten instead of being lifted by fork or spoon; of course the knife is utterly tabooed. For instance

Olives, to which a fork should never be applied.

Asparagus, whether hot or cold, when served whole, as it should be.

Lettuce, which should be dipped in the dressing or in a little salt.

Celery, which may be properly placed on the tablecloth beside the plate.

Strawberries, when served with the stem on, as they are in the most elegant houses.

Bread, toast and all tarts and small cakes.

Cheese, which is invariably lifted with the fingers by the most particular people.

Even the leg or other small pieces of a bird are often taken in the fingers at fashionable dinners, and at most of the luncheons ladies pick small pieces of chicken without using a fork.—Exchange.

The Saving of Waste.

Mothers sometimes mistakenly insist that the child shall eat all upon its plate, to prevent it from being "wasted." It cannot be too often repeated to remind that this is not to be commended. A child should early be taught not to waste food, nor should he ever be permitted to render valueless that which belongs to others. But to eat food when one has had a sufficiency, so keep it from being "wasted," is not the way to teache child frugality.

To put into the stomach one ounce more of food than it needs is to overtax it; and frequently overtaxing will lead so the rebellion of stomachs as well as of people. Then the services of the physician must be had; and before we can dispense with them, the value of a barrel of flour is gone to save an ounce of food. This is not economy, neither is it common sense.

It is better to help a child to food two or three times than to load his plate so that he be in danger of leaving any. Thus may health and frugality be secured at the same time.—Health and Home.

Danger in Milk.

Tubercular meningitis is a common disease among children in large cities, where the milk supplied is always old and otherwise open to suspicion. In the light of facts developed it is fair to assume that in a large proportion of cases the cause lies in the milk. That a certain milk does not unpleasantly affect the parents is no evidence that it is free from harmful properties. Children are more susceptible to poisons than they, whether mineral, vegetable or the germs of disease.—Boston Herald.

Making the Victim Look Pleasant.

A photographer at the convention in Buffalo told a reporter of the old days in the west, when the man at the camera used to make the subject "look pleasant" by leveling a pistol at him and saying: "Look right square in the muzzle of this rer revolver, my man, and remember that I hain't agoin to hev this picture spoiled with any of your foolin."—New York Sun.

The New Navy.

The creation of the American navy of the new time began in 1883. From the close of the war up to that time the greatest republic on the globe was a byword among the nations, so far as its naval resources went. In 1881 congress began to build a navy anew. It was work from the ground up. During the years we had been living idle in warship construction, Italy, France and England had been experimenting and studying naval architecture. This had advanced with giant strides. It had been revolutionized indeed. The revolution had been accomplished by the invention of the American monitors of Ericsson. It is true, but the modern warship had far outstripped the original idea.

This was the condition of affairs when with characteristic vim the American people, through their congress, took up the task of building a navy. The rapidity with which the work has progressed has astonished Europe. The British shake their heads at the boldness of the American naval architects in designing warships according to their own ideas, but the deviations made are required by American needs, as the secretary of the navy explains.

Our navy, completed and in construction, now numbers thirty-three vessels, not counting torpedo boats and the smaller fry attached. Thirteen vessels have already been completed. These are all cruisers, armored and unarmored. The largest of them so far is the Maine, christened some six months ago in the Brooklyn navy yard, the vessel of which a newspaper wit remarked that, being named for a prohibition state, she ought to have had a bottle of cold water broken over her bows instead of a bottle of champagne. The Maine is a vessel of between 6,000 and 7,000 tons.

Fourteen ships—those already completed—and the Texas, similar to the Maine, were built according to foreign plans. Those hereafter to be constructed will be built on plans evolved at home. Among them will be five cruisers of the second class, a monitor-armored ship, a practice vessel and a harbor defense ram. These last mentioned are well on the road to completion. To build a warship requires at least two years, some requiring a much longer time. In addition are cruisers of four original types, and three heavy battleships for actual fighting near our own coast. One of these will be able to hurl 2½ tons of steel in a single broadside volley. But it is to be hoped that foreign powers who want to fight us will wait a few years.

Go Higher.

There is one feature that distinguishes the American from persons of any other nationality. He is not content with the station in which he is born, and he thinks nothing in this world in the way of riches or honors too good for him. If the American boy and girl are barefoot and live in a hovel they look steadfastly forward to the time when they shall be as rich as anybody, and have as good education and as much refinement and social prestige as anybody.

They would be recreant and unworthy the land in which they were born if they thought otherwise. They do deserve the best that there is in life, and the prospect is that they can get it. There certainly is enough material in this world to give everybody a comfortable living. With some exceptions, and it is the glory of this Union that her children go in for the best and aspire to the best. It is a wholly worthy and noble ambition to wish to take one's place among the highest, and he who has it not is unworthy a birthright in this free country. A man can do what he thinks he can do.

Keeping this fact before him, aspiring to the highest, each individual who has the large American spirit will strive on in all noble and honorable ways to advance civilization and comfort a little further than he found it, by making himself richer, healthier, handsomer and more highly educated than his parents were. Nothing less will satisfy the genius of America.

The highest inhabited point in the world is claimed to be the top of Pike's peak, on which a hotel has been built. The hotel is 14,147 feet above sea level, and is reached by a railway starting from Manitou Springs, this point itself being 8,400 feet above the sea. In order to keep the locomotive engine from slipping backward it is provided with cog-wheels, which follow a third rail, also cogged. Here will be an ascent quite equal in grandeur to that of the Rigi in Switzerland, which so many Americans travel a long journey to accomplish every summer.

It reminds us that we are a very young nation in the world's history as yet when we read of the recent death of Samuel Sands, of Baltimore, the printer who first put into type the words of "The Star Spangled Banner." Sands was ninety-one years old. He was a printer's apprentice when in 1814 he received from its author's own hands the poem. Fired with patriotic zeal the boy printed it and scattered it all over the city. He worked in the office of the Baltimore American at that time.

GENERAL GREGG ON TOP

He Wins the Fight for Auditor General.

JOHN G. MORRISON FOR TREASURER.

Close of the Pennsylvania Republican State Convention at Harrisburg—The Amended Platform as Adopted Praises Blaine, Wanamaker and Harrison.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 20.—The state Republican convention nominated General David McMurtrie Gregg for auditor general and John W. Morrison for state treasurer. When nominations were in order H. G. Bauer, of Reading, named General Gregg for auditor general and James B. Dinworth, of Lycoming, and R. H. Koch, of Schuylkill, seconded the nomination. Ex-Lieutenant Governor Davies named Senator Amos H. Mylin for the same office. Gilbert S. Price was also nominated. Mr. Gregg was nominated on the first ballot, the vote being: Gregg, 196; Mylin, 62; Price, 37.

Morrison for State Treasurer.

A. C. Robertson, of Allegheny, nominated Colonel M. S. Quay for state treasurer. Harry M. Hall seconded the nomination. F. A. Hays, of Venango, put in nomination Caleb C. Thompson, of Warren, who was speaker of the last Pennsylvania house of representatives. Messrs. Wilbur and Culbertson, of Mifflin, nominated Gilles D. Price, stating that he would accept. It being evident that Mr. Morrison would be nominated the name of Mr. Price was withdrawn by Mr. Culbertson. The vote stood: Morrison, 167; Thompson, 84; Price, 2.

The nomination of Morrison was made unanimous. Chairman Quay, of the Republican state committee, offered a resolution, which was adopted, that hereafter the candidates, in conjunction with the state committee, select the state chairman. Gregg and Morrison each made a short speech of acceptance, after which the convention adjourned sine die.

The Platform's Plain Talk.

When the platform came up there was some opposition to the Blaine plank as reported by the committee. As originally prepared, the plank indorsed Mr. Blaine as the available candidate for the presidency in 1892. The committee struck out this, but Mr. Culberson, of Mifflin, moved its reinsertion as follows:

In view of his magnificent achievements in diplomacy and statecraft, we earnestly express the hope that the Republican national convention in 1892 may place in nomination for president for the presidency—which nomination we feel assured will be ratified by a triumphant election—the Hon. James G. Blaine, of Maine.

Mr. Culberson made an impassioned speech urging that Pennsylvania's favorite son should be honored. Mr. Willard, of Lackawanna, declared that no man had done more for James G. Blaine than himself, yet he did not consider that this was the proper time for the passage of such a resolution. The question on the adoption of the amendment was put and amid much confusion the chair declared carried, but the decision was reconsidered upon protests from various parts of the house. Just as a demand for the yeas and nays was about to be complied with Mr. Culberson withdrew his amendment and the platform was adopted.

The Platform.

The report of the committee on resolutions was submitted by Chairman Magee. As adopted by the convention it read as follows:

1. The Republican party of Pennsylvania, in convention assembled, reaffirming the cardinal principles of the party enunciated by the national convention of 1888, approves the wise course of the Republicans of the Fifty-first congress in incorporating them into the laws of the land, makes the following declaration:

1. It heartily indorses the broad and statesmanlike administration of President Harrison, which has exhibited an intelligent, inflexible purpose to execute the federal laws, maintain the dignity of American institutions and insure the continuance and growth of prosperity and peace in the nation.

Praise for Wanamaker and Blaine.

2. We view with peculiar satisfaction the direction of affairs of the postoffice department by our distinguished fellow-townsman, whose energetic, business-like and comprehensive administration of its affairs has advanced the postal service of the nation to a plane never previously attained.

3. It has been with especial gratification that the Republicans of this commonwealth have observed the brilliant administration of the state department by one of Pennsylvania's gallant sons, whose superb diplomacy has elicited the hearts of all Americans, exacted from foreign peoples a degree of respect and admiration for the United States flag hitherto unequaled and opened wide to us in other nations commercial gates heretofore closed. These magnificent achievements justify confidence and furnish new occasion for us now to indorse the illustrious leadership of the Republicans of Pennsylvania to her most distinguished son, the Hon. James G. Blaine.

The McKinley Bill.

4. We cordially indorse the action of the Republican congress in passing the McKinley bill, by which the policy of protection is made to protect the material interests of American labor. This beneficient measure has, in spite of misguided business alarms and misrepresentation, already brought about, and will in the future continue to bring about, a broader and more settled prosperity to all classes, particularly to the operative, the mechanic, the miner and the farmer.

5. We favor the metallism and indorse the action of the Fifty-first congress in providing for the purchase and coinage of all the silver produced from American mines and we recommend such tariff duties as will protect our country and our currency from the debasement which will surely follow if this nation is made the dumping ground for all the silver of the world.

6. We reaffirm our devotion to the welfare of those who sacrificed property, home, health and life for the nation's honor during the late war and we cordially approve the action of success ful Republican congressmen, particularly the Fifty-first, in spite of malicious and unreasoning Democratic opposition, in providing proper and adequate financial aid to deserving veterans still surviving and to the widows and orphans of those who have entered the bivouac of the dead.

For the Laborer.

7. The Republican party of Pennsylvania has never hesitated to pledge itself to reforms demanded by public sentiment, and has never faltered in carrying out the promises so made by according to the people what we have recently placed upon our statute books numerous laws having for their object the amelioration and advancement of labor in this commonwealth, thereby winning the unqualified and public approval of the wage earners of the commonwealth.

8. In accordance with the promise contained in our platform of last year and mainly in compliance with the expressed wishes of various labor organizations, we have made provision for the submission to the people at November next of the question of holding a constitutional convention with a view to such changes in the organic law of the commonwealth as may be deemed expedient.

Ballot Reform.

9. Also, in conformity with the promise made a year ago, we have secured a law having in view an absolutely pure and unrestricted ballot. We pledge the party to such changes and improvements in the law, as in actual operation of this law may prove to be essential to the accomplishment of its purposes, and to the end that the people may have an opportunity to express their will, by ballot, upon the question of holding a constitutional convention, we promise, with a view to eliminating the provision in our present constitution compelling the numbering of ballots to enact the necessary legislation for submitting a special constitutional amendment upon this particular subject to the people of the state at the earliest day possible.

Taxes.

10. Furthermore, in compliance with pledges made to the people, the Republican party, having in view the equalization of taxation, has secured measures whereby, mainly through an increase in taxation on corporations, the state appropriations to the public schools has been increased from $2,000,000 to $5,000,000 annually and the personal property tax returned to the counties increased from $500,000 to $1,700,000 annually. It has further provided for the return of all the retail liquor licenses, aggregating about $1,000,000 annually, to the counties, cities, boroughs and townships. We pledge ourselves to renewed efforts in the same direction, to the end that our revenue laws may be so revised as to treat with equality all the various industries of the common wealth, thus removing the load of the tax farmer from unfair discrimination to which it has heretofore been subjected.

Governor Pattison Denounced.

11. We denounce the unscrupulous partisanship of Governor Pattison in vetoing all the appropriation bills passed in compliance with constitutional direction by the late Republican legislature, and in negativing other legislation, particularly the compulsory education bill, having for its object the moral and material interests of the people of Pennsylvania.

12. We commend the Republican mayor, city solicitor, county controller and district attorney of Philadelphia for their discovery and prompt prosecution of those guilty of official malfeasance. Diagnosing as a non-partisan Weeds and Bardsley's arise in all parties. The Republican party challenges itself and others to punish official dishonesty wherever found, and we urge the before mentioned officers to persevere in the conviction any and every guilty official, without regard to his politics.

13. We are in favor of the prompt repeal by the legislature of all corporate tax laws levied by the state, and of such amendments to the revenue and other laws as will effectually promote the orderly collection of the lawful and safe control and the prompt and proper disbursement, not only of the moneys of the commonwealth, but of all of its citizen, borough and township, that the laws should be so improved as absolutely to prevent the use of all public funds, state or county, for the corrupt purposes of either office or state.

14. We reaffirm the unswerving devotion of Pennsylvania Republicans to the supreme and sovereign rights of every lawful citizen, rich or poor, native or naturalized, black or white, to cast one free ballot in public elections and to have that ballot only counted, and we demand effective legislation within constitutional limits to secure that integrity and purity of federal elections throughout the Union.

Governor Campbell Simply Weary.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 20.—In regard to his election Governor Campbell says: "I am simply suffering from too close application to work this sultry weather, as hundreds of other people are. I intend to do a full man's work in the campaign, and am not looking for a substitute."

Want Fortune to Succeed Douglass.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 20.—The Douglass league, of this city, named in honor of Fred Douglass, has decided to ask President Harrison to name T. Thomas Fortune, of New York, as Mr. Douglass' successor at Hayti.

The Ocala Platform Indorsed.

LITTLE ROCK, Aug. 20.—At the session of the state alliance the Ocala platform and subtreasury plan were indorsed.

The Garfield Cottage Sold.

ELBERON, N. J., Aug. 20.—The Elberon hotel, including the Garfield cottage, where President Garfield died, has been sold at auction. The first bid was $60,000, the next $61,000 by Rhinelander Dillon, and it was finally knocked down at $62,000 to one of the trustees. The price at which the property was sold is said to be about half its actual value.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Aug. 20.—The I. O. O. F. elected Jacob Stern, of Buffalo, grand master; Charles H. Morgan, of New York, deputy grand master, and Edward L. Gaul, of Hudson, grand warden. The next session will be held at Buffalo.

MALLEY'S NEW MYSTERY

He Tried to Settle with Marie Reinhart.

WHERE IS THE WOMAN AT PRESENT

Two of Edward Malley's Alleged Agents and Malley Himself Have Disappeared and the Girl's Attorneys Believe That He Knows Where She Has Gone To.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 20.—The story concerning the disappearance of Mrs. Marie Reinhart, who is the plaintiff in a suit for breach of promise of marriage against Edward Malley, caused much excitement in this city. Mr. Malley was not to be found at his residence, 22 Derby avenue, in the suburbs of the city. The pretty serving maid said that he was out of town. One of the neighbors intimated that he was in the house and that he would not be seen today by any one.

She Would Not Kill Herself.

Charles S. Hamilton, the lawyer for the plaintiff, says that he does not believe that a woman who has gone through all the trouble and privation that Mrs. Reinhart has since her meeting with Malley would commit suicide. She has always kept him advised of her movements and conduct, and he does not believe that she would go away of her own accord without letting him know. There was also talk about the case, he said, that he could not divulge at present, but he hinted, from letters which he would be able to produce at the trial, that his client had the strongest case.

Malley Tried to Settle.

Malley, he said, had tried to effect a settlement with Mrs. Reinhart behind his back. Mrs. Reinhart was willing to settle as late as Aug. 9, and then she said nothing about going away. Before she became acquainted with Edward Malley Mrs. Reinhart was a good woman, Lawyer Hamilton declared, and no one could say a word against her. Whatever she had been since that time was what Edward Malley had made her.

To Get Her Out of the Way.

"There is no doubt in my mind," said Mr. Hamilton, "that he is not a bit too good to get her out of the way in some manner, so that she will not appear against him.

"There has been his evident plan ever since he found that that proceedings would be began against him. It is said by the neighbors that no one visits him nor does he visit his neighbors. Ever since the trial of James and Walter Malley and Blanche Douglass for the murder of Jennie Cramer he has led an almost isolated life."

His Counsel Denies It.

Lawyer James H. Webb, of the firm of Alling & Webb, who are attorneys for Edward Malley, denies that the intimation that Mrs. Reinhart has come to any harm or is restrained of her liberty at the instigation of Mr. Malley or any persons in his employ is absolutely untrue. I am, of course, unable to say where Mrs. Reinhart is."

Both of His Tools Have Disappeared.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—A significant fact in connection with Mrs. Mary Reinhart's disappearance is that "Matt" Ten Eyck, the private detective, and Frank Keats, the cabman, both of whom are known to have been employed by Malley, have also disappeared. Neither has been seen at the places he was accustomed to visit since Monday, Aug. 10. The assumption, therefore, that they are directly responsible for Mrs. Reinhart's absence is a reasonable one.

Keats occupied a room in the house 261 West Thirty-fifth street. The woman whose tenant he was told me yesterday that he had not been there since a week ago last Monday. She said he had informed her that he was working for a very rich man named Malley, and that he would soon have loads of money.

He Blames Malley.

The publication of the fact of Mrs. Reinhart's disappearance brought to this city David Callahan, of New Haven, law partner of Charles S. Hamilton, Mrs. Reinhart's counsel in her suit against Edward Malley.

He said he was unable to account for Mrs. Reinhart's going away except on the theory that Malley was responsible for it. Malley, he said, was an experienced hand in dealing with women of whose society he was fond. Mr. Ridgley Ryan, A. P. Earle: Westmoreland, James S. Beacom A. L. Loucks; Wyoming, Florence E. The Garfield Cottage Sold.

ELBERON, N. J., Aug. 20.—The Elberon hotel, including the Garfield cottage, where President Garfield died, has been sold at auction. The first bid was $60,000, the next $61,000 by Rhinelander Dillon, and it was finally knocked down at $62,000 to one of the trustees. The price at which the property was sold is said to be about half its actual value.

Florists Choose Officers.

TORONTO, Aug. 20.—At this morning's session of the International Florists' convention Washington was selected as the next place of meeting. The following officers were elected by acclamation: Vice president, W. B. Smith, Washington; secretary, H. J. Stewart, Boston; treasurer M. A. Hunt, Indiana.

To Examine Elliott Roosevelt.

The I. O. O. F. Elect Officers.

KINGSTON, N. Y., Aug. 20.—The I. O. O. F. elected Jacob Stern, of Buffalo, grand master; Charles H. Morgan, of New York, deputy grand master, and Edward L. Gaul, of Hudson, grand warden. The next session will be held at Buffalo.

ELOPEMENT BY WHOLESALE.

Two Married Brothers Run Away with a Wife and Her Married Daughter.

PORT JEFFERSON, L. I., Aug. 20.—When the most prominent as well as the most romantic denizens of Port Jefferson are deeply agitated by an extraordinary double elopement. Not only are two young wives left disconsolate and two fond husbands mourn the loss of their better halves, but the fugitive men are brothers, while the women accompanying them are mother and daughter of a well known resident of Port Jefferson.

Charles Freeman, a married man with a wife and several children, is accused of having eloped with Mrs. Sylvester Skidmore, who a few months ago was the charming young bride of an estimable young man. Nathan Freeman, the brother of Charles, is credited with having carried off at the same time Mrs. Ezra Williamson, the stepmother of Mrs. Skidmore Never before in the history of Long Island it is said, did two brothers elope with mother and daughter.

MURDERER LINGO TALKS.

He Intimates That Chalkley Leconey Killed His Niece.

CAMDEN, N. J., Aug. 20.—For the first time since the jury found him guilty of the murder of Mrs. Annie Miller, Francis Lingo has talked of anything yesterday. Under Sheriff Porter was passing his cell and was surprised when the negro jumped to his feet and said excitedly and with much earnestness:

"If some one had been convicted of the murder of Annie Leconey, I tell you that Mrs. Miller would be alive today. I wish to add that if I had run away, as Murray did, I would never have been tried for murder, but some other negro would have been arrested and tried."

This was all Lingo would say, though Under Sheriff Porter tried to get him to talk more. As the "some one" mentioned by Lingo was Chalkley Leconey, who was acquitted of his niece's murder a year ago, Lingo's hint has created a sensation about the courthouse and jail.

DARING BURGLARY AT ALBANY.

The Miscreant Held Up Mr. and Mrs. Mills and Got $1,000.

ALBANY, Aug. 20.—The house of John G. Mills, on upper Madison avenue, was entered by a masked burglar at an early hour by means of a ladder through the bathroom window. Mrs. Mills was awakened by the flash of a dark lantern in her face. Before she had time to scream or cry the burglar covered her with a pistol, at the same time commanding her to be quiet. The man then compelled Mr. Mills to take a diamond ring from his finger and hand it over to him.

The burglar overlooked the diamond earrings worn by Mrs. Mills, as well as the greater part of the lady's diamonds in a bureau, securing only about $1,000 worth of jewelry. There appears to have been but one man in the robbery. This is the second time in two years that burglars have been at work in this city in thirty years. There is no clew.

Senator Hoar Talks Politics.

WORCESTER, Mass., Aug. 20.—Senator Hoar has returned here from Bar Harbor. When asked concerning Mr. Blaine, he said that "Mr. Blaine had been and would be had for some years past in all respects." Asked about the state election, he said: "I have not taken any part in the selection of a candidate for governor this fall. The choice seems now to be between two gentlemen, either of whom would make an admirable governor. Both Mr. Crapo and Mr. Allen have been distinguished in the national house of representatives."

The Peet Lowell's Will.

BOSTON, Aug. 20.—The will of James Russell Lowell substantially gives the whole of his property to his daughter and her children. He has conveyed to Harvard college such books from his library as the library of the college does not possess. He gives all his manuscripts to Charles Eliot Norton, executor of his literary executor. The amount of property left by Mr. Lowell was not large.

THE PRESIDENT SPEAKS

What He Had to Say to the Vermonters.

THE COUNTRY'S GREAT FUTURE

The Nation's Chief Executive Believes That She Will Yet Hold Her Head Even Higher Among the Globe's Prosperities—Vermont and Her Patriots.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 20.—After leaving the banquet last evening President Harrison was driven to the home of General McCullough, in North Bennington, where he was entertained at dinner. The other guests of General and Mrs. McCullough were ex-Minister and Mrs. Phelps, Attorney General Miller and family, Secretary Proctor, Senator Morrill, Messrs. Seward and Webb, Horatio Loomis and wife, of Burlington; Charles Phelps, Russell Harrison, Secretary Halford and Messrs. Cole and Tibbott.

The president left for Mount McGregor at 9 o'clock this morning.

Cabinet Members Tumbled.

Late in the afternoon while the president was speaking the platform behind him broke down. The members of the cabinet and other distinguished guests went down with it, but the drop was only a slight one and nobody was hurt.

The president was greeted with "three cheers and a tiger" and with the cry, "What's the matter with Harrison? He's all right!" The president highly complimented the orator of the day, Hon. E. J. Phelps, and praised Vermont for her noble part in the revolution and for the illustrious statesmen she has given to the country. "I found," he added, "when the difficult task of making a cabinet was before me I could not get along without a Vermont stick in it." Continuing, the president said:

The Foreign Markets.

We are today approaching the anniversary of a century of existence, a century of unexampled prosperity, insignificant the stores gathered at Bennington in '77 compared with those storehouses bursting with plenty today. We ought to be grateful as well as a prosperous people. European dissensions offer ready market for all our cereals and we shall grow richer as they take food from our storehouses.

At the Banquet.

At the banquet on the grounds of the Soldiers' home at 4 o'clock tables had been set for 2,500 persons, but they were insufficient to accommodate all who flocked to participate in the festivities. There were probably 5,000 persons present. Seated at the banquet, in company with President Harrison, were Governor Page, General Veazey, ex-Minister Phelps, Hon. Charles Parkhurst, Governor Russell, of Massachusetts; Governor Tuttle, of New Hampshire; General Alger and many others. The president was introduced by General Veazey, and said in part:

Notwithstanding what my friend, General Veazey, has described as the "embarrassed condition" of my voice I will respond to his request to say a word to you. I know that General Veazey has been put in charge of the transportation lines of the country. But I did not expect to find him in charge of what the boys used to call the "water line." [Laughter.] It seems that his capacity for usefulness in the public service is so great and so diversified that you have called upon him to conduct the exercises of this magnificent occasion. He is a most excellent lyiterature commerce commissioner [applause] as the records of your state, and I have no criticism of him as president of the day, except that he calls too much attention to me. [Laughter and applause.] But, my fellow citizens, there is much in this occasion that is full of instruction to the strangers who by your hospitable invitation have the privilege of meeting with you.

A Tribute to New England.

Wherever men may have been born within this galaxy of great states which makes the greater Union, there is respect and honor for the New Hampshire character. It has been a source of strength to the nation in its development in material things. It has furnished to literature and to science some of the largest contributions, but more than all this, it has done a great work for all the states, and especially the states of the west and northwest, in which its enterprising sons have found new homes, in establishing everywhere a love of social order and patriotic devotion to the Union of states. [Applause.] If we seek to find the institutions of New England that have formed the character of its own people and have exercised a stronger molding influence than that of any other section upon our people, we shall find them, in their temples, in their free schools, in their town meetings and in their God fearing homes. [Applause.] The sentiment of those who fought at Bennington, Concord, Lexington, Bunker Hill and Saratoga was not of a high trust in God. They were men who, fearing God, had naught else to fear.

That devotion to local self government which originated and has long maintained the town meeting, establishing and perpetuating a true democracy, an equal, full participation and responsibility for all public affairs on the part of every citizen was the cause of the deranged ment of the love of social order and respect for law which has characterized your communities, has made them safe and commendable abodes for your people.

The Unity of the States.

The interaction which you have sent into the south to develop its industries, to open its mines, to set up factories and furnaces is another marvelous work in unifying our people. I do not believe there has been a time in our history when there was a deeper, broader love for the unity of the states, for the flag that emblematizes this unity and for the constitution which consecrates it. [Applause.]

Hope of a Great Future.

Secure to our own institutions, enriched by proud history established, I believe we have reached a time when we may take a large part in the great transactions of the world. [Cheers.] I believe in our power as a people to so demonstrate that the American flag shall again be seen upon the sea—[applause]—and that our merchants and mariners shall enjoy the profits and honors of the commerce that is now offered for extending our commerce into the markets of Central and South America. [Cheers.] I believe that conservative views of finance will prevail in this country. I believe that an un wise discontent and temporary distress will not tempt our people to forsake those safe lines of public administration which commercial adversity always rests. [Applause.]

As long as the general government furnishes at the moment of the greatest of our great business transactions, I believe we will insist, as I have said before, that every dollar issued by the national power or coin, shall be as good, and be kept as good, as any other dollar that issues. [Cheers.] The purity, the equality of what we call the coin, must be preserved, or an element of moral falsity and of bankruptcy will be introduced into all business transactions. While I can and it will be attained I will not attempt to sketch, but I do not hesitate to say that I feel myself, in the public interest, pledged so far as in me lies to maintain that equality between our circulating money that is essential to the perfect use of all. [Prolonged applause.]

In closing upon the president paid a touching tribute to the New England mother for her part in the revolution.

Presented with a Medal.

When the president concluded his remarks John R. Carney, chairman of the citizen's committee, advanced to the side of the president's table and presented Mr. Harrison with a gold medal as a memento of the celebration.

It Was Marsh's Son.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 20.—The government experts yesterday found in the Keystone national bank vault a box which is supposed to have been the personal property of Gideon W. Marsh. A number of papers and documents were found in the box, and also a clearing house due bill issued by the Spring Garden national bank for $24,000 and a draft of the Spring Garden bank on the Chase national bank of New York for $25,000. Both the due bill and draft are dated Feb. 16, 1888. They have never been cancelled.

Senator Hale's Complaint.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The secretary of the treasury has received a letter from Senator Hale calling attention to the fact that a systematic attempt is being made to evade the navigation laws which exclude foreign vessels from the coastwise trade, the plan being to ship freight from New York to San Francisco and other Pacific ports by foreign vessel to Liverpool or Antwerp and thence in another vessel to that port to San Francisco.

A Wreck on the Central.

NEW YORK, Aug. 20.—At 6:40 o'clock last night a passenger train on the New York Central and Hudson River railroad going south left Syracuse. Duryell collided with the Albany express going south. The engine attached to the eastbound train was demolished and the forward end of the baggage car was torn off. No one was injured.

Veterans at Franklin.

FRANKLIN, Pa., Aug. 20.—The northwestern association of the G. A. R. is holding its eighth annual reunion in this city. Over 4,000 veterans participated in the parade. A grand dinner was served later. Camp fires were held in the court house and a Cygnet banquet. Governor and ex-Governor Curtin made an address.

Killed by Her Lover.

LANCASTER, Pa., Aug. 20.—Mrs. Amanda Hunter, a widow, aged forty-three, was shot and killed in the Franklin hotel last evening by her lover, Lemon Ellsworth, aged twenty-eight. Ellsworth then committed suicide. Both parties lived at Ephrata. No cause is known for the tragedy.

Ocean Time Telegraphers Meet.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 20.—The eleventh annual meeting of the Ocean Telegraphers' association is being held here. President George C. Maynard, W. J. Deary, of New York, secretary, and about 100 others are present from all parts of the country.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERASTUS LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.
There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bros. do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY HOLMES,
Head gardener for Dr. Leggett.
Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
H. H. MCCLELLAND, Landscape gardener.
They made so good a job of our mower as any one could wish.
PATRICK KELLEY,
Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.
The above are but a few of the pleasant words we got for our efforts to please our friends. We have contented their mowers to cut even, and at shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing we put on sale the most particular owner of a lawn, as far as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

WOMAN'S HOME

RENOVATING OLD CHAIRS.

Work That Is Very Inexpensive Yet Adds Much to the Appearance of a Room.

An old chair, if it is a rocker or an armchair, will often pay well for the trouble of renovating. A few hours' hunt in many old country carpet stalls will discover which are delightful in shape and strong in make, but which for some trifling mishap have been relegated to the attic. If they are chairs of two or three generations ago there is all the more reason for believing that they are sincere in make and worth elevating to a better place in the household. Unless they are old mahogany, it is probably as well to clean them thoroughly at home and enamel them, sending them first to the cabinetmaker's merely for repairs and glue.

In case of good mahogany it is an extravagance to trust it to amateur hands to clean, or to cover the beautiful and costly wood with enamel. An old oak or cherry chair that has become shabby may very well be repaired and enameled, as all enamel work that is properly done is done on hard wood.

Begin by thoroughly scrubbing the chair with strong sal soda and water, scrape it carefully to remove any old flesh that has been put on it, but not enough to scratch the wood. Coarse or moderately coarse sandpaper will help in this process of removing the polish of both the surface and bringing the chair down to the raw wood. When the chair is thoroughly dry and clean, and after it has thoroughly rejained, paint it with a coat of the best English enamel. Cream white or any tint you may choose may be used.

After this first coat is dry put on another and when this is dry rub it down very gently and carefully with a very fine sandpaper to remove any unevenness in the coats. Apply another coat, and if necessary another, and then the chair is ready for cushions. All chairs of this kind should be cushioned. The best material for stuffing cushions is good hair or feathers if you wish a very soft chair, but there are various cheaper materials that make very good fillings.

A pretty cretonne that can be bought in yard width from thirty-five to fifty cents a yard can be used for covering the cushions. The colors and style of the cushions will depend upon the style of chair. Amateurs do not often succeed in producing very satisfactory results in upholstering that is "nailed down," so we do not advise any one to undertake this work unless she understands her business. Movable cushions, which are laid on and tied on in place, on the contrary, are very easily made at home.

If the chair is to be used in the parlor or in a daintily furnished guest room, and you have any skill with your brush, paint in an indistinct, sketchy style a few sprays of fine flowers on the enamel. A cream white chair painted with tracries suggesting a rose vine, leaf and flower is very pretty. Use cushions of India silk or brocade in roseate or olive green tints in such a chair, or make cushions of a pale blue India silk, patterned with a tangle of rose vines or powdered in a Dresden design with posebuds.—New York Tribune.

How to Act When Baby Is Choking.

Mothers need not be told that children of a certain age have an unconquerable tendency to make the mouth a receptacle for every small substance they pick up. As a consequence choking, gagging or choking is not of infrequent occurrence.

At such times more than likely the mother in her fright loses all self possession, and frantically catching her strangling little one screams the injunction to "spit it out," and at the same time emphasizes this with a rough shaking.

Even if the victim of the accident could do as told, which is seldom possible, he would be rattled out of his senses and try to cry in terror, and thus make matters worse.

Unless the offending substance is quickly dislodged from the throat the frightened mother is pretty certain to lay the unfortunate across her knees, on his back, and thrust her forefinger into his throat and push it aimlessly about. This part of the treatment is all very well when intelligently applied; but such position of the child makes the danger of strangling infinitely greater.

A child in this state should be caught up by the waist and laid across the lap, face downward, but with his chest well over one of the knees so that the head is suspended. The mother should then slap him forcibly several times between the shoulders. If the substance is not dislodged, she should then lay him on the table, still face down, with head well over the edge, and put her forefinger gently into his mouth, carrying it back as far as possible.

This will often quickly cause vomiting, a fortunate occurrence, and if it does not, she should delicately feel around the throat for the offender. The force used should be that only which is necessary to keep the finger in the mouth; none will be needed, nor must any be used, while searching for the substance.

No mother, no matter how cool and self possessed when this accident occurs, can treat her own child as skillfully as she would the child of another. Hence it is always best to leave this work for some one at hand. But if alone, the mother must do the best she can. And if she will only believe the truth, that of all the many accidents of this kind but very few indeed result fatally, it must lessen her terror somewhat and steady her nerves, which happy result will greatly favor success in the treatment. It is scarcely necessary to add that a physician should be sent for without delay in all such accidents.—Boston Herald.

How to Make a Bed "Comfortable."

It is a simple matter to make a bed "comfortable" at home. Materials for a bed "comfortable" which will cost three or four dollars in the shops already made up may be purchased for one dollar. The patent cotton batting which comes in even layers stitched in place by machine saves all annoyance in arranging the cotton, and may be easily laid on and taken off. The prettiest material for covering a "comfortable" of cotton is common cheesecloth. It requires two yards for each side of a "comfortable," and from three to four rolls of patent cotton batting. This amount of material makes a "comfortable" two and a half yards long by two wide, a size larger than is usually found for sale.

A pretty one may be made of pale blue cheesecloth on one side and pale pink on the other, tacked together with pale blue worsted and buttonholed with blue worsted around the edge. Cream white and lavender make another dainty combination. These light, inexpensive bed coverings are especially fine in cottage rooms, where they are in request all the warmth needed on hot nights. One of the prettiest "comfortables" of this kindness is made of pale yellow cheesecloth tacked with white worsted. It looks particularly well at the foot of a white counterpane in a white and yellow room.

The process of quilting is simple. If you do not have a quilting frame the materials can be spread over a bed. It is not so convenient, however, and if you have a number of "comfortables" to make, it pays to get a quilting frame. In any case, however, put down one side of the cheesecloth. It should measure two yards by two and a half. Roll out the cotton and lay it evenly on this, tacking the breadths of cotton together, where they lap, with long basting threads. Put the upper side of the cheesecloth over all evenly. Begin nine inches from the edge to put in a row of tacking, making each tack firm with a little knot. Continue the tacking nine inches apart.

Make a second row, beginning the tacking nine inches from the first row, but alternating so that they fall between and not opposite the other tackings. Continue till the "comfortable" is finished, rolling it up as it is tacked. When it is all done turn in the edges, stitch them together evenly and cover the edge with coarse buttonhole stitch in worsted.—New York Tribune.

Women Who Wear Expensive Gowns.

To decide who has the finest wardrobe among the fashionable women of the metropolis is a bewildering and practically hopeless task. Like the gems which the women wear, their gowns are sometimes of great fortunes and are of about endless variety. Some of the women in high life own as many as 100 dresses—toilets or costumes selected for special occasions, such as calls, the opera, dinners, afternoon receptions, the theater and the promenade. Besides these necessary state gowns, the fashionable woman must include in her personal wardrobe probably ten or fifteen tea gowns of different designs, and she must also have numerous carriage and shopping costumes and probably half a dozen house dresses. Very often the latter may be ordinary and inexpensive "rigs."

Probably the most expensively dressed woman in society is Mrs. George B. De Forest, who prefers American dressmakers, and who has most of her gowns made right here in New York. They are always of the costliest material and richly trimmed. She has a great variety of dresses, each of which cost dizzying sums. While her personal wardrobe may not be the most extensive or costliest Mrs. Prescott Lawrence is considered by competent critics to be the most stylish woman in society in the matter of dress. She always dresses with admirable taste, and has the reputation of being able to wear the plainest gown with a grace that tells the eye.

Mrs. William B. Astor's wardrobe is, as might be imagined, an extensive one, containing innumerable valuable bits of finery. All her ball, opera, reception and other elaborate gowns are made in Paris.

The women of the Vanderbilt family—Mrs. Cornelius, Mrs. William K. and Mrs. Fred W.—also order their gowns in Paris when they take their customary trip across the ocean. Of the trio Mrs. Fred W. is the least exacting as to dress. She has fine clothes, and no doubt plenty of them, but she does not make a special study of her toilets.—New York Sun.

Old Ways.

"What in the world are you doing, my dear?" asked a matron of years and experience, as she entered the parlor and found a married lady in her neighborhood. "Why, you will ruin your finish! Putting it in water! Whoever heard of such a thing!"

"Well," was the quiet reply, "what should I do? Eat dirt and all? For that is what I must do if I can my fruit without rinsing it. Oh, yes, I know that would say, and I have had it beaten into my ears for years; but all the same I wash my fruit, and, if it is carefully done, I don't think it does it any harm. Of course, I don't allow the berries to stay in the water, but I rinse them thoroughly and relish them much better in consequence."

"Just look here. This water is actually black, and as I pour it out there is at least a teaspoonful of sand and dirt at the bottom of the pan. Certainly you would not find food as appetizing when it is full of sand and scraps. I know you will say that it destroys the flavor of the fruit, but I cannot see how it does. A slight shower of rain often freshens the berries while yet they are on the vines, and a little dash of cold water must have a like effect.

"The cells which hold the juices are not broken, and so no water enters into the fruit. Even though there were the most trifling loss of flavor, which I am not willing to admit, I think it would be more than made up for by the delicacy of perfectly clean fruit. Almost all of our berries are picked by careless, dirty, sunburned hands, and it is a mystery to me how any one can eat them at all without washing. I put every sort of fruit into water, and after a moment's whirling about, remove it and let it drain. This has been the practice in our family for many years, and we have never been able to discover that the fruit lost any of its flavor."—New York Ledger.

Over Twenty Years a Preacher!

Rev. Phoebe A. Hanaford is probably as widely known as any woman minister. Being asked for reminiscences of twenty years in the pulpit she writes: "It was in the fall of 1868, while I was editing the magazine called The Ladies' Repository, then published in Boston, that a gentleman rushed up to me one day in a railway station and told me that Olympia Brown begged me to go in her stead to preach next day in South Canton, Mass. I had spoken once or twice in a little house out on Cape Cod, but had not thought of becoming a preacher. Still I went, and after ward Miss Brown opened the way for me so that I received a call to a parish in Hingham. I was ordained there as a Universalist minister in February, 1868."

Mrs. Hanaford has held pastorates in Waltham, Mass., in New Haven, in Jersey City (where her salary for three years was $2,500 a year) and again in New Haven. She has many stories to tell of the man who smoked, the minister's Monday meeting to drive her out through her distaste for tobacco, and of kind words spoken and help given. She has also preached four sermons on one Sunday in four different towns, riding twenty-eight miles in a carriage to do it. She has performed the marriage ceremony for 1,000 couples, and has acted as chaplain of the Connecticut senate.—Chicago Tribune.

A Dainty Jewel Case.

Here is a jewel case, dainty enough and pretty enough for Queen Titania herself. And this is the way it is made: Take a piece of yellow satin ribbon five inches and hem the four edges with yellow embroidery silk. Make a small bag of yellow satin, silk and stitch it on the lid very firmly. There must be a narrow yellow ribbon in the top of the bag so that it can be drawn tightly together and fastened securely. Over this is painted on the white kid in letters of gold the legend: "For rings and things." Under the bag there is a yellow cushion. This is very flat, in fact, it can scarcely be called a cushion at all, but it will be found a most useful article, as on it are put all the pretty and fancy pins so dear to the feminine heart.

And last there is a larger silk bag. This can hold bangles and all large pieces of jewelry. Scissors, a piece of chamois skin, some jewelry soap and a small brush are kept in this bag. Cut another piece of kid the same size as the first. On this paint either golden rod or dandelions. The two parts are stitched together with fine yellow silk. This little jewel case can be rolled up so as to occupy very little space in a grip or trunk, and when opened it makes a pretty toilet accessory.—New York Advertiser.

Homemade Furniture.

Homemade furniture is rarely successful and more rarely economical. Occasionally a husband or wife has a gift at carpentry, and can do wonders. If the young husband can build furniture so well that he would not hesitate to offer to sell it, with a reasonable chance of getting a purchaser, let him build all he can for his home. It will be good, and of as much comfort to the household as the daisy meadows which he may have the skill to fashion. But let the ordinary wielder of the hammer, saw and plane beware. The materials used will usually cost half enough more to buy the finished article at a reliable shop. After the furniture is done, and money, time and strength have been devoted to it, what is the result? A "finished up" article that is rarely comfortable, generally cumbersome and will come to pieces within a year. A chair made out of a barrel is always a barrel, even though covered with raw silk and adorned with velours squares. Far better an honest cane seated rocker than such a hypocritical, vulgar makeshift. —Agnes B. Ormsbee in Harper's Bazar.

Common Sense for the Kitchen.

The main causes of failure in cookery are lack of care in detail and ignorance of nature's laws. Emerson has said: "We must learn the homely laws of fire and water; we must feed, wash, plant and build."

Exactness in measurement and care in scraping dishes are essential; it is not safe to "guess." If syrup is measured or an egg beaten, and either poured into a mixture without rinsing cup or bowl, the proportions cannot be exact. Nor, in order to rinse a dish is it allowable to waste two or three spoonfuls of liquid beyond the limits of the receipt; but measure dry ingredients first, then syrups and lastly the required milk or water.

Temperature is the rock on which many a cook wrecks the work of her hands without knowing the cause of disaster. May the day soon come when all ovens, each bearing a high degree of heat shall be considered as great a necessity in a kitchen as a teakettle.—Arthur's Home Magazine.

The Evolution of the Dolman.

During the winter of 1874-5 appeared the dolman mantelet of black velvet, with half fitting back and long sleeves, which only covered the upper arm. The fronts were ornamented (?) with patch pockets, upon which were bows of blue ribbon, and the sailor collar was of blue silk, with a full ruffle of guipure lace. Frills of lace also edged the entire garment and trimmed the pockets. As we near the beginning of this last decade we come to the Oxford circular, a three-quarter length cloak, which fitted smoothly about the shoulders and was without superfluous fullness below the waist. It had no sleeves, and its only trimming was a flat, velvet lined hood with cord and tassel ornaments. In the New Year of 1880 came into being the half length dolman, reaching to the knee, and made with very wide sleeves, rolled collar and a fringe trimming. Also the long, close fitting coat, with its rolled shawl collar, wide cuffs and deep pocket flaps not far down on the hips.—Mercer.

Why One Woman Colors Her Teeth.

Some of the Maoris still keep up the old hideous practice of blackening the men puncturing the whole face to increase their importance, and the women their lips, chins and eyelids to increase their personal attractions. A friend of mine told a married woman in Japan that he wondered at her disfiguring herself by blacking her teeth. "What do you mean?" was the indignant answer. "Any dog has white teeth." Probably the Maori damsel thinks along the same line, but after looking at her slaty blue lips I thought her mistaken. —G. M. Grant in Harper's.

Louisa, the lovely queen of Prussia, pinned her dresses with a star and let them fly again without pinning, and she had a shawl embroidered with her cheeks; the fascinating Mme. Roland, whose dark, serious, changing eye no artist could paint, pulled her shock of brown hair within an inch of her eyebrows and bound it with a fillet.

To allay itching in some cutaneous affections a very pleasant application consists of the freshly expressed juice of a lemon diluted with four or five times its bulk of water, to which a few drops of cologne have been added or the same quantity of rose water. This is very cooling.

A face artist declares that Bernhardt is the greatest judge of powder of any woman in the world. She tests the quality of powder by taking a pinch of the compound between her fingers, crushing it to find out its quality pinch by pinch.

Marion Harland is a large woman of matronly appearance, somewhat above medium height. She has a brown complexion, black hair that is beginning to turn gray, and a broad forehead. She began to write stories when a child of six.

The widow of Hannibal Hamlin was blessed with wife and children in her first wife. The present Mrs. Hamlin was married to her stepbrother-in-law in 1856, and lived with him in Washington for twenty years.

Among the hints on cooking vegetables a lecturer advises the use of a little sugar in the water in which corn is boiled, instead of salt, which hardens and shrivels the vegetable.

An oilcloth on the closet floor is a great help, for it gives the closet a cooler look and can be wiped out easily and looks much neater than a bare floor.

To clean a teakettle, take it away from the fire and wash off with a rag dipped in kerosene, followed by a rubbing with a dry flannel cloth.

COSTUMES FOR THE COUNTRY.

A Toilet for Outdoor Wear, Showing the Draped Corselet Favored by Parisians.

Many and dainty are the styles to be seen in toilets in light fabrics for out of door summer wear in country places, and our cut shows a very attractive model. This is in zephyr lawn, striped white and pink, and set off with washing silk of the delicate tint which is used as lapels, neck and wristbands. It is also binds the loose fronts of the jacket with its pinched bascque, together with the skirt opening, which displays a panel in either white lace or embroidered muslin in keeping with the dainty cuffs and the deep cuffs.

The draped corselet is in the pink silk, and the tiny corselets and Swiss bands, which are closed in front with a bunch of the same flowers, are much worn in Paris with outdoor summer toilets. A Lagthorn hat with crown covered with white muslin, piques of cerise lips and pink ribbon here completes the costume.

Among attractive fabrics much seen in midsummer toilets are the white lawns dotted with flower or fruit sprays in their natural coloring. There is renewed liking shown also for sheer airy linen batistes in tan or ecru. This, however, must be made up with silk.

At evening receptions in country and watering places flowered silk, muslin and lace represent a popular and handsome style. These are simply made with straight skirt, and lace flounce, lace basque and draped corsage.

Plaids of pink and green, blue and brown or other combinations, formed by the crossing of waved stripes, are seen in some of the latest foulards. Stripes in soft colors, such as china blue and pink, are also liked in white lawn, to be trimmed with white lace.

Very large sleeves which droop from the top, but fit closely below the elbow and are banked with many rows of baby ribbon, are a feature of some French costumes.

—Next week the Central Railroad company will commence to tear down the old depot at Westfield.

—A unoccupied house belonging to a family named Curren set fire to the roof yesterday afternoon. The flames were extinguished, however, before much damage resulted.

—This story, from the New York Tribune, has been started in circulation evidently by that unscrupulous local fake writer, who started a similar one before. It has been doctored from an account of a similar occurrence in New York, and made to appear as if also occurring here. It is all a grand humbug: "Two years ago this Summer Plainfield was troubled with a veritable plague of flies. This pest has again invaded the city and is proving even more troublesome than before. The tiny insect is no respector of persons, and is now as irritating in the homes of wealth as it has been in the poorer quarters of the town. No one can conjecture where the myriads of insects come from."

—William Kelly met with a serious accident on Monday. He was assisting Joseph Clark and another man named John Blye to remove a caged hot-air purging machine from a freight car to a spring wagon for transfer to the house of Mr. Bloodgood on Westfield avenue. All three men were in the wagon, and had succeeded in partially removing the machine from the car, when by an unfortunate tilting of the wagon box, or from some other cause, Clark and Blye let go their hold, and the whole weight fell with crushing force on Kelly, striking him a fearful blow in the face and knocking him out of the wagon and backwards across the iron railing which surrounds the Park. He was picked up in a senseless condition, and conveyed to a hotel, where an examination was made by Drs. McConaughy and Harrison. His eye was badly cut, and his back severely wrenched. No bones, however, were broken, and after laying in a stupor for several hours, he returned to consciousness. He was removed to his home on Tuesday, and is now doing well. This is the accident that was reported in THE NEWS of Tuesday.

The Somerset County Fair.

Preparations for the coming fair are going on rapidly. The improvements which have been made on the grounds will add greatly to the attractions and the convenience of those who attend. Mrs. Charles Foster of Jersey City, is visiting friends in this city.

Miss Alberti White, a Boston belle, is at Miss Stuttevant's, Broadway.

Mrs. Agnes Dunn and Miss Baker of Broadway are at Asbury Park.

Mr. James McPherson of East Front street is visiting friends in Ocean Grove.

Mrs. Charles Glaentzer of New street will start for Germany within a few weeks.

Rev. Jesse Lyman Hurlbut will accompany Bishop Vincent on his European trip this Fall.

Mr. Edwin Dorr McCarthy, the eminent New York lawyer sojourning here, rides a fine saddle horse.

Eliza Blackford was buried in Hillside Cemetery Wednesday morning. She was eighty-six years old.

Capt. F. L. C. Martin, of the Bicycle Club has returned from a three weeks' trip on his wheel through the Catskill Mountains.

Mr. Albert Esmuder and bride, are enjoying a trip through Europe. They expect to return about the middle of September.

Hollo O. Heikes of Chicago, the champion inanimate target shot of the world, is visiting Thomas Keller, manager of the Crescent Baseball Club.

At a special meeting of Gazelle Engine Company on Tuesday night, resolutions of condolence on the death of Foreman Clarkson R. Hope was passed.

A Colt in a Box.

A funny scene attracted a big crowd on Front street yesterday afternoon. A countryman and his wife were driving along in an open wagon. Just as they turned from Front street into Somerset an impertinent colt bounced out in the street. The fall of three or four feet was sufficient to break into pieces, whereupon the sidewalk loungers were astonished to see skip from the debris a frisky young colt. He was none the worse for his fall, but it took all the loungers twenty minutes to coax him back into the reconstructed box. Then the box was nailed up again, and the countryman and his wife resumed their journey.

The County House Barely Escapes.

The County Hotel at Somerville had a narrow escape from being burned last Thursday night. A colored waiter came home from a picnic and went to bed with a cigar in his mouth. When some one went to the room to call him in the morning a smell of smoke was noticed and on pushing open the door the bed was found to be on fire. A few moments more and the conflagration would have been serious. The house belongs to the estate of the late Wm. Moore.

The Smith Family Re-union.

The sixteenth annual re-union of the Smith family and friends will be held in the grove on the farm of Peter Z. Smith, one mile east of Peapack, on Wednesday, August 26, commencing at ten o'clock a. m., and continuing all day. Addresses (beginning at two p. m.) will be delivered by Gov. Leon Abbett and others. Music will be furnished for the occasion by the Clinton Cornet Band. If stormy the re-union will be held the next fair day.

It Was the Royal Blue.

The Royal Blue line express, due here at 12:10 p. m., had a narrow escape at Green Brook yesterday afternoon. It was passing a coal train, one of the coal cars jumped the track. It plunged into the side of the express but fortunately did no further injury than to tear completely off all the steps on that side of the coaches. None of the passengers cars were thrown from the track.

County Teachers' Examination

The Middlesex County Superintendent recently announced the county teachers' examinations for Saturday, Aug. 29th, at the Bayard street school, New Brunswick. Owing to the repairs at that school it has been decided to change the place, and the examinations will be held at the High School on the same date.

A Pastor Accepts a Call.

Rev. J. T. Shock, the pastor of the South Bound Brook Reformed church, has received a call from the Reformed church at Keyport. Yesterday he sent word that he would accept the position. During his stay at Bound Brook he has been very prosperous. The church has grown greatly under his administration.

THE POETRY OF LOWELL.

Its Beauties Described by a Plainfielder.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—There is no more perfect gem among Mr. Lowell's poems than "Al Fresco," with its tender idea of youth and manhood,—the fulness of past hope, the dearth of a present charm to fortune. Mr. Lowell recited this poem at the Author's Readings in New York in 1886, with a feeling which showed his love for the simple philosophy in it, a philosophy which is heart-felt and touches the tender chords of many a loss in manhood. Is it, too, we know of his love for reverie, that careless rambling of thought

"As the airy gossamer
Floating in the sunlight clear,
Whereo'er it touches clingeth tightly
Rowid glamour of the morning unsightly,
So from his spirit wandered out
Tenderly spreading all about
Waiting all things in its thrall
With a perfect love of all."

This state of "dreamy eyes watching the ripples play" distinguishes his early poetry from the war-period, in which his fire and power found full culmination in the "Commemoration Ode," a flight so strong, so sure, so joyful that it is inseparably linked with the name of Abraham Lincoln and the success of the right over the wrongs of the Civil War.

His first lessons were brought from dreaming and observing. In "The Beggar," he invoked not the muses as did the olden poets, but the true presence of natural beauty, demanding of the "old granite gray,"

"Some of thy stern unyielding might
Enduring still through day and night
Rude tempest shock and withering blight."

All know of his wit; all have felt the justice of his fiery, corrective sarcasm, for they are the human out-bursts of passion. Yet to those who know of his keenness and tender joyousness, must appreciate this appeal so fully granted in his long life of service:

"A little of thy merriment
Of the sparkling, light content,
Give me, my cheerful friends,
That I may still be full of glee
And gladsomeness wherever I be,"

and in the last verse, which strikes a lower key, we have the secret of his power to elevate the scholars, if parents do not work in unison with them, but little good is accomplished. There are many boys who make it a practice as soon as school closes in the afternoon, especially in the Summer months, to go home, and get their supper and then start for the street, seek company not fit for them to associate with, return to their homes late at night, find the door unlocked and retire to bed, where their parents have been sometime already, not knowing whether their boy was in bed or on the street. In the morning he is up in season to take his breakfast just before school hours, and no questions are asked as to his whereabouts the night previous; as long as he is in his accustomed place at the table, it is to be supposed that everything is all right.

Then the kind of boys that are being sent to the reformatory institutions, and yet the parents think it very hard that their boy should be sent there, when if they only looked back at the time when he needed the closest attention, they would at once see the cause, also their neglect to watch over him at the proper time. Every father and mother should know where their boy is after sunset every day. If this practice had been carried out there would be a less number of boys at the Sockanosset School to-day. A boy who is allowed to roam the streets late at night will sooner or later be a candidate for a reformatory institution.

When a boy goes astray, not because he has no home, but because nothing is done to make home pleasant for him. We once heard a man say: "I have brought up two children—boy and girl, and almost from the time they learned to read have kept all kinds of games in the house; never went out either himself or wife without one or the other with them, and now that they grown up they seek society at home." Parents can rest assured that if they introduce pleasure and amusements in their homes, their children will never seek it outside, and when night comes they will not have to go into the streets for them, but will find them enjoying the comforts of home. A boy needs smiles just as the flower needs sunbeams. If you make home a place of sour faces and harsh words and continual fault-finding, you will soon find that your children will seek pleasure elsewhere.—Howard Times.

Mr Higgins' Statement.

A statement published in a local paper concerning the business troubles of Mr. M. A. Higgins, the liveryman, he wishes us to say is exaggerated and malicious. To get a start in business Mr. Higgins says he ran heavily in debt in 1890 for barn, hotelice, etc. His prosperous business enabled him to clear off half this debt in a year, and he further states that if not wronged in credit by false reports this year would entirely free him from all debts.

BASE BALL.

A Streak of Luck in the First Inning Gave Plainfield the Game.

It was a bitter dose for Westfield to swallow on Thursday, after suffering great big runs in the first inning, last Saturday at Plainfield!

How do we account for it? Why, in this way: Those Crescent players had the most terrific streak of luck in batting at the start. Tom O'Rourke said to us after the game: "the Plainfielders reached out and pounded everything, letting the good balls go and walloping the wild ones. No pitcher could be effective under such volleying." As Hammill shut out the Crescents after the first onset it looks as if O'Rourke was right.

Then to think of old reliable Diven a dropping a nice fly right in his paws! Even the wonderful playing of our boys during the last eight innings when discouraged by uphill work, and with defeat staring them in the face—even those eight goose eggs can not make us smile.

We have had to break our promises, too. We said we could show them how to win a game, but we didn't!

It was too bad, too bad!

LATER. Strange to say the town is surviving the sad affliction calmly! The stores are all open, and the people are going about their ordinary business as if nothing very dreadful had occurred. Come to think about it, when the Plainfielders have the game, they don't have so very much to crow over after all. Wipe out that dreadful chance first inning, and the record stands 5 to 4 in favor. Isn't so much to be ashamed of at all. The Westfields in fact played all around the Crescent lads. Hammill did splendidly, as also did Howe and Lever in their respective positions. O'Rourke, the new catcher, is a first-class man, and will be heard from later.—Westfield Leader.

What is the Matter With My Boy?

The question is often asked by both fathers and mothers. I wonder what bad influence has surrounded our boy? He attends his school regularly, but the lessons of morality and discipline taught seem to have been thrown away. Perhaps if the question were asked: Do you know where your boy is after school hours? Do you watch over him and see that he does not associate with bad company? How many would answer in question? There is no place where evil influences will surround a boy sooner than to allow him to roam the streets late at night. Every inducement is held out to him to indulge in vice and crime. His companions who seek his society will lure him on until they have accomplished their purpose and then forsake him to seek other victims. While the teachers of the school do all in their power to elevate the scholars, if parents do not work in unison with them, but little good is accomplished. There are many boys who make it a practice as soon as school closes in the afternoon, especially in the Summer months, to go home, and get their supper and then start for the street, seek company not fit for them to associate with, return to their homes late at night, find the door unlocked and retire to bed, where their parents have been sometime already, not knowing whether their boy was in bed or on the street. In the morning he is up in season to take his breakfast just before school hours, and no questions are asked as to his whereabouts the night previous; as long as he is in his accustomed place at the table, it is to be supposed that everything is all right.

Then the kind of boys that are being sent to the reformatory institutions, and yet the parents think it very hard that their boy should be sent there, when if they only looked back at the time when he needed the closest attention, they would at once see the cause, also their neglect to watch over him at the proper time. A boy who is allowed to roam the streets late at night will sooner or later be a candidate for a reformatory institution.

When a boy goes astray, not because he has no home, but because nothing is done to make home pleasant for him. We once heard a man say: "I have brought up two children—boy and girl, and almost from the time they learned to read have kept all kinds of games in the house; never went out either himself or wife without one or the other with them, and now that they grown up they seek society at home." Parents can rest assured that if they introduce pleasure and amusements in their homes, their children will never seek it outside, and when night comes they will not have to go into the streets for them, but will find them enjoying the comforts of home. A boy needs smiles just as the flower needs sunbeams. If you make home a place of sour faces and harsh words and continual fault-finding, you will soon find that your children will seek pleasure elsewhere.—Howard Times.

Mr Higgins' Statement.

A statement published in a local paper concerning the business troubles of Mr. M. A. Higgins, the liveryman, he wishes us to say is exaggerated and malicious. To get a start in business Mr. Higgins says he ran heavily in debt in 1890 for barn, hotelice, etc. His prosperous business enabled him to clear off half this debt in a year, and he further states that if not wronged in credit by false reports this year would entirely free him from all debts.

FALL STYLES FOR MEN.

WHAT THE VOGUE WILL BE WHEN THE SUMMER IS OVER.

Tendency Toward Brighter Colors in Fancy Cloths. Greater Variety of Combinations in Covert Coatings.

The feeling of conservatism that has dominated the general scheme of men's wear for several year's past will continue to prevail the forthcoming season

From the advanced whispers of evening fashions it is quite clear that while there will be no marked tangents from the conventional precedence, there will be a variety of changes indicating that the key of costume is to be pitched in a louder tone.

It seems quite certain that the ultrashades of brown were to impart a ginger to the appeal of men's raiment, and in every day attire abruptly out of it, wonted sombreness; but it would now appear that this coup of fashion-mongers, through the generous exploitation of these novelties upon the race course here and in England, had been pushed somewhat too early to warrant anything more than an ephemeral success.

FANCY CLOTHS STILL CONSERVATIVE.

Certain is that the novelty of these goods was their urgent argument for a run, and it is a matter of fact that the most recent offerings in fancy cloth fabrics are a palpable moderation of the burnt umber, cinnamon and other shades of reddish brown. The browns, indeed, that are in the richest effects, are toned with an admixture of gray to a hue entirely in consonance with the desire of conservative selection.

The more prevalent cloths for Fall overcoats will be in lay-worsteds, homespuns and coverts. The stuffs of covert resistance are a pleasing variety of combinations than heretofore, and, following the very effectual utilization of the whipcord top coatings, for suitings, these cover coatings may be diverted with excellent results in a similar way.

The single-breasted fly-front demi-box style slightly longer than last year will be the accepted cut, and the velvet collar will have an unskimped sufficiency. The finer goods for Winter overcoatings are in those "makes" that roll beautifully under the hand. Smooth and hull-looking at first, with a few weeks' wearing the nap will fairly bristle up and show to an enhanced advantage.

The textures appear to be a cross between Persian and patent beaver. The effects are very rich and elegant. The shades are almost indefinable and the delicate dark tintings indescribable. Gray seems to be the employment shade in achieving these impressions upon ground tints of the new bull-berry dark blue and wine. Such overcoatings have not been seen in many a day.

CHANGE IN THE SACK COAT.

There is an important change in the construction of that most comfortable garment in the vocabulary of men's wear, the sack coat. It is to be made to fully realize the intentions of the word "sack." That is, it is to be loose in fit. It has been heretofore shaped in at the back, imparting an appearance of snugness. Now the back will be straight down and the front will be full, but the shaping will be at the sides, with a deft manipulation under the arm secure a neglige effect, doing away with the stiff and mechanical suggestiveness of the coat as it is.

Stripes in trouserings will continue to be in the lead. The cut will be a trifle narrower, if anything, than last season and slightly more flowed out at the instep.

The hesitancy of Americans in adopting the frock coat of dull, soft-finished fabric is difficult to understand. This coat, with its short-rolling, easy-fitting look, silk facing on lapels to the buttonholes, and narrow single stitch finish, is certainly the ultra garment of semi-formal dress with Englishmen of rank for the past two seasons.

It is now being made with the skirts long and loose enough to hang in graceful folds from the waist-line. It is certainly a step in the ultra garment of semi-formal dress with Englishmen of rank for the past two seasons.

It is now being made with the skirts *long and loose enough to hang in grace*ful folds from the waist-line. It is certainly a step in the right direction, and this Fall will undoubtedly find the leaders of New York swaggerdom sanctioning its acceptance.

The Fall and Winter Derby hat shows no change in shape, but the English style that has been the vogue. It is conventional and becoming, and will therefore be popular. The fur is remarkably good, the narrow mold, and the crown of the square-round tendency. The tail hat is as yet unannounced, but the English style is upon the marked bell-crowned and curl-brimmed type—a reminiscence of the block of forty years ago. It is distinguished and becoming withal.

EVENING DRESS REMAINS THE SAME.

There is much whispering of harmless invasions upon the collar and lapel of the swallowtail, but any serious deviation from the well recognized evening dress is not even hazarded. The revival of the crush hat, however—a most common-sense and pliable-fitting article of wear—will be more general the coming season.

The precedence of self-tied neckwear is now undisputed. The swagger idea is to embrace the ultra garments of semi-formal dress with Englishmen of rank for the past two seasons.

It is now being made with the skirts *long and loose enough to hang in grace*ful

Social Democrats' Programme.

The annual meeting of the Social Democrats of Germany will take place in October. The executive committee of the organization has prepared a programme for adoption by the whole body at that meeting. It is so nearly in line with the ideas of his most Christian majesty, Emperor William II, that he ought at once to take the Social Democrats to his bosom, or they should take him, it is not quite certain which. Probably the doctors would welcome the socialist arrangement, as then they would always be sure of getting their fees.

The demands of the executive committee are as follows:

Direct suffrage and a secret ballot.
Popular rights of initiative and veto on legislative measures—as in Switzerland.
Popular discussion of all questions involving peace and war.
Freedom of speech—press and assembly.
Separation of church and state—no state support of any church.
Secularization of schools and compulsory education.
Militia in place of standing army.
Elective judiciary and free courts and free legal aid.
Free medical attendance and free medicines.
Direct instead of indirect taxation.
Labor legislation, involving regulation of hours of labor by law, an eight hours' day, governmental supervision of commercial industries, regulation of agricultural and other laborers, rights of labor organization, governmental workman's insurance societies.

Speak English.

Jacob Grimm, the fine old German philologist, is one of the most learned linguists alive. He has studied carefully the tongues of civilized peoples, and after mature thought, German though he is, writes this: "The English speech may with full right be called a world language." If a German can say this, then those citizens of America who are trying by all means fair or foul to make other tongues than English the prevailing language of their respective communities may well pause—think what they are endeavoring to do. They are going against nature and common sense.

When Shakespeare lived and sang, 300 years ago, on the whole globe there were less than a million more English speaking people than now inhabit London alone. There were between 5,000,000 and 6,000,000. Then recently as a century ago, even after this republic was founded, there were only 15,000,000 English speaking persons on the globe. At the same date 30,000,000 spoke French and 40,000,000 German. Now we find that while the French and German tongues are spoken by a reasonably increased number of individuals in the world today, in Australasia, the British isles and in America 115,000,000 claim English as their mother tongue. This is 40 per cent. of the inhabitants of the civilized world.

Is it not commendation of that clever old saying of a wit that he would speak Spanish to his God, French to a woman, German to a horse, but English to a man? Unmistakably this splendid tongue is the language of manifest destiny, the speech of the future. Proof of this is not needed, but if it were it would be found in the fact that the English race is spreading itself over the globe far more rapidly than any other nationality. It is probably the language of the coming race.

English speaking nations are the freest, strongest and most prosperous on the globe today. The greatest light in literature this earth has produced was Shakespeare, who wrote in English. Therefore let us maintain this noble tongue of a rising race in its choicest purity. We may learn other languages as an accomplishment if we will, but never to the detriment of our national tongue. Let us speak and write the best English we know, in the most musical voices we can cultivate.

The enemy who is always present and ready to sneer a large sneer wants to know whether the farmer legislators have broken the time honored precedent of taking free railroad passes to and from their capitals, and whether they have accepted free pleasure excursions given by parties with little axes to grind. And if they have not, whether they will do so next winter. The enemy also inferns the granger legislators with eye of society is on them and that old Democratic and Republican legislators are especially interested to know about that free pass matter. Here is the granger lawmaker's chance to prove himself granite against temptation.

The strict examinations to which American food animals and meat products are subjected by this government before leaving our shores are already telling in our favor in Europe, especially in the case of pork. First Germany, then France, removed the embargo against American hog products.

CASH TO CLOSE CHINKS.

Bardsley Money Filled Holes in the Keystone Bank,

AND SETTLED UP ITS OLD SCORES.

H. W. Yard's Overdraft at One Time Was Over $81,000 and Part of It Was from the Bardsley Boodle—How Much Did "Honest John" Get Back.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 21.—The Bardsley investigating committee met in the afternoon for the purpose of receiving the report of Expert Accountants John Heims and K. J. Whelan, who have for some time been employed in going over the books and accounts of the Keystone National bank. A letter was read from District Attorney Graham, which stated that while the publication the correspondence between John Bardsley and Auditor General McCamant and between H. H. Yard and John Bardsley. He said that it might defeat the ends of justice.

The Overissue Equaled the Real Stock.

Expert Heims then presented his report. He and his associate divided the work, one taking that relating to the stock of the Keystone and the overissue, and the other the tracing of the sum represented by the $945,000 in due bills which John Bardsley had issued to the Keystone bank. The report relating to the stock of the Keystone bank showed that the overissue equaled the genuine. The report showed just how the bills of the overissue and in the list included that which had been held by Postmaster General Wanamaker.

Receiver Yardley Objects.

The report also contained a list of the stockholders of the Keystone bank on Nov. 1, 1890, Jan. 1, 1891, and March 30, 1891, the date of the closing of the bank. Expert Heims reported that from December, 1890, to Feb. 1, 1891, a total of 3,075 shares of the stock of the bank were transferred. From March 1 to the day the bank was closed the transfers were transferred A letter was received from Receiver Yardley objecting to the making public of this list, and the committee determined to consider it in executive session, after which they gave it out for publication.

Important Disbursements Made.

In the report relating to the $945,000 worth of Keystone due bills now held by Bardsley's assignee, the experts said that there was no evidence that the money had actually been paid into the bank, but they showed just how and at what dates the money had been received by the bank. The report continues: "Important disbursements were made by the Keystone National bank during the period in which the $945,000 was deposited by Bardsley and represented by the due bills."

To John Wanamaker, $50,000.

The report then gives a list of payments and their amounts made by the bank to different financial institutions and persons. Among these is the following:

"March due bill No. 73,136, issued to John Wanamaker, by him passed to Ervin & Toland and paid to Tradesmen's National bank through which it was passed for $50,000. Ervin & Toland informed us that they received the due bill from John Wanamaker in the regular course of business and credited it to him. At Mr. Wanamaker's request to a member of your committee we called upon him and he stated that he had borrowed $50,000 from the Keystone bank on March 10, 1890, upon his promissory note and received its due bill therefor, which he passed to Ervin & Toland; that subsequently he paid the loan in two instalments, the last being paid Nov. 1, 1890. Being of the opinion that this satisfactorily explains Mr. Wanamaker's connection with the transaction we exclude this amount from the footing."

Bardsley Money as an Asset.

After stating that a material portion of the funds received from John Bardsley were substituted for fictitious assets the report continues: "During several months prior to March, 1890, the Bardsley money had been counted a part of the reserve in the daily cash settlements, the reserve being clearly in excess of the $1,000,000 and national notes amounting to $32,023.47, a total of $130,023.47. They were absolutely false. The Bardsley money being all taken out which had been given items were cancelled on March 6, 1890, by a further falsification and transferred to the due bill account as though applied to the discharge of $490,000 of the bank's indebtedness."

Yard's Overdraft Only $81,431.75.

In reference to H. H. Yard, who is charged with being one of the bank wreckers the report says: "The account of H. H Yard, manager, was persistently over drawn during 1890 until its culmination at $81,431.75 on the morning of Nov. 18 until Feb. 2, 1891, it remained unchanged at $68,723.25, of which $50,000 was transferred to Yard's personal account Nov. 18 and increased to $81,388.92 on Feb. 27, when this sum was presumably derived from the Bardsley fund." They also reported that in addition to the overdraft and actual assets there were many others during the period under consideration, and at the date of the bank's failure the overdrafts exceeded $300,000.

Nearly $400,000 Have Disappeared.

The experts also said that they had been unable to ascertain whether or not any part of the $945,000 had been repaid to Bardsley.

"The presumption seems to be warranted that a considerable amount was repaid to Bardsley, and that further inquiry from the correspondent banks and bankers will reveal additional repayments for which also the bank is entitled to credit. Of the due bills issued from March 18, 1890, to Jan 31, 1891, for all purposes, nearly $400,000 have disappeared that should have been upon the files when the receiver took charge. From Feb. 21, 1890, to March 30, 1891, the due bills issued to John Bardsley for all purposes so far as now known exceeded $2,500,000."

The report is closed by stating that the general banking system of the Keystone was of the most lax and loose nature possible.

BLAIR PAYS THE PENALTY.

The Murderer's Sister Creates a Scene in the Jail.

COLUMBUS, O., Aug. 21.—Henry Blair ascended the scaffold with a firm step at 12:07 this morning. The drop fell at 12:08. His neck was broken by the fall and life was pronounced dead at 12:20. At 5 o'clock last evening Laura Blair was admitted to the execution room of the condemned to bid her brother the last farewell. She remained nearly an hour and Warden Dyer was obliged to send for her. When told that this would be the last opportunity to say goodby, she hysterically clasped her brother's neck, kissing him and calling his name over and over again. Suddenly she fell from his arms and caught Guard Stansell around the neck, nearly overpowering him, but soon lay quivering and prostrate in his support. At this opportunity Blair was removed to the death cage.

When the young lady realized that he was gone from her side forever she again went into hysterics, shrieking wildly for assistance. The crime for which Ed Blair paid the penalty with his life was committed at Hartsberg, Putnam county, March 17, 1890. Blair was serving a seven years' sentence in the Ohio penitentiary for burglary, and it became necessary to take him out to testify against one of his "pals." At Blanchester he made a daring escape from his guards by jumping from the train. In company with two crooks Blair went to Hartsberg, where he had planned to rob the station of which Arthur Henry was agent. The young agent was overpowering them, when Blair, who had pulled his revolver and demanded that Henry open the safe. He refused and was shot down in cold blood.

ALMY CUNNING AS A FOX.

But He Had the Daring of a Lion Also.

STORY OF HIS REMARKABLE HIDING

For Over a Month He Lived in the Warden Barn Under the Very Noses of the Detectives, and Placed Flowers Upon His Victim's Grave at Night.

HANOVER, N. H., Aug. 21.—Frank C. Almy, the farmhand who so foully murdered his employer's daughter, Christie Warden, near her father's house over a month ago, and who has been sought by the officers of justice all over New England and even in Canada, has been found in the Warden barn. Unable to leave the scene of his crime, scourged by the agony of remorse, hunted as a monster, knowing that his life was forfeit on sight, the unhappy wretch has lived a life of mental and physical torture in the old barn so familiar to him before he stained his soul with the awful deed for which he must now pay the penalty. Creeping out at night to steal his food from the neighboring house, eagerly devouring the fruit in the orchards, he has slept during the daytime in the haymow.

The Story of His Capture.

The story of his capture is a remarkable one. On Monday afternoon Mrs. Warden, the mother of the girl who was shot by Frank Almy one month ago, found an empty jelly tumbler and some cans hidden under the barn on her husband's farm. Her suspicions showed through a hole in the underpinning. She considered the discovery important because eatables had been missing recently from many cellars in the vicinity. She told her husband, and he told Mr. Newton A. Frost and Mr. J. P. Davidson he had thought to search the ground under the barn closely. They found more empty cans and bottles and also a formidable looking club freshly whittled. In the form of a policeman's club, showing that some person was planning for a defense. They watched the Warden barn, and at about 1.30 a. m. from their hiding place in the standing corn in the rear of the house they saw a man approach. Professor Whitaker thought he recognized the walk of Almy. The man was barefooted and his clothing was badly torn. He came to an apple tree within ten feet of the men who were watching, and began to pick the fruit from the ground and eat eagerly. He also put some of it into a bag.

In the clear moonlight Professor Whitaker and Mr. Frost had a good view of his face, and saw a man wearing a mustache. He was thin and pale. Soon he walked away and disappeared around the corner of the barn.

Fired Upon by Almy.

Without arousing the members of the Warden family the watchers started for Hanover and notified the police authorities. At 3 o'clock this morning the posse, armed with all sorts of weapons, started to hunt him. It was 8 o'clock before the search for the fugitive began in earnest. Charles E. Stewart, a student in the State college, was among the first to enter the barn. He had a long pitchfork and began prodding in the hay. Suddenly he felt what he thought was the body of a man, and the next instant the concealed man fired a revolver at him through the hay. Shouts and cries resounded, and all began cautiously working toward the spot, prodding with their shovels and pitchforks.

Hundreds of men had gathered about the barn with old muskets, revolvers, horse pistols and farm implements. The hidden man began to dig himself out of the hay, firing shot after shot from his revolver. Aaro Turner, of Norwich, Vt., received a shot in the arm from one of his friends. The bullets continued to whistle about the ears of the searchers, and the smoke made them think the hay had caught fire. Several farmers blazed away into the pile of hay where Almy was concealed, and an occasional moan told them that some of their bullets had struck the man. With fresh loads they retreated, and outside the barn held a council of war.

In the Toils at Last.

At 9 o'clock C. C. Bridgeman called for twenty volunteers to go into the barn and capture Almy. Twenty men at once stepped forward and they were to divide the $5,000 reward in the event of Almy's capture. Dr. G. W. Hoffman led the posse and they entered the barn in two divisions. Hoffman cried to Almy to surrender, promising him protection. Almy shouted back, "I don't believe you!"

As the morning wore away two more attacks were made, but Almy sent several bullets whizzing about the heads of the attacking party and they retreated to a point out of the range of Almy's revolver. After a while Almy's voice was heard.

He asked for a conference with County Solicitor Mitchell and promised to do him no harm, and Mr. Mitchell assured him that his escape was impossible and advised him to surrender peaceably. Almy said he would think it over, and told Mr. Mitchell to return. At 10:30 he was sorely wounded. His leg was broken by a bullet, and another bullet was lodged in his thigh. Afterward his scalp was furrowed by a ball.

Later in the day he called up John Fullet and promised to surrender, but the desire for freedom was so strong that he repented at the last minute. After his capture he said that he was glad the suspense was over. He was followed to the town by a procession of about a hundred carriages, which had the appearance of a country funeral. They were the same people who had followed Christie to the grave a month ago.

Almy Not His Real Name.

After Almy had recovered from the excitement of being inspected by the crowd, he consented to talk about his crime. He admitted that Almy was an assumed name, and confessed that he was hiding to escape arrest for a similar crime for which a price had been set upon his head. He refused absolutely to tell his real name or reveal the circumstances which led him to take an assumed name. In regard to the murder of Christie Warden, he said:

"Yes, I killed her, but I did not intend to. I wanted to see her. I waited see her, and I would have been killed myself for the sake of doing so. The shot upward was accidental. God knows I did not pull the trigger.

"In the struggle and excitement to get her where I could see her alone, the cartridge exploded. I then took aim at Mr. and the bullet went upward. Then I could not bear to see her agony, and I fired another bullet to kill her, to end her pain."

Almy sticks to the statement that Christie loved him and would have married him but for his shady past. He says that the young woman, knowing all, told him she would never marry him unless he told of his past life. He would not reveal that secret, for he knew she then would not marry him anyway, and he hoped to win her love and consent to a marriage by living an upright life and showing the sincerity of his reform.

He Put Flowers on Her Grave.

He said that he had put flowers on Christie's grave constantly, and that his grief at his deed was awful. God knows he loved her. She, he said, had at first encouraged him, but some outside influence had been brought to bear and she had not been the same. Almy had listened from the barn to the conversation about where they were hunting for him, and learned all the means taken for his capture. He had lived on berries and fruit and had plenty of milk. The revolvers that he had were purchased in Palmer, Mass., as it was his intention after getting to Hanover to proceed to Texas.

Almy will be arraigned as soon as his wounds will permit his appearance in court. Governor Goodell, of Almy's farmhand in Mr. Warden's employ, was arrested on the charge of being Almy's accomplice, but the evidence against him is so slight that he will probably be released. Almy says he had no accomplice.

Inspected by the Crowd.

Fifteen hundred men and boys passed in single file through a room in the Warden House late in the afternoon and glared with mingled looks of hatred and curiosity at the pale, thin looking murderer stretched upon a cot. Almy was pallid then and unarmed, and every man in that mob would have rejoiced at the opportunity of pulling on a rope that would swing the wretch to the gallows.

Yet that same man had for ten hours kept the entire army of 1,500 armed men at bay, and although helpless with a shattered leg, had fought desperately until overpowered by superior numbers and disarmed.

He Attempted Suicide.

While Almy was being carried through the streets there were no feelings save those of curiosity. After he had disappeared from view there was a clamor for his blood. But there was no organized movement to take the man from the custody of the police. To satisfy the people's curiosity the police permitted them to march through the room in which the prisoner lay.

This unheard of performance was too much for Almy's nerves, and he fainted while the procession was still moving. This was the natural reaction after the nerve shattering experience to which he was subjected for ten hours. But he played wonderful nerve, and resisted gamely to the last. One of the capturing party says that when Almy saw that the last moment of freedom had arrived he turned the muzzle of the revolver at his head with the intention of taking his own life, but the police were too quick for him, and the attempt was frustrated.

His Remarkable Nerve.

Almy's wonderful nerve was displayed as much in his selection of a hiding place as in his coolness under the most exciting circumstances. While the whole country was being aroused, and even cabling to Liverpool for the arrest of the alleged fugitive as a cattle thief, Almy was hiding in the hay in the Warden barn, and from his retreat he could see all that was going on. He had selected the place of all others where the latter was committed. Indeed, he had been hiding there for five weeks preceding the crime. He had watched Christie Warden's movements, and every phase of the awful crime had been carefully considered before the shot was fired.

Plenty of provisions was laid in sufficient to last him a month. He was sufficiently versed in police methods to know that he stood little chance of escaping through the cordon of men. Therefore he arranged to stay in hiding right under the nose of the detectives until their vigilance relaxed sufficiently to enable him to get away. That he had failed was fully proven by the fact that his whereabouts were not discovered until thirty-three days after the murder, and then only by accident.

The Prisoner's Crime.

As will be remembered, the murder of Miss Warden, which took place on the night of July 17, created intense excitement. The young woman, accompanied by her mother, her sister Fannie, and Louise Bowers, of Norwich, had returned from an entertainment to the Warden farm, about a mile from the village. At a lonely part of the road a man suddenly jumped in front of them with a revolver. The women screamed.

"Mrs. Warden," he said, "you may move on; I've no business with you." Then turning to Miss Warden he said, "Christie, I have come a thousand miles to kill you."

The women recognized him as Frank Almy, a farmhand employed at Mr. Warden's and a rejected suitor of Christie. Miss Fannie Warden stood by her sister. Almy knocked her down and dragged Christie into an adjoining field. Fannie followed and Almy turned, fired at her twice, but missed her. Then, while the screams of the women were ringing in his ears, he dragged Christie to the underbrush and shot her twice in the head, afterward tearing off her clothing. She was dead when found. Many suspected of Mr. Warden and Andrew A. Warden, a wealthy farmer and leading citizen of Hanover. She was twenty-five years of age, and strikingly handsome.

New York's $250,000 Fire.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—Fire destroyed the grand stand of the athletic grounds of the Young Men's Christian association on River avenue and quickly spread to the immense plant of the Diamond Match Co., which occupy one city block extending from One Hundred and Fiftieth to One Hundred and Fifty-first streets. This immense plant was totally destroyed, entailing a loss estimated at $250,000.

HARRISON LAUDS GRANT

A Touching Tribute Paid at Mt. McGregor.

SUCH MEN NEVER REALLY DIE.

The Banquet Given by Senator Arkell on the President's Birthday—The Executive Goes Fishing—His Plans for the Future—Ex-Minister Foster's Visit.

MT. MCGREGOR, N. Y., Aug. 21.—John W. Foster, ex-minister to Spain, arrived here last evening. Mr. and Mrs. Foster were brought by special train from Saratoga upon their arrival from New York. Considerable interest attaches to Mr. Foster's visit. The president evinced great anxiety concerning the information he received, and it was believed the coming of the ex-minister was caused by a hitch in the reciprocity arrangements that have been recently negotiated. Secretary Halford, however, declared there was no significance attached to the trip. It was also stated that Mr. Foster desired to consult the president regarding a disputed clause in the Spanish treaty, which goes into effect on Sept. 1.

A Hearty Reception.

President Harrison left Bennington at about 9:30 o'clock. A large number of sleepy citizens were on the station platform to bid him goodby. The run to Saratoga was marred by the enthusiasm of reckless along the line. Many of the houses were decorated, and the president was frequently obliged to show himself on the platform of his car. At Saratoga a big crowd of people were awaiting to receive the chief executive, and his drive from the depot to the Mt. McGregor station was one uninterrupted ovation. Senator Arkell had made ample arrangements for the reception of the presidential party, and the trip to Mt. McGregor, while it was made in an ordinary passenger coach, was satisfactory by all concerned.

At the Grant Cottage.

Arrived at the latter place Mr. Harrison made the steep ascent to the Grant cottage with Mrs. Arkell on his arm. The guests of the hotel gave him a right royal welcome. A grand banquet was given at the hotel at 5 o'clock in honor of the president and his fifty-eighth birthday. Senator Arkell in a happy speech welcomed the president, who arose in reply amid great cheering. He said:

The President's Speech.

MR. ARKELL AND FRIENDS—It was a part of the sorrow of this feast that it should be a silent one, not exactly a Quaker meeting, as Mr. Arkell has said, because silence there is apt to be broken by the moving of the spirit. That is not a safe rule for a banquet. [Laughter.] I rise only to thank your generous host and these gentlemen from different parts of the state who honor this occasion, for their friendliness and their esteem. We are gathered here in a spot which is historic. This mountain has been fixed in the affectionate and reverent memory of all our people and has been glorified by the death on its summit of General Ulysses S. Grant. [Applause.]

It is to that that great spirit that had already lifted the name to a height unknown in American history should take its flight from this mountain top. It has been said that a great life ends not here, but great lives, like that of General Grant, do not go out. They go on. [Cries of "Good, good!" and great applause.]

I will ask you to a reverent and affectionate and patriotic remembrance of that man who came to recover all failures in military achievement and in his great generalship and inflexible purpose to carry the flag of the republic to triumphant victory, who with covenant interest his memory, to drink a toast in silence as a pledge that we will ever keep in mind his great services, and in doing so will perpetuate his great gratitudeship and the glory of the nation he fought to save.

The President's Plans.

In the evening a literary and musical entertainment was given the president by guests of the Hotel Belmont.

This morning the president went upon a fishing excursion with Mr. Arkell on a private lake. Returning to the hotel for dinner he left Mt. McGregor for Saratoga this afternoon, arriving there at 4 o'clock. He will remain there until Tuesday after which he will make a tour of Vermont, stopping at Rutland, Montpelier and other principal points.

THE HOLY COAT UNVEILED.

The Cathedral at Treves Thronged with Devout Pilgrims.

TREVES, Aug. 21.—The unveiling of the holy coat made a deep impression. The cathedral was thronged with a motley gathering, whose modern appearance contrasted with the mediæval ceremonies.

Bishop Korum at the unveiling dwelt on the spiritual significance of the seamless vesture as symbolic of the unity of the church. The coat was distinctly visible in the body of the church.

The old silken covering had almost worn away, said the garment looked a brownish yellow. The service consisted of monotonous Gregorian chants and the administration of the Eucharist to representative ecclesiastics. Many women fainted, overpowered by their emotions.

Refused to Call on Bulkeley.

NYANTIC, Conn., Aug. 21.—The gubernatorial campaign is disturbing the members of the National Guard in camp here. All the officers of the brigade were invited to call upon the governor. The officers of Companies B, C and H of the Second regiment declined to go on the ground that it would be a recognition of Bulkeley as governor. They were severely censured by Colonel Doherty.

Betrayed One, Eloped with the Other.

SUMMIT, Pa., Aug. 21.—William Bender, twenty-six years old, has been spending the summer here with his friends. Among the acquaintances he has made is Miss Jennie Hinkle, sixteen years old, the daughter of Samuel Hinkle, and her sister Florence. After betraying Jennie he eloped with Florence, but was captured and is now in jail.

Jersey Farmers Meet.

SWEDESFIELD BRIDGE, N. J., Aug. 21.—Ten thousand persons were at the annual gathering of the farmers of the counties of Essex and Morris yesterday at Springfield Bridge. The speakers were Franklin Dye, Jesse B. Rogers, Augustus Cutler and Mr. Weston, of Mohnstown.

The President and the Bonds.

NEW YORK, Aug. 21.—The Herald says: "It has leaked out that the six weeks' delay which resulted in the failure of the 3 per cent. extension of the 4½ per cent. bonds was the fault of President Harrison, not of Secretary Foster.

Dedicated at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Aug. 21.—The granite monument on Chapin Hill of the One Hundred and Fiftieth New York Infantry regiment was dedicated yesterday. Colonel A. B. Smith, of Poughkeepsie, presided.

Nancy Hanks Defeats Margaret S.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—Fully 6,000 persons attended the Northwestern Association Driving Park for Trotting Horse Breeders' meeting. The event of the day was the match race between Margaret S, driven by George Starr, and Nancy Hanks, driven by Budd Doble. In the first heat Nancy Hanks took the lead at the furlong pole and was never headed, winning easily by one length. The second heat, which was won by Nancy Hanks, was by six lengths. Best time, 2:17.

Racing at Springfield.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 21.—At Hampden Park the final heat in the unfinished 2:26 trot was won by Play Boy, who was the race in straight heats. Time, 2:24. In the 2:17 trot only one heat was trotted, J. B. Richardson forfeiting it to Waser E and Nellie Hamlin, Globe and Justina were driven to beat their record of 2:14. Owing to Justina's breaking the team was pulled almost to a standstill. Time, 2:15. The last quarter was 33 seconds, which was a 2:13 gait.

Murphy Breaks the Record.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 21.—At the L. A. W. bicycle races W. F. Murphy broke the mile safety record. His time was 2m. 29 4-5s. In the two mile safety A. A. Zimmerman made the best time of 5m. 20 4-5 seconds, breaking the world's record. W. W. Windle ran the two mile, open, in 5m. 48 1-5s. The one mile tandem, open, was won by Banker and Brincker, in 2m. 1 2-5s.

Al Johnson Beaten.

CINCINNATI, Aug. 21.—Judge Maxwell, in the celebrated Johnson-Prince baseball case, at Peoria for $20,000, part of the purchase money for the Cincinnati Baseball club, was tied up in court and claimed by Johnson, has decided that the money shall be paid pro rata to all clubs and individuals who contributed to the purchase of the club from Stem and Stearns.

The Western Association's Fate.

MINNEAPOLIS, Minn., Aug. 21.—The fate of the Western association has at last been settled. Duluth and Lincoln cannot go on. This leaves four live clubs out of the original eight—Omaha, Sioux City, Kansas City and Denver. They will accordingly finish out the season on a four club basis.

Tennis at Newport.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 21.—The results of Thursday's tennis games are as follows: A. W. Post beat H. C. Wilcox, 10—6, 6—12, 6—3, 6—4. J. S. Clark beat J. H. Hunt, 6—4, 6—3, 6—2. H. Hovey beat P. S. Sears, 5—7, 3—6, 6—2, 13—11, 6—3.

FAILED FOR $2,000,000.

The American Wheel Company Has Gone Under at Last.

CHICAGO, Aug. 21.—The American Wheel company, having works throughout Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and other states, have failed. The assets are $4,100,000. Liabilities about $2,000,000. Judge Blodgett, of the federal district court, has made Noble C. Butler receiver.

PENNSYLVANIA GRIT.

FIGHTING RECORD OF COL. McDILL'S GALLANT REGIMENT.

The One Hundred and Forty-first Pennsylvania Had Its Own Bloody Angles at Chancellorsville and at Gettysburg. Its Exceptionally Heavy Losses.

[Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

All meetings in 1892 drew together less fireworks material than those of 1861, and the instances of anxious recruits "falling over one another" in order to get their names enrolled were rarer, and perhaps scarcely known, but the war quotas were filled, nevertheless, and the volunteers had staying qualities that made up for lack of enthusiasm. At a gathering of citizens held in a church in Terrytown, Bradford county, Pa., early in August, 1862, one of the speakers was a young lawyer of Towanda, Guy H. Watkins; a man of good social position and bright prospects, married, with hostages to fortune, and surrounded with every temptation to stay at home and make the most of life.

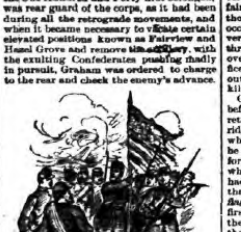
At the close of a second war speech he said that after careful deliberation he had decided that it was his duty to go to his country's aid in the hour of peril; that he had often thought how, when the war was over, he would be telling his children the story of the conflict and they would say to him, "Were you there?" He was going to be able to say, "Yes, I was there, and I tried to do my duty."

Throughout the quiet vales of northern Pennsylvania a like spirit to that displayed by Watkins was at work under leaders by the dozens and scores—farmers, merchants, teachers, students, preachers and others, not a few so young that they modestly declined offices in the ranks, and even some were rejected by the government on the score of youth. On Aug. 29 War Governor Curtin accepted and tendered to the United States service a regiment composed of ten companies raised in Bradford and Susquehanna counties and designated the One Hundred and Forty-first Pennsylvania Infantry. Guy H. Watkins, who had recruited one company and been chosen its captain, was elected lieutenant colonel of the regiment.

The first duty of the One Hundred and Forty-first was to go to the defense of Washington while McClellan's army was battling with Lee on Maryland soil in September, 1862. When Lee was pushed back south and to the Rappahannock the regiment went to the front and was placed among tried and disciplined troops in Kearney's old division of Heintzelman's corps. At the first battle of Fredericksburg it had its baptism of fire, and coolly met the fusillade of shot and shell poured upon Maxcy's Pennsylvania reserves by Stonewall Jackson's batteries Dec. 13. On Burnside's second campaign, January, 1863, the regiment was selected to cross the Rappahannock and occupy the heights on Taylor's Hill at the point of the bayonet, the forlorn hope of the movement, but a severe storm put an end to the affair before anything was made. Hot at Chancellorsville, in May, 1863, the field of many remarkable struggles, the hour of trial came.

On May 2 Stonewall Jackson's corps, by a flank march, struck Hooker's right and crushed it, rolling it up like a scroll. The Third corps, led by Gen. Daniel E. Sickles, became a breakwater for the tide of Confederate rush-ing with blind impetuosity in pursuit of the ill starred men of the Eleventh corps. The wounding of Stonewall on the evening of the 2d caused a temporary halt in the plans of the Confederates, but on the morning of the 3d, Sunday, his corps, led by the cavalryman, Jeb Stuart, and under the personal direction of Gen. Lee, renewed the fight and compelled the Union commander to order a general retreat.

Sickles' corps, under imperative orders, abandoned position after position, and the Confederates followed up with growing enthusiasm. The brigade of Gen. Charles K. Graham, of Birney's division, to which the One Hundred and Forty-first belonged, was rear guard of the corps, as it had been during all the retrograde movement, and when it became necessary to retire certain elevated positions known as Fairview and Hazel Grove and remove the artillery, with the exulting Confederates pushing readily in pursuit, Graham was ordered to charge to the rear and check the enemy's advance.



"RALLY ROUND THE FLAG, BOYS."

Graham marched his men down the slope of Fairview crest and up the slope of Hazel Grove, where the Confederates stood ready to receive them. Halting in a belt of oak timber at twenty rods from their line, Graham answered the sharp Confederate fire with a few volleys, then ordered the advance resumed. The One Hundred and Forty-first held the right of the brigade. The whole line moved forward with a cheer that made the woods ring, and the Confederates gave way and fell back in confusion to a ridge behind them, where an old log fence offered some shelter. With the logs for a breastwork they made a stand and poured a galling fire upon Graham's ranks.

Again the advance was sounded and the brigade attempted to carry the works. The situation of the One Hundred and Forty-first was most desperate. A second log fence extending forward from the first named, and at right angles with it, also offered shelter, which the Confederates quickly took advantage of, thus forming two lines. These two lines created an angle into the hollow of which the One Hundred and Forty-first bravely rushed. The regiment numbered only 417 men and 24 officers, although this was its first battle. It struggled gallantly to break through the angle and charge the enemy's line, but it was overwhelmed. A whole Confederate division was hurled against Graham's brigade, and in a short time the One Hundred and Forty-first was engaged, front, flank and rear.

The crisis that tries men's soldier mettle had fallen upon those quiet, sound hearted Pennsylvanians, and away off in one corner of the great fight at Chancellorsville they stood up in the lonesome woods and fought like heroes. Both the regimental color bearers were quickly shot down, and the leader of the color company, Capt. Swart, was instantly killed while lifting one of the fallen flags. One flag was subsequently carried by the colonel, H. J. Madill, and the other by the major. Lieut. Col. Watkins redeemed his pledge most nobly. Early in the fight his horse had been killed under him by a shell and he himself severely stunned. Two days before this affair the same thing had occurred, and although his companions urged him on both occasions to go to the rear he was to the very front and received a minie ball through the breast while urging his men over the Confederate works. Twelve officers out of the 24 engaged and 234 men out of 417 were killed and wounded. The killed and mortally hurt numbered 82.

Gen. Graham wisely withdrew his men before their slaughter was complete, and retired slowly. On reaching the wooded ridge occupied at first he found the log fence and where the brigade had begun the fighting, he ordered the colonels of regiments to reform their disordered ranks. Col. Madill, whose smiling face and encouraging words had animated the regiment throughout that bloody Sunday morning, fixed the flagstaff of the One Hundred and Forty-first, which he was still carrying, firmly in the ground and in a loud voice struck up the familiar camp song:

Rally round the flag, boys.

The men responded heartily, joining in the singing until the woods that shortly before resounded with their cheers were echoing back the notes of music than which nothing better was ever heard on the battlefield, and with unshaken coolness and resolution, despite the terrible experiences of the hour, the unwounded survivors faced the enemy again with closed up ranks.

Chancellorsville was followed by Gettysburg, two months later, on Pennsylvania soil. The story of that fight is too well known to need rehearsing. The One Hundred and Forty-first was with Graham's brigade in the front line of the famous salient angle formed by Sickles in the Peach Orchard, on Emmittsburg pike, July 2, 1863. In fact, the One Hundred and Forty-first was the angle itself. It numbered at 3 o'clock that day 200 men all told. After some maneuvering to get into the best position to meet the charging assaults of Longstreet's Confederates, coming from two directions against the angle, Col. Madill found his regiment alone, facing a withering fire from artillery and musketry on both fronts. When a whole Confederate division emerged from a sheltering wood and dashed for the Peach Orchard, one of the regiments of the regiments said to the colonel, "Hadn't we better get out of this?"

"I have no orders to get out. If I had my old regiment I could whip all of them," was the response. In twenty minutes, however, the brave colonel found that he must go or leave his last man in the fatal angle. At the first Confederate volley 30 fell. In a few minutes 27 lay dead within sight of the colonel. The major and the adjutant were killed, and all the color guards and both color bearers were killed or wounded. A wounded man saw the bearer of the state flag shot down and took the staff from his hands. In a few minutes the bearer of the stars and stripes fell, and the same wounded man caught up the falling flag and carried it until relieved of it by the colonel. With nineteen unwounded men and his flag intact Col. Madill marched back before the wave of enemies pressing up on all sides.

Graham had been wounded and captured and the line at the angle was destroyed. Gen. Sickles, surprised and overcome by the sudden and awful disaster, was hastening forward into the very jaws of death to try and save something. But it was too late. Where an hour before two lines of his troops had shown bold fronts west and south, the Confederates were in possession and were following up their successes by pushing boldly and with all the ardor of triumphant soldiers toward Little Round Top, the key to Gettysburg. Seeing Col. Madill moving off with his beggarly handful the general pleaded, "Colonel, for God's sake, can't you hold on?"

The leader of the once proud One Hundred and Forty-first cast an eye along the ground behind his few followers, as though measuring ghastly ranks filled by his fallen heroes, and with a husky voice exclaimed, "Where are my men?"

Could he have held on with 19 soldiers against 10,000? He would have tried had it been so ordered, but in an instant Sickles was cut down by a musket ball, and resistance at the Peach Orchard and the Wheatfield, in fact everywhere in front of Little Round Top, was ended.

The One Hundred and Forty-first lost 149 killed and wounded. The killed and mortally hurt numbered 40. Out of 9 officers 6 were killed or wounded. The loss amounted to over 75 per cent. of those engaged and was exceeded only once on the Union side in the war—namely, the First Minnesota, which lost 80 per cent.

Yet the regiment was not wiped out. It was transferred to the Second corps in the spring of 1864, and took part in all the bloody battles of Gen. Hancock from the Wilderness to Petersburg. Lieut. Col. Watkins, having recovered from his Chancellorsville wound and returned from captivity, was in command. In the assaults at Petersburg, June 18, 1864, the regiment stormed the Confederate intrenchments, and there Col. Watkins met his doom. He was shot through the body while leading his men in the heat of battle and died on the field. He had redeemed his pledge.

A CHILD'S LAUGHTER.

All the bells of heaven may ring,
All the birds of heaven may sing,
All the wells of earth may spring,
All the winds on earth may bring
All sweet sounds together:
Sweeter far than all things heard,
Hand of harper, tone of bird,
Sound of woods at sundawn stirred,
Welling water's trickle word,
Wind in warm wan weather.

One thing yet there is that none
Hearing ere its chime be done
Knows not well the secret one
Heard of men beneath the sun.
Hoped in heaven hereafter:
Soft and strong and loud and light,
Very sound of very light
Heard from the morning's rosiest height,
When the soul of all delight
Fills a child's clear laughter.

Golden bells of welcome rolled
Never forth such notes, nor told
Hours so blithe in tones so bold
As the radiant mouth of gold
Here that rings forth heaven:
If the golden creed of Christ
Were a nightingale—why, then
Something seen and heard of men
Might be half as true as when Laughs a child of seven.

—A. C. Swinburne in Church Quarterly Review.

THE CRADLE BARS THE WAY.

A Woman Tells Why a Wife and Mother Cannot Enter the Domain of Politics.

Be it pleasant or unpleasant, it is none the less an absolute truth—the raison d'etre of a woman is maternity. For this and this alone nature has differentiated her from man, and built her up cell by cell and organ by organ. The continuance of the race in healthy reproduction, together with the fit nourishment and the care of the young after birth, is the ultimate end of woman as such, and whatever tells against these functions and reduces either her power or her perfectness is an offense against nature and a wrong done to society.

If she chooses to decline her natural office altogether, and to dedicate to other services a life which has no sympathy with the sex of humanity, that comes into her lawful list of preferences and discords. But neither then nor while she is one with the rest, a wife and mother like others, is she free to blaspheme her assigned functions; nor to teach the young to blaspheme them; nor yet so to affect such intellectual things as shall militate against the healthy performance of her first great natural duty and her first great social obligation.

The cradle lies across the door of the polling booth and bars the way to the senate. We can conceive nothing more disastrous of a woman in any stage of maternity, expectant or accomplished, than the heated passions and turmoil of a political contest; for we may put out of court three fallacies—that she vote, if obtained at all, is to be confined to widows and spinsters only; that enfranchised women will content themselves with the vote and not seek after active office, and that they will bring into the world of politics the sweetness and light claimed for them by their adherents, and not, on the contrary, add their own shrillier excitement to the men's deeper passions.

Nor must we forget that the franchise for women would not simply allow a few well conducted, well educated, self respecting gentlewomen quietly to record their predilection for liberalism or conservatism, but would in the far wider flood of the uneducated, the unrestrained, the irrational and emotional—those who know nothing and imagine all—those whose presence and partisanship on all public questions madder already excited men.

We have no right to suppose that human nature is to be changed for our benefit, and that the influence of one factor become a dead letter because certain among us wish it so. What has been will be again. In the mirror of the prophet, which hangs behind him, the Parisian woman of the revolution will be repeated wherever analogous conditions exist, and to admit women into active participation in politics will certainly be to increase disorder and add fuel to the fire of strife.—Mrs. Lynn Linton in Nineteenth Century.

Forms as a Dinner Table.

A very beautiful table decoration was seen at a dinner party given by a famous beauty noted for her taste and originality. The cloth, which was of the finest damask, displaying a delicate floral design, the center figure being an exquisitely drawn wreath of the fronds, while the border was formed of sprays of the most delicate maidenhair variety, had been ordered of a great linen house in Belfast, with special reference to the decoration of living ferns, intended to be used for "a summer dinner party."

The table was circular, and in the middle stood one of the giant tulip vases of the fashionable. This graceful receptacle was filled with the loveliest and rarest specimens of ferns, the spreading, feathery fronds reaching far over the heads of the assembled company, and forming, as it were, a verdant roof through which the rays of the electric lights of the chandelier. No candles, no flowers were used, but each silver dish was surrounded by a wreath of fern, lovelier and more perfectly fresh during the service of the course.

All the crystal ware was exquisitely engraved with ferns, while the Dresden china service gave forth a one tenth of warmth and color with its pure rose and gold tints. The ideal dinner decoration was the universal comment, and far more effective than the elaborated floral bouquets which have prevailed during the past season.—Boston Herald.

To Restore Tainted Meats.

Housekeepers generally believe that meats that have become slightly tainted can be "freshened up" and made harmless by boiling in soda and water. This assumption is defective; the bad smell and taste can often be removed by this means—that is, if the meat is not too old; and if the boiling is kept up for several hours so that the inside of the meat is as thoroughly treated to the soda and high heat as the outside, then very likely all the putrid poisons would be destroyed.

But on ordinary cooking would not render such meat perfectly safe. This is one of the simplest means of "restoring" meats. Salicylic acid and boracic acid are also used by some manufacturers of bologna sausages and like foods, and by some canners of meat. But even the soda is somewhat detrimental, while the other preservatives are decidedly so.—Boston Herald.

A Valuable Woman Clerk.

Some of the women are employed in what are known as "affidavit cases"—cases where money is to be paid or ordered to be redeemed in the usual manner. One of these expert women clerks saved the government $30,000 once. This money was lost in a paymaster's trunk, which was sunk at the bottom of the Mississippi river, lay there for many months, and was almost a mass of rust when it arrived at the treasury. The express company, which was responsible for this money, presented the Journal with $500.—Washington Cor. Boston Journal.

Millinery Notes.

The bonnet in the sketch is quite a fascinating one, and would suit almost any lady between thirty and forty. It is of Russia straw, trimmed with pink blossoms, and drapery and black velvet loops. The strings are of velvet tied in a prim bow at the side.

A becoming hat is composed of black lace and jet, and has a trimming of ribbon loops and ostrich tips.

A STYLISH BONNET.

Chiffon is the prettiest, lightest and most becoming trimming imaginable for a summer bonnet. It is such fragile stuff, however, that it will only stand a week's wear. In bonnets as well as evening dress pink seems to be the favorite color. Yellow ranks second, then comes pale green; blue is nowhere.

Fashions in Jewelry.

Among the latest and most favored things in jewelry are silver Klondike Bee notes the following in The Jewelers' Circular:

A decided novelty are silver slipper tips. They are intended to ornament, but appear to have a purpose as serious as copper toes for children. They are covered with repousse forms and are adjustable. The shoe tips can be worn on numbers from two to five.

Watches with covers of light enamel ornamented with graceful designs of Cupids and festoons of flowers retain their popularity.

Serpents with jeweled eyes are twisted so as to serve as sleeve buttons. Fish with long tails are also among the newer sleeve buttons.

Pearls of smaller size are much used in jewelry to be worn with summer gowns.

CITY COMMON COUNCIL.

A SPECIAL MEETING HELD LAST EVENING.

The "Combine" Grants a Sewerage Franchise to J. M. Low & Co.—They Also Passed the Water-Works Ordinances Over the Mayor's Veto.—A Stormy Session.

The City Common Council held a special meeting last evening to consider the water works question. It was 9.45 o'clock when the meeting was called to order. Besides the President, Councilmen Ackerman, Gislup, Hetfield, Johnson, Moffett, Rushmore, Roberts, See and Spangenberg responded to roll call. Mr. Ginna was absent.

The clerk read the call.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the ordinance granting a sewerage franchise to Mr. J. M. Low & Co., be placed on its third reading.

Mr. Ackerman inquired if sufficient time had elapsed since its publication.

The president said that it had.

Mr. Ackerman:—"Then I call for the ayes and nays on the question." Messrs. Rushmore and See also demand the ayes and nays. A roll call showed that the ordinance had been carried by 6 to 4.

The ordinance was then read for the third time.

Mr. Hetfield moved that it be adopted on its third reading. The motion was carried by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Hetfield moved that it be placed on its final passage. It was so ordered by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Hetfield offered the specifications and contract of Mr. J. M. Low & Co., together with the map.

Mr. Ackerman moved that it be read. It was so ordered.

Mr. Ackerman moved that the consideration of the contract be deferred until the first Monday in October.

Mr. Hetfield:—"I desire to be put on record as saying that copies of this contract have been in the hands of the members of Council for several months past and that the present contract has very few alterations in it."

Mr. Ackerman:—"But we have not been given a chance to look into the merits of the contract. I think we should be granted that privilege."

Mr. Ackerman's motion was lost by a vote of 6 to 4.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the agreement and specifications be accepted.

Mr. Ackerman—"I think the question should be open for debate. I think it radically wrong to pass the ordinance in such a rush."

Mr. Ackerman—"The maps, etc., have been in the possession of the city clerk for several months and they could have been seen if the request had been made.

Mr. Ackerman then addressed Council. He denounced the action of the committee in no complimentary way. He thought the matter should be deferred for the present. Continuing he said, "The Plainfield Water Supply Company has agreed to put in as many hydrants as we want for fifteen dollars per annum. Mr. Low wants $25."

Mr. Hetfield—Mr. Ackerman just referred to the Plainfield Water Supply company agreeing to put in hydrants for $15 each. That is what they said they would do. But when we asked them what they would charge us for flushing sewers. They replied $60 per hydrant. We also told them we wanted a system of sewerage. They said they could not put it in. Now Mr. Low purposes to build a system of Water Works and sewerage and to flush the sewers at a cost of $25 per hydrant. Isn't it better to pay Mr. Low $25 per annum per hydrant than to pay the Water Supply company $60."

Mr. Ackerman—"But have the committee met with the Water Supply company recently? They make a good proposition to Council. They agree to do certain things. Every company is composed of reputable men and I think they should be treated courteously by this body."

Mr. Hetfield—"We have not met with them lately. The last time we met with them we suggested sewerage. They said that they would look into the matter and call a meeting. They failed to do so and we looked for other parties."

Mr. Rushmore—"In regard to the contract. When I saw it before it was in a different shape. There has been alteration in it which we have never seen. There are certain clauses which are not legal. The power is relegated to the Water Committee where it should be given to Council and then the penalties do not seem to be adequate. If the company furnishes us with poor water, or if they refuse to furnish us with any water at all they are only called upon to pay $5,000. What is $5,000? Suppose they did not give us the necessary pressure in case of fire. I need not tell you that did not want to do so and all it would cost them is $1,000. That clause is not worth a cent in my opinion. That clause will not stand the test of the law. I have it on good legal authority that the clause is not worth the paper it is written on. Therefore in the absence of the Corporation Counsel I do not think it wise to pass the ordinance. The language it contains is deceptive. There is no use in rushing the matter. I cannot conscientiously vote for such an ordinance when I hear such opinions expressed as I have heard. No such an exorbitant rate has been asked by the Water Supply Company. I wish I was free to say what I know. We did all in our power to defer action on the ordinance referring to the tearing up of the streets. It was passed, on its second reading, however, notwithstanding our protest. Now we learn it is illegal. We wanted it referred to the Committee on Laws and Ordinances. If it had been the Committee would have discovered the error."

Mr. Hetfield:—"There is no consistency in the gentleman's argument. I hope by his statements he does not wish to reflect on the Water Committee. The maps show the location of every hydrant."

Mr. Ackerman:—"We must remember that in passing this ordinance we are not doing it for to-day or for to-morrow, but we are granting a franchise for twenty-five years."

Mr. Hetfield:—"If the gentlemen have any confidence in the Water Committee they will vote for the ordinance. If they have not they will vote against it. No Company is coming here to furnish unwholesome water. It would be to their detriment to do so."

Mr. Rushmore:—"I had no idea that whatever I said reflected on the Water Committee. I voted against the ordinance because I wanted a chance to examine it."

Mr. Hetfield:—"The mistake in the ordinance referred to was that $200 was inserted where it should have been $100. If we waited for the gentlemen on the other side of the house all the time would be lost."

Messrs. Ackerman and Rushmore in chorus:—"We call that gentleman to order!"

Mr. Hetfield:—"They are out of order, Mr. President, I have the floor."

After Mr. Hetfield had concluded his remarks Mr. Ackerman said Mr. Hetfield had made a serious accusation which he should retract.

The Mayor's veto of the Water Works ordinance was then read. It is as follows:

THE MAYOR'S OFFICE,
PLAINFIELD, N. J., Aug. 5th, 1891.

To the Honorable Common Council of the City of Plainfield:

GENTLEMEN:—I return herewith without my approval an ordinance, entitled, "An Ordinance to provide for the obtaining and furnishing a Supply of Water to the City of Plainfield, for the purpose of extinguishing fires and other lawful uses and purposes."

The object of this ordinance is to give to Joseph M. Low and six unknown associates, the consent of the Corporate authorities to form a Corporation, under the name of the Plainfield Aqueduct Company, for the purpose of supplying the City with water.

I cannot consistently sign this ordinance, without first being made acquainted with the terms and conditions upon which you propose to grant the franchise referred to. Said terms and conditions are supposed to be embodied in a contract, which was drafted more than a month ago, since which time it has been in the hands of special counsel under the control of that portion of your Honorable Body favorable to the passage of this ordinance. These members of the Common Council have been kept in ignorance concerning the character of this contract, in its amended form, notwithstanding their right to the fullest information respecting all measures brought before the Council. The Corporation Counsel has kept informed of the changes and amendments made from time to time, have been made in the contract as originally drafted—but I am informed and believe, that he has not agreed with his approval. Looking at the matter from a purely business standpoint, my judgment is, that this contract should have been submitted to the Common Council, fully discussed and agreed upon before the final passage of this ordinance. In no other way is it possible to reach an intelligent conclusion as to the advisability of granting the proposed franchise.

Plainfield certainly has no need of two water companies, neither can two companies profitable exist here, and inasmuch as the plant of the Plainfield Water Supply Company is already approaching completion, it seems to me unwise to have our streets torn up again, and to subject ourselves to the annoyance and damage which we have already experienced through the laying of pipes by the present company.

It is a well known fact that competing companies, sooner or later combine and the interests of the public are sacrificed thereby. In no event therefore should the existence of two companies be encouraged without making, by the most stringent provisions, such consummation impossible.

The Plainfield Water Supply Company as I understand, has proposed to supply to the city water for fire purposes at fifteen dollars a hydrant per annum. If this is true, and if the proposition is still before you, my opinion is that the welfare of the city will be subserved by accepting the proposition before it is withdrawn. Respectfully submitted,

A. GILBERT,
Mayor.

Mr. Hetfield moved that the ordinance be passed notwithstanding the objections of the Mayor.

Mr. Ackerman then addressed the Council as follows:

MR. PRESIDENT:—An ordinance preliminary to the granting of a franchise to J. M. Low and his associates, (whoever they may be) has been sent to the Mayor for his signature, in order that the provisions contained therein may become operative. As a coordinate branch of the City's Government, the opinion of our Chief Executive should have great weight. In him primarily is vested the power to see that the laws which we may from time to time enact are enforced, and the idea in giving the Mayor a voice in the formation of the municipal laws, was no doubt due to the desire to guard the interests of the City against the injurious effects of crude and hasty legislation. He should be a caution to the Council that in his opinion (and his opinion is entitled to great weight), the action of the Council has been unwise or inopportune, or both.

While the power vested by the minority have availed naught in checking the speed which was exhibited by the majority of the majority when in the preparatory stages, the members of the minority have urged a more deliberate consideration of the subject, while its attendant plans and specifications; but now that the Mayor has presented well founded objections for returning the message without his approval, every Councilman is doubly bound to his constituents to move cautiously.

The objections that he urges are germane. He does not interpose his veto on conditions of a contract which he had not seen. Who would?

Every sensible man will concur with the opinion he expresses, that it is highly inexpedient to grant permission to any Water Supply company to take time to tear up our streets, no matter if such Company were composed of our best citizens, for until it is demonstrated that there is an urgent necessity for such permanent water competition, existing, to voluntarily subject our citizens in the immediate future to the discomforts arising from upturned streets, would be an imposition upon their patience. To me it seems highly improbable that the limited territory embraced within the corporate limits can contribute sufficient adequate support to two rival corporations, and that a combination should be effected, will not the public, the people that we represent, have to pay such rates as will pay a profit on the combined capital?

As the privilege of purchasing the Water Works by the City exists in the contract, we certainly should protect our interests by not leaving the matter of purchasing and the method of paying for the same undetermined at this time.

In my opinion, it behooves us to think twice before acting, and improve the opportunity now offered to us by sustaining the Mayor in his veto; therefore Mr. President I vote "No."

Mr. Rushmore—"I do not think it right for us to give Mr. Low $25 per hydrant when we have a responsible company who will furnish us with water for $15 per hydrant. Mr. Low apparently intends to form two companies. One water and the other sewerage. It seems to me wrong to give him $80,000 in twenty-five years when we can have that amount. Mr. Low ought to clean out his own sewers. He proposes to build a system of sewerage and then ask the city to flush the sewers for him. He asks us to pay him $80,000 for cleaning his own sewers when he ought to clean them at his own expense. Why it's an outrage. As individuals we know very well that if we grant him a water works franchise we will involve the city in litigation.

A vote was taken and Mr. Hetfield's motion was adopted by a vote of 6 to 4.

The ordinance referring to the tearing up of streets was put back on its second reading and afterwards ordered engrossed and advertised.

The meeting then adjourned.

—There great sellers—those $2.00 kid button boots that Doane & Van Arsdale tell you about in their advertisement today.

—The West Ends of Somerville and the Crescents of this city are contesting a game of base ball this afternoon on the Crescent grounds.

—The cloudy weather of yesterday greatly interfered with the attendance on the Winfield Scott Post excursion, and it did not prove a financial success, but those who went said they never had a better time, and returned very greatly pleased. Better luck next time.

—There were 181 failures in the United States reported to Bradstreet's during the week, against 213 in the preceding week and 160, 218, 159 and 137 in the corresponding weeks of 1890, 1889, 1888 and 1887 respectively. The total number of failures in the United States January 1st to date is 7,739 against 6,661 in 1890.

—It is a generally expressed opinion that the reason why the meetings of Common Council of late are not called to order at the regular time, or until late at night, is so that the people will not be present to see for themselves the doings of the combine, and getting weary of waiting will go home, as they do.

—The annual excursion of the Warren Mission to Asbury Park will occur on Friday, the 28th inst. This is the last excursion from Plainfield to the Park this season, and Dunellen Presbyterian Sunday school will accompany them. Those having the matter in charge are doing all they can for the pleasure and comfort of those who go.

—Those who are addicted to a careful and life long observance and recollection of the many sudden deaths occurring in August of the past two decades has the country presented such a magnificent appearance as now. The freshness of the tree foliage is remarkable, while grass and plants, shrubs and flowers, all alike are in evidence of extraordinary vigor.

—An urgent invitation is extended by the First Baptist church especially to the young men of our city, to attend that church to-morrow when the Rev. Carter Helm Jones will preach both morning and evening. He is said to be one of the most eloquent preachers in the Baptist denomination, and his success especially with young men has been marked.

—It is a cold day when scientists fail to find something astonishing. They now claim to have discovered that the atmosphere is full of holes; that is, places where there is no air. Some French aeronauts claim to have come across one of the holes into which they tumbled with their balloon and fell a mile or so until they struck another layer of atmosphere. How the atmosphere itself keeps out of these holes is, as usual in apocryphal discoveries, not explained.—New Brunswick Home News.

KNIGHTS OF PYTHIAS.

A RED LETTER DAY PROPOSED IN PLAINFIELD.

The First Regiment, Knights of Pythias, Will Have a Big Parade—A Concert by the Seventh Regiment Band and a $1,000 Display of Fireworks.

The annual parade of the First Regiment, Uniform Rank, Knights of Pythias, will take place in this city on Wednesday afternoon, September 16, 1891. Grand Chancellor Ulrich has invited and urged every subordinate lodge in this State to participate in this parade. As there are 10,000 members in this State, the parade will undoubtedly be a very large one.

The Grand Chancellor has appointed D. N. Messler as Grand Marshal of the Uniformed Knights, who will issue his orders direct to the lodges.

In the evening they will give a grand concert by the Seventh Regiment Band, and a $1,000 display of fireworks. An admission will be charged to the concert and fireworks, except to the members who take part in the parade. All those will be admitted free.

The Jersey Knight will run five special excursion trains to this city that day. One from Newark, one from Jersey City, one from Manasquan along the Long Branch Road, one from Trenton and one from Phillipsburg, stopping at all stations along the routes where Knights of Pythias lodges are located. The fare will be at reduced rates, and a special train will return to each place at night after the close of the festivities.

This will undoubtedly be the largest gathering of Knights of Pythias ever held in this State.

Fanwood Notes.

Miss Edith L. V. Gere is spending part of her vacation with her sister, Mrs. Thomas M. Paff, Jr.

A. P. Downer has obtained a wide reputation for raising cucumbers. He raises the "Downerbeat" variety. Col. Moore takes a deep interest in watching the progress of the cucumbers—from Mr. Downer's vines to the Colonel's table.

Walter S. Force and A. D. Beekman are fishing at Fire Island. Before they left Fanwood they made a provisional contract to supply all their friends with blue fish for a week. The proviso was that the fish would allow themselves to be caught.

The people consider it an outrage that their streets are not lighted. Twenty-six residents pay 50 cents a month for street lamps, which, they claim, are not lighted half the time, and when they are lighted the lamps, so they say, are so smoked up that the benefit is only partial.

A number of Fanwood gentlemen are engaged in a mid-Summer whist tournament. The players are Henry Kyte, Abner P. Downer, Walter Force, Clarence W. Smith and Mr. Gardner. These gentlemen meet every Wednesday evening, the 1st game being played then at the house of another. Upon starting the game all five cut, the one having the lowest card dropping out and the remaining four playing the first game after cutting for partners. After each game one of the players drops out, thus giving all players the same number of games.

Concerning Mad Dogs.

"A mad dog cannot turn his head," says a veterinary surgeon; "if he can twist his neck about and turn his head side to side, even should other signs be present, there is no cause to fear for him, and there is a chance that he may escape it. But if attacked by something on either side of him in running, his shoulders and head turn stiffly together, he is in very dangerous and hopeless condition. Then his eyes of grayish green color, are sunken in his head; his tongue hangs out, and a spongy yellow foam oozes therefrom. A dog may run foaming at the mouth in a state of great excitement, and still not be mad, if only he can turn his head.—Ex.

Curiosity, as to whether a mad-dog turns and twists his head and neck as specified above, is about the last thing the observer manifests. He is usually engaged in attempting to break all known records for speed, or tree-climbing.

A Cure For Sunburn and Freckles.

A solution of the tincture of benzoin, one teaspoonful to a glass of cold water, will often remove both sunburn and freckles when not of too long standing. Bathe the parts for ten minutes, morning and night; if on the face, be careful not to get the solution in the eyes; then bathe still slightly moist with a soft piece of linen cloth. Dr. Shoemaker gives the following prescription for freckles: Oxide of zinc, three drachms; subiodide of bismuth, one-half drachm; starch, one and one-half drachms; glycerine, three drahms. Direction—Apply the mixture at night, before retiring, and remove the residue in the morning with a little powder of borax and sweet oil.

Proposed Railroad Consolidation.

A meeting is called of the stockholders of the Newark and Roselle, and the Roselle and South Plainfield Railway Companies at the office of Collins & Corbin, Jersey City, on Thursday, Aug. 27, to consider an agreement for the merger and consolidation of the Roselle and South Plainfield Railway Company, Newark and Roselle Railway Company, Jersey City, Newark and Western Railway Company, Newark and Passaic Railway Company, Jersey City Terminal Railway Company, and Edgewater Railway Company into a new corporation to be styled the Jersey City Terminal Railway Company; and a vote by ballot will be taken for the adoption or rejection of said agreement.

The Boston Method.

What Boston thinks of New York on general principles is perhaps only paralleled by what New York thinks of Boston. What New York thinks of Boston official benevolence is narrated in an amusing manner by a member of the municipal lodging house committee of the former city. He had heard that Boston had discovered the best way of getting rid of tramps, and doing it besides in a benevolent way, so as not only not to hurt the poor tramp's feelings, but make him feel, as it were, that he might still hold up his head as a man among men.

It was reported that any tramp might apply at the Boston benevolent establishment and get a bath, a clean nightshirt, a bed and a breakfast, all for the privilege of sawing wood two hours in the morning. The benevolent New York official tried it for himself. He dressed himself tramp fashion, in a way to deceive the very elect, and applied for a Boston lodging. He timidly held it before the clerk of the tramp lodging house the ticket he had got at the police station. The clerk gave him a look of withering scorn, and in a lord-of-all-to-a-yellow-dog fashion remarked, "I'm getting on to that racket." Then he gruffly called, "Next," leaving the New Yorker standing bewildered. He had no idea what the racket was that the high and mighty official objected to until, after a painful process of inquiry, he found that he ought to have put the card into the official's hand no matter where the hand was.

He got his bath. The towel offered for him to wipe on made his flesh creep, and the nightshirt made his hair stand on end, from the unmistakable evidence they gave of the score or so of tramps who had used them since their last cleansing. However, he was in for it and tramps must not be finikin. He had to wear it and tag tied to the string around his neck, showing what was the number of his bundle of clothing. In the morning the same lord-of-all-to-a-yellow-dog performance was repeated from 5 o'clock till the tramps had breakfast at 8:30 o'clock. They were allowed to wash their faces, but had no towels. The breakfast the New York man estimated to cost about two cents a head. For this and the night's lodging each man worked hard two hours, sawing and splitting wood. The men were treated in an unfeeling manner. When the New York man got out he no longer wondered that tramps were scarce in Boston, and he concluded that the wood-sawing enterprise was a thorough business success.

Legal Appeals.

One would not wish to be troublesome, or yet to suggest innovations on time honored customs, but really is not the business of taking appeals in law cases rather overdone? Take, for instance, the Iowa calf case, or the Arkansas shoat case. In one of these famous legal tangles the property in the beginning was worth $17, in the other $2.50. Yet the contestants lawyed and lawed on with unabated fury till mansions, their families and all their kin on each side were bankrupted. One of the cases lasted twenty years. Who got the money finally? The lawyers. Lawyers don't mind appeals. Not they.

In point of fact, it must have been the cunning legal gentlemen themselves who devised the system of appeal from a lower court to a higher one. Certainly it does them good, while it helps their clients only in one respect, that of enabling them to continue quarreling longer. The longer their cases can go on, the more their passions become inflamed, and like the Arkansas shoat contestants they bankrupt themselves for $2.50.

Appeals seem to be granted far too easily and on much too frivolous pretexts. Nobody ever knows when or how a case is to be decided, and the first trial simply means nothing at all. It would be better, at least it could by no worse, if there was no appeal allowed at all in the majority of cases that are contested at law.

Strange stories come through the French papers to this country about the German emperor. French correspondents declare that the young kaiser uses morphine to deaden the pain in his deformed arm and for the same reason he drinks alcoholic liquors, sometimes taking more of both the morphine and the alcohol than is good for him. This accounts for the accident when the emperor recently slipped and fell on board the imperial yacht. From the same source comes also information that the emperor's orders on board the yacht were so unreasonable and confusing that the sailors found it impossible to obey them, and were almost dead from fatigue before he finally gave over.

A scientific writer says that the common idea that the American desert is a bed of sand is altogether wrong. Sand is not in it at all. It is composed of particles of dust perfectly dry and in the finest possible state of pulverization. The dust in many cases would make a most fertile soil under proper conditions.

HE WILL SEE HER AGAIN.

Almy Says He Will Meet Christie Once More.

HIS STORY OF THEIR LOVE AFFAIR.

He States That if Other People Had Left Him and His Alleged Sweetheart Alone, She Would Still Be Alive and He Would Be Free from Crime.

HANOVER, N. H. Aug. 22.—Thousands of people came here to see Murderer Almy Friday and today, but were disappointed. Almy is very weak and has been removed to an upper story of the Wheelock House, where better and more commodious quarters have been secured. It is not likely that he will be removed to the jail in Grafton for some time. The jail is not considered safe and lacks necessary accommodations for the wounded murderer. When privately arraigned Almy pleaded not guilty.

During a talk he emphasized his desire that people shall not rank him with common murderers. He said: "I know that I committed a brutal murder, nevertheless I am not a brute. I don't deserve any pity and I ought to suffer for my crime. Christie said she loved me, that I had many qualities she admired, but she added, 'I must test the sincerity of your love for me by living an upright life, and perhaps some time in the future your efforts will be rewarded.' I am sure that had there been no outside influence we would have got along much better." The prisoner has been photographed. He called for a looking glass, collar and necktie, and took considerable interest in arranging his mustache and fixing himself up in the best possible shape.

Almy must be a consummate actor if his language and behavior are the result of art. Never did a man appear to be more thoroughly in earnest as he related his story. The play of emotion upon his dark features, the inflections of his voice and his whole manner were natural. At times a feeling of abandonment to his fate seemed to move him. He would then speak rapidly, and readily answered all questions which did not touch upon his relations with his victim. "Well, it may be all for the best," said he when considering the events of the past forty-eight hours. "We shall now meet sooner than we otherwise would. Yes, and before long, and then the happy days will last forever. What divided us in life will do so no longer."

His Life Mystery.

What divided them in life is now believed to be the mystery surrounding Almy's life. He came to Hanover and entered the Warden household. Indeed, he has already said that Christie had many times begged of him to tell her his past life. She wanted him to tell who he really was and where he came from and to confess the errors he had committed, if any. This, however, he refused to do, saying that if he told all she might banish him forever. Today a reporter endeavored to extract from the prisoner something of that kind.

"Yes, I am a southerner," said he proudly. "I was brought up in the south and am connected with some of the best families there. I have been in all my sentiments and feelings, but I will say no more upon that subject. Things might be different with me now if I had told all about myself, but it is too late."

He Never Had a Friend.

Much as has been told about Almy by people who knew him when working here a year ago, no one could say anything definite about the man. He never had a friend in Hanover, although he had many acquaintances. He could say very little tackient connected with him which they can recall. He is said to have changed in appearance considerably by those who knew him. He is much thinner. He looks to be about twenty-eight years of age, about 5 feet 8 or 10 inches tall, and weighs perhaps 130 pounds. His black hair was cut today so as to allow of surgical treatment of the wound on his head.

He Thought of Suicide.

The reporter asked him how he had lived in his cell.

"I did not live high," replied Almy with a smile. "I just got about enough food to sustain life and that was all. I believed from the start I would be executed and I wished to do so. I kept track pretty closely of the search that was being made for me by listening to the talk of the detectives and officials. More than once I thought of committing suicide and thus putting an end to the whole business. The long days and nights were dreadful in that barn, with the people and scenes before me which called up so many memories of my darling Christie. I often went over in imagination how we had been together at this place, had read to each other at another, and a thousand other little incidents which were indelibly fixed on my mind."

The Wedding Ceremony.

Almy repeated his statement that he never intended to use any violence upon Christie Warden. He stoutly maintained that the first shot that took effect upon her was entirely accidental, the revolver being discharged while he was undeavoring to drag Christie away from the presence of her sister. He also repeated the assertion that he entertained no sentiment toward Christie except that of deep love, and that up to the night of the crime he had always treated her honorably and that at no time had he ever harbored the idea of insult or violence toward the girl.

Were the Love Letters?

There is a great interest on the part of the public to learn the important contents of the papers and letters which Almy threw out from his cell window to John Fuller. Before Mr. Fuller had even the opportunity to open the package Solicitor Mitchell and in the name of the law effected an arrangement whereby, for the present at least, none of the contents of the manuscripts committed to Mr. Fuller's hands will be made public. Almy says that the package contains a personal statement of his own which he a few days ago prepared and signed in the belief that escape would be impossible for him, and that as a last resort he would take his own life rather than surrender.

He positively states that in the package will be found letters written to him by Christie, and that they will prove that there was on the part of Christie a much stronger sentiment entertained for him (Almy) than the public here have been willing to believe.

Did She Love Him?

If Almy tells the truth in relation to this matter the letters will certainly play a very important part in the trial. Fanny Warden, who endeavored so bravely to shield her sister on the night of the murder, is now in Hanover, but he felt as here were sent by Christie to Almy that contained any expressions regarding him excepting those of pure friendship and kindly esteem.

This matter of the actual personal relations that existed between Almy and Christie is now becoming a theme of interesting discussion on the part of the public. This matter forced itself upon the attention of the people for the reason that in the trial it is expected that Almy's counsel will make a determined effort to prove that Almy at first found some favor in the eyes of Christie, but that he was afterward dropped, and that his disappointment at the result and his long brooding over the matter gradually led him up to the awful part which he performed on the evening that he dragged Christie into the valley and killed her.

A Fastidious Criminal.

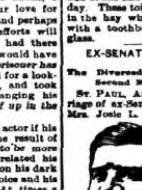
When asked why he was so bold as to go to Christie's grave, as he says he did twice a week, he replied: "There was a consolation in going there that I cannot explain. It was the only place where I could unload the burdens I carried. Upon my solemn word I did not try to assault Christie, and the direction the first shot took was accidental. My relation with Christie was every way correct, and if her parents had but confided in her life and happiness would have been preserved."

One of the extraordinary features of the developments of the past two days that Almy, when bathing and shaving and dressing like a tramp during his self imposed imprisonment of five weeks in the Warden barn had provided himself with razor, soap and brush and shaved himself there every day. These toilet articles have been found in the hay where he lay hidden, together with a toothbrush and a small looking glass.

EX-SENATOR SABIN MARRIED.

The Divorced Minnesota Statesman's Second Matrimonial Venture.

ST. PAUL, Aug. 22.—The reported marriage of ex-Senator Dwight M. Sabin and Mrs. Josie L. Swan, of Milwaukee, has caused much surprise here. The divorce of Mr. Sabin from his first wife, obtained over two years ago, was at that time the leading social sensation in Minnesota and at the national capital. The former Mrs. Sabin's personality made her a favorite, and her homes in Washington and Minnesota were the scene of many brilliant receptions. When the fact that she had been taken to a sanitarium at Flushing, L. I., was made public her sad condition was the subject of universal comment.



DWIGHT M. SABIN.

At Stillwater the report of the ex-senator's marriage created a complete surprise to all of his friends. He left Stillwater Aug. 4, taking with him his two adopted daughters. His trip was supposed to be purely a business one. A dispatch received here from Milwaukee says:

"The report of the marriage of ex-Senator D. M. Sabin, of Minnesota, and Mrs. Josie L. Swan created a big flutter here, where Mrs. Swan is so well and favorably known. The news was a genuine surprise to Mrs. Swan's most intimate friends and acquaintances and is the talk of the society people of the town.

"Mrs. Swan was the wife of W. G. Swan for some years, and until the time of his death prominently identified with the traffic department of the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul road. Mr. and Mrs. Swan-Sabin are at present at Long Branch spending their honeymoon, and will take up their residence at the senator's beautiful Minnesota home while away from."

Ex-Senator Sabin secured a divorce from his first wife in June, 1889. The news of his domestic troubles created a tremendous sensation in Washington, where Mr. Sabin had just concluded his term in the United States senate. He and his wife had been lavish entertainers in the capital city, and Mrs. Sabin was a shining social light there.

The grounds upon which Mr. Sabin secured his divorce were that his wife was an habitual drunkard and addicted to the opium habit.

SHE WAS TIRED OF LIFE.

A Mother Kills Her Two Children and Attempts Suicide.

ALEXANDRIA, W. Va., Aug. 22.—Mrs. Banhowser, wife of a prosperous resident of Helvitia, during a fit of temporary insanity, drowned her three-months-old baby in a spring near the house, then returned to the house and brained her three-year-old boy with a hatchet, mutilating the body in a horrible manner.

She then attempted to take her own life, but will recover. The only reason given by the mother for her deed is that she was tired of living and did not want to leave her children behind her.

Work of the Knights of Pythias.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 22.—At today's session of the grand lodge, Knights of Pythias, the officers were installed and nominations of grand lodge officers to be voted for in June next were made as follows: Grand chancellor, John Davis, Pittsburg; grand vice chancellor, John Strattan, Philadelphia; grand prelate, R. H. Jackson, Pittsburg; grand master at arms, Charles G. Freed, Philadelphia; grand inner guard, about twenty nominations, including Colonel George Sewell, of Pittsburg.

Bay State Soldiers Complimented.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—The war department has received the report of Captain M. M. Kendall, Sixth cavalry, on the condition of the Massachusetts militia inspected by him at the annual encampment. He says Massachusetts may well be proud of her volunteer militia, as its excellent condition at present places it second to none in the Union.

Marie Reinhart's Disappearance.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 22.—It is reported here that Detectives Frink, Murphy and Miller, of Inspector Byrnes' staff, were in this city working on the mysterious disappearance of Mrs. Marie Reinhart, who has sued Edward Malley for breach of promise.

Judge Crosbam in Connecticut.

Commissioner Bragg Dead.

SPRING LAKE, N. J., Aug. 22.—Interstate Commerce Commissioner Bragg is dead. He had been in ill health for some time, but wrote a few days ago to Commissioner Morrison, at Washington, that he felt so much better that he would be able to resume his duties in a few days. He died suddenly this morning.

THE PRESIDENT'S TOUR

He Was Almost Suffocated While at Saratoga.

ROUGHLY HANDLED BY THE CROWD

The People Meant No Disrespect, but They Were All So Anxious to See the Nation's Chief Executive That They Made It Very Lively for Him.

SARATOGA, Aug. 22.—The president became a godfather yesterday. Among the guests at Judge McAdam's house were the Rev. Mr. Allen, of Elizabeth, N. J., and his wife, and with them was their baby, eight months old. At the parents' request the president named the baby Marguerite. On the fishing trip the president was the most successful member of the party, which was due to the fact that his guide was Judge McAdam, to whom every foot of the lake is familiar. The president was out for nearly four hours over a half, and when Mr. McAdam brought the boat up to the landing his little daughter, who sat in the bow, held up a very creditable looking string of pickerel.

He Sat on the Front Seat.

The drive to the station four miles away was extremely pleasant. The president sat on the front seat of the wagon with the driver smoking. Many of the country people who passed the wagon did not recognize in that quiet figure the president of the United States. Others bowed to him and he returned their salutation. A little special train of one car and an engine bore the president to Saratoga.

The Committee Was Late.

A large crowd had been waiting here for a half hour, when the train stopped and they caught sight of the president through the car window they cheered again and again. The president and his party came out on the platform and stood there waiting for the local committee. There was some slight hitch in the arrangements, for the committee did not appear, and the president stood looking over the heads of the crowd until a gray haired man stepped up to him, and, holding out his hand, said:

"I guess this is the best chance I will have to shake hands with the president."

The president took the hand, but at once people began to jostle him and push each other around in an effort to shake hands with him and he had to seek refuge in the car. A minute later the committee, headed by Mr. Lohnas, the village president, appeared and, entering the car, welcomed the president to Saratoga.

A Battle with the Crowd.

The procession which preceded the presidential party to the hotel was composed of the Citizens' corps of militia in handsome gray uniforms, two posts of the Grand Army, the Jeffersonian club (Democratic) and the Lincoln club. Following these came the members of the local committee in carriages and the carriages containing the presidential party. Broadway had been well decorated for the reception. Applause, cheering and the waving of handkerchiefs greeted the president as the procession passed along the broad thoroughfare. He bowed his acknowledgments continually, and once even rose in his seat to return a salutation of more than ordinary fervor. After a determined battle with the eager crowd the president at last reached the piazza of the Grand Union hotel. In the course of his speech he said:

It gives me great pleasure and satisfaction to witness on the part of the citizens of Saratoga the expression of fellowship which has been upon me from all your faces. I am sure the exhibition of all this is that you are all American citizens, because you are all friends of the constitution and in thus assembling you give expression to your loyalty and patriotism. It is not, I am sure, an individual expression; it is larger and better than that, for this country of ours is distinguished in naught else more than in the fact that its people give their love and loyalty and service, not to individuals, but to institutions. We love this land because it is a land of liberty because the web and woof of its institutions are designed to promote and secure individual liberty and general prosperity.

Worth the Only Distinction.

We love it because it not only does not create, but does not tolerate any other distinction between men than that of merit. I desire to thank these comrades who wear the honored badge of the Grand Army of the Republic for their escort and their welcome. I never can wear the badge any where that I do not recognize its wearer as a friend. Survivors of a great struggle for the sanity, drowned in the thousands and thousands of men who marched and battled the utmost that men can endure, and even the utmost that men can give, they are now, as citizens of this republic, in civil life, doing their part to maintain order in communities and to promote in peace the honor and prosperity of the country they saved.

Nearly Almost Suffocated Him.

Throughout the delivery of this speech there was a continual buzz of conversation and the noise of street traffic, so that the president's voice could not be heard more than ten yards from the place where he stood and he cut his speech rather short. The president was then escorted to the other end of the main piazza, where a rope had been stretched to hold back the crowd, but the crowd had got in behind him and in the center of this crowd the president was almost suffocated. The local committee seemed entirely unequal to the emergency and it finally was by the exertions of some of the men of the party that the president, who had made an appeal for breathing room, was given enough space to turn around in.

The Party Nearly Clubbed.

When at 5:30 the president brought the public reception abruptly to a close, and turning, took Mr. Lohnas' arm and started for the hotel door, the crowd started with him, and the police started for the crowd, and several members of the president's party narrowly escaped a clubbing. The president was taken through the office of the hotel to his apartments and left to recover from his lively experience. The president had another conference with Hon. John W. Foster, his special envoy of the state department, last evening. Mr. Foster authorizes the statement that neither this conference nor the one at Mount Morgan had anything to do with the interpretation of the Spanish treaty.

A MUTINEER SHOT DEAD.

Captain Bakker's Desperate Deed on the Steamer Obdam.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Captain Bakker, of the steamship Obdam, of the Netherland line, reported a mutiny among the firemen and coalpassers of his ship on the last eastern trip, in which it was necessary for him to shoot and kill one of the rioters. On the second day out the entire company of firemen and coalpassers struck work. They gave no reason for their action. Chief Engineer Bol endeavored to persuade the men to resume to work, but they refused to listen to him and drove him on deck threatening vengeance.

The men then went on deck and among the passengers announcing that they intended to make things unpleasant for everybody. The furnace fires began to die out and toward night the steamer was drifting about and the prospect was she would soon be helpless. The weather was threatening. Captain Bakker went to the men and ordered them to their posts. For an answer they burst out of their quarters and threatened to kill the captain and every one on board. The ringleader, Peter Dusen, approached Captain Bakker threateningly, the latter drew out a pistol, and as he was about to pounce on the captain the latter pulled out a revolver and shot Dusen through the body. He died two hours after. After the shot the mutineers retreated to their quarters. They were finally driven to work at the point of pistols.

THE STRIKE ON THE ERIE.

It Is Extending Rapidly and the Situation Is Serious.

FINDLAY, O., Aug. 22.—If some compromise is not soon effected between the strikers of the Lake Erie and Western and the company the line will be blocked. The strike is extending rapidly. The yardmen in this city have struck for 15 cents an hour.

The method adopted by the men to enforce their demands is not sanctioned by their own rules or those of the organization, and they have no support from this quarter. The men will return to work if they have the assurance of the management that their demands will be fairly considered.

Threats at Peoria.

PEORIA, Ill., Aug. 22.—Although all the passenger trains of the Peoria and Pekin Union road are moving out of the yards on time, no freight trains are handled. The strikers have been driven from the yards of the Peoria and Pekin Union road by deputy sheriffs and are all drawn up in a long line along the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy tracks. Sentinels are placed at each entrance to the yards to notify the strikers when the new men arrive. The strikers say they will shoot the first man who attempts to couple a car.

They Said Blair Was in It.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 21.—Frank P. O'Brien, speaking of the published reports that Count Mitkiswicz and Miller tried to induce him to put $10,000 into a scheme for building railroads and establishing banks in China, said to a reporter: "Miller brought Count Mitkiswicz here Sunday, July 5, and they spent about two hours in an endeavor to induce me to invest." O'Brien also said that both men claimed ex-Senator Blair was a party to their scheme.

This Salvation Army Soldier Was Armed.

MIDDLETOWN, Conn., Aug. 22.—Benjamin Foley and Fisher, members of the Salvation Army, while on their way home from a meeting of the army at Zoar's were attacked by two roughs named Foley and Fisher. During the melee Pratt drew a revolver and pointing it, he was opposed, toward the toughs, fired. The ball, however, struck and seriously injured Mott instead. Foley and Fisher were jailed.

A monster parade of fire companies was reviewed by Lieutenant Governor Jones.

Farmers Hear Peffer and Simpson.

LEBANON, Pa., Aug. 22.—Twelve thousand to fifteen thousand people attended the farmers' encampment Friday. Senator Peffer and Congressman Jeremiah Simpson were the drawing cards, and both paid their respects to Congressman Brosius, who made an attack on the Alliance Thursday. Hon. Chauncey F. Black and William M. Derr, of Lebanon, also spoke during the day.

THE BABY BOY IS ALIVE.

But He Was Taken to the New York Morgue.

ATTENDANTS WERE ASTONISHED

A Remarkable Story from the Metropolis—The Child Was Kicking Lustily When He Was Discovered, and Bids Fair to Recover from Desertion.

NEW YORK, Aug. 22.—Keeper White, of the morgue, yesterday afternoon, in looking over his dead bodies, found that he had one that was living and apparently in the best of health. The body was that of a child named Dooley who was born yesterday morning. It was a boy and was brought to the institution by the father, Wilhelm Dooley, a German, of 1,465 Second avenue.

Wrapped in a Newspaper.

The father, when he brought the child to the morgue, had it wrapped in a newspaper, and had a still-birth death certificate which certified that the child had been born dead.

The supposed dead child was handed to an assistant in the morgue and was consigned to a small wooden coffin. It was placed on the right side of the structure at the entrance. The death certificate was then brought to Keeper White by his assistant, and as usual in such cases he started out to make an examination of the body for the purpose of seeing if there were no marks of violence on the body and getting a description of the remains for the records.

The Child Was Alive.

On arriving at the coffin containing the body of the babe Mr. White heard some commotion, and lifting the lid of the pine box found that the young one was living and kicking about. Not losing a minute he seized him and ran to Bellevue hospital with the young one in his arms and asked that a doctor be sent for.

Did Not Claim Their Boy.

Dr. Schneider came and said the child was apparently in good health and assigned the case to ward 31. The child was doing well at 11 o'clock last night.

The father left the supposed dead body of his child at the morgue shortly after 4 o'clock. He had not been gone but a few minutes when Mr. White made the discovery that the young one was alive. The mother of the child, according to the death certificate, is Henrietta Dooley. The document is signed by M. Mendelsohn, midwife, of 308 East Eighty-second street. The parents were notified, but up to a late hour they had not claimed their offspring.

A Very Small Baby.

This interesting youngster is about nine inches long, and weighs one and three-quarter pounds, or about eight pounds less than the average baby of its age should weigh. He has blue eyes, a perfect body, and his heart was beating strongly last night. But there is something wrong with its breathing, and this circumstance induces the doctor to think he won't live very long. Which is a very unfortunate thing considering the pluck that he has shown.

Hot Baby Did Not Smoke.

CHICAGO, Aug. 22.—Mrs. Fannie Turner, who is charged with allowing her two-year-old son Leonard to smoke, has surrendered herself. The boy does not appear very sickly. "The statement that my husband or I ever allowed Leonard to smoke tobacco is false," said Mrs. Turner. "He had a little toy pipe which he delighted to hold in his mouth, but it never held tobacco."

The Bonding of Destitute Immigrants.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 22.—United States Senator Chandler, chairman of the immigration committee of the senate, recently addressed a letter to the secretary of the treasury expressing the opinion that congress, never intended to authorize a general practice of permitting the landing of immigrants belonging to any prohibited class simply upon their furnishing a bond to the effect that they should not become a public charge. Acting Secretary Nettleton says that it is not the intention to permit the practice of bonding destitute immigrants to grow up into a system.

The Rainmakers at Work.

MIDLAND, Tex., Aug. 22.—The rain makers discharged two balloons at 2 p. m. At 5 p. m. there was a good rainfall. Some claim that the explosion and the rain were respectively cause and effect. Many citizens, however, claim that according to the ordinary course of nature rain may be expected each evening. The circumstance seemed to favor the experimenters, yet nothing has been proved. There is a large quantity of explosive material yet to be consumed. The country is fearfully dry, except in spots.

Russian Jews May Go Back.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 22.—United States Commissioner of Immigration Owens has decided that twelve of the Russian Jews detained on the steamship Slavonia should land. There still remains on the Slavonia thirty-nine others. The commissioner has offered to take bonds in the sum of $1,000 each that the immigrants will not become public charges, but there seems to be a disinclination on the part of the Hebrews of Baltimore to furnish any more bonds.

The Alleged Baseball Compromise.

ST. LOUIS, Aug. 22.—The announcement that representatives of the League and American association were to hold a meeting next week to compromise the differences existing between the two organizations created quite a sensation. It is learned that the Association will demand the right to keep its team in Boston and Philadelphia, Cincinnati will be surrendered to the League and the Association will ask for a team in Brooklyn.

Hal Pointer's Great Feat.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 21.—One of the main features of the closing day of the races at Hampden park was the fast time made by Hal Pointer in the free-for-all pacing class. He made the first heat in 2:10¾, the second in 2:14 and the third in 2:10¾. The 2:17 trot was taken in straight heats by Henrietta. The Springfield stake for trotters of the 2:20 class, for a purse of $5,000, was won by Happy Pas.

Whipped Andrews with One Hand.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 22.—Billy Lavine, of Saginaw, Mich., and Jake Andrews, of Erie, lightweights, fought to a finish near here for a purse of $100. Lavine crippled his right hand in the first round but made it so lively for Andrews with his left that the latter threw up the sponge after the third round.

Reorganized with Four Clubs.

OLEAN, N. Y., Aug. 22.—Bradford, Meadville and Jamestown have been dropped from the New York and Pennsylvania league and the league reorganized with four cities—Olean, Kinzua, Erie and Johnstown—now compose the league. A new schedule was adopted.

Think the Boy Was Murdered.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 22.—Many persons now believe that the young boy found dead hanging to a boat's painter on Sunday night was murdered. James S. Silcenn, Alberts Errickson, Addison Errickson and George Fordham say that the boy was in bathing with a dark, heavily built companion late on Sunday evening. The boy exhibited a large roll of bills about an hour and a half before the body was discovered. When found the money and valuables were missing.

Congress to Run the National Guards.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Aug. 22.—The Post-Dispatch says: A movement has been set on foot to put the militia of the states under national pay and supervision. A new organization called the "Association of the National Guard" plans to place the National Guard of the various states under the control of the secretary of war, to receive financial aid from congress, to secure uniformity of equipment and training and to be prepared at all times to answer a call from congress for national defense.

THE CURIOSITY SHOP

PARIS STREETS.

The Work of the Ragpickers, Including Some Rather Disturbing Details.

A curious series of statistics establishes the value of the refuse of the Paris streets. The figures seem incredible, and show that the ragpickers discharge a duty of primary importance. Working at night, busy under the gas lights, with hooks and panier, the value of what they collect is estimated at $10,000 each day. Assuredly one-half the world does not know how the other half lives. Of course, the conditions of Paris life are exceptionable. Population is very close; the tall houses are crammed with tenants; there are but the houses and the streets. The Parisians have a way of emptying all kinds of lumber and refuse into the streets, and then the ragpickers gather in their harvest. A use is found for everything, and metamorphosis never ceases. All the details are interesting, though some are rather disturbing.

Rags, of course, go to make paper; broken glass is pounded, and serves as the coating for sand and fine paper; bones, after the process of cleaning and cutting down, serve to make nail brushes, tooth brushes and fancy buttons; little wisps of women's hair are carefully collected, and sold for false hair by and by. Men's hair collected outside the barbers' serves for filters through which strups are strained; bits of sponge are cut up and used for spirit lamps, bits of bread if dirty are toasted and grated, and sold to the restaurants for spreading on bones or cutlets, sometimes they are carbonized and made into tooth powder. Sardine boxes are cut up into tin soldiers or into sockets for candlesticks. A silk hat has a whole chapter of adventure in store for it. All this work employs a regiment of ragpickers numbering close on 20,000 and each earning from forty to sixty-five cents a day.

Crocodile Tears.

The expression "crocodile tears" is used to describe hypocritical sorrow, a pretense of grief that is not felt. The Inter-Ocean explains that it refers to the old story that the crocodile, in order to draw near human beings within its reach, mourns and weeps, and having thus induced its victim to come near to it, falls upon him and devours him. It is a fact that crocodiles do make loud and melancholy cries, much like the howling of a dog. Credulous travelers naturally associated them with these cries, and the story of the weeping, when once started, was naturally repeated, and came to be generally believed. In "Book of Proverbs," printed in 1496, the expression is referred to and explained. That the belief is a very old one is shown by the fact that the phrase occurs both in the old Latin and the Greek writers, and the references to it in literature are numerous.

In the account of the voyages of Sir John Mandeville, issued in 1356, it is said that "in a certain countree" long serpents called crocodiles slew men and ate them weeping. The same story is given in the account of the voyages of Sir John Hawkins during the Sixteenth century. Spenser, in the first book of "Faerie Queene," speaks of—

> Huge grisly crocodile,
> Which in false grief hyding his harmful guile,
> Doth weep full sore and shedds tender teares.

And Shakespeare, in the second part of King Henry IV, act II, scene 1, says:

> Gloster's show
> Beguiles him as the mournful crocodile
> With sorrow snares relenting passengers.

Correspondence of Marie Bashkirtseff.

In the correspondence of Marie Bashkirtseff, just now attracting attention, are letters addressed to various persons, a great many of whom were not personally known to her; thus she wrote to Zola telling him that she admired his works above every thing, and that her great ambition was to become his friend through the medium of correspondence; to Alexander Dumas to ask him to give her rendezvous, to which he responded with some excellent advice which was not at all to her taste, and brought a very cutting reply; to Goncourt, whose works she did not hesitate to criticise in addressing him; to Sully Prudhomme, whose poetry fills her with surprise and delight.

Francois Coppee describes Marie Bashkirtseff in a manner that would have satisfied even her appetite for praise. The poet at the same time, confesses that he only saw her once for an hour, and is never likely to forget her. "At three-and-twenty," he says, "she looked much younger. She was rather short, but harmonious in her proportions; with a round face exquisitely modeled, straw colored hair, and dark eyes fired as it were with thought, eyes devoured with the desire to see and to know, a firm mouth, good and thoughtful nostrils that vibrated like those of a wild horse of the Ukranian steppes, Marie Bashkirtseff gave you, on the first seeing her, the rare sensation of will joined to sweetness, energy combined with grace."

An Old Proverb.

The oft quoted proverb, "God tempers the wind to the shorn lamb," frequently and wrongly ascribed to the Bible, occurs in Laurence Sterne's "Sentimental Journey." The Inter-Ocean explains, however, that it is but a rendering of a proverb much older than Sterne's time. The "Sentimental Journey" was written about 1767. But Bishop Herbert, nearly 100 years before, in his "Jacula Prudentum," uses the expression "To a close shorn sheep God gives wind by measure." Estienne, a French writer, in 1594 said, "Dieu mesure le froid a la brebis tondue", (God measures the cold to the shorn ewe). Estienne gives another form of the proverb as "Dieu donne le froid selon la robbier" that is, "God will not let the cold exceed the warmth of the fleece," or, as it is less poetically rendered by another French writer, with a different and more practical meaning, not so frequently falsified by the actual facts of life, "God cuts a man's cost according to his measure." Thus this proverb in French origin there seems no doubt, as various versions of it are found in different writers.

Montenegro Proverbs.

It is better to slip with the foot than with the tongue.

Every time the sheep bleats she loses a mouthful.

Marry with your ears and not with your eyes.

Even his own tail is a burden to the weary fox.

If you are going to visit the wolf take your dogs with you.

What is the use of a fine collar if it strangles me?

The fugitive only covers one mile, the pursuer twenty in seeking him.

OPEN AIR BATHING.

Practical Rules for Escaping Chills or Other Injurious Effects.

The following instructions, accredited to the Royal Humane society, of England, are of especial interest at this season, when sea and river bathing are indulged in by such great numbers of people:

Avoid bathing within two hours after a meal.

Avoid bathing when exhausted by fatigue or from any other cause.

Avoid bathing when the body is cooling after perspiration.

Avoid bathing altogether in the open air if, after having been a short time in the water, there is a sense of chilliness, with numbness of the hands and feet, but bathe when the body is warm, providing no time is lost in getting into the water.

Avoid chilling the body by sitting or standing undressed on the banks or in boats after having been in the water.

Avoid remaining too long in the water, but leave the water immediately there is the slightest feeling of chilliness. The vigorous and strong may bathe early in the morning on an empty stomach. The young and those who are weak had better bathe in two or three hours after a meal, the best time for such from two to three hours after breakfast. Those who are subject to attacks of giddiness or faintness, and those who suffer from palpitation or other sense of discomfort at the heart, should not bathe without consulting their medical adviser.

Vocal Culture for Idiots.

Attention has been called to the fact that idiots without the power of speech could sing. Dr. Wildermuth, of Stettin, compared 180 idiotic children with 80 normal children in regard to vocal rauge, sense of harmony and memory for melody; and 27 per cent. of the idiots and 60 per cent. of the normal children were classed as musical in the highest degree, 11 per cent. of the idiots and 2 per cent. of the normal children were without musical ability. This remarkable relative development of the musical sense in idiots is the more striking, according to The Pedagogical Seminary, because there is no evidence of any other artistic taste. The practical outcome of Wildermuth's observations is to emphasize the necessity of vocal culture in the training of idiots.

Dipsomania.

A good many cures for dipsomania have been proposed before now, but until quite recently the results have been anything but encouraging. It is stated, however, that a French savant, M. Luton, has solved the problem. Nitrate of strychine administered hypodermically in minute doses "does the trick." After ten days of this treatment chronic alcoholists acquire such a loathing for stimulants that even a sniff of their once favorite beverage causes nausea and headache. Drs. Portugalow and Jergolski have used strychnine on more than 500 patients, with invariably good results. One sufferer who had been in the habit of taking one-half to one liter of schnapps a day was cured in a single sitting.

ETIQUETTE

THE GUEST ROOM.

How to Make It a "Chamber of Peace" to the Occasional Visitor.

Within a few years much of the ancient formality of going a-visiting has vanished. Of old the best room in the house was adorned with the choicest furniture and furnished with the rarest trinkets and then shut up in gorgeous and solemn state, to be opened only when a dozen times a year, when some unfortunate guest was plunged into its funereal pomp to absorb the dampness of its unaired splendor. Now the occasional visitor is given a more natural position in the domestic arrangements. Of old he was a sacred personage before whom the best of humanity, now he is placed on the same plane as the rest of the household, and existence is thereby simplified for all. From a writer in Good Housekeeping, who defines in full the foregoing the position of the guest of today, are gleaned also the following suggestions for making the guest room "a chamber of peace":

The room to which your guest chamber is to be put are obviously three; in it your guest is to sleep, to dress, and to spend a varying quantity of his waking and leisure time. For these three uses you have to provide. First, then, for the sleeping. A thoroughly aired "spare bed" is a rarity; yet it is one of the things that should be within the reach of most housewives. Air and sunshine are generally available, but the woman who knows how to apply these commodities to her purposes is hard to find. Let the bedding and covers be fresh, dry and clean; spread a sufficient number of blankets and provide an extra cover for the chilly cold blooded people. If you do not know your guest's preference it is well to provide two sets of pillows, one large and one small. And if you be one of that class of deluded women who turn their beds into show cases for frills and furbelows, at least be implored to remove these accessories before your guest retires for the night.

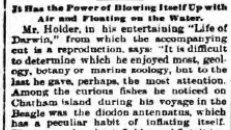
In these days of numerous inventions it is impossible to know all the improvements in bedroom conveniences, so if there be anything peculiar in the methods of heating, lighting or ventilating your rooms, be sure to explain them. One thing more, you must tell the stranger within your gates, before he retires, the hour for breakfast, and if there is to be no rising bell it is well to ask if he desires some one to call him in the morning. A timepiece of some kind should always be in the room.

As a rule, the leisure time that a guest spends in the room is brief; yet there are nights when sleep eludes the tired brain, mornings when the hostess is busy and afternoons when weariness makes solitude desirable. For such times provide a few books and magazines, not heavy and obtruse works, but those that please and amuse an indolent mind. If possible, have a desk in the room, and stock it with pens, pencils, ink, wax, stamps, postal cards, paper and envelopes to match, and the other essentials that make letter writing a pleasure.

A REMARKABLE FISH.

It Has the Power of Blowing Itself Up with Air and Floating on the Water.

Mr. Holder, in his entertaining "Life of Darwin," from which the accompanying cut is a reproduction, says: "It is difficult to determine which he enjoyed most, geology, botany or marine zoology, but to the last he gave, perhaps, the most attention. Among the curious fishes he noticed on Charham island during his voyage in the Beagle was the diodon antennatus, which has a peculiar habit of inflating itself. Placing one in a basin, flabby and flat, it immediately began drawing in air, all the while assuming a more rotund appearance, until it finally it rocked to and fro a veritable ball covered with spines, and upon being tossed over floated upon the surface like a balloon.



PORCUPINE FISH FLOATING ON THE SURFACE.

"The author has often tried the same experiment with the diodon in the Gulf of Mexico, it invariably ridding itself of air in a few moments. Darwin found that this little fish when inflated could swim feebly, though drawing but little water, and would use its tail like a propeller. Its short spines were like those of a hedgehog, and it would hardly be supposed to have enemies, yet our naturalist was told by a Dr. Allan that sharks would swallow them alive, and that in one instance the diodon, objecting to this Jonahlike programme, actually ate its way out through the side of the shark, killing it, with its sharp, bony, ivorylike teeth. A peculiarity of this fish is that from the lower portion a rich crimson dye exudes which is almost indelible."

Facts About Inks.

Nearly all the inks in common use contain organic matter as a part of the coloring matter. The great majority of them are principally a combination of iron with gallic and tannic acids, both of which are organic acids and quite readily decomposed. The action of moisture, light and other agents will, after a while, decompose these salts of iron, leaving only the almost invisible oxide of iron to show where the writing has been. The only really permanent ink is that prepared from some form of carbon, such as lampblack, of which the Chinese or India ink is composed. Carbon resists destructive influences to a remarkable degree, and writings made with such ink will last as long as the paper on which they are written, according to Popular Science News.

Soldering Fluid.

The ordinary soldering fluid or acid used by tinsmiths and others answers a very good purpose in preparing small articles to be electroplated or plated. In spite of the best efforts of the amateur, the work will sometimes strip or peel off, says The Horological Review. But if the article, after having been cleaned, is washed over or dipped into the acid, the coating applied will be found to stick as effectually as it does in soft soldering.

The Age of Trees.

Recent information gathered by the German forestry commission assigns as the pine tree 300 and 400 years as the maximum of life, 425 years to the silver fir, 275 years to the larch, 345 years to the red beech, 200 years to the birch, 170 years to the ash, 145 years to the alder and 100 years to the elm. The heart of the oak begins to rot at about the age of 300 years.

The Witch Hazels.

The genus hamamnelis or witch hasel is but a small one, by far the oldest member of it being the North American witch hazel (H. virginiana), which is both interesting and curious, while its Japanese relative, H. arborea, is one of the most beautiful of hardy flowering shrubs or small trees during the early part of the year, when the still leafless branches are clothed with the peculiarly shaped blossoms. The usual habit of the Japanese variety is to form a much branched head, which, viewed during the sunshine of a bright winter's day, when every twig is studded with its peculiarly shaped blooms, glows like a golden cloud. The leaves, as implied by the popular name, are very much like those of the hazel, though there is really no affinity between the two. The fact that these witch hazels are by no means generally found in gardens is to be accounted for by the fact that their rate of progress, especially when young, is far from rapid.

AMERICAN WITCH HAZEL.

The American witch hazel or hamamnelis virginica, forms a compact, open bush, seldom more than six feet or thereabouts in height. The yellow flowers are smaller and less brightly colored than those of their Japanese allies; still they form a very prominent feature. This shrub is found in damp woods; it blossoms in fall and early winter, when the leaves are falling and amidst the flowers of any kind are rare. The blossoms remain till late in winter and the fruit remains on until the next fall, when it explodes with a noise, scattering the seed around, which has given rise to the name, "snapping hazelnut." The medicinal use of witch hazel has become very popular

New German Silver.

It is told in The Jewelers' Circular that an excellent German silver is prepared by melting in a crucible 45 parts copper, 25 nickel, 17 zinc, 5 iron and 2 tin. This composition is in every respect equal to silver in appearance, fully as hard and not so brittle

DECORATIVE NOTES.

Novelties in Potpourri Jars and Scents, Mems, Patented China, Etc.

Quaint and old fashioned are potpourri jars with perforated lids for perfuming drawing rooms and boudoirs. A delicious potpourri is that with the odor of the wild rose, delicate and subtle. A favorite scene is white-lilac, and this is most refreshing when sprayed from a vaporizer

Among the daintiest of boudoir writing table ornaments are the miniature Dresden china lamps.

In fashionable bijouterie is the large Empire bow, which has stamped itself on lace and fabrics of all kinds this season. It may be large or small and may be small, but it is one of the last introductions.

In menus there are some pretty new ones, intended for flower suppers and dinners. A single rose, the stalk apparently passed through a slit in the card, exquisitely tinted; a few pansies, tied together with the Empire bow; smaller flowers scattered over a tinted surface are among the designs. There are sets of three floral designs, such as daisies, violets and primroses thrown along the top and cut out.

Some souffle cases are set into little stands of crossed straws, tied together at the corners with colored ribbon. The ribbon must match the color of the lamp and candle shades.

Chamber sets of painted china in Louis XV styles have the garlands and festoons in silver. These are applied around the Watteau groups, which are arranged in panels.

Silver receptacles for letter paper look something like oblong toast racks.

Candlesticks of perforated silver have heart shaped vases and lips between straight cylindrical sticks.

Two Good Dishes.

A very pretty rechauffe or warmed up dish, is made by straining pieces of meat in some good gravy, have ready some croutons cut to the size of the meat slices and fried, and dish these and the meat slices alternately, pouring the gravy in which it was heated into the center, after it has been thickened with a little butter and flour and flavored with a squeeze of lemon juice and a little finely chopped parsley. Or try this: Mash some potato and mix it with a couple of spoonfuls of cream or new milk, butter some small plain molds, line them thinly with it and put mashed potato and fill up the centers with a mince of any cold meat chopped fine and seasoned with pepper, salt and some finely chopped chives, lay a piece of butter on each and bake till the tops are browned, then turn them out and serve with brown sauce round.

Protecting Silver from Tarnishing.

It is worth while knowing that silver articles put away for a time can be protected from tarnishing. According to The Decorator and Furnisher this can be done by applying to them, with a soft brush, collodion mixed with alcohol. If silver plate is brushed over with the full strength of this mixture it will dry in a few minutes, and the article may be put away for any length of time. Tarnish which has already begun may be removed by washing it in liquid potassa, next rinsing it in warm water and then immersing it in a liquid composed of one part of potassa, one part of common salt and two parts of saltpeter in three parts of water. The plate has now to be washed in lukewarm water, then wiped with chamois leather and finally packed in sawdust to dry.

PLAINFIELD'S DISGRACE

THE COMBINE AND THEIR DOINGS CRITICISED.

The Legal Snarl Which Their Unparliamentary Proceedings Has Brought About.—How Outsiders Look at It.

This is what the New York Herald has to say on the subject:

PLAINFIELD'S WATER WAR.

MAYOR, COMMON COUNCIL AND THREE SUPPLY COMPANIES IN A TANGLE.

Plainfield, N. J., a city of less than twenty thousand inhabitants, has one water company in active operation supplying the residents, another company holding a contract with the city to furnish water for 250 hydrants at $15 per hydrant, and at the last meeting of its Common Council a new contract to pay for 200 hydrants at $25 apiece was approved.

This state of affairs has been brought about by a combination in Union County known as the "Big Six," and the story of their legislative acts is likely to make interesting reading in the courts in which appeal must be made to unravel this tangle.

The water franchise granted to Chas. K. Moore, of Elizabeth, in 1889, is still in litigation, after being assigned to ex-Congressman John Kean. Meantime the Water Supply Company, chartered in 1889 by special legislation, began work, and in spite of legal obstacles has succeeded in nearly completing its plant. It is to-day furnishing water to nearly the eastern portion of the city, and it has the right to operate water works—prospective of the will of the Common Council—in Plainfield, North Plainfield and other parts of Union county.

At Friday night's special meeting of the Common Council an ordinance was passed over Mayor Alexander Gilbert's veto granting to J. M. Low, of Kingston, N. Y., the right to operate a system of water works in Plainfield, and agreeing to pay $25 per hydrant for 200 hydrants. The same evening Low obtained another franchise to operate a system of sewerage. Under the $25 contract he maintained Mr. Low will receive $10 per hydrant for the additional quantity of water which the older supply company stand ready to furnish at the rate of $4 per hydrant.

The whole snarl will be taken into the courts for adjudication.

ANOTHER OPINION.

The New York World devotes a column and a half to the subject. Concerning the granting of the franchises to Low it says:

Last Spring J. M. Low, of Kingston, appeared. He began to make vigorous love to the "Big Six," a combination of Councilmen. The result was a proposition looking to the securing of a water and a sewerage franchise. Many of the specifications which he insisted upon, and which the "Big Six" were willing he should have, of the Corporation Counsel, Craig A. Marsh, absolutely refused to indorse. Declaring them in every way faulty and illegal. Mr. Marsh perceived intractable that the "Big Six" at a meeting in April decided to employ special counsel.

In July the water ordinance was passed granting to Mr. Low a franchise to operate a system of water works. It guaranteed him payment of $25 per hydrant, though the Water Supply Company had made an offer to supply water for fire purposes at $15 per hydrant. At the same session another ordinance was introduced granting to Mr. Low a sewerage franchise. Of the terms of these ordinances nothing could be learned. Were not informed, despite their attempts to secure copies, the speeches of those who finally secured copies of what they were assured were Mr. Low's proposition, they differed materially, it is claimed, from the contract as finally passed.

The Line of March.

The line of march of the G. A. R., on Thursday 27th, will be North avenue to Park to Front to Somerset to Emily to Grove to Liberty to Fifth to Central avenue to Seventh to Park to Church to Broadway to Front. A business meeting will then be held at Winfield Scott Post rooms. Dinner at the rink at two o'clock.

They will be welcomed there by the Mayor and Common Council and will be entertained afterward by singing and speeches by officers of the regiment and others. The band, of course, will be there.

The survivors of the 28th regiment will be welcomed and escorted by Post 73 and 108.

Capt. John H. Tyrell, president of the 28th Regiment Association will be marshall.

Any further information can be had from that secretary, Wm. M. Appleby, Old Bridge, N. J.

Poisoned His Neighbor's Well.

John Pfeiffer was arrested at Westfield yesterday on a charge of poisoning a well on the premises of Lawrence Clark. Clark some weeks ago had Pfeiffer arrested for stealing black berries. When released from prison, he threatened, it is alleged, to be revenged on Clark, and so threw a lot of poison into the latter's well, it is charged. Luckily some water was drawn for the cattle to drink before any was used for the family. The animals got violently sick and this led to an investigation and the discovery of the crime. Detective Marsh organized a posse of men and went in search of the miscreant, who, becoming alarmed, had fled to the woods. *He was finally caught hiding in the hol*low of a tree, and some of the citizens acted rather in favor of dealing summarily with him. He was taken to the county jail at Elizabeth.

The Wheelmen's Encampment.

All arrangements for the first annual encampment of wheelmen at Asbury Park, August 27th, 28th and 29th, are progressing satisfactorily, and from the present outlook it will be a grand success. A number of races have been arranged for, both on the 28th and 29th, and wheelmen are requested to assist the association in carrying out the programme and seeing that the entry lists are filled. A printed circular has been sent around to the wheelmen containing the programme, rules and regulations of the camp.

BURGLARS AT WORK.

Several Places in this City Robbed Yesterday Morning.

Burglars are again operating in this city and it would be wise for the residents to see that their houses are well secured before resting for the night.

At about 1:30 o'clock yesterday morning, some sneak thief effected an entrance into the residence of Mr. E. W. Brokaw of East Fourth street. After the fellow succeeded in securing admission he opened the front door. Mr. and Mrs. Brokaw sleep on the first floor. The thief went to the mantel-piece, secured several matches and then proceeded cautiously to Mr. Brokaw's room. He struck one of the matches on the door and then held it over the bed. Mrs. Brokaw was awakened but thought the midnight-maurauder was a member of the family and she asked him what he wanted. As soon as she spoke the fellow ran through the open door. Mrs. Brokaw awakened her husband but the man had made his escape in the darkness. Nothing is missing from the place. Mr. Brokaw's trousers, containing $30 were in the room at the time.

Mr. Benjamin Moore's residence on East Third street was also visited, probably by the same person. Mr. Moore did not fare so well, however, as the thief succeeded in stealing fifty dollars in money and other valuables. The police have been notified, but the they, as yet, have no clue.

PERSONAL.

Messrs. Frank Flannery and Edward Petrie are spending a week at Asbury Park.

Mrs. Samuel Taynor of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, is visiting relatives in Brooklyn.

Mrs. Dunn of Broadway has returned to her home after a pleasant visit to Asbury Park.

The engagement of Miss Lizzie H. Laing of West Fourth street and Mr. Geo. T. Wyckware is announced.

Captain of Police George W. Grant has been dangerously ill for a week past, but he said now to be convalescent.

Miss Lillian Clickner of Manasquan is spending a week with her aunt, Mrs. Henry Van Middlesworth of Elmwood place.

Miss Anna L. Talliant of Manning avenue, North Plainfield, is visiting her sister, Mrs. John Sharp, of Kenny street, Newark.

The Rev. Dr. Tuttle of Baltimore, formerly pastor of the M. E. Church in this city, occupied the pulpit both morning and evening.

Miss Lizzie Morse and Miss Stella Hartung of Brooklyn, N. Y., are visiting at the residence of Mr. Haurand of Steiner place, North Plainfield.

Mr. George Thatcher, the proprietor of Thatcher's Ideal Minstrels, accompanied by Mr. Edward Marble, spent yesterday with friends in this city.

Mrs. John Millwater and children have returned to their home in Brooklyn after a pleasant sojourn with relatives on Jackson avenue, North Plainfield.

Mr. Frank Randolph of New street, who was seriously injured by being thrown from a wagon about a week ago, is slowly recovering from his injuries.

Miss Belle Krewson, who has been spending the Summer in St. Louis, Mo. left to-day for New York City, after paying a short visit to her parents on Grandview avenue, North Plainfield.

Eva Bell, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Bartley Cahill, died at the home of her grandfather, Mr. Clarkson Walts, of New street, Saturday night. Funeral services to-morrow at 2:30 p. m.

Mr. Charles B. Brown, in response to an invitation, will visit Bethany and deliver an address on "Sunday School Work" before the teachers and Christian workers of that city on Friday, Sep*tember 4th.*

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. H. Tappen, formerly residents of Oak Tree, N. J., but now of Santa Paloma, Ga., are visiting their many friends in this vicinity. Accompanying them are the Misses Susie and Ella Boylan. The latter named, are Mr. and Mrs. Tappen's grand-daughters, and daughters of Mr. Jerry N. Boylan of Mt. Pleasant. The Misses Boylan, coming as they do from Southern society, are very accomplished and agreeable young ladies.

Mrs. Rachel Randolph, of Plainfield, is visiting her son, proprietor of the Commercial Hotel. Mrs. Randolph is her eighty-eighth year. She retains her memory, eyesight and hearing, and is a very fast walker, tiring out many of the younger ladies who accompany her in her walks. She is very cheerful and pleasing in her conversation, relating many anecdotes of her younger days. She says she expects to see the close of the nineteenth and the beginning of the twentieth century. It is seldom that one meets with a person in such advanced years and lively in Mrs. Randolphs.—Somerville Democrat.

A Hay Stack Burned.

At about nine o'clock Saturday evening an alarm of fire was sounded from the box corner of Woodland and Netherwood avenues. The fire department responded promptly but when it arrived there its services were not needed as the fire proved to be a hay stack on the farm of Mr. Mulford Cole. The damage was slight.

BASE BALL.

THE CRESCENTS DEFEATED THE WEST ENDS, SATURDAY.

The Score was 12 to 5.—It was a One-Sided Contest.—The Visitors Were Outclassed.—Hammill's Fine Work.—Features of the Game.

The fourth game of the Crescent-West End series was played on the grounds in this city last Saturday afternoon and resulted in a victory for the home team by a score of 12 to 5.

A large number of people witnessed the game which was very interesting throughout. The Crescents started in by making four runs in the first inning. The West Ends were retired in one, two, three order, and such cheering has not been heard on a ball field in this city this Summer. The audience was fairly wild with enthusiasm. The Crescents did not score again until the fifth inning. In the third inning the West Ends tied the score. The Somerville contingent was happy. They thought surely it was their game of ball, but they counted without their host. In the fifth inning the Crescents scored five runs. Every man that went to the bat hit the ball. Harkins, the pitcher for the West Ends, looked sick when he saw the way the Crescents were batting. Every man that went to the bat made a hit, and during the game the home team succeeded in making a total of sixteen hits. This is something unusual in a game of base ball, as may be seen by the fact that Somerville's team has made only made three hits off of Hammill, who pitched a wonderful game of ball. He was a little wild at first but soon worked himself down and pitched a steady game during the remaining innings. He succeeded in striking out seven men, but was unfortunate in hitting two of the opposing team's men with the ball. Bonner, the Crescents' catcher, accepted every chance offered him and caught an errorless game. Jones misjudged a fly ball knocked to centre field and consequently permitted the West Ends to tie the score in the third inning.

The score by innings was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Crescents	0	0	0	5	0	4	3	0	0	12
West Ends	0	1	3	0	0	0	0	1	0	5

She Yet Speaketh.

The following from the National Temperance Advocate for September, has *reference to a young lady who was wide*ly known and much beloved in Plainfield:

"A very lovely girl of sixteen, whom it was our privilege to know, died not long ago. As taught by her father, who had gone before, and by her beloved mother, who followed her shortly afterward, she early became interested in the cause of temperance. She exemplified in a striking manner the Christian life, and exercised a most beneficient influence among her young companions, by whom she was greatly beloved. A unique loving tribute to her memory was recently given by example to her young cousins, to her bereaved and sorrowing mother. It consists of twelve beautifully illustrated cards, with a text for each, and abstinence pledge upon each, duly signed by each one represented by the cards. Some of these children had not before been previously especially interested in, or familiar with, the temperance reform. The example of this child has had an influence of this beloved young girl, removed by death from their circle, won from them this exceptional, but most appropriate tribute to her memory. Only the All-seeing Eye can comprehend the far-reaching consequences for good to this pledge-signing group, some of them young men, which in large city with its manifold temptations to evil through the prevalent injurious social drinking usages. Blessed indeed is the precious memory of her, who thus 'being dead, yet speaketh'."

Bound Brook's Carnival.

A grand gala night is expected by the people of Bound Brook to-morrow, when their first annual carnival will be held. Under the personal direction of John B. Taylor, the Commodore of the fleet, says a float will be placed in the middle of the river, on which Bartow's Bound Brook Band will be placed to play during the maneuvers. A good time is said to be in store for them, and every available boat on the river is expected to take part. The boats will be illuminated and Greek fire will be burned in profusion. A large delegation from the Cranford Boating Association will be present as the guests of the local committee. The programme will include a cannon salute, fire-works display, on shore and from the fleet, maneuvers, drills and races.

Took a "Header."

The water under the Park avenue railroad bridge was several feet deep after the storm last evening. Two bicyclists were returning from a trip. When they neared the bridge the one on a safety rode upon the sidewalk and got through safely. The young man on the high wheel attempted to ride his machine through the miniature river. When he got about half way through his wheel struck something and he took a "header" landing somewhere in the water. When he succeeded in gaining the opposite side of the bridge he was a sorry sight to behold. He was covered with mud and was thoroughly drenched. His experience will probably teach him not to attempt such a thing again.

—Fire was discovered in the cellar of a business place on Park avenue Saturday evening. The flames were extinguished before much damage resulted.

—A large audience greeted the Rev. Carter Helm Jones at the First Baptist church yesterday morning. Elizabeth and Westfield delegates were present. Mr. Jones preached a fine sermon from the text, "I am the Life." Mr. Jones will preach from the same pulpit next Sunday.

SPECTACLES AND WRINKLES.

If Beauty Wants to Keep a Full Round Face She Must Wear Glasses.

If a man or woman, particularly the latter, wishes to preserve good looks and avoid wrinkles in the face, he or she must wear glasses. I noted scores of faces on the street, and each face was wrinkled very much, because the sun's rays poured down with blinding heat, and it was impossible to avoid it.

The wrinkling of the face was an involuntary action of the muscles to protect the eyes, and the squinting look that was apparent on each face was an indication that the eyes were suffering from the intensely bright rays of the sun. In each case the eyes were weak, not weak enough to interfere with the power of sight, but nevertheless weak enough to be apparent. The constant blinking and squinting produced a permanent contraction of the muscles and corrugated the skin of the face, so that after a while wrinkles would appear.

There were three things to be done. To avoid wrinkles, and the puckered appearance of the face under the eyes, a person with weak eyes should habitually carry a parasol or umbrella. This course is not always practicable. So, when it is not possible to carry a parasol or an umbrella, a person should always keep the eyes closed when not in use, for instance, when riding in the cars. The third means of avoiding wrinkles and contraction of the muscles under the eye is to wear spectacles. This latter means of protection is not likely to be adopted by many people, particularly by many of the fair sex.

State Notes

Over $3,000 was taken in at the gates of the Cumberland County fair at Bridgeton. The exhibition was a decided success.

The new zinc mines at Franklin, near Morristown, are yielding the finest quality of zinc. The mines are said to be the most valuable in the world.

Peter Broehm, treasurer of Monticello Lodge, I. O. O. F., and one of the oldest Odd Fellows in the State, was buried from his home on Jersey City Heights yesterday afternoon.

George Williams, fourteen years old, of 40 Morris street, has died in St. Joseph's Hospital, Paterson, as the result of a blow in the abdomen from a tin can thrown at him by another boy in play on August 10. Williams was employed in the Dolphin jute mills.

Harry H. Davis, of Morristown has been awarded the contract for the erection of a soldiers monument at Rockaway, to cost $2,987.50. It will be of American granite, seven feet and one inch base and twenty-six and a half feet high. The whole will stand on a base three feet high.

Suen Lee, the much-talked-about Chinese girl, who was sold for $600 in New York by her owner, Ah Whoon, eloped from a Chinese mission in Brooklyn a few days ago with Jung Gol, a Chinaman living in the Lafayette section of the city.

Mrs. Margaret O'Neill, the mother of ex-Mayor Charles H. O'Neill, of Jersey City, died at her home in Paterson on Thursday night at the age of eighty-seven years. Her husband, Charles O'Neill, survives her. He is over ninety years old. The couple have passed over sixty-five years of wedded life together. Besides the ex-Mayor, there are several grown children.

Timothy McCarty, of Fifteenth and Cherry streets, Philadelphia, was struck suddenly death yesterday on the surf at the foot of Virginia avenue, Atlantic City. He was seized with a fit of apoplexy and expired almost instantly, although two physicians used prompt and vigorous efforts to revive him. He shortly was about forty years old, and had been in the employ of John Wanamaker as a driver for several years.

Joseph Dress, of 687 Grand street, and Patrick Tuohy, of Canal and Bishop streets, Jersey City, went crabbing in New York Bay Thursday afternoon. Their rowboat was run down by an unknown scow and both men were injured. Tuohy had his spine broken and Dress had two ribs fractured. The men were taken to St. Francis's Hospital. Their condition is serious.

The Rev. Dr. Thomas S. Cartwright, rector of the Church of the Holy Communion, Paterson, at a special meeting of the vestry Thursday night, tendered his resignation, to take effect October 31st next. Dr. Cartwright has accepted a call to the rectorship of the Holy Trinity Church, Lexington, Kentucky. He was for some time editor of the Church Press, of New York. He has held his present charge for eight years.

Patrick Joseph Smith, the Brooklyn bridge policeman who struck John McEnsborough, a locomotive shop blacksmith, a fatal blow on August 8th, was taken to the Passaic county jail at Paterson yesterday, having been surrended by the New York authorities on requisition. He was put in Smith's cell, and the prisoner talked freely, although he said his lawyer had advised him not to do so. He said that as he was leaving the house of his sister, Mrs. Andrew Wells, in Passaic street, in a hurry to catch a train for home, McEnsborough, whom he knew but slightly, put his hands on him to detain him. McEnsborough was drunk, Smith says. The accused man pushed him aside and he fell. Smith says he had no intention of hurting the man, and did not know that he had done so.

A Remedy For Hay Fever.

There are but few drugs that have not been tried for the relief and cure of hay fever. Inhalations have been written and combinations made, but hay fever refuses to be conquered. The following formula, used with success by an English physician in relieving the symptoms of those suffering with the nasal type of the disease, is given, with the hope that it may work as well on the mucous membrane of the American nose as it does on that of the English. The drug is menthol, which has often been used in this country, but to make it more efficient it is placed in an ordinary smelling bottle, mixed with carbonate of ammonia, and used as smelling salts. Those patients who have used this remedy in this way say that all irritability disappears, and that they get no return of the symptoms.—Ex.

LATEST NEWS BY WIRE.

HERBERT MAPES DROWNED.

A Famous Athlete's Sad Death.—His Mother Saw Him Go Down.

New York, Aug. 24. (Special.)—Herbert Mapes, the famous college athlete, was drowned before his mother's eyes while bathing in the surf at Fire Island, yesterday. He was a strong swimmer but was seized with cramps.

Mr. Mapes was of Columbia College, and was only twenty-three years old.

His athletic career has been as brilliant, as his future business life promised to be.

He was well-known to many Plainfielders, and some of his college class mates reside here.

He was a prominent athlete and a famous sprinter. At two different times he did 120 yards hurdle in 16 1-5 seconds. The world's record is 16 seconds. These records were made May 17, 30-1890, at the Berkely A. C. games.

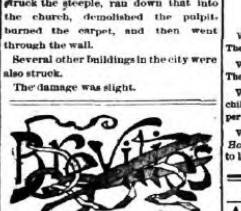
LIGHTNING'S FREAKS.

Piscataway town Church and Several Buildings Struck.

Piscataway town, N. J., Aug. 24th, 1891. (Special).—The Episcopal Church here was struck by lightning last night. It struck the steeple, ran down that into the church, demolished the pulpit, burned the carpet, and then went through the wall.

Several other buildings in the city were also struck.

The damage was slight.



—The Young Peoples' Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission changed last night a meeting this evening at eight o'clock to the Sunday-school room of the chapel.

—Miss Daisy Delmore, of whom there has been so much said the past week, will appear every evening this week at the Elkwood together with the "Australian Novelty Company."

—One of the heaviest thunder storms that has visited this city for several years past struck Plainfield at about half-past six o'clock last evening. Several parties who were returning from the mountain were caught in the rain and drenched to the skin.

—An article that will be widely read among all classes of people is one on "Edward Burgess and His Work," by A. G. McVey, the yachting editor of the Boston Herald, which is the principal feature of the New England Magazine for September. Mr. McVey is a bright, clever journalist, and his knowledge of yachts and yachtsmen is equal to, if it does not exceed, that of any other man in the country. He was an intimate friend of Mr. Burgess for 20 years, and knew him in his hour of trial and triumph. All lovers of sport,—and who is not a lover of yachting?—should read the September New England Magazine.

—There is a law in this State inflicting a penalty on any who allow Canada thistles to go to seed on their property. The law ought to be better enforced, for there are reported to be several patches of these pests now in seed in different parts of the country. They are hard to get rid of but so much the more reason they should be exterminated. Cutting them down does not always succeed, but a recently published method seems likely to prove effective where it can be adopted. It is to turn sheep in the field where the thistles grow, and sprinkle salt on the thistles as they come up. The sheep eat them off close to the ground and keep them down so well that they finally die.

The High-Handed Big Six.

As foretold in The Tribune of last Monday, Mayor Alexander Gilbert vetoed the ordinance railroaded and passed by the Democratic "Big Six," granted to J. M. Low, of Kingston, N. Y., the right to erect and operate a system of water works within the city of Plainfield. In spite of the Mayor the Democrats passed the ordinance, and afterward adopted the contract which Mr. Low had demanded. It is believed that the Mayor will refuse to sign the contract, and that mandamus proceedings will be instituted to force him to do so. At Friday night's meeting Mr. Rasbmore, a Republican, protested vigorously because the contract gave the city liberty to pay but $25 for each hydrant in the city, when the water supply company which is already in operation has offered to furnish water for $19 per hydrant. The most intense indignation is manifested by voters, absolutely irrespective of party, over the matter. At the same Council meeting the ordinance granting Low the franchise to operate a sewerage system was also passed by the "Big Six."—New York Tribune.

The newest crank is the rain crank.

Emperor William at last sees a very fine point in his remark, "Germany cannot go on forever arming, arming, arming."

Certain newspapers that have been going it on the subject of Mr. Blaine's health apparently need to slow their regulators a little.

There is one summer resort, and only one, of which the ancient Hardshell text cannot again be quoted this summer—the famous text, "Men is sca-a-ce and women is plenty." That spot is Mr. Blaine's favorite resort, Bar Harbor.

American commerce with foreign nations during the fiscal year ending June 30, 1891, was the largest in the history of the country. It amounted to $1,729,830,-866. We are going to be the greatest country this world has ever known, unless some of the nations of the continent of the lost Atlantis were greater.

Naval supplies cannot be imported duty free, it seems. Fifty cases of champagne were recently landed for use on board the flagship Philadelphia, but the treasury department would not let them come in without payment of the usual customs rates. This high handed outrage of taxing naval officers' ammunition should not be forgotten.

According to Charles A. Dana, the following was Horace Greeley's code in journalism: "Always give a hearing to your opponent. Never attack a man and refuse him an opportunity to defend himself in the same column. Be always as considerate of the weak and oppressed as of the powerful. Waste no strength in advocating things impossible of accomplishment. Never compromise your opinion on account of subscribers or advertisers."

The United States law authorizing the organization of naval militia can be made very effective for national defense by the coast states. It is necessary for such states to pass an enabling militia act and effect an organization before the appropriation made by the general government is available. Thus far New York, Massachusetts and Rhode Island have applied for their naval militia allotments of money. Massachusetts has an organization of 238 men for coast defense.

Mr. Murat Halstead's idea of a model temperance law is not prohibition or the highest license, but a square tax of $300 a year on saloons, allowing them under this to sell all kinds of liquors that will make anybody drunk. In connection with this tax he would have a local option law, the people of any city, village or township deciding whether they will permit a saloon within their boundaries. He does not say whether he would allow women citizens to vote on the saloon question or not.

Among the new inventions that are expected to make considerable change in telegraphy is the telegraph pen. The operator at one of the line moves a stylus, making letters in the air. The motion is transmitted along the wire by electric action and communicated to a pen at the other end of the line. The pen writes upon a paper of itself the words traced in the air by the stylus at the other end. The message is then ready to be sent off at once. Thirty words a minute have been written in this way.

In the large cities where business is dull this summer the cry is, The crops, the crops—wait till they move, then money will be plenty. Fortunately, in most parts of the country crops are abundant and of fine quality. It may possibly bring anew to the commercial and speculative mind remembrance of the fact that do as men may the prosperity of a country comes out of the ground, in one shape of another. The farmer and the stock raiser literally carry the world on. In years when crops are abundant the merchant looks well goods, because the farmer will buy generously. The railroads expect good dividends for they earn large freight money carrying the agriculturist's products to market. In view of these facts lawmakers, business men and railways may well understand that their success does not lie in squeezing the farmer, but in making freights, taxes, mortgages and everything else as easy for him as possible. His prosperity means the prosperity of all.

It is possible we shall not hear so much about the third party in the northwest from this on. The farmers in Dakota and adjoining states have raised so much wheat that they will have little time to raise politics. The Dakotas have produced the best wheat crop in five years.

An old bachelor was rescued from a fire recently. He had been helped out of the smoking ruins of his lodging house with difficulty. The smell of smoke was yet on him when he heard a bystander remark that six cats and a canary bird had perished in the flames. "Then that fire was not wholly in vain," said the bachelor.

Along the blue river Rhone in Switzerland, in the neighborhood of Geneva, the hum of electric motors is heard driving all kinds of machinery that the brain of man has devised. The motors range from one-third horse power up to 625 horse power. The smallest ones run sewing machines. The largest ones light the beautiful city of Geneva.

The University of Pennsylvania has done wisely. It has established a chair to be known as the "School of American History and Institutions." We cannot have too much genuine Americanism in our schools and in our lives—not the blatant boastfulness of the British stage Yankee, but real patriotism and acquaintance with American institutions.

The negroes of the United States are in advance of their race in Hayti at any rate. The Afro-American National league passed resolutions expressive of perfect confidence in Minister Douglass The Haytian negroes, on the other hand, are reported as preferring a white man for minister to their country. Perhaps the Haytian blacks believe with the gentlemen in the poem, who tried to oust Aunty Tim, that "this is a white man's country."

Be quiet and don't waste your strength in fuss. The fussy little person who fumes and talks constantly of having so much to do does not accomplish nearly so much as the quiet, steady individual who goes to work without a word, keeps his head on and says nothing at all about his herculean tasks. He lets his work speak for itself. The calm, strong, resposeful person is the one who climbs to the top of the hill and commands his fellow men.

Factory inspection has worked well in New York. The inspectors report that they find employers willing in nearly every case to comply with the law regarding the health and safety of their employes, which is an excellent sign of progress. Furthermore, the factories only employ half as many children as they used to. New York law forbids any minor under fourteen to work in shops, and those between fourteen and sixteen must bring certificates from parents or guardians in reference to the necessity for their work.

Men may come and men may go, but the Wild West show goes on forever. It was this prime attraction at Paris after the great exposition itself, in 1889. It will be a prime attraction at Chicago just the same—for there will be thousands of young Americans anxious to see it who were children in long clothes when it was last in Transatlantic land. Nothing Europe cannot do, with all its boasted art and civilization, and that is to produce a wild west show. Moreover when we think of the gold we have been shipping to Europe this season it will be some comfort to know that this American entertainment itself alone has raked in no less than $4,000,000 of European gold.

IN DEATH'S CLASP

Eighteen Bodies Recovered at New York.

MANY MORE ARE MISSING.

The Ruins Still Hold Their Awful Secret.

But a Quarter of the Debris That Marks the Site of the Collapsed Taylor Stores on Park Place Has Been Dragged Away and Many More Bodies May Yet Be Brought to Light—Pitiful Sights at the Scene of the Catastrophe. Nearly a Hundred Men Battling with the Wreck and Striving to Wrest from It the Full Story of the Horror—At Least Eighty-six Persons Missing.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Nearly a hundred swarthy Italians, directed and assisted by the firemen, worked like beavers Saturday night, all day Sunday and today searching for bodies in the ruins at the Park place horror. As the debris was cleared away and piled high in front of the ill fated Taylor building, which undoubtedly collapsed from the weight of heavy printing presses in Liebler & Maas' establishment on the third and fourth floors Saturday afternoon, body after body was borne away by the firemen or by three stolid Italians and laid in plain pine coffins for transfer to the morgue. All of the bodies were badly crushed and mutilated by the immense weight of debris and many of them were entirely burned by the flames that burst out immediately after the awful collapse of the flimsy five story structure and added the horror of burning to the already heartrending scene. All day Sunday two companies of firemen kept up the search for the battered remains of the killed, and by 10 o'clock Sunday night sixteen bodies in all had been taken from the ruins.

Pitiful Scenes at the Ruins.

All day long thousands of spectators thronged the scene and were only kept from personally assisting in the search by the efforts of the police. Among the thousands were many hollow eyed, weeping women, watching for the recovery of the bodies of loved ones who were missing and who would never again greet them in life. Wives were peering anxiously at each body that was borne from the ruins fearing that they would recognize in the pitifully disfigured clay the body of a husband. Brothers were looking for brothers and sisters, mothers for missing children, and many a sad eyed girl gazed at the ruins and wondered if her lover's body lay there beneath the awful weight of brick and stone and iron. One of the many pathetic incidents was the vigil kept by the pretty fiancee of A. B. Peterson, son of the proprietor of Peterson's restaurant, which occupied one of the ground floor stores. From the time she received news of the disaster Saturday afternoon until Sunday morning she remained at the scene looking for the body of her lover, who was employed by Liebler & Maas, typewriters, and at last accounts was still among the missing.

THE FIREMEN AT WORK.

Fifty-four Dead.

Coroner Messemer, of the city of Brooklyn, has in his charge fifty-four dead. Nos. 70, 72 and 74 Park place. No. 60 was vacant. Occupying the ground floor of the remaining three numbers were Louis Rosenfeld's bronze and picture frame shop, C. W. Tripp's drug store and Andrew Peterson's restaurant. Ellis & Macdonald's bookbindery took up the second and third floors of Nos. 70 and 72, and the Scandia Publishing company the same floors of No. 74.

The fourth and fifth floors throughout were occupied by Liebler & Maas, lithographers, and at 4 o'clock on Saturday afternoon probably over a hundred persons were in the building when the accident occurred.

All Unconscious of Peril.

It was just the noon hour and the restaurants were rapidly filled. It accommodated sixty persons. In the windows overhead girls and men could be seen standing at benches or at the machines at their luncheons. There were several people passing in the street, among them a woman with an infant in a baby carriage. Three little children were playing together in front of the drug store, and a horse attached to an express wagon was standing by the curb. Above the noise of traffic in the street could be heard the din of Liebler & Maas' ten big presses on the upper floors. The building vibrated and trembled with every revolution, just as it had done for months before.

Then there came a low rumbling sound. Some who heard it say it was accompanied by a heavy report, as of a cannon fired. It was followed by a crash of falling walls and the grating, rasping sound of twisting beams and timbers. A dark cloud of dust filled the air and rose to the height of the business blocks. Then there burst from the debris and leaped over to the adjoining buildings to the west.

Came Down in an Armchair.

The street was in an uproar in an instant. A dozen or more who had been slightly injured were helped into adjacent stores. One man was discovered standing on the top of the debris. He had a bad gash in his head. He was pulled out and cared for.

Another had rolled down from the summit of the wreck in a big armchair. He was helped to his feet comparatively unhurt. The mother with her baby in the carriage and the three little children at play could not be seen. A waiter who had escaped from the restaurant said there was no one left but himself to tell the tale. All of the bodies in the north could be seen sticking up through the debris. The fire gained headway with great rapidity. When the fire apparatus came rattling to the scene the air was so full of smoke that the drivers could hardly see further than their horses' heads.

Girls and men were climbing from the windows of the houses adjacent to the wreck by the fire escapes. The building 76 and 78 Park place, adjoining the wreck, was all ablaze. Ambulances came rattling up and carried away those who had been badly injured, while Police Captain Slavin appeared promptly with a squad of men, who established fire lines and assisted those in peril to safety. In an hour the fire was under control.

The Rescue of Little Mary.

One of the most remarkable incidents of the day was the rescue of the little nine-year-old Mary Heagney after she had been covered with debris for three and a half hours. During all his work Fireman Edward Mulligan heard a faint cry below him. Somebody was living in that fearful wreck. The word passed through the thrilled and excited crowd. Just as the men worked, it seemed as though they never would get through. At last they came upon a little arm clad in soiled and torn cotton. Then a face was unclosed—the face of a child, still alive and her eyes blinking at the sudden light. A little cheer went up from the laboring firemen. With might and main they flung away the bricks. The ambulance surgeon reached down and pressed to the bleeding lips a glass of water. The child drank it. Her body was still inclosed in timbers, but she could speak, and her first words were about her little sister.

"My sister is down in there," she said, "can't you get her out?"

The firemen dug on. Mulligan, who had first heard the feeble call for help, was the first to get his hands around the little body and lift it into the air. As the crowd saw the living face what a cheer went up! It was the first and only person rescued alive from the ruins.

The Heroine of the Horror.

The fireman, covered with dirt and sweat and stripped to his undershirt, but looking like the hero of a battle, carried the child high in his arms and bore her to the end of the street. She was little Mary Heagney, the plumber's nine-year-old daughter, and just around the corner upon the exact spot where she had been overwhelmed, was the house of her agonized parents. From the window of the house her mother and her older sister were gazing with strained eyes upon her. She recognized them by waving her little hand.

"I got my little sister Annie cryin after the house fell on us," she said, "and I soothed her as long as I could. After a while she stopped and I am afraid she is dead. Don't somebody go and get her?"

Little Mary's fears were well founded. Fifteen minutes later the firemen drew out from the mass just next to where Mary had been uncovered the body of little Annie Heagney, four years old.

It Was an Impressive Scene.

The scene early this morning was an impressive one. Above the ruins the light illuminated the arena of death. Beneath its rays the Italians labored faithfully. A blaze of light with a reflector attachment at hand seemed to expectantly await the efforts of the dusky laborers. The street for a block was piled high with debris. From the window of the publish'has been cleared away and scores of bodies may yet be hidden in the ruins.

Two More Bodies Discovered.

This morning the Italians working on the College place side discovered the bodies of two men buried several feet beneath them by a mass of broken timbers. The bodies were badly charred, and one man was clasping the other's hand. They had met death together. Owing to the great mass of beams and bricks above them the bodies have not yet been found several hours. These two swell the list to eighteen.

A Strange Coincidence.

A strange coincidence is the fact that fourteen years ago the confectionery store of Greenfield & Son, 63 Barclay street, almost directly in the rear of the present horror, collapsed in much the same way, and twenty lives were lost.

The Dead May Number Sixty.

From the increasing number of persons who are reported as missing with reason to believe that they were in the destroyed building when it fell it seems likely that the total fatalities may number as many as sixty. The bodies that have been taken from the ruins, identified and unidentified, are as follows:

A List of the Dead.

Brettner, Charles, 14, 265 East Fifty-fourth street; employed by Liebler & Maas; identified by his father.

Cole, Leonard R., of Madison street, Brooklyn; identified by his brother.

Deubogh, Abraham, 17, 143 Delancey street, employed by Louis Rosenfeld, of 70 Parkplace.

Fisher, Charles A., 227 Greenwich street; Rich, Frank, 20, 128 First street; identified by his brother, John Rich.

Heagney, Annie, 4, 67 Park place.

Heidenrich, Jacob, 14, 126 East One Hundred and Fifty-eighth street, brother of Policeman Heidenrich, of the Fourteenth precinct; employed by Liebler & Maas.

Hills, John, 61, 76 Gouverneur street, driver for W. H. Hills, of No. 74 Park place.

Low, George, 13, 262 Wallabout street, identified by his father of the same address.

Peterson, Carl, 22, unmarried, 618 Third avenue; manager of the restaurant on the ground floor.

Stevens, Michael, 1,107 Park avenue, employed by the Empire Subway company; identified by his son, Edward Slattery.

Stoltze, Frank, 26, 211 East One Hundred and Seventh street. Identified by Frederick Clade, Feeder employed by South Publishing company.

Walser, Otto, 24, married, 108 East Eighth street, a pressman. Identified by Adolph Stenzel, 268 East Fifty-seventh street.

Zickert, Gustav, 37, 320 Washington street, Hoboken. Recognized by Mr. Beuns, of Hoboken.

Unknown man, about 35.

Unknown man, about 30, 5 feet 6 inches in height, dark mustache, light striped trousers, white shirt and dark vest.

Unknown man, about 20, 5 feet 4 inches, dark clothes.

Unknown man.

At Least a Hundred Dead.

The Times believes at least a hundred are dead in the Wreck. It has been estimated that about 150 persons were inside of the Taylor building at the time the accident occurred. As far as can be ascertained not more than twenty-five managed to escape. Ninety-three persons are yet to be heard from."

The Herald estimates the number of dead at sixty, and says it is very evident that the cause of the accident was the flimsy, aged character of the building, and the fact that it was overweighted with machinery and heavy paper stock and was subjected to strains beyond the endurance of any ordinary business block.

The Sun estimates that at least 100 will be found to have perished when the ruins are fully explored.

A Fireman Killed at New York.

NEW YORK, Aug. 24.—Fire Sunday in the building at 241 Broadway, occupied by E. S. Herseman, importer, and Ferris Bros., manufacturers of corsets, damaged the building and its contents to the extent of $70,000, fully insured. James H. Shute, aged forty-five, assistant foreman of Engine 27, was overcome by smoke during the progress of the fire. Several of his comrades succeeded with great difficulty in rescuing him, but Shute died soon after reaching the sidewalk.

GENERAL FOSTER TALKS.

He Says Spain Has Let Uncle Sam In on the Ground Floor.

SARATOGA, Aug. 24.—The president spent Sunday very quietly, scarcely going outside his rooms. He took dinner with Colonel H. S. Clement, proprietor of the Congress hotel, who served in President Harrison's regiment during the war. With reference to the Spanish reciprocity treaty, General Foster said: "The official publication of the reciprocity arrangements with Spain made in The Government Gazette at Madrid contains the announcement by the minister of state that all the commercial treaties which Spain has with European governments have already been denounced, and that the last of them will cease to have any force on July 1 next. This declaration makes it clear that neither England, Canada nor any of the British possessions will or can have any of the benefits of the arrangement as to Cuba after that date."

This statement is made with a view to correcting the prevalent impression that Spain, having failed to denounce on July 1 the treaty with England under the clause requiring one year's notice of the denouncement, the privilege could not be gained before July 1 next year, thus deferring the date of cancellation to July 1, 1893, during which time it was claimed England and her possessions would enjoy the benefits of the same reciprocal relations with Cuba as those enjoyed by the United States.

The president left Saratoga this morning at 9 o'clock, by way of Whitehall, for some point on the western shore of Lake Champlain, where he will meet Secretary of Edward Webb, which will convey him across the lake to Burlington. He will lunch with Senator Edmunds. In the afternoon he will proceed to St. Albans and there spend the night as the guest of ex-Governor Smith. Wednesday he will be the guest of Governor Proctor from Burlington he will go to Proctor and be the guest of Secretary Proctor from Thursday evening until Saturday morning, when he will start for Cape May over the Hudson River railroad. It will be seen that the president will not visit Secretary Blaine as reported.

A Strike's Backbone Broken.

PEORIA, Ill., Aug. 24.—The backbone of the big switchmen's strike, which has utterly demoralized business in Peoria for a week, has been broken. The Red express, due here at 11:15 a. m., with a crew, carried two extra cars with men who came to take the strikers' places. They are all brawny, stalwart men, and as the officials arrived they were met by a number of strikers, who did not molest them. At noon fourteen switch engines were moving freight.

A Riot at a Circus.

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Aug. 24.—The performers engaged with Harper Brothers' circus and menagerie Saturday night after the audience had filled their seats at Thompsonville, claiming that the managers owed them from three to seven weeks' pay. It was then announced that money would be refunded. The crowd, however, cut the guy ropes, smashed seats and set the tent on fire. Manager Harper refused to refund the money and was arrested.

A Wilkesbarre Man's Throat.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 24.—The drug store of Dr. Alexander S. McIntyre was raided by the police, and Frank Hutchinson, clerk, and several customers were jailed. Those belonging here were released on parole. The others were held for hearing without bail. M. A. McNutt, of Wilkesbarre, Pa., who was refused bail, threatens to sue the town for damages for false imprisonment.

There Are 14,000 Victims.

WHEELING, Aug. 24.—The fraternity Financial Corporation has made an assignment to G. H. Stoneman, of Philadelphia. The victims are believed to number 14,000 and lived mostly in New England, New York, Pennsylvania and Ohio. The gang of operators are believed to have obtained upward of $200,000 from unsuspecting

A Series of Terrible Battles in Chili.

ABOUT THREE THOUSAND DEAD.

President Balmaceda's Force Driven Back by the Plucky Insurgents, and Valparaiso in Danger of Falling Into the Hands of the Government's Foes.

VALPARAISO, Chili, via GALVESTON, Aug. 24.—President Balmaceda and the Junta de Gobierno are clinched in the final desperate struggle for the mastery of the republic of Chili. The chosen battle ground is in full view of the city of Valparaiso, and thousands of anxious eyes are watching from every point of vantage the battle which is to decide the fate of the country. The battle has been raging practically for three days. The first engagement was at the mouth of the Aconcagua on Friday and resulted in a reverse to the government. The final test of strength is now being made at Vina del Mar beach, directly across Valparaiso bay and less than five miles away.

Protected by War Ships.

When news reached here that an army of 8,000 rebels had been landed at Quintero bay Thursday Balmaceda and his generals were taken by surprise, but the utmost activity was used in getting troops to the front, so as if possible to prevent the invading army from crossing the Aconcagua river immediately south of the bay. Six of the insurgent war ships were anchored in Concon bay at the mouth of the river and under the cover of their guns the army of the Junta undertook the task of forcing a passage of the river Friday morning.

It Was a Bloody Battle.

A most desperate and bloody battle resulted, lasting pretty nearly all day. A galling fire from the insurgent artillery, which was parked on the northern bank of the river, aided by the heavy batteries and machine guns from the ships, was too much for the government troops and they were forced to retire, which they did in good order. Both sides fought with the utmost valor and the desperate character of the battle may be judged from the fact that while less than 20,000 troops were engaged, the list of casualties will foot up nearly 3,000 men killed and wounded.

Have Run Nitrate Steamers.

Balmaceda found out that the insurgents are something more than "nitrate stealers." The general in command of the government forces selected a strong position on the beach of Vina del Mar, the eastern shore of Valparaiso bay, as his second line of defense, and leaving force enough in front of the enemy to check his progress somewhat took his place there yesterday and went to work to strengthen it as much as possible.

The Government Troops Retreated.

All day long the insurgent forces pushed their way steadily forward, driving the comparatively small government force before them. It was a constant skirmish for fifteen miles over broken country. At every point of vantage the Balmacedists made a stand, and while they constantly were forced to give way before superior numbers they retarded the advance and gave the main army at Vina del Mar a chance to better prepare itself for the decisive fight. It was got until late in the evening that the attacking army arrived in front of Balmaceda's main line of defense. It was then too late to give battle.

Balmaceda at the Front.

In the meantime President Balmaceda, with every available man in this department, with himself in command, went to the front. He had over 12,000 available fighting men, while the insurgent force had been reduced to less than 7,000. At the back of the government line is Fort Callao, the heavy guns of which have done good work, both in raking the enemy by land and preventing the insurgent fleet, which had entered the bay, from doing anything effective than long range firing.

They Attacked in Force.

The Congressionalists attacked in force in the morning and all day long the battle has raged with the utmost fierceness. The warships did all they could to aid their land forces but they had a healthy regard for the heavy guns in the fort and were compelled, to do their fighting at long range.

A Scene of Awful Grandeur.

The scene from Valparaiso is one of awful grandeur. A heavy pall of smoke hangs like a cloud over the contending armies. It is lit up almost continuously by vivid flashes of light from the cannon and rifles, and the thunderous roar of the artillery can be heard continuously.

The most powerful glass cannot penetrate the cloud of smoke, though from Grunea Point glimpses of charging regiments can occasionally be seen through rifts in the smoke cloud. There is a constant stream of wounded being brought into the city from the front, and temporary hospitals are being fitted up. Nearly all the women have volunteered their services as nurses.

Valparaiso in Peril.

Should the revolutionists succeed in defeating or repulsing the government troops they would have to storm a small neck which separates the beach from the village of Vina del Mar and on taking possession of the village would be in the rear of Fort Callao. With the fleet on one side of the fort and the insurgent army on the other it would be untenable and thus the northern defense of Valparaiso would fall, making the work of capture of the city much easier. The fall of Valparaiso would mean the practical collapse of Balmaceda's power.

On the other hand the defeat of the insurgents would mean results little less decisive, for the rebels have put forth all the strength they have.

ALL DIED WITH BOOTS ON

Numerous Murders and Violent Deaths Here and There.

LYNCHED BY AN INDIANA MOB.

Desperado Charles Hawkins Shot City Marshal Bruce at Shelbyville and Five Hundred Armed Men Speedily Put the Terrified Wretch to Death.

SHELBYVILLE, Ind., Aug. 24.—Charles Hawkins, a notorious desperado, shot and fatally wounded City Marshal Dan Bruce in the afternoon, and at midnight a mob took Hawkins from the jail and hanged him. Hawkins had been drinking and was having a quarrel on South Harrison street with a man named Chambers when Bruce came upon the scene and requested them to cease their disturbance, whereupon Hawkins retorted that he would do as he pleased. Bruce was then about six feet away and, stepping a pace toward Hawkins, told him he must be quiet or he would be compelled to arrest him.

A Mob at the Jail.

Hawkins then fired three shots in succession at Bruce, each bullet taking effect in the right breast. Hawkins was soon afterward placed under arrest. At midnight when Bruce was reported to be dying, 500 armed men marched to the jail, and, after having bound and gagged the sheriff, began the search for the murderer. He was in a rear cell, and when the mob reached that portion of the jail Hawkins was seen cowering in the rear of the cell. The door was quickly opened, and despite the terrified wretch's appeal for mercy on for time to pray he was tied hand and foot, a rope placed around his neck, and in a moment the men were tearing out of the jail with their howling victim trailing after them on the ground.

"Up with Him Then!"

About twenty feet from the jail door's iron was found, and the rope was thrown over a limb. Fifty men seized hold of the end while the murderer fell on his knees and tried to pray.

"Are you ready?" asked a leader of the mob. The answer was a yell.

"Up with him then," and with another yell of rage the fifty men gave a rush and Hawkins' body was twenty feet above the ground. No sooner had he been pulled up than a volley of shots from rifles and revolvers rang out on the night and the murderer's struggles were over. The mob the quietly dispersed. It is said that Hawkins' deed was premeditated. A week ago the marshal arrested Hawkins' twelve-year-old son, who had thrown stones through some plate glass windows, and to Hawkins told Redin Doran that he came the city prepared to get even with Bruce.

A Woman Beaten to Death.

TRENTON, Aug. 24.—Mary Lynn, a white woman, belonging in Bristol, Pa., was beaten to death Sunday by her colored paramour, William Scruby. Scruby and the woman had recently separated. He heard that she was here in company with a colored man named Freyne. He went to Freyne's house and beat Frayne and another man named Bayard until they ran away.

Killed with a Chair.

He then struck the woman with a chair and continued to beat her until her head was crushed in. Scruby was found on the farm where he was employed and arrested.

They Killed the Wrong Man.

ADA, O., Aug. 24.—At the Harding county fair John Bristol, of Fort Wayne, and John Fruth, Celina, became involved in a quarrel with Charles Matthews, but he got away before they came to blows. Later Bristol and Fruth came out of a saloon and observed Jacob Stokesbury on the sidewalk near by talking with two friends. Fruth and Bristol mistook Stokesbury for Matthews and both attacked and knocked him down, and beat him so badly that he died shortly afterward. Fruth and Bristol were arrested, but will probably be lynched. Stokesbury had never seen his assailants before.

She Shot Her Husband Dead.

NICOLLET, Minn., Aug. 24.—Mrs. John D. Miller shot and instantly killed her husband here. They had been divorced for some weeks, but Mrs. Miller had concluded to live with her husband's home. She was jealous of his attentions to a young woman named Schee, and on meeting them together drew a revolver and killed her husband. Miss Schee ran, but Mrs. Miller fired at her twice, one ball making a flesh wound in the shoulder and another cutting away a part of her hair. Both women were arrested.

Two Moonshiners Killed.

SEDALIA, Miss., Aug. 24.—During a fight between the United States marshal and his deputies and a gang of illicit distillers at Sinden Spring James and Bailey Sipes, brothers, were killed and two of the officers wounded.

THE RUSH LIGHT OF OLDEN TIMES.

The Tiny Light Which Is Even Now Used in Remote Parts of Scotland.

Probably some of our young folks who have come across the word "rush light" in stories of humble life in England have been at a loss as to what it could be. A writer in Wide Awake, from which our cut is taken, who, as a child, had the same wonder about the nature of a rush light, says: In a description of one of Hogarth's pictures, the writer speaks of the miser's rush light "in the grave all." The "grave all," you will understand, is the small pan in the bottom of the candlestick to save the candle ends and the drippings. That miser had a rush light because he was too niggardly to use anything better.

A RUSH LIGHT AND STICK.

Dickens, in "Great Expectations," has something about a rush light. Pip, who had arrived late in the night at a new lodging place, says:

As I had asked for a night light, the chamberlain had brought one in before he left, the good old constitutional rush light of those virtuous days—an object like the ghost of a walking-cane, which insisted on leaning to light. If it were touched, which nothing could ever be lighted at, and which was placed in solitary confinement at the bottom of a high tin tower, perforated with round holes that made a starry night wide awake pattern on the wall.

It was really but a tiny light, yet it was all that the poor of the olden time could afford. The earliest lights used in Ireland were from rushes dipped through grease and placed in some kind of receptacle where they could burn without danger of being put out by accident; and even now, in some remote parts of that country, rush candles are used in the cabins of the peasants.

The species employed for this purpose is juncus conglomeratus, perhaps not found in this country, though it must be much like our bulrush, but in England it grows abundantly. From these rushes the outer green covering was peeled lengthwise, with the exception of a narrow strip from top to bottom which served as a support to the pith and kept the rush from burning out as soon as it would otherwise have done. Then these piths were spread in rows on the grass where they remained till they were bleached, after which they were dried in the sun. Among the poorest people there was not much grease used, and their candles were not much larger than our straws. But for those in better circumstances there was a candle dipping that resulted in a candle of the size that would burn "from half an hour to forty minutes on an average."

How He Was Cured.

It is told in Harper's Young People of the famous naturalist, Buffon, that he was very fond of lying in bed late in the morning. Wishing to cure himself of the bad habit, he promised the servant, Joseph, a crown for each morning he could get his master up at 6 o'clock. For several days Joseph tried to induce him to get out of bed early, but without success. He was only abused and driven out of the room by his master. Yet every day when Buffon arose he lamented that he had not gotten up sooner.

"You do not manage it right," he said angrily to Joseph. "You ought to succeed; for only the crown I promised will pay my attention to what I say when I am asleep."

So Joseph determined to try again. The next morning he dragged his master out of bed by main force. He was unmindful of scolding, threats or even blows. Later in the day he was rewarded for his persistency by the promised crown, and his master bestowed the same every day that his faithful servant made him get up early in spite of himself.

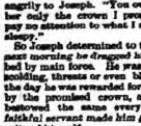
Four Little Maidens of Lee.

There were four little maidens of Lee,
They were fond of all play as could be.
If a cow came in sight
They all fled in a fright,
Did the four little maidens of Lee.



THE COWS SCAMPER AWAY.

So those little maidens of Lee,
Their sunshades to take did agree.
And now in dismay
The cows scamper away
From the four little maidens of Lee.

The Mother Swallow.

The swallow now with toil and care
Has built her little nest
Beneath the roof has fixed it firm,
And sings with happy breast.

There in and out the lovelong day
Unwearedly she flies,
And straws and feathers for a bed
Into the new house brings.

Then lays soon they speckled eggs
Deep in the cozy home,
From which before the summer time
Woo naked birdlings come!

Who quickly open wide their bills,
Insist the food to seize,
The mother bird has much to do
Their hunger to appease.

She catches flies up in the air
With gnats and midges thick,
And takes them to her little ones,
Who eat them in a trice.

But when the young are fledged and full,
No longer will they stay,
And with the first cold weather fly
To distant lands away.

A Wee, Eilish Miller.

"There's a little mill a-going
I hear by night and day,"
Sez 'tis but the homely
Buzzing in the grass."

"Tis not a fly, but a fairy,
Such as dance in magic rings
A wee, eilish miller,
With a wheel beneath his wings!

"And his grist is the sunshine
Which through the meadows flows
Into golden meal is powdered,
That dances in the air."

The Dispatch of House Slops.

Any drain into which kitchen slops are poured is a pestilence nuisance. It is practicable, however, to make one in which the very things most desirable to be got rid of will not be deposited all along the way. In these closing it up. I connected with a house having a long kitchen drain made of plank, the acme of perfection in the estimation of the man who constructed it. It had evidently become obstructed, although still in operation. The first thing I did was to have it dug up its whole length. It was almost full of the decayed food from the slops, a most loathsome, stinking mass, about the color of blue clay and the consistency of new cheese. It had to be cut out with shovels from end to end.

A barrel of slop poured into a drain at a time will generally be less harmful than a pailful, because the larger quantity will run further before it begins to precipitate the impurities, and will, as a rule, precipitate less in the whole course. Disease germs cannot be floated back upon the air of the half filled drain to its head to poison whoever has occasion to come near.

I have in my washroom a drain for wash water, but it is short, and the overflow of the cistern runs into it, or we would not use it at all. The water is carried up to a piece of sloping grassland, where it is innocuous, but a promotive of rapid growth that the grass is cut several times during each season for selling purposes. But the greater part of our house slop is saved in pails and carried out on the land, which is a much better way than pouring on a manure heap to be rehandled. Once on the land all there is of value is appropriated and all that is noisome is neutralized.

As the pails are filled they may be set by the door, where it becomes the duty of the men to attend to them. A low bench made of two scantlings, on which to turn the emptied pails, is better than a plank, as the air is admitted to the inverted pails with excellent effect. If the men understand that when there are as many as two pails standing at the door it is their business to empty them, the slop nuisance is more satisfactorily and economically disposed of in that than in any other way.—San Francisco Examiner.

Mrs. Searles and Great Barrington.

Old residents in Great Barrington remember when, nearly fifty years ago, Mrs. Searles was Mary Frances Sherwood, daughter of William Sherwood, principal of a boys' school in New York. She was a pupil in the Kellogg Terrace school conducted by her aunts, Sarah, Mary and Nancy Kellogg, and belonged to a coterie of pupils whom the young men regarded with admiration and certain feelings of awe. In this company of schoolgirl friends were three who still live in Great Barrington. Of the Hopkins family, C. W. Hopkins was living at Great Barrington in retirement, and advanced the money that his nephew Mark needed to start for California when afflicted with the gold fever. Mark's brother Moses kept a store where ready made clothing was sold, a novelty in those days.

After marrying Mark Hopkins and settling in California, Miss Sherwood was lost to Great Barrington people for a long time. After Hopkins died, Mrs. Hopkins, the widow, who, with her sister, Mrs. Crittenden, had inherited the Kellogg Terrace house, moved back to Great Barrington and remodeled the mansion for a summer residence.

The principal public gift Great Barrington received from Mrs. Searles was the fine Congregational church. She first gave largely to secure repairs and improvements in the old building, and when that was burned she practically built the new structure, besides adding a parsonage and electric bells. The church was provided with a $50,000 organ, and the people found it difficult to support a player suitable to handle it. The parish expected Mrs. Searles would do something, and as a result there was friction, ending in Mrs. Searles' withdrawal from the organization entirely. She was afterward confirmed and attended the Episcopal church.—Springfield Republican.

How to Use Discarded Long Gloves.

If the woman has a dark blue or scarlet wool dress or corsage, let her cut the black kid into a collar and band or tab, the latter about an inch and a half wide, turned in at the end, and forming a point. This tab let her set from the collar to the middle of the bust downward; make full sleeves from the shoulder of material, and finish them from elbow to wrist with kid, either buttoning these long cuffs with two or three buttons and loops, or after having eyelet holes punched in them, lacing them on the outside of the sleeve, the lace tied in tagged bows, while a Swiss corselet belt, cut out of cardboard or very stiff canvas, covered with kid, and the overplus of the kid, finishes a fin de siecle harness that is quite ultra modern for tennis or boating, and quite original.

If more time can be lavished a narrow beading of jet or steel may be outlined. If it is the stockinglike portion of suede gloves about which there is trouble, try the same device and wear blue blouse, and it won't look any worse for its tan adornments.—New York Recorder.

For Carrying Baby.

There is always something being invented for the benefit of one class or another, and the latest production of inventive genius, a patent "baby carrier," will especially appeal to the great host of mothers. This most ingenious and useful little article is in reality a midsummer hammock, which can be fastened round the neck at various heights by strong hooks; the baby being placed inside, the hands of the nurse are left perfectly free, the little ones are saved from any strain or subsequent aching and perfect comfort and safety are insured for the child. The baby and carrier weighs under three ounces, will wash, and when not in use can be folded up into a very small compass and carried in the pocket. Every woman knows how when baby wants to be nursed everything else must be put aside and every movement studied, therefore the value of an article the use of which admits of a baby being held and saves the arms from many an hour's aching can be thoroughly appreciated.—Lady's Pictorial.

How a Woman Should Exercise.

A woman who has paid great attention to this important subject says water and air are the best tonics and beautifiers. For bathing purposes she recommends long mittens made from Turkish toweling. At night the mittens should be put in a washbowl of water in which the face wash has been dissolved. On rising in the morning wring out the mittens, put them on and rub the whole body briskly. Dry on a towel, not coarse, and dress quickly.

Then go out of doors, if only for five minutes. Walking is the best exercise. If you cannot walk half a mile at first walk a quarter; keep on stretching the distance until you can walk three or four miles without fatigue. Fresh air will put a good color in the face, and when the health is good and the blood circulates freely the nerves will be all right.—St. Paul Pioneer Press.

THE NEWS IN BRIEF.

Mr. I. Fleischman, lessee of the Walnut Street theater and owner of the Park theater, Philadelphia, is dead.

Major McKinley opened the Ohio campaign at Niles, where he spoke to 60,000 persons and pushed the silver question forward as one of the issues of the campaign.

It is alleged that Count Herbert Bismarck has written to the Hamburger Nachrichten denouncing the interview alleged by M. de Blowitz, the Paris correspondent of the London Times, to have been published in this country, between the German ambassador at Paris, as a fabrication, and that Count Herbert will endeavor to force von Munster into a duel.

At the Democratic district convention at Addison, N. Y., it was decided unanimously to favor Hill for governor and Charles F. Peck for lieutenant governor.

A young fellow named James Roberts has been arrested at New Washington, O., as being the Columbus Grove murderer and bank robber. Two people who saw the Columbus Grove murderer at the time he was making his escape have identified him.

The New York Herald says that President Harrison's alleged plan to confine the coinage of silver to the product of American mines may be accepted by both parties.

Russian papers state that there is no fear of there being any prohibition of the export of wheat from Russia, nor will there even be a tax on its importation abroad.

Is Almy George W. Abbott?

HANOVER, N. H., Aug. 24.—A large number of acquaintances of George W. Abbott, alias Frank C. Almy, visited Hanover today to see the noted prisoner. Since Almy's identity has been established several persons claim that Almy is not Abbott. Further proof of his identity was furnished today by E. E. Wilson, of Olcott, Vt., a brother of Abbott's own mother. He visited the prisoner, and when questioned said, "I have not seen George Abbott since he was in Windsor prison, but the man on the cot up stairs is he."

Two Thousand at the Love Feast.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 24.—Fully 20,000 people attended the exercises of the Ocean Grove Camp Meeting association Sunday. At 8:45 there was a love feast at which 10,000 persons were present. The morning sermon was delivered by Bishop Joyce, of Chattanooga, Tenn., and heard by 6,000 people. Rev. T. De Witt Talmage preached to 10,000 people in the afternoon. Last night Rev. Simon Chesney, of New Haven, preached to a congregation of 7,000.

Important Concession to Kansas Men.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—The Bureau of American Republics has just been informed that the Nicaraguan government has signed a concession of 5,000,000 acres of land in the departments of Massagalpa and Segovia to a company of Kansas capitalists. The consideration for this grant is that the capitalists shall colonize 5,000 families in the departments named and build a railroad from Monotombo to the Rio Grande.

Labor Delegates Do Not Agree.

BRUSSELS, Aug. 24.—The sessions of the Brussels labor congress have not affected much for the harmony of labor. The genuine trade union delegates from England and America feel that their influence has been overcome by the socialist element. They express dissatisfaction with the selection of May 1 for the eight hour agitation. The next congress is to be held at Berne. Chicago was objectionable to many for obvious reasons.

Great Damage at Pottsville.

POTTSVILLE, Pa., Aug. 24.—The worst thunderstorm ever known in this section occured Sunday afternoon and caused damage to property estimated at $100,000. Cellars and first floors in the business portion of the city were flooded. Reports from Minersville, St. Clair, Port Carbon, Schuylkill Haven, Girardville and Mahanoy Plane say the storm at those places also caused great damage.

The President's Horses Run Away.

CAPE MAY POINT, N. J., Aug. 24.—The presidential carriage was wrecked in the Sea Breeze hotel yard. The horses were left alone for a minute by the White House coachman and ran away. The wrecked vehicle carriage lost a wheel, but the horses were uninjured. They were caught after a short chase.

A Woman's Library.

It seemed a strange remark for a cultured woman coming from Boston to Brooklyn to-live, that she never was in a place where so many women were employed with outside interests as in Brooklyn, but, later, having occasion to visit Norfolk, Conn., she was tempted to make the same observation with regard to that place, which is one of the ever recurring evidences of the steadily increasing interest of women everywhere, whether it be city or country. It was a worthy idea to have a periodical free to all its readers on the subject of their homes. In this same beautiful town of Norfolk, where, every season, many city boarders linger long after the hot summer days have passed, is an ideal free library. Its books are guarded by neither rail nor door. They stand in open cases, easily reached for free consultation or examination. Strangers as well as inhabitants are cordially welcomed to the treasures within by a most gracious woman, who receives you as if in the parlor of her own home, and, indeed, the reading rooms are far more elegant and cosy looking than many a stiff reception room.

There seems to be next to no rules, next to no supervision. A beautiful conservatory opens out of one of the rooms from which choice blossoms are picked to decorate the library tables. Everything is made as attractive as possible, the sole aim, seemingly, of the woman whose fortune has thus far been used for the benefit of others being to encourage every one to frequent the rooms and get all the good they can from the best literature. So far as known such privileges as this have no been abused, while many a traveler remembers with gratitude the pleasant hours her generosity afforded.

An English Cake.

Strain the juice of a couple of lemons into a basin and infuse in them the grated rind of a large orange for an hour or two. Beat one-quarter pound of fresh butter to a cream, with one-half pound of sugar, then add one by one the yolks of five eggs and beat the mixture steadily for ten minutes. Next strain the juice of the lemons, put this to the mixture, stir in one-half pound fine flour and just at the last add nearly two teaspoonfuls of carbonate of soda dissolved in a tablespoonful of hot water. Bake in rather a flat tin and ice with orange or royal icing as you choose.

Stuffed Whitefish.

Excellent authority says that all large whitefish should be placed, for the purpose of boiling, in cold water, of which there should be only enough to cover the fish well, otherwise the skin is liable to crack. To every quart of water should be added a teaspoonful of salt. When it begins to boil remove the lid of the kettle and let it simmer very gently, skim the water carefully. It will take about thirty minutes to boil a four pound fish.

Curtain Bands.

For curtain bands many use brass chains, others use cord or silk ribbons. It is not usual to work them, but occasionally the bands are shaped, made of satin on a strong foundation, and powdered with daisies or other flowers. Sometimes ribbon is embroidered.

MOTHER AND CHILD MISSING.

Mr. Brunn Reproached His Wife and She Suddenly Disappeared.

Ellen Brunn, the wife of Peter Brunn, of North, Plainfield, has been missing from her home since June 17. She took her nine-year-old daughter Ellen, the prettiest of her seven children, with her.

The case was put in the hands of Detective Tunis J. Carey after the husband and father had exhausted all his efforts in a vain search for his wife and child.

Brunn is a gardener at Charles Mc. Cutchen's Villa, in Washington Park. He is sober and industrious and very much liked by his employer.

To a reporter Brunn said that his wife had fallen into bad company and began to drink very heavily. Early in June she went on a regular spree, and in her drunken rage locked her husband and children out of doors. Brunn reproached her for her conduct when she had sobered off, and told her that she was not fit to be the mother of her children.

When Brunn came home that night his wife was missing. The children did not know where she had gone. They told their father she had dressed up little Ellen and taken her away.

Brunn furnished the following description of his wife to-day: She is forty-five years old, five feet six inches in height, weighs about 140 pounds, has a florid complexion, light blue eyes, small hands and feet. She has one peculiar birthmark, which is a double thumb on her right hand, the members being distinct to the first joint, when they join. The daughter Ellen has a fair complexion, brown eyes and heavy golden curls.

PERSONAL.

Mr. F. M. Smith of Madison avenue is at Southold, L. I.

Mr. Henshaw of Broadway will leave to night for Omaha.

Miss Eva Dayton of East Sixth street is visiting friends in Philadelphia.

Mr. E. C. Martin of Park avenue is a guest at the Minot House, Asbury Park.

Mr. Aaron V. Kline of this city is a guest at the Brunswick House, Asbury Park.

Mr. A. Titsworth of this city is registered at the Grand Central Hotel, Asbury Park.

Rev. C. W. Bliss and family are visiting his brother-in-law, L. J. Denton of Prospect hill.

Mr. James Hanson of West Second street arrived home last evening from a visit to Saratoga.

Mr. Chas. P. Rogers has returned to his home in this city from a pleasant stay at Providence, R. I.

Dr. George W. Endicott and family of Park avenue left yesterday for a week's outing at May's Landing.

Mr. Harry VanEmburgh has returned to his home on East Second street from a pleasant stay at Asbury Park.

Miss Lillian McCready of Brooklyn is the guest of Miss Jessie Coddington of Somerset street, North Plainfield.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Rose and sister have returned to their home on West Seventh street from a two week's stay at Newport, R. I.

Mr. H. C. Drake of North avenue will be the assistant marshal of the 28th Regiment during the parade next Thursday afternoon.

Intelligence from Germany announces the death of Jacob Henry Wolff. Deceased was the father of Mr. Frank Wolff of Grandview avenue, North Plainfield.

Mrs. A. B. Warner has returned to her home on West Front street from a week's stay at Atlantic City and Cape May. At the latter place she paid her respects to President Harrison.

Mr. and Mrs. R. H. Radford have returned to their home on West Front street from a trip to Niagara Falls, Toronto, Montreal and Lake George. They report having had a very enjoyable time.

Lewis D. Bliss representing the Edison Electric Light Company of Washington, D. C., and his brother Frank who is also an electrician, have just returned to Washington after spending a few days with their uncle, L. J. Denton of this city.

The Rev. Carter Helm Jones, formerly of Elizabeth, occupied the pulpit of the First Baptist church Sunday morning and preached to a large congregation. He took for his text "I am the Life." He will occupy the same pulpit next Sunday, both morning and evening.

Frank Dodd, one of the unfortunate victims of the Park Place fire, in New York, is a brother of Mr. Dodd, a travelling photographer, who is at present located in North Plainfield. It is said that the young man was returning from work at the time when the accident occurred, and that he was buried under the ruins of the building. His remains were taken out Sunday afternoon and his brother was notified yesterday.

—The Crescents will go to Westfield next Saturday afternoon and play a return game with the Westfield Athletic Club's nine.

—Mr. M. Higgins, proprietor of Higgins' coach line, again withdrew his stages from the streets at noon, to-day, and they will not again run until further notice. The cause is that certain creditors of Mr. Higgins have been "crowding him to the wall," but he says he is ready and willing to meet all just claims against him provided his creditors are lenient with him. He, however, will continue to attend promptly to all carriage calls of a private nature. Mr. Higgins says that as soon as the difficulties are adjusted, he will continue his stage line as heretofore.

YOUNG MAPES'S DEATH.

He Suddenly Sinks Beneath the Fire Island Breakers Without a Sound.

Herbert Mapes, the celebrated athlete who was drowned at Fire Island Sunday, was a former resident of this city and was well-known here. He at one time was a student in the Plainfield High school and the family at that time resided in the Hotchkiss cottage (now known as the Johnston cottage) situated on Farragut avenue. An acquaintance of the family informed a NEWS reporter this morning that Herbert was one of the most popular boys he ever met. The New York Sun of this morning has the following account of the accident:

The untimely death of Herbert Mapes, the well-known young athlete and student, was generally discussed in athletic and college circles yesterday, and there was but one expression from all, that of universal regret over the cutting off of so bright a career, and unbounded sympathy for the sorrowing relatives. Herbert Mapes was a general favorite, and all who know him mourn his loss.

Up to a late hour last night no signs of the body were seen, although a vigorous search was kept up. A Sun reporter called at the family residence, 60 West Fourtieth street, last evening and saw Charles H., and Dr. James Mapes, brothers of the deceased. The latter who was on the beach at the time the sad accident took place, said:

"The statement that Herbert cried for help, waved his arms, and made a desperate struggle before he sank is erroneous. He made no outcry whatever, and sank without making a sign of distress. He disappeared suddenly. One minute from the time I saw him go under I was on the spot with a life line, but could see no trace of him. At the time he went down he was in water that was probably a foot or two over his head, and had not been any further out. One or two strokes would have sent him to where he could have stood on bottom. There were 300 people in the surf at the time he went down, but there was no swimming master, and nobody in a boat among the swimmers to help in case of sudden accident. There were, of course, life lines, and the appliances complied with the law. The surf at Fire Island is very heavy."

"How do you account for the sudden sinking of your brother?"

"It is a difficult matter to understand. It could not have been cramps, for in that case he would have been able to make some outcry. It might have been heart failure. A physician who was present gave it as his opinion that Herbert must have been unconscious when he sank, as he went down so suddenly and silently.

Herbert Mapes was a vigorous, muscular young man, able to stand very hard strains in athletic contests, and the fact of his going down as he did is a mystery. A. A. Jordan, the well-known athlete, gives it as his opinion that exhaustion, the result of rapid swimming, was the cause of the accident. Mr. Jordan cites the case of a sprinter who runs about 100 yards. It is a short distance, but the runner goes at top speed and puts forth all his powers. At the finish the runners in some cases fall exhausted. And it is set forth in the case of Mapes that he swam rapidly until he became exhausted, and then sank without a word.

Herbert Mapes was extremely popular with his athletic comrades and college mates. While he was an enthusiast on all branches of athletics, hurdling was his forte. His greatest achievement was on May 26, 1888, when he defeated Williams, the great Yale hurdler, in the 120-yard hurdles in 16 1-5 seconds. In the 220-yard hurdle race he ran second to S. Maitland of Harvard; on May 17, 1888, in the class games on the Manhattan A. C. grounds, he beat his brother Victor Mapes in the 220-yard hurdle race in 29 4-5 seconds. On Oct. 26, 1889, he won the 120-yard dash in 10 3-5 seconds, with three yards start. He was an earnest member of the Berkeley Athletic Club, which organization will take appropriate action.

He began his college career with two years in the Columbia Law school, and was graduated in class both years. He changed to the architectural department, and was to have graduated next year.

The members of the family are C. V. Mapes, the father, the mother, and four brothers as follows: Charles Halstead Mapes, Dr. James Jay Mapes, Victor Mapes, who is now abroad, and Olive Mapes, a boy of 19 years. Herbert is years was between Dr. Mapes and Victor.

Fell Into a Cesspool.

Yesterday men were engaged excavating a hole for cesspool in Exchange alley. During the evening Mr. Harry Harrington and a friend attempted to pass through the alley, but they did not proceed far before both fell in the excavation which was about five feet deep. Both were more or less injured. Mr. Harrington struck his head on the projecting stone and received a painful wound. He also received painful injuries about the body.

Get Out Your Flags.

As this will probably be the last time the people of Plainfield will look upon the surviving veterans of the old 28th New Jersey, who hold their re-union here next Thursday, coming from all parts of the country to get together once more, Plainfield members of the regiment request that everybody who has bunting display it, and help give "the boys" a cordial welcome.

Wm. Huston, engineer, Weehawken, N. J.: "I know that Dr. Kennedy's 'Favorite Remedy' is an honest preparation. I su-ered from Dyspepsia and Kidney Complaints for years and was cured by 'Favorite Remedy'." —Adv.

RE-UNION OF THE 9TH REGIMENT.

"Its Story is the Story of the War."

The sixth annual re-union of the Ninth New Jersey Veteran Volunteers is advertised to be held at Flemington on the 17th of September next. The veterans will be received and entertained by the Ladies' Relief Corps, of Flemington. General Beckman, who succeeded to the command of the regiment after the death of Col. Allen, has signified his determination to be present on this occasion.

The record of the Ninth Regiment is one of the most brilliant of any in the service from this State. It was recruited and mustered into service during the early Fall of 1861, but remained at Camp Olden, engaged in drilling and perfecting its organization until the 4th, of December following, when it was sent to Washington. It remained there, in camp, until the 4th of January, 1862, when it was assigned to the First Brigade of the Burnside Expedition. At the close of their term of service most of the men enlisted for a second term of three years, and the regiment remained in the service until the close of the war. Col. James W. Allen, who went out with the regiment, was drowned upon attempting to land in an open boat upon the arrival of the regiment off Cape Hatteras. He was succeeded by Major Charles A. Beckman, who was promoted to be Brigadier-General, and was succeeded by Adjutant Abram Zabriskie, who died May 24th, 1864, of wounds received in action at Drury's Bluff, and was succeeded by Captain James Stewart, Jr., who served with the regiment until it was mustered out of service at the close of the war.

The operations of the regiment were confined to North and South Carolina and Virginia.

Foster, in his "History of New Jersey and the Rebellion," sums up the history of this regiment as follows:

"New Jersey will ever be proud of the record of the regiment which thus, having helped to achieve a just and honorable peace, folded its standard and passed into history. Its story is the story of the war—its eulogy is its own great deeds. During its term of service it participated in forty-two battles and engagements, and traveled on rail and on foot a distance of seven thousand six hundred and fifty-two miles, making while in North Carolina some of the most remarkable marches on record. Entering the service with one thousand one hundred and forty-two men, and at various times strengthened by recruits, the mean strength of the regiment when mustered out was only six hundred men. Eight officers offered their lives as a sacrifice on the nation's altar, while twenty-three received wounds in battle, most of them of a serious nature. Sixty-one enlisted men were killed in battle, and four hundred wounded. Forty-three men died from wounds, and one hundred from disease. The total loss of the regiment from all causes was from one thousand six hundred and forty-six men. No fact could more strikingly exhibit the consuming nature of the campaigns in which the regiment participated than this, clearly authenticated by official returns. The entire number of men and officers taken prisoners was about one hundred and thirty, forty-seven of this number dying while in the hands of the enemy.

*Orders for transportation on Pennsyl*vania and Central Railroads will be forwarded to veterans of this regiment who desire to attend the re-union by addressing the Secretary, Capt. J. Madison Drake, at Elizabeth, N. J., stating by which road they will go.

An Old Offender.

Mrs. Melvin, who has on several occasion heretofore been called upon to appear in the city court was again before the bar of justice this morning. On Saturday she indulged too freely in "Jersey lightning" and in consequence thereof she became very noisy in the vicinity of her home on Cottage place. One of her neighbors made a complaint and last evening she was apprehended. This morning City Judge Codington sentenced her to the county jail for thirty days.

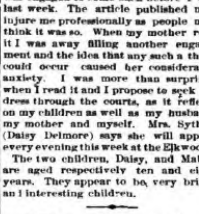
—John Hoagland, another victim of too much liquor, was fined ten dollars by City Judge Codington yesterday.

"DAISY DELMORE" SPEAKS.

She Says She Will Also See the Press.

"Miss Daisy Delmore," the young woman who the Press of last week claimed was taken from the Elkwood by her brother called at THE NEWS office this morning and requested us to deny the statement as false in every particular. Continuing she said: "I have but one brother and he lives at Scranton, Pa. He is married. I am also married. My proper name is Sythoff, but I make theatrical engagements under my maiden name as I am better known by that. I cannot see how such a statement originated. Mr. Miller has always treated me as a lady. If he had not I and my two children would not have returned here this week. I was engaged to come back before I left last week. The article published may injure me professionally as people may think it was so. When my mother read it I was away filling another engagement and the idea that any such a thing could occur caused her considerable anxiety. I was more than surprised when I read it and I propose to seek redress through the courts, as it reflects on my children as well as my husband, my mother and myself. Mrs. Sythoff (Daisy Delmore) says she will appear every evening this week at the Elkwood."

The two children, Daisy, and Mabel, are aged respectively ten and eight years. They appear to be very bright an I interesting children.



—Patrick Donavan was arrested for drunkenness Sunday. Yesterday he paid a five dollar fine into the city treasury.

—There were several very interesting trotting events on the track of the Gentlemen's Driving Park on Park avenue Saturday afternoon.

—G. S. & J. McGuire will be present at the regular meeting of Local No. 138, Carpenter and Joiners' Union, this evening at eight o'clock.

—Peter Curry will spend the next ten days behind the bars at Elizabeth. He was arrested here for drunkenness and taken to Elizabeth this morning.

—There will be an opportunity to visit old ocean once more this season, by going on the excursion of the Warren Union Mission on Friday of this week.

—James Emmons was fined ten dollars by City Judge Codington yesterday. The charge against him was drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He paid the fine.

—The Committee who have charge of the arrangements for the annual parade of the First New Jersey Regiment, Uniformed Rank, Knights of Pythias, to be held in this city next month, held a meeting last evening in Crescent Division room. Committee reports only were heard.

—New Jersey will begin to think it's Venice on a large scale, if the carnival craze keeps on spreading. Cranford has just got over the cold it caught a-carnivaling, and Rahway is suffering from pre, monitory sneezes, while Bound Brook announces that she, too, contemplates an orgy with boats, Japanese lanterns and red fire. Carnival in New Jersey suburban towns means night, the river, thin clothing and doctors' bills.—New York World.

State Notes

The big Smith family will have their re-union at Peapack to-morrow.

Louis J. Sherman, member of a firm of Newark clothiers, has disappeared.

In one hour on Friday night Bridgeton had a rainfall of one and a half inches.

Rev. Charles Logan, late rector of St. David's Protestant Episcopal church, Merchantville, has accepted a call to Christ church, Thoms River.

It is said that John Sweeney, who killed Albert Church, near Gloucester, early in the Summer, and who is in Camden jail, is insane.

A West Jersey express train ran into and splintered the farm wagon of Conrad Apple, a farmer, at South Glassboro, yesterday. Apple and Walter Brill, a boy of 19 years, who was riding with him, were thrown out, and the latter dangerously injured. The horse was killed.

Asbury Park police raided the drug store of Samuel McIntyre, at Coleman avenue and Cookman, on Saturday night. They arrested the clerk, Frank Hutchinson, and three customers, who sat in a table drinking. McIntyre had been arrested some time before, and the prisoners were held as witnesses.

Never Deceive a Child about Medicine.

If drugs are to be taken, and they are displeasing to the taste, no effort should be made to deceive the child. Some mothers will pretend to taste such doses and tell their children that they are nice, sweet, etc. This trick may work well once, but never again, for the child so dishonestly and contemptibly treated will always remember it. In a word, there should be no coaxing, lifting or threatening of children when medicine is to be given; down it should go without a whimper. Such early obedience is easily taught if the mother takes the proper course and enters on it early. There are many children who will swallow castor-oil or other nauseating medicines as readily as mild. But, unfortunately, this is not the rule. The infinite majority need two or three persons to hold them while they are being dosed, and even then their resistance to spit out most of what is given them.

THIS IS SUN-SPOT YEAR.

Vapors Cooler and Darker Than the Surrounding Surface.

These spots are great sink holes in the sun into which are descending vapors that are cooler and consequently darker than the surrounding surface. There is an intimate connection between the spots and certain explosive eruptions that occur on the sun by which vast quantities of glowing hydrogen and vaporized metals are cast up to an enormous height, as stones and ashes are thrown out by volcanoes on the earth.

The late Father Secchi, a celebrated Italian astronomer, thought that the spots were caused by the setting down of the materials thus cast forth, which had been partially cooled and condensed during their lofty flight.

Great sun spots are frequently completely encircled by tremendous eruptions, which sometimes hurl the dazzling substance of the sun 300,000 or 300,000 miles high.

We must not forget in considering these startling facts that the surface of the sun is not solid, like the crust of the earth, but probably consists of a shell of luminous and intensely heated clouds, in which iron and many others of our familiar metals appear in the form of intensely hot vapors.

Within this shell, which is formed by the partial condensation resulting from exposure to the cold of outer space, just as vapor from the earth's surface is condensed into clouds of steam when it passes out into the air, the body of the sun is believed to be composed of matter in a similar vaporous condition, but even hotter.

NEVER AT REST.

It is easy to see that such a body can never be entirely at rest, but the disturbances that it undergoes, which are manifested to us by the appearance of spots and eruptions, become intense, than gradually die away, and then again increasing in intensity in pretty regular periods, the time from one maximum, or point of greatest intensity, to another being, on the average, about eleven years.

The latest maximum occurred in 1883 or 1884 and the latest minimum in 1889, when very few spots could be seen. Their rapid increase now indicates that the approaching maximum, which should occur about 1894, made by a memorable one.

Some of the spots that have lately appeared could be easily seen without a telescope by simply protecting the eye with a smoked glass. Any one can see the larger spots by fixing a spy-glass in such a way that it can be directed steadily at the sun while a sheet of cardboard is placed at a distance of several inches behind the eye-piece, where the image of the sun may fall upon it.

If the observation can be made through an aperture in a darkened room the effect is greatly heightened.

INFLUENCE ON THE WEATHER.

The question whether sun spots exercise any influence upon the weather, and if so, what the effect is, has naturally arisen again now that the spots are coming back.

It is certain that extraordinary outbursts in the sun produce violent magnetic disturbances upon the earth and auroras and displays of the northern lights, or northern lights, which are caused by atmospheric electricity.

It has also been suspected that certain destructive storms, like our Western tornadoes and the typhoons of the China seas are more frequent when sun spots are most numerous, but this remains to be proved by further observations.

A fact to be remembered, when thinking of the influence of disturbances on the sun is, that a cyclone of the earth would be swallowed up completely if dropped into some of the sun-spot holes that look to us like mere spects on the solar surface, the sun, on the other hand, is so large that although the distance from the borealis, or northern lights, which are caused by atmospheric electricity.

"Charity suffereth long and is blind," is the new version of it.

Milwaukee Journal—People who are really missed when away never appreciate their importance when present.

An American in France, who made a little excursion into a country province to see some famous French horses, counted up at the end of one day of his little jaunt and found he had fed exactly thirteen persons and paid out two dollars more than his legitimate expenses. That is about the average tips of many Americans in Europe—two dollars a day—yet foreigners complain that travel in America is expensive. But foreigners who come to America do not have to pay two dollars a day tipping folk.

Some singular verdicts have been rendered in the past few months in murder cases. They arise from an unconquerable aversion to the hanging of laymen to the hanging penalty. In states where the sentence for murder in the first degree is hanging and nothing else, it is difficult to see how a sentence of imprisonment for life can be pronounced. Yet this has been done. Either the accused was guilty of murder or he was not in several of the instances. If he was guilty at all, then it must have been murder in the first degree, yet the court manages to shuffle around the death penalty in some way. A notable case was that of the Arab who is believed to have killed the old woman "Shakespeare" in New York city.

Better Than a Clerkship.

A boy was a page in the house of representatives at Washington. He received seventy-five dollars a month. He did not on that account wear knee breeches till he was nearly twenty-one to make believe he was still a little boy, so as to keep his place, as boys have done before now. On the contrary, he gave up his Washington office and took a place to learn electricity for thirty dollars a month. He was pluckier than most Washington pages are. He learned everything as he went, doing any kind of work that offered, rough or smooth. He started with an electric street railway plant. He was so intelligent and handy that in six months he had charge of a department for himself. Six more months past. An offer was made to the young man to take charge of an electric road. He accepted it.

It was a year ago that the youth left off being a page for the house of representatives at Washington and began to learn to be a practical electrician. Now he is the superintendent of an electric street railway, bossing everything connected with its practical working and getting $6,000 a year. Young man, study electrical engineering. It is the profession of the future. The demand for skilled electricians is at present greater than the supply.

A Useful Citizen.

If any man in our century deserves well of his fellow countrymen it is an individual whom two-thirds of them never heard of by name. His name, it may be mentioned in the beginning, is Henry Stewart, the writer on farming, live stock and dairying. Mr. Stewart has been writing the most practical papers on these subjects for thirty years, yet it is only within a few years comparatively that he would allow his name to be used in connection with anything from his pen.

Mr. Stewart spent his boyhood on a dairy farm managed by his mother. It was such a model of neatness, of peaceful, quiet happiness and plenty that the remembrance of the man always turned to that attractive home of the boy. He began the study of medicine in Europe but the rural picture came between him and all the bones and pills and powders. He finished studying physic, but soon gave up his practice. He took up civil engineering for a time, with the same result.

Finally he settled down in the conviction that he was a born farmer and dairyman. While yet in his youth it seemed to be impressed upon him somehow that his mission was to take up worn out or worthless lands and show his countrymen what could be done with them. One of these was said to be one of the poorest farms in New Jersey. Mr. Stewart took hold of it with enthusiasm. In a few years he made of it a most valuable and profitable butter dairy farm.

Next he went to North Carolina to repeat the process with a mountainous tract there. It is his delight to turn rocky, swampy and wasty wastes into blooming gardens and beautiful landscapes, and he does this wherever he goes. What is more to the point, he has instructed thousands of his countrymen how to do the same without making any fuss or flourish about it. He has taught them how farming and rural life may be made both pleasant and profitable. One great advantage he had was in his thorough education, obtained in the best schools of Europe and America. Such scientific farmers as this ought to be scattered plentifully in every state in the Union.

THE DEATH LIST GROWS

Thirty-five Bodies Recovered in New York.

EIGHTY-EIGHT ARE STILL MISSING.

It Is Now Believed That 123 Persons May Have Perished in the Park Place Catastrophe—The Dead Now Endangering Those Living Nearby.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—At 4 o'clock the grim total of the bodies recovered from the Park place ruins was thirty-five. The number positively identified is twenty and the number reported missing eighty-eight. This would indicate that 123 persons lost their lives by the collapse of the building.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The sad and laborious task of delving for the dead in the debris of the collapsed Taylor building on Park place continues slowly, but every hour adds to the list of recovered bodies. There were many ghastly finds Monday, and up to 1 a. m. thirty-four bodies in all had been rescued from the mass of twisted iron, splintered timbers and bricks. Much of the debris still remains, and the strong probabilities are that when all the bodies are recovered the list of dead will reach a total of frightful proportions.

Indictments Probable.

District Attorney Nicoll is already considering the question of indicting the person or persons responsible for the disaster. After a long consultation with his chief assistant, ex-Judge Bedford, he placed the case in the hands of Assistant District Attorney Townsend.

Fear for the Public's Safety.

Acting Police Superintendent Byrnes in the morning notified President Charles G. Wilson, of the health board, that the sanitary conditions at the scene of the disaster were menacing to public health. The odor arising from the interred and charred bodies still in the ruins was described by Superintendent Byrnes as increasing in offensiveness, and the condition is such as required immediate steps to prevent the engendering and spread of disease. President Wilson immediately detailed Sanitary Inspector Alvah H. Doty and Chemist R. W. Martin and a force of men under Superintendent Byrnes' orders. The latter put them under command of Sergeant John J. Harley, and the three proceeded at once to take the conduct the work of disinfecting the ruins.

He Was Robbing the Dead.

One of the sensations of the day was caused when several bystanders saw an Italian named Rosa, a laborer, who was working at the debris, rob a body he had unearthed. The Italian was arrested, and the crowd was so infuriated that there was talk of lynching for a few moments. On the Italian's person were found a small silver watch and chain, a brass knuckle, a brass key and a pocketknife, all taken from the clothing of some poor victims. The prisoner was much frightened and begged for mercy in Italian.

Cause of the Disaster.

It has been learned there was no boiler or steam reservoir to burst in the whole range of buildings. The motive power was supplied by the New York Steam Power company, and it has been proved that even if the building could have burst prior to the collapse. Although it has been stated that the owners of the Taylor block have positively denied that the building have been for years pronounced unsafe by the city authorities, it is a notorious fact that the residents of the locality have always looked upon the house as unsafe, and the fire chief now calls a brass key and a pocketknife, all taken from the clothing of some poor victims. The prisoner was much frightened and begged for mercy in Italian.

Tons on the Upper Floors.

In the top floor rooms of 70 and 72 Park place Messrs. Liebler & Maass had gradually collected seventeen huge Hoe and lithographic presses, which at a fair estimate must have weighed at least seventy-five tons, exclusive of the shafting, wheels, belts and pulleys that ran them. In one presstroom alone it is known that the firm had eight of the largest make of Hoe presses, and that in the same room were stored on the street end large quantities of paper, and in the rear overstraining the total weight on the top floor of 70 to calculate that it had to sustain an average of seventy-five tons.

Very Faulty Construction.

It is the opinion of every expert that has made a careful examination of the bricks and standing remnants of the structure that the building shows manifest and numerous indications of very faulty construction. The official analysis of the mortar shows a too great preponderance of sand and not enough lime. The perfectly clean appearance of the standing walls proves the inferior mortar and a lack of its use in the most essential parts of the structure.

In the Darkness Stopped the Battle.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—The Herald's Valparaiso cable says: "Time after time the rebels dashed against the lines of the government troops, only to be repulsed with great bloodshed. They were not the only sufferers, however, for their artillery played with telling effect on the enemy, and their rifles were not useless in their hands.

"Attack and repulse were repeated time after time, with no decided advantage to either side. The most desperate valor was displayed by veteran and green Balmacedist and revolutionist. There was little regret on either side when darkness came down and stopped the bloody work."

Balmaceda Massacred Them.

HAMBURG, Aug. 25.—The Hamburger Correspondent has an alleged dispatch from Santiago, Chili, saying that by order of Balmaceda the cavalry massacred sixty unarmed youths of good family for holding a political meeting on the 19th inst.

SEATEN BY BALMACEDA.

A Report That the Insurgents Were Beaten Off.

LIMA, Aug. 25.—The latest telegraph advices from Valparaiso state that Balmaceda's army, at Vina del Mar, has repulsed an insurgent attack. The telegram adds that Balmaceda has ordered all the available forces in the province of Valparaiso to concentrate at the capital, and 12,000 troops attached at Coquimbo to proceed against Iquique.

GASHED IN THE THROAT.

Jim Hall and Parson Davies Fall Out at Mt. Clemens.

MT. CLEMENS, Mich., Aug. 25.—Jim Hall, the middleweight pugilist of Australia, and "Parson" Davies, of Chicago, who are stopping at the Avery house, Mt. Clemens, got into a quarrel in the barroom at 11 p. m. After a word or two Hall struck viciously at Davies with a bottle. His arm was caught by a bystander when he repeated the blow and struck "Parson" with a lemon knife which was lying on the bar, dodged Hgll's blow and lunged at him with the knife, striking Hall in the throat and cutting a terrible gash from the chin to the ear on the right side of his face, and narrowly missing the jugular vein. The two men are now under arrest.

"You've done me, Charlie, but stay by me," said Hall when struck.

The room, after the fracas, looked like a slaughter house, and Davies, it is being covered with blood. Hall will recover. He is considered to blame in the matter, Davies having acted in self defense.

A Boy's Awful Mistake.

HOUSTON, O., Aug. 25.—The mystery surrounding the tragedy in which the three children of Mr. and Mrs. Campbell Hall were found smothered to death in a chest has been cleared up. Wilbur Warnick, a playmate of the children, has confessed to the unfortunate children in the chest, and, being called to supper shortly after, neglected to let them out.

Wife Beating All Right.

CARLSTADT, N. J., Aug. 25.—Patrick Muller, of Bergen county, was arraigned before Justice Krueger, of Carlstadt, N. J., on a charge of wife beating. The jury agreed that a man had a perfect right to abuse his wife, and he did not have control of what belonged to him. Then he could obtain a divorce.

MRS. WARDEN'S REWARD

Governor Tuttle Says She Should Have the $2,500.

ONE MOTIVE FOR ALIMY'S CRIME.

It Is Believed That He Was Jealous of Professor Pettee—His Strange Midnight Visit to the Chamber He Supposed Was Occupied by Poor Christie Warden.

CONCORD, N. H., Aug. 25.—Governor Tuttle has stated that in his opinion Mrs. Warden, who gave the information to the officers that led to the arrest of Almy, was entitled to the reward of $2,500.

WHITE RIVER JUNCTION, Vt., Aug. 25.—Facts are gradually leaking out here which go to answer the vexed question as to what Frank Almy's motive was in killing Christie Warden. No little gossip has already been excited, and Miss Warden's reputation is involved by the discussion as to her connection with, or as the girl fatherly, a third person has been dragged in, and there is no knowing where it will end. The third person is Professor C. H. Pettee, dean of the State Agricultural college here, for whom Miss Warden acted for several years as secretary. Her duties frequently required her presence in the Pettee home until a late hour in the afternoon, and as she was a personal friend of Mrs. Pettee she often stopped there overnight.

Miss Thompson's Story.

Miss Amelia Thompson, who has lately been visiting Professor Pettee, who is related to her, has now made public one of the most dramatic stories which have yet been developed in this extraordinary case.

Miss Thompson says that at about 1.30 o'clock Tuesday morning, July 14, three days before the murder, she suddenly awakened from a sound sleep. "Instantly I felt, for I could not see nor hear it, a force spring from the darkness, and a pair of soft hands bearing down my shoulders firmly, and a voice in a whisper hissed in my ear, 'Be quiet and I'll not hurt you.'

"The stranger then as suddenly let go the hands on my shoulders and caught me quickly by both hands. He then continued in the same low but distinct tones:

"'Where is Christie Warden? I am determined to have her this night.' If there was $10,000 right here I wouldn't touch it. Where is Christie Warden?'

"I replied: 'I don't know where she is. She left here at 4 o'clock in the afternoon.'

"'If she were to stay here would she sleep with you?'

"I answered, 'Yes.'

"'But take it her room,' said he sternly. 'Who are you?' I asked him.

"'At this point he paused for a few moments and said, 'I am Christie Warden's lover. I can't see her at home on account of her sisters. You must not speak of this to her or any one, for if it was known that I stayed in her bedroom her it would ruin her reputation, and you wouldn't want to do that, would you?'

"This was said in a most persuasive and perhaps amiable tone of voice. 'Certainly not,' I replied.

He Knew the Room.

"'You must swear never to speak of this to any one,' said he, then suddenly releasing one of my hands and pressing something which I took to be cold steel against my breast. Under these circumstances he administered from me a solemn oath never to betray him. He then said, 'I know this was Christie's room, for I have been here before.'

"He then placed in my hand some metallic article, and said: 'This is a pistol cartridge. Keep it to remind you that if you ever speak of this I will follow you to the ends of the earth and have my revenge.'

"Then," continued Miss Thompson, "the man assumed the most polite tone and, while I could not see, I have no doubt he bowed his way toward the window, meanwhile begging my pardon for having thus disturbed me. Opening the blinds with cat-like quickness and agility he disappeared through the opening, closing the blinds noiselessly.

"Never a word passed my lips in relation to the matter until I was informed by the officers that by the written words of the captured villain I had been absolved from my oath. Then I told Mrs. Pettee."

Almy Jealous of Professor Pettee.

From all that can be learned it seems clear now that Almy was jealous of Professor Pettee, and no doubt is satisfied that he would have shot him dead had he met him with Christie the night of the murder. It is also regarded as certain that upon the occasion of Almy's visit to Professor Pettee's house, as described by Miss Thompson, a dreadful tragedy would have ensued could he have seen the professor.

There is believed to be no truth in his statement that he had been in that room before, because he asked if the door was locked, when, as a matter of fact, it had no lock. But it is thought that he had attempted to enter the room once before when Christie actually was in it. He did not succeed, but frightened her so that she had her room changed.

Almy's idea was, it is now believed, that Professor Pettee had poisoned Christie's mind against him by instigating her to ask for the antecedents of the handsome farmhand who sought her heart, the reward to give which first awakened her suspicion.

Almy Was George H. Abbott.

On being moved in bed Almy's back was seen by one of the deputy sheriffs, who discovered the name George H. Abbott.

George H. Abbott, it will be remembered, received a charge of buckshot in the back eleven years ago, when attempting to escape from his captors on Hallet's mountain, and the discovery of today has gone far to strengthen the identification of Almy as Abbott. The scar is almost universal that he is the same man. Mrs. Ephraim Wiemst, aunt of George H. Abbott, called to see the criminal and identified him as her nephew.

A $5,000 Conspiracy Suit.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—A $5,000 conspiracy suit has been brought against S. Van Rensselaer Gruger, Henry W. McVickar, Edward D. McGreal and Daniel Coffey. The plaintiff is Mrs. Mary Talbot, who charges that Mr. Gruger and his co-defendants obtained from her a release of her property by representing that it was a renewal of a lease.

A Nurse Who Stole.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Caroline M. Nelson, a nurse in Bloomingdale asylum, confessed that she is a thief, and $1,500 worth of property stolen from patients and nurses in various institutions was found in her room.

RAVAGED BY THE FLOODS.

Reading and Neighboring Pennsylvania Towns in Bad Shape.

READING, Pa., Aug. 25.—Great damage has been done in this vicinity by high water. The Schuylkill has been nine feet above low water mark, but is receding. At the Bowman evangelical camp meeting, near Mohrsville, lighting played havoc with the tents, several of them being felled dangerously near to tents. Water rushed through the grounds in streams, carrying away the camp furniture. The washouts on the Reading railroad near Warnersville were temporarily repaired, but no trains had been allowed to cross the culverts up to late hour last night. The washout where the freight train plunged into the culvert is 700 feet long very deep.

In the city at least a quarter of the streets were under water, a large number of cellars being filled, and in many houses the water reaching to the first floor. Several were locked up, for the water backed into the cellars. Quite a large number of people are stormbound in this city. The Reading Railroad company has 200 men at work at the scene of the washouts erecting temporary structures for the passage of trains. The Reading and Columbia road is still impassable.

A Cloudburst Near Carlisle.

CARLISLE, Penn., Aug. 25.—A cloudburst occurred near Dillsburg last evening, doing considerable damage to buildings and crops. It is reported that several washouts have occurred on the Dillsburg and Mechanicsburg railroad, blocking travel.

WORLD'S FAIR GOSSIP.

Bids Opened for the Government Building at Chicago.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—Bids were opened at the treasury department for the erection of the United States government building, World's Columbia exposition, at Chicago. Those who bid for the entire work were: David Evens, Philadelphia, $603,600; J. M. Wood, Chicago, $604,000; F. Gobel, Chicago, $453,586; John Griffiths, Chicago, $775,000; Northwestern Construction company, Chicago, $626,400; L. L. Bean & Son, Chicago, $743,000; Post Construction company, Chicago, $660,000.

Russian Will Heartily Co-operate.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 25.—The Columbian fair commissioners have had satisfactory interviews with the minister of foreign affairs, de Giers, and with the minister of finance, Wischnegradsky, upon the subject of Russia's participation in the World's fair of 1892. Both ministers assured the American commissioners that they would co-operate in the heartiest manner in the coming exhibition and promised that Russia upon this occasion would surpass her previous efforts in international exhibitions.

MOSBY ON HIS MUSCLE.

The Old Guerrilla Chief Whips a Conductor at San Francisco.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—Colonel John S. Mosby, the old guerrilla chieftain, across from his seat in a combination car to make room for a lady, and seeing vacant seats in the front car went out. The conductor refused to allow him to pass over to the dummy, and hot words followed. The colonel knocked the conductor down and hammered him. Then the gripman, who was large and powerful, attacked Mosby.

Three lady passengers assisted Mosby by pulling the gripman's hair. The gripman got up and struck the colonel Mosby, and so did the battered conductor, who sought the police. Mosby's knees are peeled and his thumb is scratched, but the conductor's face is badly disfigured.

H. H. Yard's Defense.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 25.—The counsel for H. H. Yard has filed an affidavit of defense to the suit brought by Receiver Yardly, of the Keystone bank, to recover on unpaid notes. In the affidavit Mr. Yard admits indebted to him in the sum of $34,800 for 480 shares of the Sea Girt Land Improvement company, and wants this sum credited to him.

A Policeman in Trouble.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 24.—John Brothers, a Camden policeman, has been held in $5,000 bail on a charge of assault and battery on Alfred Hall, a resident of Philadelphia, who is now lying in the Pennsylvania hospital in a critical condition. Brothers struck Seeds during a barroom brawl in Gunvenatur's saloon Aug. 13.

Kansas City Full of Wheat.

KANSAS CITY, Aug. 25.—The receipts of wheat at this point within the past few weeks have been very large. The receipts yesterday were 697 cars, which is the greatest number of cars of wheat ever received in one day. The railroads here have stored of over 2,800 cars of unloaded grain.

Closing Day at Chautauqua.

The Peril to Europeans in China Is Increasing.

TROUBLE FEARED AT FOO CHOW.

The City Placarded by Natives Who Urge the Extermination of All Foreigners—A Church Destroyed—Yankee Warships Will Be Badly Needed.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 25.—According to advices by the steamer City of Rio de Janeiro; just arrived from Hong Kong via Yokohama, the war spirit is still rampant in China. While very few actual outrages have occurred since the arrival of the last China steamer, the foreign population of Shanghai expect an outbreak daily.

"The Chinese are at war among themselves," said an officer of the Rio; "but that will not make the slightest difference when a uprising takes place.

They All Hate Europeans.

"They all hate Europeans, and will combine to drive them out of the country. It is a great pity that the United States has not a fleet over there to protect American interests. All other nations are well represented, while we have only the Palos."

Warships Badly Needed.

When told that the Charleston, Alert, Mohican and Monocacy had been ordered to Shanghai, he said: "I'm glad to hear it; they will be badly needed there before another month goes by."

They Demolished the Church.

In Yenping, China, on the 18th inst., a woman proclaimed that she had lost her fourteen-year-old son, and that she suspected the missionaries had stolen and concealed him in a church. She gathered a large crowd, who at the latest reports had demolished the church and a schoolhouse. During the riot one of the leaders of the mob was killed.

Trouble is feared at Foo Chow, that city having been proclaimed by the natives urging the extermination of foreigners. The native population of Foo Chow have always borne intense hatred toward the foreign inhabitants.

An Anti-Chinese Riot.

HELENA, Mont., Aug. 25.—A violent anti-Chinese crusade has been in progress in Missoula for the past few weeks. A party of fifteen masked white men raided the camp of a prosperous Chinese gardener near that city, completely demolishing the cabin with all its furniture. They beat one inmate in a shocking manner. Another was tarred and feathered, and his ears cut off.

MURDERER BOWLING CAUGHT.

He Killed One of A. J. Drexel's Employes at Long Branch in 1886.

ASBURY PARK, N. J., Aug. 25.—Judge Pitcher, of Long Branch, has arrested at Baltimore Peter Dowling, the negro who, on New Year's eve, 1886, murdered Robert Hamilton at Long Branch. Hamilton had charge of Anthony A. J. Drexel's property at Long Branch and had been in his employ for twenty-eight years. On New Year's eve he visited a low dive called "Little Chinville." He had a great deal while there and exhibited a large roll of bills and a handsomely engraved gold watch given him by Mr. Drexel. Early the next morning the body was found in a back street, there being several ugly wounds on the head. Several of the inmates of the dive confessed that Dowling had committed the crime.

Dowling escaped and nothing has been heard of him until recently, when Judge Pitcher received information that Dowling was on a coasting steamer which would shortly arrive at Baltimore. He hurried there with requisition papers and secured the man. At the time of the murder Mr. Drexel offered $1,000 reward, to which Long Branch citizens added $500.

The Gay State People's Party.

BOSTON, Aug. 25.—The state central committee of the People's party effected a thorough state organization. George F. Washburn, of Boston, was elected permanent chairman and F. Gerry Brown permanent secretary. It was voted to put a state ticket in the field this fall. The platform favors government ownership of all means of communication; demands that the importation, manufacture and sale of all spirituous liquors be conducted by the government or state; declares in favor of the eight hour day and demands restrictive immigration.

With Her Twenty-four Children.

NEW YORK, Aug. 25.—Rebecca Rubenstein has arrived at the barge office from Odessa, bringing with her twenty-four children. Their ages range from one to twenty-five years. The Rubensteins are in good circumstances and will settle in this city. The father of this interesting family also accompanied the children to this country. Mrs. Rubenstein is forty-five years old and is still plump and pretty. She is about to give birth to the twenty-fifth child.

Bismarck Recommended Von Caprivi.

BERLIN, Aug. 25.—A dispatch from Munich says that Prince Bismarck has been the object of continued ovations during his stay in Kissingen. In a recent interview Bismarck corroborated to some extent the report that the first Emperor William thought of putting Caprivi in Bismarck's place should the latter resign with the Chancellorship, and Bismarck says that he himself recommended Caprivi for high office, such as chief of staff or war minister.

Arbell Sues for Libel.

SARATOGA, Aug. 25.—Papers have been served on W. McElwain, publisher of The Saratogian, in an action brought by W. J. Arbell for alleged libel. Mr. Arbell claims $10,000 damages. The Saratogian in an editorial intimated that the president's visit had been used to commercial advantage by interested parties and mentioned Arbell's name in the same article therefore the suit.

Geologists at Washington.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 25.—The Geologists' Society of America has assembled at the Columbian university. There are about fifty prominent geologists present. Vice President G. K. Gilbert made the address of welcome, referring in a feeling manner to the death of Professor Winthrell, the president of the society. He extended a warm greeting to the foreign representatives given.

GARLISLE, Pa., Aug. 25.—Monday was the opening day of the eighteenth annual encampment of the Pomona Grange at Williams's grove. The attendance of people from all parts of the country was large. The address of welcome was delivered by Hon. Hon. Leonard Rhone, worthy master of this state. Every department is complete. Distinguished men will make addresses during the week.

Postmaster General Raikes Dead.

LONDON, Aug. 25.—The sudden death of Postmaster General Raikes Aug. 24 has taken the public by surprise, as no one supposed that he was in any extreme danger of a fatal result. He is extolled as the founder of the universal parcel post system. His grandfather was the celebrated Robert Raikes, who founded the system of Sunday schools in 1781-4.

The President Leaves Saratoga.

SARATOGA, Aug. 25.—The president and Secretary Proctor left for Vermont at 9 a. m. today. They will take Steward Webb's yacht at Plattsburg and sail to Burlington. While here the president was much interested in inspecting the Pompeiian House, which is an exact reproduction of a nobleman's house buried by an eruption of Vesuvius 2,000 years ago.

IN THE LAST DITCH.

CONFEDERATE DEFENSE OF FORT GREGG, APRIL, 1865.

A Motley Garrison of a Couple of Hundred Men, with Two Cannon, Held Off Five Thousand Assailants for Two Hours.

Copyright, 1891, by American Press Association. Book rights reserved.]

GRANT never closed the lines completely around the Confederates at Petersburg, but came very near doing so on the morning of April 2, 1865, the last day of the siege, about the hour when Lee telegraphed to Jefferson Davis at Richmond, "My lines are broken in three places," and warned his government that evacuation must follow speedily. The gap which had been left open for many months, and which he had kept open by the most desperate fighting, was about to be closed in consequence of those three breaks in his lines, caused by the vigorous assaults of three of Grant's corps under Gens. Parke, Wright and Ord.

These assaults began at daylight April 2, with the determination of the Union side of finishing the fight then and there. The Confederates, driven from their outer works after stubborn efforts to hold on, fell back sullenly toward the city, a space but little over a mile in width along the Appomattox river, west of the city. Any object that would afford shelter from the Union missiles was made to serve as a temporary breastwork for Lee's retiring infantry, and every tree and stump and log and ditch cost a heavy toll in dead boys in blue before it could be passed. The Confederate army had been cut in two, one body being thrown off from Petersburg, the other left hanging to the fortifications there, and it was this hanging thread that was curling itself up reluctantly, but of imperative necessity, and closing the gap that, once barred, would shut Lee in while Keeping Grant out. But if Grant could be kept out until re-enforcements could reach Lee from across the James the latter could hold on till nightfall and escape by the river in the darkness.

After the breaks in Lee's lines before mentioned the North Carolina brigade of Gen. J. H. Lane was making its way by the curling up process from the broken front line toward the main Confederate line at the gap, disputing every inch of ground. About 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning the general and his adjutant, Capt. Hale, reached an empty bastion known as Fort Gregg, or Battery Gregg, which was an outlying work that an extension of the Confederate line months before had rendered useless. It was a quarter of a mile or more in advance of the main Confederate trenches, toward which the combatants were rading, the Confederates being of course on the inside. Lane had orders to hold on as long as possible and gain time for the beaten troops to rally on the main line, and for the expected re-enforcements to cross the river and occupy them.

As his men had been straying out at wide intervals when attacked and dispersed by the Union columns at daylight, only fragments could be rallied together at any given spot, and he placed in Fort Gregg portions of the Thirty-third and Thirty-seventh North Carolina infantry, under four lieutenants—F. H. Snow, A. B. Howard and F. S. Craige, of the Thirty-third, and D. M. Higler, of the Thirty-seventh. He also got up two 9-pounder guns with some artillerists of Chew's Maryland battery and of the famous Washington artillery battalion. Lieut. McElroy, of the Washingtonians, handled the cannoneers, about 25 in number. About the same time 20 men of Thomas' Confederate brigade and 15 of Harris' Mississippians joined the garrison, swelling it, according to the best accounts, to 214. Lieut. Snow commanded Lane's men and J. H. Duncan led the detachment from Harris' brigade. Gen. Harris, with the bulk of his brigade, occupied Fort Whitworth, a companion to Gregg. Before leaving Fort Gregg to its fate Gen. Lane sent in twenty-five rounds of artillery ammunition and ordered Snow to hold it to the last. At that time the Union guns were firing upon the Boydton plank road, which was a dirt earthwork with low parapet, over the top of which its own cannon were discharged. At 10 o'clock, by a mistaken order probably, the cannon of Fort Whitworth were sent to the rear, and as this act was witnessed by the Union troops in front, the charge was sounded to attack the isolated batteries, Whitworth and Gregg. The assailants numbered 5,000 and were led by Gen. John Gibbon. Gregg stood first in the way and felt the brunt of the onslaught.

The cannoneers in Gregg stood to their guns gallantly. Three men were shot dead, one after another, in the attempt to discharge a single piece. When the assailants reached within forty yards the infantry garrison gave them a staggering volley, causing them to waver and then give way. A second charge followed, and the assailants reached within thirty yards. The Confederates held their fire until the proper moment, and then, with a wild yell, let go, sending down a man for every musket. The Union men stood for a moment and then broke and scattered. A third, a fourth and a fifth charge followed, each with much the same result as the first two.

ALL READY!

With the fifth charge on the front a line of assailants swung around to the rear of the fort and attempted to gain an entrance. On the front the attack was carried as far as the moat. Over an hour had passed since the first assault and the artillery in Gregg used all its ammunition and had lost heavily. The surviving gunners took up small arms and joined the infantry in beating off the assailants. The work was virtually surrounded. Some of Gibbon's men crossed the moat and clambered up the slopping walls, only to be received on the bayonets of the defenders.

Such desperate resistance had not been looked for on the part of the Union officers, but when the character of the struggle became clear, renewed orders were passed along the line that the position must be carried at all hazards. Again a charge was made on all sides. The plucky defenders used the butts of their muskets and their bayonets, when there was not time to load, and many of them, sparing their ammunition or being short of it, caught up stones and brickbats and hurled them from the parapet upon the daring fellows who floundered in the moat or were climbing up hook or crook up the walls. In some cases the backs and shoulders of the Union men were used as scaling ladders by their agile comrades.

At 12 o'clock the struggle was at its height and was carried on at arm's length, but so far on the exterior crests of the walls only. About that time some of Gibbon's men made a discovery that showed the one weak spot in the forlorn citadel. It seems that when the line at that point was originally built, Forts Gregg and Whitworth were intended to be connected by a trench and breastwork sheltered by a palisade. The work had been begun at the Gregg end and about thirty feet of trench had been made, the dirt thrown out forming an embankment as high as the walls of Fort Gregg and connecting with them. In attempting to surround the fort the assailants mounted this strip of embankment and very soon found it a means of getting upon the coveted parapet without first descending into the deep moat beneath it.

Rushing upon this point they overwhelmed the handful who manned that corner of the work. Many of the determined garrison were already down, but the survivors only redoubled their vigor and fought with any weapons available. At length the parapet was lined along the top with bluecoats busily occupied in shooting down on the men in gray who stood on the low platforms inside. So desperately did the garrison defend their ground that the parapet was covered with Union dead. At one time six Union flags were floating on the walls, while the Confederates fought around their own stars and bars in the interior of the work.

But there had to be an end to it. Gibbon's men swarmed so thickly that the Confederates couldn't turn from one to another of them quickly enough to do their deadly work, and were at last overpowered.

SAVING THE BATTLE FLAG.

Yet, though forced to abandon their bastions at the base of the parapet, they fell back fighting, and in scattered groups, on the open parade of the fort, struggling against fate. At the last moment, when the Union men in numbers were leaping down inside from all directions and making prisoners of their opponents by sheer physical strength, one of Lane's North Carolinians, a boy named Atkinson, seized the colors after both of the last of his comrades had fought so fiercely, dashed past the swarm of assailants on the parapet, and, with the flag floating defiantly, ran at the top of his speed back to the Confederate main line, where he was received with wild cheers. Scores of bullets had been aimed at him as he flew across the open plain, 800 yards, within range of hundreds of Union muskets.

There was no formal surrender. Gibbon's men crowded in on all sides and the Confederates resisted to the last. The fighting did not end when the assailants got inside, for, despite the efforts of their officers, some of the enraged men exacted the victor's privilege of vengeance upon the unfortunates who had made such a hopeless yet bloody defense.

The Confederate loss is numbered 57; the unwounded prisoners were only 30. The most of the wounded prisoners were disabled by the explosion of hand grenades terribly, being the most exposed on the top of the wall. Nearly all of them had died at their guns. The men of Chew's Maryland battery were veterans, and to their long term of service having expired some days previously. Unlike the soldiers of the states in rebellion, the Marylanders were not held to the extreme service for the whole period of the war.

The loss on Gibbon's column in front of Fort Gregg is placed at 500 to 600 in killed and wounded. As soon as the firing left the captors turned the two cannon upon the neighboring Fort Whitworth, and the garrison of that work marched out and surrendered. The gap in the lines along the Appomattox was now filled by Grant's troops, but some hours had been consumed in rearranging his forces, and meanwhile, thanks to the delay in the Union march caused by the holding out of Fort Gregg, Lee had been able to man his interior line in such strength as to hold it the remainder of the day. His circle of defense around Petersburg was still complete and no further impression was made upon it by Union assaults.

The exploit at Fort Gregg, though by no means a marvel, was all the more unique because of the many detachments under separate commanders that took part in the defense. No single officer exercised supreme command. The Mississippian, Lieut. Duncan, held the highest rank of any, but seems to have assumed authority over his few personal followers only. He was severely wounded in the fight. The artillerymen belonged to two different companies, one from Maryland and one from Louisiana, yet they acted in harmony under a Louisiana officer.

Lane's North Carolina brigade had the most men in the fort of any single organization and the greatest number of officers. The detachment from Thomas' Georgia brigade had no commissioned officer present. Usually in such a crisis there is a fatal division of opinion; some element holds aloof from the fight and acts independently, to the peril of order and success. Any one of these groups might have spoiled the whole game by running up a white flag for the comfort of a home, charge. On the contrary, all were animated with a determined, daring purpose to "hold the fort" or die in the last ditch.

WOMEN AND MARRIAGE.

WHAT WOMAN LACKS TO MAKE HER SOCIALLY INDEPENDENT.

Only When They Have Achieved a Practical Equality with Men in Wage Earning, by Brain or Otherwise, Will the Subject Find a Solution.

A subtle recognition of the fact that woman is what man might be if spiritually refined, has doubtless been the inspiration of the noble praise of her which has sung throughout the ages known as literature. But, despite these pretty generalities the rasping specialties of her life have wrought in the woman of this century a great discontent, which has sought expression in many wild schemes for her betterment. Conservative men stand aghast at some of the plans proposed, and Christendom trembles at the bold promulgation of the thought that marriage may not be in harmony with advanced and advancing civilization. I believe in the Bible as a book of divine revelation; I believe in marriage; I believe in woman's everlasting desire "to cleave to one man;" but I do not consider these orthodox beliefs out of harmony with an intense hope for the evolution of a new and better woman. When women shall have become earnest and intelligent, then will the millenium be here; likewise, when men are earnest and intelligent; but this can never be realized until they are born of earnest and intelligent mothers, there is no reason to expect.

WOMAN'S REAL MISSION.

Let us have women fit to be mothers then we shall have noble men and women by this means, and by no other, will humanity grow nobler. The dignity of womanhood has been in all ages misunderstood. While men have been lavish in the bestowal of praise, criticism and flattery and have constantly exalted the function of motherhood, they have thereby done but little to make women better.

The real mission of woman today is the education of her own sex, to them for motherhood. When woman is fit to be a mother, she will know who is fit to be the father of her children; and it will not be the man of low grades, of profligate life, of dishonest heart.

Marriage and motherhood have the most intimate relation, and yet what training is given a girl that is calculated to enlighten her as to her responsibilities? Our customs, thoughts, traditions are such that if she speak seriously of that phase of the question before marriage she is ridiculed by her friends, and very good people think her immodest, perhaps indecent.

Are there terms strong enough in which to characterize a state of common opinion that relegates to low impulses the creation of a life—the evolution of a mortal soul? Earnest men and women in these conditions again and again, and yet but little is done intelligently to advance more enlightened and sensible methods.

EQUALITY OF WOMEN WITH MEN.

I am convinced that only when women have achieved a practical equality with men in wage earning, by brain or otherwise, will this subject find a solution. Disguise it as we may, and as we do systematically in polite society, child bearing has ever been the price woman has been willing to pay for the comfort of a home, for the protection and support given her by man. The paternal instinct is always stronger than the maternal. Men make sacrifices and assume burdens for the sake of posterity, vastly greater than do women.

Whatever may be the real history of the origin of man, the real purpose in his creation, nature and revelation alike point to the evolution of an increasingly higher type in which the spiritual dominates the lower nature. Enthusiastic reformers are fond of saying that this or that great question will be settled when women are allowed to vote. Doubtless all good measures will be carried sooner in time, but it will not be because women vote, but because educated women will direct their thoughts to vital themes, and having reached effective unison, will seek practical means to eliminate sin and sorrow from the controlling place they now fill in our human economy.

Suffrage is a very considerable force in this process. Grant women the right to acquire an education, the right to accumulate property, it follows logically that she must be granted the right to use that education to protect that property. Can she use her education if she cannot participate in the making of laws which may annul her intelligent efforts by taking from her the control of the child she is training?

WHEN WOMEN ARE INDEPENDENT.

She loses control of her child when she cannot participate in the making of laws that sanction institutions calculated to help or hinder what she would make of that child's character. In the property her own if she cannot participate in making laws which tax it for the support of criminal courts and reformatories, for public schools in which she pursues rather than for libraries and gymnasiums?

If any woman, from her own point of view, does not see conditions congenial to the nature of her child then he has her free to renounce marriage—renunciation is the noblest of virtues; but she cannot renounce marriage unless she can earn her own living. When she can earn an equal price for equal work, when she can take her abilities into any field and find competition free, then she is a free and independent being; then she does not have to marry for financial support; then she finds life so full of grand interests that she does not need to marry in order to find work for her hands and love for her heart.

When women are financially and socially independent, then will love be holier, then will it always be the bond of happy marriage. Will any one in a sane moment accept the nonsense that is talked and written about the sanctity of motherhood and dignity of wifehood while the reality of unloved wives and doomed children is heartbreaking? The grand and full destiny of the wife and mother can be realized only when woman becomes the very flower of civilization as she is of creation, when she shall have attained the ability to understand and claim her rights and privileges—her right to the best, the purest that manhood can offer, her privilege of electing, not blindly but intelligently, to become a wife and mother.—Virginia C. Meredith in Kate Field's Washington.

Fortunes in Phosphates.

The history of the development of the phosphate industry by Americans reads like a romance more than the truthful record of a mining pursuit. In Florida alone, where an experimental venture was made only a short time ago, the industry is already established on such a basis as to involve millions of capital and employ thousands of men, adding thousands of dollars daily to the country's wealth and challenging comparison in its prospective magnitude with any of the great industries of the world.—New York Telegram.

Novel and Attractive Cushions.

Among the conveniences which traveling often find it very agreeable to have with them is a small cushion. Our cut shows a very handy form of traveling cushion. As will be seen, it is of melon shape, is composed of six sections in either plush, silk, cashmere or satteen, with soft percale. When the various seams are joined together the inside is filled with down, the openings are then strongly fastened and a rosette made with an inch band of silk pinked out on each side, and gathered small fashion over a round of taffetas. The loop intended both for carrying or holding the pillow to prevent it slipping is 16 inches long and 3 inches wide. For this melon 36 inches of material 22 inches wide are required.

An extremely pretty house cushion is called the "Spanish cushion." It is of cream colored satin Merveilleux, oblong in shape, and surrounded with a gathered flounce. The ornamentation consists of an applique spray of corn flowers in chenille work, and a Louis XVI ribbon describing vandykes and large bows at each end. Butterfly bows on striped blue ribbon fall at the corners over the gathered flounce.

What Is a Flirt?

Somebody wrote and asked me to define a flirt. It seems unnecessary when the dictionary meaning is worded in such terse Saxon terms. There has been some degree of fascination associated about the word by a perversion of its meaning, but it is quite time to apply it only in its true sense, and the appellation is far from being a complimentary one.

Do you want to act a lie? Then flirt.

Do you care to lose the modest charm of manner which is woman's best heritage and man's too infrequently found attributes? Then play at love.

Do you want your future life embittered by memories which will stab you when your heart is beating with happiness? Then cheat some one into giving you true regard for falseness.

If you would be womanly, my woman reader, or manly, my unknown questioner, give your esteem to all who deserve it, your friendship to those who are your true friends, and your heart's warm, earnest love to one man or to one woman, and let it be unsullied by the flirtations which many count in triumph on the fingers of both their hands.—Turquoise Globe.

WANT BETTER ROADS.

THE MOVEMENT FOR IMPROVING THE COUNTRY SYSTEM.

The Middlesex Freeholders Will Consider the Matter Soon.

At the last meeting of the Board of Freeholders a petition was presented from the residents of Piscataway township, asking that Park avenue be macadamized and offering to pay part of the expense. The Board laid over the matter until the next meeting, when the matter is to be fully discussed, and meantime it is understood that there are several other petitions that will reach the Board if the members seem disposed to favorable action on the road question. Freeholder Kelly favors a road system as extensive as that which Union county has, and he wants the matter to receive thorough attention from the Freeholders.

He suggested at the last meeting that each member make an investigation of the matter in his own township, and that at some subsequent meeting they make reports showing what roads might be macadamized in their districts to best advantage. Thus the Board could get an estimate of the cost of such a system, and the matter could be considered more intelligently.

A number of the members of the Board say that they are in favor of a good road system if it is found that the Board will be justified in incurring the expense of it to any extent. In Union county, through the efforts of Mr. Ripley and others, such a system was laid out, and roads have been put down which have cost the county over $100,000 and which have no equal in any territory of equal size in the United States, unless in sections of Massachusetts. The Elizabeth taxpayers, of course, had to pay a large portion of the tax for the money to lay their roads, but the city was benefited because the roads run into Elizabeth. If the Middlesex system be made one which will realize from the city towards the principal towns and villages it would no doubt receive hearty support both here and elsewhere, but not any attempts to make extensive improvements in Piscataway township, for instance. Union county and Plainfield more than it would Middlesex and New Brunswick. The Elizabeth Journal has the following editorial comment on the matter, with regard to the need of action by the Middlesex Freeholders on a proposed system here:

"If this be done it will compare with the Union county roads and greatly enhance a system that now has no equal in these United States. With fine roads and drives connected together in one grand system extending through Essex, Morris, Union and Middlesex counties, the demand for suburban residences by those who keep horses and carriages will be greatly increased, and wealth will roll into these counties in more senses than one. It is sincerely hoped that Middlesex will adopt a system of macadamized roads, and connect not only with Dunellen but with the roads running to Rahway, if that is practicable. If it appreciates properly in Middlesex as the county roads have done in Union, it will be the best investment that county ever made."—New Brunswick Home News.

Music Hall Improvements.

The new managers of Music Hall say: "The contracts for the promised improvements in Stillman Music Hall were awarded last week, and work on them was commenced Monday. There will be eight boxes put in, four on each side of the stage, two lower and two upper. This will cut off some of the seats in the parquet and dress circle, but the added comfort of the seats in the boxes will more than compensate for this. The open space back of the seats in the balcony will be shut off by pretty designed fret-work, and the corners in the rear of the gallery will be walled in. In the opinion of experts this will do away with the annoying echo which has been so noticeable heretofore. The boxes, dress circle and balcony rails, and the windows will be handsomely upholstered, thus deadening all harsh sounds and making the auditorium comfortable to the body and pleasant to the eye. Several sets of stage furniture and other properties will also be added. The new improvements will cost $2,000, and will be completed in time for the opening of the new house on Tuesday, September 8, when that bright comedy, "All the Comforts of Home," will be given by an excellent company. The new management having by persistent effort booked some exceptionally strong companies, are justified in promising that the entertainments the coming season will surpass anything heretofore seen in Music Hall."

Dunellen's New Electric Street Lighting.

The Dunellen Electric Light Company began lighting the streets of Dunellen last evening regularly. The lights are pronounced a great success. The Thomson-Houston system is used, and it is operated by water-power, at Sebring's mills, which is calculated at about forty horse power.

A Runaway Accident.

A horse belonging to a farmer named Holmes, who hails from the vicinity of Centerville, became frightened on Somerset street this morning and ran away. Mr. Holmes was thrown out and painfully bruised about the body. The frightened animal was caught further down the street.

—The State Convention of Christian Endeavor Societies will meet in the First Presbyterian church, Newark, Oct. 23, 24, and 25. One thousand or more delegates are expected to attend.

—There is no truth in the rumor that City Council is to hold a meeting tomorrow evening.

—The Holy Cross Sunday-school building is being enlarged. The work began yesterday morning.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting to-morrow evening at eight o'clock.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—The highest point in the State is High Point, in the Kittanning Mountain, Sussex county. It is 1804 feet above sea level.

—New Brunswick's tax collector says that this year every man must pay his poll tax of $1, or he will seize his clothes.

—The Acmes of New York and the Westfield Athletic Club's team are playing a game of ball this afternoon on the latter club's grounds.

—The Plainfield Water Supply Company have men at work connecting their system with a number of houses and business places throughout the city.

—The river carnival at Bound Brook, which was to have taken place last night, was postponed until to-night on account of high water in the Raritan river.

—A horse attached to a huckster's wagon became frightened on Central avenue this morning and started to run away. The animal was caught before it proceeded far. No damage resulted.

—Under a decision in Hudson county, which has been passed upon by other courts heretofore, it is settled that if a man runs a dozen bars under one inclosure he must take out a separate license for each one. The law allows only one bar.

—The Crescents will go to Westfield next Saturday and play a game of ball with the Westfield team. The Crescents have won one game from the Westfields, and it is thought that a large crowd of Plainfielders will go to that village next Saturday to witness the contest.

—There are indications of the prevalence of typhoid in a larger degree than usual the coming Fall. Too great care cannot be exercised in guarding against this dread disease. Cleanliness, pure water, and perfect drainage are the preventives.—Trenton State Gazette.

—Rev. E. H. Stewart, pastor of the Bound Brook Church at Portland, Pa., will speak in Reform Hall, on Thursday evening, 27th. Subject: "Duty, the Life of Action." The many friends of Mr. Stewart, who remember his thrilling accounts of the crusade in Kansas City, where he lived for a number of years, and where he was closely identified with the temperance movement, will be glad to hear him speak once more. All are welcome.

—Plainfield is taking an eminently righteous step in suppressing concert saloons. The concert and dance element is simply adding gross immorality to the inherently objectionable features of the saloon. The very fact that they at once became popular proves how bad they are, and the more effectively they are wiped out of existence the better it will be for the morality and honesty and legitimate business of Plainfield.—Elizabeth Journal.

—Vice Chancellor Green has refused to grant a divorce to Charlotte L. Chipchase of Jersey City. In the syllabus of his decision he says: "Desertion to constitute a bar cannot be considered as obstinate on the part of one when the separation is acquiesced in and entirely satisfactory to the other, who neither entertains or manifests any desire that the separation or the causes which brought it about should cease. A wife who is presenting an action against her husband for divorce for alleged adultery, cannot maintain that this separation during the pendancy of such suit is obstinate on the part of the husband.

—It is to be hoped that Plainfield's water when it comes will so quench public thirst as to reduce below profit the receipts of the numerous concert saloons which now thrive there. It is a singular freak of public virtue that the sale of places tolerated only under special license and strictly regulated in New York are freely permitted without question in so austerely moral a town as Plainfield. A few days ago the story was printed of how a performer on one of these Plainfield saloons had jumped from the stage and kicked the eye out of a gentleman who had made a remark considered derogatory to one of the ladies on the stage. The police, it was added, made no arrest because they thought the gentleman only got what he deserved. Imagine that on the Bowery.—N. Y. Ex.

Amateur Base Ball.

A nine composed of boys under sixteen years of age, living on Front street, defeated a nine chosen from Second street in a hotly contested game on the Sixth street field yesterday afternoon.

The score by innings:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Front street	0	2	7	1	5	3	2	3	—	23
Second street	3	2	5	0	1	1	1	2	—	16

The batteries were as follows:

For Front street's, R. E. Sebring, pitcher; J. W. Voehl, catcher. For Second street, C. Sutphen, catcher and M. Sutphen pitcher. The feature of the game was the batting of W. Kreitling of Front street.

MORE POWER WANTED.

THE STATE TAX COMMISSIONERS ARE GOING THE ROUNDS.

They Find Many Inequalities in the Rates of Taxation.—This is Particularly the Case at Seaside Resorts.—Some Property Not Assessed at All.—Reforms Are Needed.

Since June 11th the State Tax Commissioners appointed by Gov. Abbett last Winter have held meetings in Salem, Trenton, Bridgeton, Cape May, Atlantic City, Toms River, Freehold and Elizabeth. They sat three days in Trenton and one day in each of the other places. On Sept. 1st they will meet in Jersey City, and on Sept. 2d they will go to Hoboken. Sept. 3d will find them in Newark, Sept. 4th in Paterson, Sept. 15th in Camden, and Sept. 16th in New Brunswick.

After these meetings they will sit, probably, in Trenton to listen to appeals from assessments for 1891. They have jurisdiction, also, over the assessments of 1890, but they have taken up but one case of that year—the appeal of Matthiessen & Wiechers of Jersey City.

Most of the work thus far performed was done for the purpose of ascertaining inequalities in taxation and the defects in local systems, so that some consistent recommendations may be made to the next Legislature. They have thus far learned that a great deal of property has not been taxed, and that there is no uniformity of methods among the local assessors. They found that the oyster industries in Maurice River Cove, Cumberland County, worth at least $2,500,000 had not been assessed at all, and the assessors had refused to levy any tax upon them.

In Cape May County most of the Shipping owned by residents of the seaside towns had not been taxed. Similar exemptions had been granted in Cape May, Atlantic, Ocean and Monmouth Counties to the owners of seaside property such as hotels and boarding houses. The big Monmouth House at Spring Lake, worth $200,000 to $500,000, was assessed at $35,000 last year. The Coleman House at Asbury Park was assessed at $35,000, while the West End Hotel at Long Branch was assessed at $450,000.

The Commissioners found many instances similar to these. One assessor in a county reported that he guessed at ownership and value of buildings, and the assessor in the adjoining township said he assessed at two-third value.

Commissioner Black says that the assessors throughout the State are almost all of the opinion that the exemptions granted to property of ministers and soldiers open the door for a grand fraud upon the State. Mr. Black says also that the Commission should be given more power. It can now only equalize by reducing assessments. It should have the power to increase by increasing as well, and that right it will ask the next Legislature to grant.

PERSONAL.

Mr. William Cadmus of North Plainfield, while engaged hunting at Mt. Tabor, was accidently shot in the arm last Wednesday. The cause of the accident was the premature discharge of the rifle he carried at the time.

City Court.

Charles Thompson was a prisoner in the City Court this morning charged with drunkenness and disorderly conduct. He pleaded guilty to the charge and was given the choice of paying a fine of eight dollars or spending ten days in county jail. He chose the latter.

HOW TO WATER PLANTS.

Some Useful Hints on the Subject From a Washington Gardener.

"People frequently ask, 'How often should I water my plants?'" said Chief Gardener Saunders of the Department of Agriculture the other day. "To begin with never apply water to a plant until it requires it, that is, until it is dry, and then apply a sufficient quantity to soak it.

"Novices in plant culture usually make the mistake of merely sprinkling the surface of the soil, perhaps daily, without any time applying enough water to saturate the mass. Plants cannot flourish under such conditions. The surface will appear wet, while the main body of the soil is hard and dry. One drawback to properly watering plants in parlor and window gardening arises from the inconvenience attending the use of water in sufficient quantities; another evil is the dryness of the air.

Both of these obstacles to success can be greatly modified by the use of a table properly fitted for the reception of the flower pots or small vases in which the plants are kept. This table may be of any required size, a surface of two or three feet would be suitable for most windows; it should be made tight and neatly fitted. A ledge is made by fastening a strip three inches wide around the edge; then fill with two inches of clean, white sand, upon which the plants are placed. Lining the table with zinc would completely guard against drip.

The table should be fitted with rollers to facilitate the operation of watering and cleaning the plants. With a table of this kind the plants can be watered freely, and occasionally sprinkled, without injury to surrounding objects. The sand should be kept constantly wet, so that moisture will be evaporated from it and thus overcome, in some degree, one of the chief obstacles to the successful culture of plants in dwelling rooms—a dry atmosphere.

SOME GENERAL RULES.

"There are a few general rules with regard to watering plants which may be noted. Water should be preferably applied during the early part of the day, especially so in the Winter season. Plants in pots well supplied with roots will require much more water than those which are newly potted or have a quantity of soil with a few roots. Plants with narrow or small foliage will not use so much water as those with large spreading leaves. Plants in the shade will not need as much water as those in the sun. Frequency rather than quantity is applied it should be done copiously.

"In the pot culture of plants, where the amount of soil is limited, the use of liquid manure is of vast service when judiciously applied, but much harm may occur to plants by its misuse. Persons consider it necessary to resort to the use of guano and other solutions on sickly plants, and are surprised to find that the application only hastens the dissolution of the patient.

"It is only healthy and well-rooted plants that are to be benefitted by manures, and such as are supplied with hungry roots but growing slowly (for want of nutriment. Such plants as have been for years in a pot or tub, as we frequently find orange and lemon trees, camelias, oleanders, etc., will be greatly stimulated by the application of manurial liquids during their period of growth.

"For plants of all kinds that have their pots filled with roots it will be serviceable, and to such as fuchsias, pelargoniums, cineraries, etc., while in flower they will bloom longer and in greater perfection. But it should be kept in mind that stimulants should not be supplied while flower buds are forming, as it might induce an increased wood growth at the expense of the flowering principle."

A Novel Fishing-Line.

John Thorne, a Lambertville barber, has just completed a novel fishing-line composed entirely of hair cut by Thorne from the heads of his lady customers. Whenever occasion offered Thorne cut the hair close to the customers' heads and carefully laid this away and worked it up at his convenience. He has been engaged upon the task for more than five years. Each section of the line is about fifteen inches long and contains 1000 hairs. There are twenty-five sections completed, and Thorne anticipates fishing with the line within a few days.

While the line is composed of different colors of hair the sections are so nicely blended together that a strangely variegated strand is found. The line is surprisingly strong, and is calculated to hold any bass that takes hold of the hook attached to it.—Warrenville Republican.

HERBERT MAPES' BODY FOUND.

Eight Miles From the Spot Where He Went Down.

FIRE ISLAND, Aug. 26, (Special) — The body of the famous college athlete Herbert Mapes, whose sad death by drowning occurred Sunday off this place, has been recovered at Water Island, eight miles distant.

A Principal Chosen.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Aug. 26th (Special.)—Mr. W. C. Armstrong of Roselle has been selected as principal of the High school here. He will be elected at a meeting of the Board of education to be held this evening.

Sixty-One Bodies Recovered.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26th. (Special.)—Sixty-one bodies have been recovered from the ruins of the Park place fire at this writing. Thirty-nine have been identified.

General Crop Conditions.

The observers and crop correspondents of New Jersey Weather Service report for the week ending Friday, August 21st, 1891, that the temperature, sunshine and rainfall have been very near the average, and that these conditions have been most favorable to the growing crops, especially to corn, young turnips and also to the growth and ripening of tomatoes, melons and other vine truck. The indications now are that the corn will be at least up to, if not above, the average yield. Potatoes in some sections are slightly affected by rot, but only in low fields; the yield while not in excess of the average, is fair, and the quality good. The harvesting of buckwheat in the northern districts has commenced and the yield promises to be an excellent one. Grapes in Atlantic county are reported as having crossed the danger line, and damage from rot is no longer feared. The fruit is reported to be in excellent condition and coloring rapidly.

PLAINFIELD, UNION CO.

The weather conditions, in all phases, for the past week, were all that could be desired by the farmers and fruit growers. Crops of all kinds are thriving. The general rains of the week were beneficial to buckwheat, turnips and pastures. Fruit very abundant and good quality, but prices are low, owing to the great supply. R. J. SHAW.

PISCATAWAY TOWNSHIP, MIDDLESEX CO.

The favorable weather conditions of the week have improved all crops, especially corn and turnips. The latter have made a fine growth. Potatoes are yielding fairly and the late varieties are still growing. Pasture improving.

J. M. DECLOS.

State Notes.

The Pennsylvania Railroad officials are pushing the work on the new passenger waiting-room and ferry-house, Jersey City.

A vast amount of "soap" in boxes is shipped to Asbury Park and Ocean Grove. It is usually kept in icechests and cellars after unlocking.—

William Brunner, the West Jersey Railroad brakeman who was thrown from a train in Camden Sunday night, died from his injuries yesterday.

The First Presbyterian congregation, of Millville worshiped in their old church for the last time Sunday. It is being torn down to make room for a handsome stone building.

Gov. Abbett and his son Leon Abbett, Jr., were at the Police Commissioners' Elitz yesterday morning in Hoboken. Gov. Abbett and son expect to open a law office in Hoboken. They were looking for an office.

A runaway horse at Elizabeth yesterday dashed up the carriage of William Williamson. Mrs. Williamson and their five-year-old daughter were badly injured, the latter fatally. Mr. Williamson escaped with a few bruises.

A large number of malarial fever cases are reported in Bayonne as the result of the use of brackish water. A large number of people have given up using the water even for washing purposes, and the wells along the Newark meadows are patronized by throngs every evening.

The wife and twelve-year-old daughter of Dr. E. P. Johnson of New Brunswick, left the Asbury Park Hotel on August 8, and have not been seen since. Mr. Johnson has not lived happily with her husband, and had told her friends that she had applied for a divorce. Some of her friends have been making a fruitless search for her.

Knights by the Sea.

The field day of the Knights Templar of the State at Atlantic City on Thursday of this week will be a notable event. Eleven commanderies will be in line. Each will have a band of music. The field manœuvres will be very pretty.

Trinity Commandery of this city will participate.

Fractured His Skull.

A man named Titus of Washingtonville was taked to the Muhlenberg Hospital at about one o'clock to-day suffering from a fracture of the skull. He fell from a wagon this morning striking on his head. The matron of the hospital, Miss Waldron, reports that his condition is serious.

Keep the Pioneer Relics.

Prehistoric man is placed by modern science entirely through the relics of his mode of living that have been found undisturbed in caves and under water. Seen since the historic time real history is gathered from the implements, textile fabrics, domestic utensils and relics that have been preserved. It throws little light on an ancient people to know that here two tribes fought and one whipped the other, with so many warriors slain on both sides.

What constitutes true history is the knowledge of society, manners, customs and the footsteps of a people. In deciding as to their advancement in civilization these things are even more important than a knowledge of the government. Greatly to be regretted, therefore, it is that Americans pay little heed to preserving relics of the pioneer settlers of this country. They presented a civilization and a society unique in the world's history. Their lives were so different from those of the present day as almost to be those of another race.

The agriculture of America has changed so much that the implements our grandfathers used would scarcely be recognized by the farmer who tills his wide fields with modern machinery. The loom, the ancient wooden bedstead, the flaxen, cotton and woolen garments of the early time are vanishing so fast that soon there will not be a trace of them left. Little the youth of today can understand how his great grandfather was accustomed to ride twenty-five miles on horseback of a Sunday afternoon to see his best girl, yet that was what the pioneers did and thought nothing of it. Even one of the log cabins in which so many famous Americans first saw the light has never been looked upon by thousands of middle aged people.

It is a shame to let all the relics of our wonderful pioneer civilization thus disappear. In every neighborhood, in every family, there must be some such relics of the past of America. Whether machines, tools, earthenware or textile fabrics, no matter what they are, they ought to be preserved religiously. They will speak whole volumes in a glance to the eye of the future historian. In every county in the land there ought to be enough of patriotism to save this unique land wonderful past from destruction. Historical societies should make it their business to preserve all pioneer records of what nature severe.

Some years ago the colored people of Memphis organized the "Bible and Normal institute." Its purpose was the instruction of the colored people. Besides the education in books that they obtained, the institute aimed to lead them toward self help industrially. The institution was controlled and officered almost wholly by the black people themselves. It succeeded admirably, and has at length developed into the Memphis Trade School association. The object of this association is no less than the establishment of a full fledged technical school for colored youth. Branches taught will be the mechanical trades, nurse training and domestic science. For some of this training the colored people have shown themselves peculiarly adapted. Prominent white citizens of Memphis indorse the project and give it their full support and confidence. If this school can be established successfully it will be the brightest sign of the progress of the colored race that has appeared in many a year. What both black and white children need more than anything else in this country at present is not so much book stuffing as the knowledge how to do in a first class manner some useful work. The colored trades school looks forward to being on a level with the best schools of its kind in the north, and in this ambition all the country must wish it success.

Fashion has done some good at any rate. It has started a new industry in America—that of bullion embroidery. The elaborate garniture now made for trimming ladies' dresses, gold and silver thread, pearls and colored stones are brought, making the embroidery very beautiful, but also very expensive. There are only seven factories in Europe in which this embroidery can be made. These are all in Paris or Vienna. A manufacturer from Vienna has now successfully established himself in Philadelphia.

It is not now necessary for United States soldiers to protect the Indian Territory from white intruders. The reds can do that effectually of themselves. As many as a thousand interlopers are sometimes driven out in one day by the uniformed Indian police scouts that patrol the Texas border. A regularly organized Indian militia also assists in the work. The Indian militia is thoroughly brave and efficient.

Through the Majestic made the shortest trip ever known between Queenstown and Sandy Hook, the City of Paris still holds the record for the greatest number of miles ever traveled by a steamer in twenty-four hours. The distance was 515 miles.

Ellen Terry—I learned that to do one's work well one must work continually, and live a life of constant self denial for that purpose.

Mr. W. D. Howells has been looking at the pictures on the backs of the paper covered novels upon the newsstands. He finds them luridly suggestive of naughtiness, far too many of them. Moreover, there was rather more kissing and embracing going on in colors than was quite in taste.

If an American were asked to guess what is the leading product of this country he would undoubtedly answer the corn crop. Yet the whole corn crop of the country does not amount in value to as much as the poultry and egg business, not by several million dollars. The hen is mightier than the plow.

Thirty million dimes have been coined in the last three years, and a writer expresses wonder that they should be scarce in the circulation. But considering that there are sixty-three millions of people in the country thirty million dimes will not go very far around among them, even if the dimes were split in two.

While there has been no great outward demonstration of the fact, business firms have many of them had an exceptionally trying summer on account of the dullness of trade. But it will all be made up to them in the fall undoubtedly, and those who can hang on will find a harvest waiting for them as good as that which the agriculturists are now beginning to realize on.

Fewer and Longer Lived.

Dr. Hermann Hollerith, whose studies in vital statistics resulted in showing that the increase of people is decreasing, has made, along with the above discovery, another one. He finds that as the birth rate diminishes in the same proportion the average life of persons already born lengthens. For instance, in the census of 1870 only 17 per cent. of the population of the United States was over forty years old. But the proportion steadily increased from decade to decade until in 1890 23 per cent. of our population had passed the age of forty years.

A high birth rate signifies nothing if the death rate is just as high. It only gives rise to the old question on the infant's tombstone:

Since thus so very soon I'm done for.
I wonder what I was begun for?

But the process opened by these fascinating figures is pleasant indeed to us already on the scene of action. We can live longer and learn as we live. We shall not be crowded off the stage by a gang of importunate youngsters who come in droves and throngs mad to take our places. The intellectual and moral capabilities that were given to us all will have time to develop to their full flower. We shall have breathing space and opportunity to enjoy life after working hard all through youth. Fewer and finer is the result.

The Only Keely.

England had her Shakespeare, Germany her Goethe and France the Man with the Iron Mask, but we of the United States have our Keely, the only Keely that the world has ever produced. The distinction none can take away from us.

Ever and anon a spurt of newspaper fame brings him into notice. A committee of scientific gentlemen visit him, see him strike his little tuning fork and set a metal globe to revolving by what he claims is the latent energy evolved from the decomposition of three drops of water. They report that the Keely motor is bound to go; that it will surely revolutionize civilization. Then all dies down again. Keely returns to his den, mumbling still about "my system," the "sympathetic negative power of the Infinite One which is held in the interstitial corpuscular embrace of water," etc., and all is over for another year.

Scientific men, Camille Flammarion among them, maintain that the molecules of matter are in a state of incessant motion, whirling and oscillating with inconceivable rapidity. So far science thinks it has penetrated with certainty, if anything can be certain, which is doubtful. So far science and Keely agree. Keely says if a musical sound can catch the chord of vibration of these molecules they will be disintegrated and the power that keeps them whirling incessantly liberated. This is the power on which Keely depends to turn the world of mechanics upside down. As a matter of fact it has been asserted by a scientific musician that if he could only get the chord of its vibrations as it swayed slightly in the air he could "fiddle Brooklyn bridge down." This is in the same line as the boast of Paganini that he could cause the walls of a building to tumble by the sound of his violin.

Disintegrating the molecules of a substance by musical vibrations, and thus liberating a tremendous latent force, is what our own Keely claims that he can do. A club of musicians who visited the den of Keely, crank or great genius, according as one believes in him or not, declare that in their presence he disintegrated four drops of water into "etheric vapor" with his little tuning fork, and that it fired off a cannon "with a tremendous roar," generating a pressure of 21,000 pounds to the square inch. Meanwhile Keely maunders on about the "sympathetic bombarding stream toward the centers of neutrality," and never advances a peg further with his machine.

HARRISON IN VERMONT.

The President Has Received a Royal Reception.

THE SOUTH AMERICAN MARKETS.

The President on Reciprocity, the Failure of the Grain Crop Abroad, the Fighting Qualities of Vermonters and Good Qualities of the New Englanders.

BURLINGTON, Vt., Aug. 26.—The president's trip from Saratoga, N. Y., to Burlington was a pleasant one. Many speeches were made on the way to large and enthusiastic crowds. On crossing the Vermont line the president was welcomed by a representative of Governor Page. At several stations the president was pelted with roses and golden rod. At Brandon he was welcomed by ex-Governor Ormsbee and at Middlebury by ex-Governor Stewart. The Vergennes committee, headed by Mayor Hines, met the train at Middlebury. The train passed through Port Haven without stopping. There was a large assemblage at the station. The train stopped for five minutes at Vergennes, where the president spoke briefly. He was introduced by Secretary Proctor and said:

They Know How to Fight.

I am glad to look into the contented faces of another audience of New England people. You were greatly disparaged in the estimation of some of our people before the civil war. They had spread, unfortunately, over the minds of some of our southern brothers the impression that you were so much given to money, to thrift and to toil that your hands had forgotten how to fight. It was a most wholesome lesson when the whole country learned again, in the gallant charges and stubborn resistance of the Vermont brigade, that the old New England spirit still lived; that Paul Revere still rode the highways of New England, and that the cheers of Concord and Lexington and Bennington still plowed her fields. [Applause.]

Luncheon with Edmunds.

At Burlington the president was received by a committee of citizens headed by Senator Edmunds, Mayor Hasleton, Colonel W. Seward Webb, Hon. C. W. Woodhouse, General William Wells, President Elias Lyman, of the board of aldermen; General T. S. Peck and Hon. B. B. Smalley. From the car the president was escorted to the residence of Senator Edmunds, where the president was to take luncheon.

Those who sat down to luncheon were Hon. Edward J. Phelps, Elias Lyman, Secretary Proctor, ex-Governors Stewart and Ormsbee, General William Wells, Hon. A. K. Walker, B. B. Smalley, Colonel W. S. Webb, ex-Governor Woodbury, C. W. Woodhouse, E. W. Halford, General J. G. McCullough, Colonel K. C. Smith, Howard Cala, General T. S. Peck, G. F. Benedict, ex-Governor Barlow, L. G. H. Canson and Mayor Hasleton. Following the luncheon the president and party were driven to Shelburne Harbor building. Mayor Hasleton introduced the president, who spoke as follows:

The President's Speech.

I am not a little intimidated as I face so unexpectedly the representatives of the citizens of this great state of Vermont. I say great, because greatness does not depend alone upon among the larger states, great in an origin that gave occasion for an early and resolute exercise of power to the handfulness of the ways prevailed your people, great in a population that has never bowed the knee to the arrogance of power, great in the independence, the wealth, and has, through all the history of the state, maintained the inspiration of its early days of love of liberty and devotion to it. I propose to be present today at the home of one of your distinguished public servants with whom it was my privilege to be for a time to be associated in the discharge of public duties. I am glad to see you here at his home, to do him honor and honor in which George F. Edmunds is deservedly held by the people of Vermont. [Applause.] Having for six years witnessed the value of his services as a legislator in the senate of the United States, I share with you the regret that this country is no longer to enjoy those services, though it is a source of gratification to you, as it is to me, to know that in his love and loyalty to the union of states, there will be no call for his wise counsel and help that will not find ready response from the walks of private life which he has chosen to resume. [Applause.]

Institutions, Not Men.

My fellow citizens it is true, as your mayor has said, happily true, that we not infrequently deal with questions that involve alike all the contentions of party strife and stand in the clear, inspiring and stimulating sunshine as American patriots. [Applause.] We are a country of people who give their allegiance to institutions and not to men. [Applause.] It were a happy thing for others of our sister republics on this hemisphere if they could follow this great example. Our people are not slow to appreciate public services; they are not reluctant to acknowledge transcendant genius; but they give their fidelity as citizens to institutions and not to parties or men. [Applause.] This was happily shown in our great rebellion when party divisions that seem to lift barriers between us like these mountain peaks were obliterated in a moment by that love for the one institution and the flag which personified our people. [Applause.] A love that made the people of all these great states one; that sent from Vermont and Massachusetts, as from Indiana, those stalwart and devoted sons who offered, and many of them gave, their lives for the perpetuity of the union and the honor of the flag.

The Rule of the Majority.

Let us pursue our lines of division. It is characteristic of a free people. It is essential that these conflicts agitation and unrest out of which the highest and best is evolved; but let us never forget that the fundamental thought of our government is the rule of the majority lawfully expressed at pure and clean elections, and that when thus expressed the laws enacted by those chosen to make our laws, support of the executive officers chosen are not less of the minority than of the majority. We are this year a united and happy people. Providence has blasted the crops of the many nations of the world. Most of the people of Europe are short of food, and God has this year, mercifully to us, mercifully to them, made our storehouses to burst with plenty.

We have a great surplus of breadstuffs and there is not a bushel of wheat, corn, rye or oats that will not find a ready market this year. Happy are we in this great prosperity; happy that again out of our abundance the lack of other people will be supplied. Let us be grateful that our hearts are not turned by too much prosperity. It has been out of hardiness, out of privation, out of self denial, out of that thrift and economy which was an incident of your and that the best things in New England have come. And while thanking God for a season of bounteous harvests, let us remember that it is not after all riches that exalt the nation, it is pure, clean, high, intellectual, moral and loving citizenship that is to be our glory and security as a nation. [Applause.]

Across the Lake.

At the conclusion of the speech the president was escorted to his carriage and driven to the landing of the Champlain boat club, where W. Seward Webb's beautiful steam yacht, the Elfrida, lay at anchor. Dr. Webb stepped into the tender and assisted the president to follow him. As the boat glided away from the boathouse the crowd all cheered an adieu. At the same moment the little brass cannon in the bow of the Elfrida began the presidential salute of twenty-one guns. The trip to Magnam, at the upper end of the lake, was made in three hours and a quarter. The president's special train which had come up from Burlington was waiting and the party quickly boarded it and started for St. Albans. The arrival at St. Albans was at 7:30 p. m. Booming of cannon greeted the train and an enormous crowd was in waiting in and about the station. Ex-Governor Smith boarded the train and gave the president a welcome.

In front of the Weldon house a band of little girls in white, with sashes of red, white and blue, cast flowers in front of the president's carriage. Everywhere there was the greatest enthusiasm displayed. The president was driven to the home of ex-Governor Smith, where he was entertained royally at dinner. After dinner the president spoke to a large crowd at the Weldon house. He said in part:

The American Markets.

Secure in the great American market, the best per capita of any in the world, we have come now to believe that we may extend our trade and our markets for our manufactures and other countries across the seas and in ships carrying the American flag. We do not need in any degree to break up or injure our own domestic industries. We are consumers to an enormous extent of tropical products not produced by the people of the United States, with the nations sending us sugar, tea and coffee we have no tariff or internal revenue tax fully upon the enterprise of opening the markets of Central and South America to the manufacturing establishments of New England and the United States. I am sure every American will rejoice in the success which has thus far attended the efforts of Mr. Blaine in opening this expanding trade toward the southward.

The president then returned to ex-Governor Smith's residence, where he passed the night.

Received by Governor Page.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Aug. 26.—The president left St. Albans for Montpelier at 8 o'clock this morning, stopping en route at Richford and Barre for a few minutes.

At Montpelier he was received by Governor Page and by the legislature in joint session.

POLK MUST FIGHT.

The Alliance President Has a Duel on His Hands.

RALEIGH, N. C., Aug. 26.—There is open warfare between the Democrats and the Farmers' Alliance. A recent issue of President Polk's paper makes a bitter attack on Messrs. Ashe and Jernigan, editors of The News and Observer, and a publisher a circular letter sent out a year ago by Ashe, which stated that The News and Observer would support the sub-treasury bill. Polk then denounces Ashe and Jernigan as guilty of a willful attempt to deceive the farmers, because The News and Observer holds the sub-treasury bill to be unconstitutional.

He says such conduct shows that Ashe and Jernigan are totally depraved and are unworthy of the confidence of any honest and respectable person.

In reply Polk is denounced as a coward, a traitor to the Democratic party, a failure and a humbug as a farmer, as dishonest in his transactions with several individuals, and a "feathering" in every particular.

Messrs. Ashe and Jernigan intend to force Polk and Ramsey to resort to the code for satisfaction. If they fail they will try to break Polk down by making him contemptible by following him up every day as a "feathering." Ashe and Jernigan believe in settling disputes according to the code.

Polk arrived here yesterday, and today he held a council with his friends. It is known that he was advised he must fight if he would maintain his position as the leader of the Alliance.

It is said, confidentially, by his friends that Polk will challenge Ashe and Jernigan and will insist on a meeting, the fight to continue until one or the other is disabled. Polk's friends here declare that if he backs down now he will be odious ever hereafter and that the Alliance will go to pieces.

BESSIE WANAMAKER INJURED.

A Niece of the Postmaster General Breaks a Limb at Atlantic City.

ATLANTIC CITY, Aug. 26.—Miss Bessie Wanamaker, daughter of William Wanamaker, the brother of the postmaster general, while riding on a board walk amusement known as a "scenic railroad" last evening met with a serious accident on account of the gripman losing control of the car by the breaking of a brake bolt and had her left leg broken just above the knee.

Others injured were Mrs. E. J. Crippen, wife of a large Philadelphia grocer; face and hands badly bruised. Mrs. Crippen is a sister of Mrs. Leeds, brother of the proprietor of Haddon hall; back seriously injured. Miss Maggie Smith, daughter of Jacob Smith, of Philadelphia; limbs all cut. Three others were slightly bruised.

The Church Radicals Defeated.

CHAMBERSBURG, Pa., Aug. 26.—A decision has been rendered against the radicals in the long contested equity suit between the liberal and radical factions of the Church of the United Brethren in Christ over the adoption in 1889 of a new constitution which prohibited members from uniting with secret societies. The dissatisfied members have withdrew from the conference and organized another and termed themselves the radicals. The contest for the church property once began. Judge Stewart sustains the adoption of the new constitution and restrains the radicals from in any way interfering with the church property. The case will be appealed.

He Is William Penn's Descendant.

LONDON, Aug. 26.—Mr. John Penn, the Conservative candidate for Lewisham, is said to be a descendant of William Penn, the founder of Pennsylvania in America, whose descendants returned to England about the time of the revolution. Mr. Penn is a member of parliament. He declares himself in favor of checking the immigration of foreign paupers. There is believed to be little doubt of his election.

Mrs. Elizabeth Beatty Dead.

ELIZABETH, N. J., Aug. 26.—Mrs. Elizabeth Beatty, who was eighty-two years of age, died at her home in this city last night. Mrs. Beatty claimed to have acted as maid of honor at the court of King George II of England. In her younger days she was a noted beauty. About forty years ago she married George Beatty a well-to-do New Jersey farmer.

Newark's Typhoid Scare.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 26.—Eight additional cases of typhoid fever were reported to the Newark board of health yesterday. This makes sixty-seven since Aug. 17. The report that the water supply will be ready for use on Dec. 1, two months before the time agreed upon in the contract, is particularly gratifying to the public.

Poor Prices for Worth Dresses.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—At the sale of the elegant costumes of the late Emma Abbott Worth dresses costing from $3,000 to $5,000 and worn by the entastrice in the prodigetion of "Anne Boleyn," realized but $400.

HALF A HUNDRED DEAD.

More Than That Number of Bodies Rescued.

TWO ITALIAN GHOULS PUNISHED.

One Was Sent Up for Six Months for Robbing the Dead at New York and Another Has Been Arrested—Relief for the Destitute Families.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—At 5:30 a. m. today fifty-five bodies had been recovered from the Park place ruins. About forty-six persons are still missing. The fifty-fifth body was awfully mutilated. Both hands were gone. It was identified as that of Morris C. Haring, by Charles Haring, his brother. Charles nearly fainted at the sight.

NEW YORK, Aug. 26.—The city has taken hold of the work of recovering the dead at the Park place horror, and by 9 o'clock the work will be known. At 8 a. m. today the workers had penetrated the cellar of Peterson's restaurant, and bodies were being rapidly brought to view. At that hour fifty-four had been recovered.

Ghastly—ghastly beyond the powers of a Zola to describe—were the day's disclosures. The gallant wreckers had got beneath that awful line of lithographic presses which shook the building to pieces and then dropped down in an avalanche of steel on men and lads and horses.

No Respect of Persons.

They tore them limb from limb; they crushed and mangled inconceivably, and then they pinned them down while roaring flames roasted them to something less than cinder. Here they had lain for seventy-two August hours, and the unspeakable results were brought to light.

Trippe, the honored, wealthy; Ellis, the prosperous; Hillis, the breadwinner. The rich and the poor, employer and employe, pressmen, printers' devil, solid beef workers, all on a common level, all to be hurried into the kindly earth.

Italian Ghouls Punished.

Rossi Savarini, the Italian who picked the pockets of the unfortunates who found in the ruins of the Park Place fire, was today sentenced to the penitentiary for six months. Another of the Italian thieves was detected searching a coat which he found in the ruins. He was hustled off to jail at double quick speed.

Crowds at the Scene.

A hundred men working day and night since Saturday have succeeded in clearing away less than one-half the ruins. There are tons and tons of debris there, and it may take weeks of toiling. The list of fatalities will not be known until all of that is gone. The crowds of people with morbid curiosity continue in the streets adjacent to the scene of the disaster. The fight and push and maul each other for places near the police line, where they may see at least the boxes that contain the mangled and burned bodies of the victims as they are lifted out. They can see nothing else, yet they stand and fight for hours.

Sure Democracy of Death.

Six bodies identified by the burning, bruised and torn by the awful fall, and crushed by the tons of iron and brick were taken out before noon. Two were identified, those not by the handkerchiefs they were beyond recognition, but by jewelry and trinkets that were found in the pockets of the remnants of clothing they wore. They were the bodies of Mr. F. W. Trippe, the druggist, who had been in business here a score of years, and W. H. Ellis, of the firm of Ellis & Macdonald.

They had found the reality of the democracy of death, the leveler. these unhappy gentleman. They had slept in the same bed of torture and ghastly mutilation as the humblest office boy or printer's devil. But strangers were able to mark F. W. Trippe and William H. Ellis on their coffins, for on the former was the tattered folds of a white vest, and in the pocket was a gold watch marked "F. W. T." and eighty-four dollars in bills, while the same initials were found upon the linen. His diamond ring was still intact upon the finger of his left hand. The remains were taken away by his son.

Mr. Trippe was no ordinary druggist but a man of good birth and substantial reputation. He was the son of Joseph E. Trippe, who for forty years was a wholesale druggist and had stores in Canal street and Newark, N. J., and the nephew of the late William Wright, United States senator for New Jersey.

The Waiting Women Wept.

The other four bodies were those of workingmen. As these bodies had been unearthed others had been seen near where they were lying. As soon as the firemen began to work to take them out more debris fell and covered them completely up again. The fact was told to the line of waiting relatives of missing persons. Several of the women broke down and cried, though they did now whether or not the bodies were those they were waiting for.

To Relieve the Destitute.

Mayor Grant did not hear of the disaster until yesterday. Then he telegraphed to his secretary to visit the wards of the various departments and confer with them as to what best could be done. He also instructed him at once to open a subscription for the benefit of the destitute families of the men who were killed. The Herald already has $900 for the destitute relatives.

Russell Harrison at the Ruins.

Among the people who went to look at the ruins was Russell B. Harrison. He stood under the entrance to the building on the west side, among a crowd of policemen, and watched the flames carrying out the rubbish in handfuls.

At the Morgue.

Many curious women visited the morgue, lifted up the covers, and, in many instances, actually examined the clothing of the corpses. Three young women, all well dressed, spent at least half an hour in this way last evening.

The mother of Adam Dohrer, fourteen years old, who had worked for Isleiber & Mass, nearly went wild when shown the body of her son at the morgue, and it is had not been for the efforts of her daughter Minnie and a policeman she would have thrown herself on the body.

All of the bodies not identified by Thursday will be buried in Potter's Field, unless interested parties wish to give them a private burial.

Looks Like Fuller and Spicer.

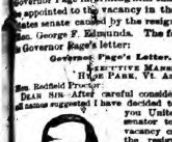
HYDE PARK, Vt. Aug. 25.

Hon. Redfield Proctor:

DEAR SIR—After careful consideration of all names suggested I have decided to appoint you United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Hon. George F. Edmunds. Primarily, I have deemed it my duty to satisfy my judgment as to what selection would best promote the welfare of Vermont and the whole country. I have at the same time felt that I was acting largely in a representative capacity; that if, not doing justice to my judgment, I could meet the wishes of a large majority of the people of Vermont, it would be a duty and pleasure to do so.



SECRETARY PROCTOR.

I have, with considerable care, sought and received personal and by letter the views of prominent Vermonters in every county of the state. The result of my investigation leaves no doubt as to my official duty. It, therefore, on the first day of November next it should be to your interest on me to fill the vacancy referred to I propose to tender you the appointment. I believe you will accept the tender. Should you not, however, but having reached a conclusion above, I cannot see that the public good would be subserved by further discussion.

With much respect, I am, yours truly,
CARROLL S. PAGE.

A BANK WRECKER AS A HERO.

Ex-President James D. Fish Saves a Woman at Sea Girt.

SEA GIRT, N. J., Aug. 26.—About 2 a. m. this morning the residence of John J. Butler at Sea Girt was discovered to be on fire by Mrs. J. B. Myers, who was the only occupant of the house. Almost overcome by smoke Mrs. Myers made her way to a balcony and called for help. An old man occupying the next house heard her call and crossing from the adjoining balcony saved the woman from the flames, which were fast closing in her.

The old man proved to be James D. Fish, ex-president of the Marine bank of New York, who was sent to state prison for wrecking the bank in connection with the failure of Grant & Ward and pardoned by Governor Hill. The building and contents were damaged to the extent of $16,000.

A Farm Hand's Fatal Shot.

WOOD LAKE, Ky., Aug. 26.—Frank Quigg, a wealthy farmer, was murdered by a hired hand by one of his farm hands named John Dudley, who suspected Quigg of being intimate with his wife, Dudley, without cause, that she was with Quigg in Hughes' room, he broke open the door and emptied a shotgun into the man, killing him instantly. Finding that he had made a fatal mistake, he surrendered and coolly pleaded self defense. The murderer will probably be lynched.

Cutlery Dealers Meet.

WESTED, Conn., Aug. 26.—Representatives of the leading cutlery companies of the country have held a conference here. The object of the meeting has not been announced. Those present were J. J. Van Dorn, of Phoenix, N. Y.; Thomas W. Bradley, of Walden, N. Y.; Dwight Devine, of Somerville, N. Y.; J. H. Cowles, of North Attleboro, Conn., and C. S. Alvord, of Winsted, Conn.

The German Asylum at West Point.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—Acting Secretary of War Grant has appointed a board to appraise the work already done on the German asylum at West Point. Contractor Sheehan has notified the department that he would not continue the work under his contract. The department has decided to complete the work at his expense.

To Settle the Gubernatorial Contest.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 26.—H. R. Benton, chairman of the Republican state committee, says the prospects are bright for a submission of the gubernatorial controversy to the state at the October election. Both sides will present pleadings in their simplest form, so that the issue will be more speedily disposed of.

Dawn on Oleomargarine.

WILLIAMS GROVE, Pa., Aug. 26.—The fifteenth annual interstate exhibition of the Pomona of Pennsylvania was formally opened, with fully 15,000 persons present. At the meeting of the Dairymen's National Protective association the sole topic of discussion was the suppression of the oleomargarine traffic.

Judge Schwartz Dead.

READING, Pa., Aug. 26.—Judge Hiram H. Schwartz, of the Orphans court of Berks county, died last evening, after a long illness, at his home in Kutztown, aged sixty years. Mr. Schwartz had been a member of the bar for more than thirty years, and served a term in the state legislature.

The Mill Hands Strike at Lebanon.

LEBANON, Pa., Aug. 26.—The strike of the iron mill hands here, which was caused by the refusal of the owners to sign the Amalgamated scale, is practically ended, the mills are starting up with most of the old hands. The strike began on July 1st and has resulted in failure for the men.

In Session at Gettysburg.

GETTYSBURG, Pa., Aug. 26.—The directors of the Battlefield Memorial association met in yearly session. The treasurer's report shows a balance of $3,000. The year's work included the opening of two new graves.

Killed by a Splinter.

BALTIMORE, Aug. 26.—John W. Perkins, who at work at a circular saw in the mill of Schneider & Fuchs, was transfixed and killed by a piece of wood which the saw shot at him.

Ex-Senator Burlan Out of Danger.

MOUNT PLEASANT, Ia., Aug. 26.—Ex-Senator Harlan is now believed to be out of danger. He is the father of Mrs. Robert Lincoln.

IT WAS ALMOST A RIOT.

Blows Struck at a Democratic County (St. Ty.) Convention.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 26.—It has been many years since Monroe county has seen as hot a political convention as that held at Pittsford by the First Assembly district Democrats. The Hill and anti-Hill men were out in full force, and the struggle for supremacy began.

When Chairman Watson announced the result on a motion to allow only delegates to vote one of the Hill men walked up to him and shaking his fist in his face, yelled, "It's a lie! It's a lie!" Another Hill man sprang forward to attack Watson, but was seized by others and held back. A fight seemed imminent. The crowd surged back and forth, overturning chairs and tables and gesticulating wildly.

When Chairman Watson appointed the secretaries and other committees, the crowd pushing and pulling each other about and driving the chairmen from their seats. During the excitement several blows were struck, but by skillful, engineering the leaders prevented a general fight. George Baines, a Hill man, accused Chairman Bancroft of being elected chairman while in the chair. Baines and the latter, who had his credentials in his pocket, replied, "That's a lie, and you know it!" The lie was given time and again during the row.

George Gould Wrecked.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 26.—The yacht Ida T. careened near here and spilled out a party consisting of George Gould, Pierre Troutman and Andrew Hughes, of Long Branch; Cornelius O'Connor, of Newark, N. J.; J. C. Clinton and Joseph Rottger, of New York; Erastus Carpenter, of Guttenberg, N. J., and the Misses Kingdon and Miss O'Donnell, of Long Branch. All of the party were rescued but a boy named Scheff, one of the crew.

Fireworks at Long Branch.

LONG BRANCH, N. J., Aug. 26.—The season at Long Branch is to be wound up this week in a manner never heard of before. On the grounds of the West End hotel now rapidly arises frames for fireworks that bid fair to use up the fund of $6,000. The pyrotechnics open on Thursday with the children's harvest procession. In the evening there will be a display of fireworks.

How to Breathe Properly.

The breathing should be slow and deep, ten breaths a minute being if safe average. There is a difference of opinion in regard to the relative value of abdominal and chest breathing, and each system has its advantages. One of the best exercises for increasing the capacity of the lungs is to draw in a full breath slowly and through the nose. Keep the lungs inflated as long as possible and then expel the air suddenly through the mouth and repeat the process. The period of holding the breath should not be too long at the start.

How to Make Tomato Catsup.

Cut half a bushel of tomatoes in pieces and boil them in their own juice until soft. Strain and press through a hair sieve to separate the skins and seeds. Then boil down to a thick pulp, stirring all the time, add two ounces salt, six drams allspice, one ounce ginger, five and a half drams yellow mustard, three ounces black pepper, six drams clover, three drams mace, two drams cayenne pepper and one gallon of vinegar. The spices must be all ground fine. Let the mixture boil up twice and bottle when cool.

How to Treat Children.

Children instinctively shrink from sour or evil tempered people. The old adage, "We must be cruel to be kind," does not hold in the proper training of children. We must only be firm. Kindness and firmness are the two elements necessary in the treatment of the young. If the child refuses a reasonable request, do it firmly but kindly. When correction is needed be firm, but show in your punishment that you are grieved for the necessity. Such training will make children love and honor you, and will instill in them the seeds of greatness. If you are cruel and stern, their young natures will resent it and their evil passions be aroused.

How to Make Writing Look Old.

Take one drachm of saffron and infuse it into one-half pint of ink. Warm it over a gentle fire, and anything written with it will turn yellow and old looking.

How to Keep Brass Bright.

To make brass rails, stair rods, door handles, etc., clean and bright take one ounce of oxalic acid and one pint of soft water; mix well and apply to the brass with a piece of cloth. Wipe dry, and then make a paste of finely powdered rotten stone and turpentine, which can be applied with the hand or a piece of old flannel. Rub dry with a soft leather and your brass will have lost all stains and look as bright and as new as when it was purchased. A solution of bichromate of potassa, sulphuric acid and water will also brighten brass, but the former is the most reliable method.

How to Prevent Smoking Chimneys.

Smoking chimneys are generally caused by the supply of cold air in the chimney being out of proportion to the heated air, and, in consequence, the cold air descends, bringing the smoke along with it. If the chimney is not high enough or surrounded by buildings or hills, the best plan to prevent smoke is to contract the aperature near the stove. This will insure the air being effectually heated and cause it to rise rapidly. If the aperture is too large, the volume of air entering it is not sufficiently warmed by the fire to enable it to rise rapidly enough to carry off the smoke, and the cold air will invariably descend and press the smoke downward. In obstinate cases a revolving cowl is necessary to create sufficient draft.

How to Keep a Gun from Rusting.

Clean the barrel occasionally and cover the exposed portions of the metal with a film of linseed oil. For lubricating the lock purified olive or sperm oil is the best. It is also a good plan to give a gun an elevated position in the room where it is kept. This lessens the chance for rusting, as the atmosphere is warmer and dryer at the top of the room.

How to Cure Thirst.

Simple thirst is a natural feeling, but immoderate thirst indicates the presence of disease. Vegetable acids of any kind are the most grateful palliatives of thirst. But the best thing to allay excessive thirst is a decoction of sorrel leaves, slightly thickened with gum arabic, sweetened to the taste.

How to Make Horseradish Sauce.

No condiment is more appetizing or beneficial as a stomachic than good horseradish sauce. It is peculiarly valuable with roast beef. Grate a couple of ounces of horseradish fine; take two teaspoonsful of cream, one of olive oil, two of powdered mustard and one tablespoonful of good vinegar and add a little salt and a dash of cayenne pepper, and mix all together, and you have a royal sauce.

How to Purify Air in Sleeping Rooms.

An excellent plan is to keep an inch or two of the window open—from the top. But in many cases this is impracticable, and as an alternative it is wise to keep in the sleeping chamber a basin or open vessel of water. Water absorbs all the impurities of the atmosphere and keeps the air pure. Besides acting as a purifier of the atmosphere, it will absorb large quantities of coal or illuminating gas should any escape, and thus render asphyxiation from that source less liable to occur.

How to Clean Glass.

It often happens that glass vessels become stained or receive an unsightly deposit or crust which is difficult to remove by rubbing or scouring. The best way to remove such stains is to wash the glasses with a little dilute muriatic acid. This will effectually erase the deposit and brighten the glass.

Warring Baseball Magnates Meet.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 26.—The first meeting between the warring baseball factions, the National League and the American Association, was held in this city last night. Messrs. Kramer, president of the American Association; Zach Phelps, and Von der Ahe were delegated to look after the Association's interests, while the League contingent consisted of John T. Brush, Jimmie A. Hart and Charles H. Byrne. The representatives were empowered to settle all differences. The Association men will not withdraw the Association club from Boston or any other city, nor will they raise the price of admission. They will abide by the contract law, and will play exhibition games with the League clubs. Louis Kramer, president of the American Association was made chairman and Mr Hart secretary. The time was spent in general discussion of the situation toward ascertaining the wishes of the two organizations as to the desirability of framing a new agreement. Nothing more was given out to the press.

Mike Kelly Joins the League.

BOSTON, Aug. 26.—Mike Kelly, of the Boston Reds, has signed a contract to play with the Boston League club the remainder of this and all of next season This contract calls for a salary of $5,000 per annum, and an additional sum in case of the success of the club. Kelly said he was to receive $2,500 from the League He joins the club at Cleveland.

Fast Time at Independence.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Aug. 26.—At the meeting of the Independence Driving Park association Margaret won the 2:early stakes of $5,000 in straight heats in 2:22, and 2:24. Honest George took three straight heats in the 2:21 class. Time, 2:19 2:17¾ and 2:17. Inca to beat 2:18 made it in 2:17, and Boy Wilkes to beat 2:08¾ paced it in 2:10¼.

Trotting at Hartford.

HARTFORD, Aug. 26.—The fall meeting at Charter Oak park opened with about 2,000 attendance. Belle Hamlin and Globe driven to beat the record of Bells and Justina (2:18), made the mile without a break in 2:14¼. Grant's Abdallah won the 2:16 pacing purse. Henrietta the 2:19 class. N. T. H. captured the 2:28 trotting purse.

Hobart Defeated Hovey.

NEWPORT, R. I., Aug. 26.—Clarence Hobart defeated F. H. Hovey in the all comers tennis match. Hobart is playing Oliver S. Campbell for championship honors to-day.

The Boston Club Won.

HALIFAX, N. S., Aug. 26.—The cricket match between the Harrington Woods, of Boston, and the Wanderers, of Halifax, was concluded. The Bostons won by 40 runs.

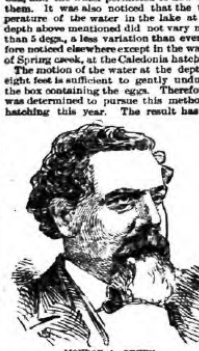
PROPAGATING THE MUSKALLONGE.

Monroe A. Green and His Great Work at Chautauqua, N. Y.

The greatest achievement in pisciculture in the past twenty years must be placed to the credit of Monroe A. Green, superintendent of the New York state fish hatchery at Caledonia. Three or four years ago it was determined to try the experiment of propagating muskallonge in the great muskallonge lake of Jamaica, Chautauqua. For two years the experiments were conducted on the same principle of propagation of other species of fish which had met with unbounded success and placed Mr. Green at the head of pisciculturists. The same manipulation in taking the eggs and milt was used as with other fish the first year, but the hatching of muskallonge was a failure.

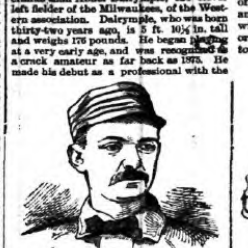
The second year was a failure also, but Mr. Green and his aids were convinced that the failure could be attributed to the methods used in hatching. The state appropriation having been exhausted, residents of Jamestown and other places on the lake raised a sufficient fund to enable Mr. Green to continue the experiment this year, and hadn't so with the aid of a resident pisciculturist. It was noticed last year that a box of eggs placed six or eight feet under water, and yet suspended two or three feet from the bottom of the lake, yielded a larger percentage of fry than by the old method—viz., placed the eggs on sieves in tiers in a box, and the water permitted to flow over them. It was also noticed that the temperature of the water in the lake at the depth above mentioned did not vary more than 5 degs., a less variation than ever before noticed elsewhere except in the waters of Spring creek, at the Caledonia hatchery. The motion of the water at the depth of eight feet is sufficient to gently undulate the box containing the eggs. Therefore it was determined to pursue this method of hatching this year. The result has exceeded the fondest hopes of the pisciculturists. Nearly 2,000,000 muskallonge fry have been produced and turned into the lake. The success of hatching muskallonge is solved, and it is no longer an experiment. Next year the propagation will be conducted on a larger scale, and the prospects are that enough fry will be turned out not only to permit of turning into Chautauqua 3,000,000 at least, but to permit of depositing several millions in other waters of New York state, such as Irondequoit bay, which received a few last year. Muskallonge grow rapidly and mature earlier than most other fish. The failure heretofore to propagate them has caused them to be a delicacy and rarity, but in five years they will be almost as plenty in New York waters as perch now are.



MONROE A. GREEN.

Left Fielder Dalrymple.

Few players are better known to baseball fans than Abner Dalrymple, the clever left fielder of the Milwaukees, of the Western association. Dalrymple, who was born thirty-two years ago, is 5 ft. 10½ in. tall and weighs 176 pounds. He began playing as a very early age, and was recognized as a crack amateur as far back as 1875. He made his debut as a professional with the old Milwaukee team, which represented the Cream City in the National league in 1877. He was again with the same team in 1878, and led the League in batting. In the following year he signed a Chicago contract, and he remained with that team till 1886, in which year he joined the Pittsburgs.



ABNER DALRYMPLE.

In 1888 he transferred his services to the Denver club, of the Western association. Last year he signed a Milwaukee contract, and proved a valuable acquisition to the Cream City club. He is a hard batter and an excellent fielder. His wide experience makes him an excellent coach, and his presence is always an inspiration to the younger members of the team. Dalrymple was last year at the head of the list of the Western association batters. The following were his averages: Number of games, 107; times at bat, 464; runs scored, 110; first base hits, 156; per cent. of one base hits to times at bat, .336.

Bicyclist H. R. Winship.

One of the best known wheelmen in the west is H. R. Winship, of the Englewood Cycling club, of Chicago. He won the first Pullman road race from Chicago to Pullman in 1887, and his victory was really his debut in wheeling, so far as the public world. He started from the 83d mark, and covered the 14½ miles in 1 hour, 2 minutes and 55 seconds, and won $100 worth of prizes. Since that time the Pullman road race has become a regular December Day feature at Chicago. In 1888 Winship again captured the time medal by covering the course in 55m. 30s. Arthur F. Lonsdale, then an unknown rider, finished first, but had a handicap of 11 minutes. He covered the course in 1h. 47m. Winship has ridden a great deal with Lumsden, and few riders can leave them in the rear on the tandem safety. B. R. Barwise, of Chicago, won the Pullman race this year in 59m. 43s.

A Handsome California Woman.

The wife of Michael H. de Young, editor and owner of the San Francisco Chronicle, is a handsome blonde of medium size, with golden brown hair and large gray eyes full of soul, and with a peaches-and-cream complexion, or shell pink. She has a sweet, low toned voice, and a mouth of more firmness than is usually allotted to beautiful women. Mrs. de Young has a majesty of presence, which, with her proudly, well poised head, gives her the appearance of a much taller woman. She is the daughter of James R. Deane, a pioneer merchant of 'Frisco, who was as popular as his charming daughter, who graduated at St. Catharine's convent, Benicia, Cal., with all the honors. She was married after one year in society at the age of eighteen. Mr. and Mrs. de Young have four children.

MRS. M. H. DE YOUNG.

Ladies, Stay in Bed.

Polly Peppers says that early rising wears out women too fast. I notice that our thrifty greataunts and grandmothers had a habit of dying early and giving their husbands an opportunity of leading two or three blushing brides to the altar. Now, I don't propose to leave any chance for my husband to get any such double or triple bliss as that. I don't intend to have any other woman walking around in my shoes, appropriating my kisses and doing other disagreeable things which I should object to.

I mean to take care of myself so as to last as long as my better half. No woman has any business, ordinarily, to get up and go to work at 4 or 5 o'clock in the morning. If there is anything in the world that a woman needs it is plenty of rest. If she feels tired and languid in the morning and hates to get up, it is a sure sign that she is overdoing and wearing out. Six o'clock is as early as any one ought to get up and go to work.—American Home.

CHIEF CAREY LEVIES ON GOODS FOR NON-PAYMENT OF RENT.

Mr. Levy, the Tenant, Has Mr. Carey and His Assistants Arrested on a Charge of Burglary in Consequence.

Some eighteen months ago Mr. Tunis J. Carey leased a store to a Hebrew merchant named Joseph Levy. The store is situated on West Front street and therein Mr. Levy carried on the clothing business on a small scale. A short time ago Mr. Carey's tenant notified him that as he was not doing much business he could not afford to pay rent any longer and that he proposed leaving the city.

A few days later Mr. Carey was informed by a friend that Levy was packing up his effects preparatory to leaving Plainfield. As the Hebrew merchant was still in arrears in rent Mr. Carey went to the store and demanded his money. It is said that Levy refused to pay him. Mr. Carey went to his lawyer Charles A. Reed and had a distress warrant issued. Mr. George Musgrave served the warrant and seized the goods. Mr. Krewson transferred them to Mr. Carey's storage rooms, to hold until the rent was paid.

Last evening Levy went before Justice Wadsworth and swore out warrants for the arrest of Tunis J. Carey, Joseph Krewson, and G. R. Musgrave, charging them with assault and battery, and with breaking and entering. They all appeared before the justice, and gave bonds to await the action of the Grand Jury.

Mr. Carey was away on his Summer vacation when he heard of the tenant's attempt to get out of the State without paying the balance of the rent due, and remained here only long enough to protect his interests, returning to Hunterdon county immediately after.

AN ENGINE'S DRIVING ROD BROKEN.

And a More Serious Accident Averted by a Cool-Headed Engineer.

On Monday night a mishap occurred to the locomotive of the peach train on the Central railroad when it was running near Westfield. The train had rounded the curve in the Fanwood cut and had taken the down grade. It was one o'clock and Engineer George Denny was anxious to make time. He was running twenty miles an hour, when the left hand driving rod broke.

Ticket Agent Brewer Rittenhouse, of Flemington; Engineer Denny and Fireman William Bodine were in the cab of the engine. Rittenhouse sat on the left hand side. The broken rod first drove through the sheathing of the boiler and struck him in the calf of the leg, cutting an ugly gash.

Engineer Denny blew for brakes, but the train ran a quarter of a mile before it was stopped at the Broad street crossing at Westfield.

Rittenhouse was carried to the caboose where his wounded leg was dressed by Dr. F. A. Kinch.

Rittenhouse had a very narrow escape, and the prompt and intelligent action of Engineer Denny prevented a much more serious accident. He stood by his engine holding the throttle with one hand and grasping Rittenhouse with the other.

KICKED BY A HORSE.

Mr. Vincent L. Frazee's Painful Accident Last Evening.

Mr. Vincent L. Frazee of Orchard place met with a painful accident at about seven o'clock last evening. A horse belonging to Mr. J. E. Stewart of Union avenue which was left standing in front of Mr. Frazee's place of business upset a basket of peaches. Mr. Frazee stooped down to pick some of them up near the animal's hind legs. As he did so the horse kicked him full in the face with both feet. His nose was broken and his face was badly cut. Dr. Long was summoned and he set the broken nose and dressed the other wounds. The doctor said that had the horse's feet struck him a few inches further up he would have been instantly killed.

Knights Templar Field Day.

The fourth annual Templar field day is being held at Atlantic City to-day. Every commandery in the State will be present and participate in the ceremonies and pleasures of the day. Templar field day was inaugurated four years ago by Right Eminent Sir Edward W. Price, then grand commander of the State, at Asbury Park. The affair proved such a great success and such a source of enjoyment to the sir knights and their friends that the grand commandery voted unanimously to make it an annual affair, and it is now looked forward to by the families and friends of the knights with considerable anticipation of a pleasant day's outing.

St. John's Commandery, No. 9 of Elizabeth, under the command of Eminent Sir Frank L. Tiernan, accompanied by Trinity Commandery this city, and a large number of ladies and guests left Elizabethport at 8:15 a. m. by special train on N. J. Central Railroad, which Bank and Windsor Junction. A special train leaves Atlantic City on return trip at 7 p. m.

Train arrived at Atlantic City at 10:45 a. m., giving the visitors eight hours to enjoy the beauties of this city by the sea. Headquarters were at the United States Hotel, where in the evening an eloquent reception will be tendered to the sir knights and their ladies.

—The Warren Mission Sunday-school excursion to-morrow morning.

—There will be a special meeting of Perseverance Lodge, No. 74, K. of P., Friday evening. A full attendance is desired.

THE ANNUAL RE-UNION.

OF FOUR HUNDRED SURVIVORS OF THE OLD 38TH REGIMENT.

The Event Celebrated Here To-day. —A Large Turn-Out.—A Parade, a Banquet and a Ball.—Children Make the Soldiers Weep with Joy.

EVEN THE MOST casual observer of the veterans in line this morning was struck with the sad truth that the days of the Rebellion, when these same men formed part of that great army to which no difficulty seemed insurmountable, are of "the long ago." The veterans, with but few exceptions show it. Age, that great conqueror, has stolen from some the square "soldier shoulders," and from others the vigorous stride that carried them over so many miles of ground in the "days of '61."

It was the annual re-union of the Twenty-Eighth Regiment, New Jersey Volunteers, which was held here to-day. Early this morning veterans from all parts of the State began to arrive by the cars and in carriages and at ten o'clock, the hour announced for the parade to start, many were present.

It was 10:40 o'clock, however, before the line moved. It was headed by the Plainfield Cornet Band. Winfield Scott Post, No. 73, G. A. R., acted as an escort. The visitors followed. Mr. H. C. Drake was the marshal and Capt. Hand, the assistant marshal. The company traversed over the following route:

Formed on North avenue opposite depot. From North avenue to Park to Front to Somerset to Emily to Grove to Liberty to Fifth to Central avenue to Seventh to Park to Crescent to Broadway to Front. A business meeting was then held at Winfield Scott Post rooms. Dinner at the rink at two o'clock.

At the business meeting the regular order of business was transacted, after which the following officers were elected for the ensuing year:

President—Henry C. Drake of Plainfield.

Vice President—Captain Story of New Brunswick.

Treasurer—P. E. Sampson of New Brunswick.

Secretary—P. E. Appleby of Old Bridge.

At the conclusion of the meeting the veterans again formed in line and marched to the Crescent Rink where a bountiful collation awaited them. When they arrived at the rink the old soldiers passed through a double line of little girls dressed in white with caps made of the national colors. They were singing "My Country, 'Tis of Thee, Sweet Land of Liberty," meanwhile strewing flowers in the path of the soldiers, which brought tears to their eyes.

When the posts were seated at the table, Commander Wm. C. Smith, in behalf of Winfield Scott and Major Anderson Posts welcomed them to the banquet. Chaplain John Goodwin invoked the divine blessing.

Mayor Gilbert occupies the seat of honor. After the banquet he will deliver the address of welcome. Councilmen Moffett and Roberts were also present at the dinner.

The Twenty-eighth regiment was organized Sept. 3, 1862, at Freehold, for nine months service, and was about 1,000 strong. It was attached to Gen. Patrick's brigade, and formed part of the force in Virginia defending Washington until December 1, 1863, when it re-crossed Chain bridge and marched through Washington to Aquia Creek, Maryland, a distance of 100 miles, which it reached Dec. 5th, thence 18 miles to Falmouth, and took part in the battle of Fredericksburg, Dec. 13. There it was that was known as the slaughter pen, and was terribly cut up, many members of the regiment being killed and wounded. It was also in the battle of Chancellorsville, both battles proving disastrous to the Union forces.

These were the only two battles in which the regiment participated. It was mustered out July 6, 1863, at Freehold, N. J., ten months and three days from the date of muster.

Among those present as guests to-day were Judge Kibbe, Lawyer Howard McGonigle, Assessor John Gregory, and William H. Hardy of New Brunswick, and George Roeder, a prominent citizen of Milltown.

Prof. Cooper, the regimental chaplain, stands in the foremost rank of Greek and Latin scholars. He has been for the past twenty years a professor in Rutgers College, and has received all the honors for learning bestowed by English and German Universities. His works on Greek and Latin are standard authorities.

The Acme's Defeated.

A number of Plainfielders went to Westfield yesterday afternoon and witnessed a game of base ball between the Westfield Athletic Club's team and the Acmes of New York. The game was said to have been an interesting one, the Westfield winning by a score of 10 to 8. Jones, the center-fielder for the Crescents, played first base for the Acmes and is said to have given entire satisfaction.

THOSE SUMMER SPOILS

WHAT TO DO WITH THE TROPHIES OF ONE'S OUTING.

How to Preserve Seaweed.—Suggestions as to the Preservation and Decorative Use of Shells, Grasses and Such.

This is the time of year when loiterers by the seaside and on the mountains devote more or less of their time to hunting "finds," which, after they have been found, are a prodigal thing to throw away or suffered to become useless by delaying to mount or otherwise to care for them. The enthusiasm for this sort of thing is apt to wane, too, if not taken at the flood, and thus many a pretty conception of household decoration is never brought to fruition. There are so many exquisite things cast up by the sea that may be utilized by ingenious minds and industrious fingers that it seems a pity not to make use of them, the more especially as such work is bound to bring the worker into close communion with Dame Nature, that wisest and best of all teachers.

SEAWEEDS AND SHELLS.

It is true that in general these treasure trove articles fall far short of their intent as decorative articles. The seaweed and shells of our northern coasts lack in richness of coloring and quaintness of form, and must be deftly handled in order to show them at their best. But the common seaweed and moss cast up by every day tide may be transformed into veritable ocean poems if properly manipulated.

They must be gathered wet, and before they have time to dry be floated on sheets of cardboard in basins of clear water. While still under water each tiny spray must be placed in position with the point of a needle, and the whole then dried under heavy pressure between sheets of blotting paper.

When thoroughly dried they may be arranged according to fancy, one of the most satisfactory ways being to mount each "find" on a separate piece of drawing-paper or cardboard duly labeled and kept in a portfolio. A scrapbook with heavy leaves answers the purpose admirably.

MARSH GRASSES.

Lamp-mats, baskets and wall-pockets of plaited marsh grasses are useful as well as ornamental. One ingenious woman, who delights in odd and pretty things for her own home, secured a suitable length of terra cotta pipe, about eight inches in diameter, around which she proceeded to weave a covering of marsh grass; result a most charming umbrella stand. It will be hardly a limit to the articles of every-day use that may be fashioned in this wise, which, be sides being useful and pretty, will retain their flavor of the sea for many a day.

SEASHELLS IN THE FIREPLACE.

A unique idea is a fireplace border, or facing, fashioned entirely of seashells arranged in pleasing figures. Each row is composed of shells of one color and shape, and, as nearly as may be, of one size; at the base huge couch-shells brought from Florida, and from these upward the pattern is traced in lines of red, white and black, until at the crown of the arch they meet and terminate in a single shell brought from a tropic sea which combines all three of these colors. This was in the home of a well-known artist and was the result of a two-seasons' search. The shells were imbedded in plaster of paris, lip downward, and were covered with a thin coat of varnish. The same family are now engaged in constructing a shell chimney-piece of elaborate design.

PEBBLES IN MORTAR.

But the seaside loiterers must not imagine that they have all the best material at their disposal. The pebbles are full of happy hints, and the materials are to be had for the taking. What could be more prolific than a birch forest? The use of birch bark in fashioning pretty things is not modern invention. Centuries ago it was used by the aboriginal Indian's stock in trade when the primeval forests were new, and the squaws manufactured it into various articles, embroiding it with moose hair or bright colored grasses (mainly valuable to Lo for their interchangeability for fire-water and tobacco) long before the decorative art wave broke over our land. The sojourner on the mountains, who does not come home laden more or less with birch bark souvenirs in the form of cards adorned with pen-and-ink sketches, blotting cases, miniature canoes, toboggans, baskets, fans and what not, has missed something of the charm of mountaineering.

The fun in a really enough peeled from the tree with a dull, broad knife, worked in under it, when the natural dampness is in it, it is very pliable, and should then be divided and sub-divided into the requisite thinness. Should it have been put away in folds of damp cloth and below will supply the necessary moisture.

FERNS AND GRASSES.

Ferns and grasses pressed and gummed securely to wooden panels or some suitably colored fabrics make most charming screens. The wood-carver may exhaust his ingenuity on the tough leather fungoids that grow on old trees which, being cut with a square of the bark on which they grow, make admirable brackets.

The gnarled roots and branches of trees, each knob being carved with a grotesque face, may by made to form the frames of tables and chairs, if one have the strength and patience to finish such a piece of work. When it is once done it is a lasting monument to the industry that brought it to completion, and is odd and ornamental enough to compensate for all the labor bestowed upon it.

"SPILLS."

Then there is the popular and practical pastime of gathering leaves ("spills," they are called), from the fragrant fir or balsam tree. They should be stripped from full-grown but not old twigs, and should not be dried in the sun, but placed at once in the cushion for which they are intended. What a delight to lay one's weary head on such a pillow, and, closing one's eyes, drift away into dreams and hear again the rustling of the dried leaves and the cracking of the dead twigs under one's feet, and in fancy breathe again the fresh air laden with the smell of pines and decaying mold. It is not all fancy, either, for the fragrance of the fir will hang around the garnered "spills" until another year shall bring an opportunity for renewing them.

—If it shall be proved that poison was actually put into a well in Westfield, with the intent to cause sickness and death to animals and to the people accustomed to use the water from that well, the fullest punishment the law can inflict is none too severe to be meted out to the villain who is guilty of the act. It was a dastardly, murderous piece of work, against which the innocent had no protection and the results of which might have been death to many. A man who will put poison in a well is utterly unfit to be at liberty for the rest of his natural life.—Elizabeth Journal.

—Messrs. John B. Beerhower of the City Hotel, and saloon-keepers John Rafferty and James Connelly are reported very wrothy because of the permission granted by Common Council to Mr. Joseph B. Miller of the Elkwood to connect his place with the North avenue sewer, a permission which, it is claimed, they were refused, on the ground that the sewer was too small. There are only two other sewers—one on Park avenue and one on New street. Mr. Miller is engaged laying his pipe now. Each row is composed of shells of one color and shape, and, as nearly as may be, of one size; at the base huge couch-shells brought from Florida, and from these upward the pattern is traced in lines of red, white and black, until at the crown of the arch they meet and terminate in a single shell brought from a tropic sea which combines all three of these colors. This was in the home of a well-known artist and was the result of a two-seasons' search. The shells were imbedded in plaster of paris, lip downward, and were covered with a thin coat of varnish. The same family are now engaged in constructing a shell chimney-piece of elaborate design.

—A prominent citizen who has had much to do with contracts considers the franchise to Mr. J. M. Low & Co. not worth the paper it is written on, without Mayor Gilbert's signature, because it being in the nature of a contract, must have the Mayor's signature to be valid. As the franchise is manifestly against the city's interests, the combine having worked so assiduously in the interests of Mr. Low and his associates, as to give the city no chance, our only salvation is in Mayor Gilbert's refusal to sign. The matter will no doubt be carried to the courts, and the courts will decide whether the Mayor can be compelled to sign a contract as a representative which he believes to be against the city's interests, entailing a debt approximating $100,000 on the taxpayers.

—The courts have been called upon several time lately to send to prison men accused of habitual drunkenness, and there are many more all rounders who might as well be sent after them. In some States there are public institutions which deal with such people, and not only with them but with loafers and dead beats who refuse to support themselves and their families. There are scores of men about town who come under this latter heading who are to be found on the street corners and who occasionally fall into the hands of the police. They never do any work, and their principal task seems to be to abuse their wives and families and compel them to support them. The law ought to be able to reach such men, and by placing them in institutions compel them to work. It doesn't suffice to send them to jail, because they lead a life of ease there and regret to fall or being ing out.—New Brunswick Home News.

Makes Noise Enough in Dunellen

John Eber became noisily drunk at the Park Hotel, Dunellen, Tuesday afternoon, and Proprietor Maier and his wife put him out. Eber thereupon secured a pair of car-couplings, and going back to the hotel threatened to kill every one within sight. The landlady cried murder, which seemed to drunken man. Subsequently he was arrested and put on a Baltimore and Ohio train for Philadelphia.

An Express-Train Goes Off a Bridge. —40 People Reported Killed.

NASHVILLE, N. C., Aug. 27, (Special.)—It is reported that a limited express jumped a bridge near here, and that 40 persons were killed.

No particulars can be learned.

LATER.—RALEIGH, North Carolina.—The bridge the train went off was eighty feet high. The accident occurred two miles from Statesville. The train was westbound, on the North Carolina Railroad.

Among those saved was Col. Cameron.

The number killed is unknown. Thirty-six bodies have so far been taken from the wreck.

Rain-storms have been frequent and heavy in this locality lately. Experts think a wash-out caused a loose or spread rail.

The Rev. E. H. Stewart, a former resident of this city, will speak in Reform Hall this evening on "Duty the Life of Action." A cordial invitation is extended to all, to hear this forcible and eloquent speaker.

J. Frank Hubbard, Director of the Union County Board of Freeholders, is Summering at Deal Beach, N. J., where he went last week in attendance upon the Conference of Seventh Day Baptists. He was seized with a congestive chill about two o'clock Sunday morning while in bed. He was alone and was not discovered until five o'clock, when he was delirious. His wife and daughter, Mrs. I. N. VanSickle, were in town.

The announcement is made that Dr. E. W. Hedges, one of Plainfield's leading physicians, will lead to the altar, within a few weeks, Miss Lulie Bailey of San Francisco. Miss Butler has been visiting at intervals during the past three years the home of her uncle, Mr. W. C. Butler of East Front street, where that popular physician made her acquaintance. She is the daughter of Mr. Chas. C. Butler of San Francisco, a millionaire. Her mother, a most gifted woman, is now traveling in Europe, with a younger daughter, their only other child. Mrs. Butler is reputed worth two millions, in her own right. Miss Butler is highly talented, excelling in music, especially vocal, and the doctor's talent in that line is also well and favorably known here. The wedding promises to be one of the events in this locality, the couple having a large host of friends.

State Notes

The corner-stone of the new club house for the Trenton Catholic Young Men's Association was laid on Sunday.

The total shipment of berries of all kinds from Atlantic county this year was 1,000,000 quarts. There was an increase in the price of this class of fruit, and the farmers realized handsome profits.

From The Telegram, the government organ in Newfoundland: "The prevailing opinion here today is that Newfoundland's path of progress leads us in the direction of free trade with the United States."

The G. A. R. boys will all march on to Washington and capture it next summer. Every old soldier declares he is going. It will be the largest meeting of soldiers at Washington since the review of the grand army in that city in May, 1865, when the returning soldiers of Grant, numbering over 200,000 veterans, marched in procession through the streets of the capital before breaking rank for the last time to go to their homes.

Be it known that the Catholic Total Abstinence Beneficial society particularly requests physicians to abstain from prescribing indiscriminately whisky to patients who apply to them. They declare that many a case is known to them in which the doctor merely says to the ailing man, "Go and take a big drink of whisky." By this sort of medical prescription the doctor seriously interferes with the good work of the Total Abstinence Beneficial society. Through his friendly help a member is enabled to become a total abstinent with a "big drink of whisky" in him.

To Make Yourself Agreeable.

If you have not seen a friend in a long time and meet him suddenly, begin first thing and pour into his ear all your physical ailments. If you have a sciatica or a nightmare, or especially if you have a disease dyspepsia, pour it all into his ear like waste water into a sinkhole. Do not leave out anything. This will be cheerful and inspiring to your friend. It will have a tendency to make him enjoy his own food and sleep.

Having finished the story of your physical ailments, raking up and gloating over the last, lowest corn or indigestion, begin on your other grievances. Tell him how far short you have come of your calculations in your business lately. Belmont was given a stroke of ill fate time that beset you. Impress on him how leaky and going to the dogs your houses are, how shaky your business is, till he will fancy he has been in a poor house hearing the story of all the inmates. Put before him the worst side of everything, and picture it in the reddest paint you can use. Make him listen to your tale of woe.

Next to the subject from the point of view of how mean other people have treated you. Tell him how this man has lied to you, how that one borrowed money and lied when he got back, how the other one worked you out of your place and left you stranded. Rail him up. Talk as though the world contained only knaves, sponges, fools and quarrelsome people. Then after perhaps ten or twenty years more your friend will be glad to see you again.

An Attempt to Regulate Nature.

One of the most interesting experiments ever made in agricultural science is now claiming attention in the northwest. Some years ago it was said that the cactus beds of Colorado could raise "one steer to thirty acres," and no more. Then the attempt to irrigate was made, to ascertain whether the saying was strictly true. The result was that in some points irrigation showed the so called cactus beds were capable of being turned into a soil so rich and deep that blooded stock as fine as that in the Blue Grass region of Kentucky was produced.

Next came years of terrible drought in Dakota and that part of the country which turned the attention of farmers to the total rainfall problem. Nature's rains were too treacherous to be depended on. With characteristic western vim the task of supplying was entered on. Irrigation departments were established at the state agricultural stations and engineers of irrigation appointed. Two methods of moistening the arid soil appeared—that by artesian wells and the other by conducting ditches from rivers and streams, where this was possible.

Another task presented itself to the agriculturist in this region. His farm was frequently timberless. Could forests be made to grow where no trees were? This, too, was worth trying. More study and experimenting. Particularly there was need to protect the north and northwestern portions of the farmer's lands from the Manitoba blizzards that came down on them like a wolf on the fold. Will it be possible to change a treeless, more or less droughty and arid region into a spot where water is abundant and where forests will in time dot the landscape with living green and wood be abundant? Irrigating wells are being dug in county after county. It is expected that they will produce gigantic crops with watering advantages. It is also expected that the forest culture will be a success. Well, we shall see. If all this can be done and the more or less droughty and treeless district thus transformed, then man will have certainly attained a great mastery over nature.

The United States agricultural department has also taken up the question of irrigation and is at present doing all that may be done to further it.

THE PRESIDENTIAL ARM.

Mr. Harrison Says It Is Not a Hickory Limb.

DESPITE THE POPULAR BELIEF.

The Executive Shows Quite a Sense of the Humorous in One of His New England Speeches—His Address Before the Assembled Legislature of Vermont.

WATERBURY, Vt., Aug. 27.—The president's tour through Vermont has been a very pleasant one both for the executive and the people. The latter have tendered the president an ovation at every station and listened with respect and interest to his vigorously called for speeches. At Waterbury the president showed that he possesses quite a vein of humor. He said:

As Firm Like a Hickory Limb.

My friends, it is very pleasant to know that a public officer may travel everywhere throughout this great land of ours and only those who have listened with respect and interest to it, and find always his sure defense and care in the good will and respect of the people who surround him. I may not be just the irresponsible crank so far as I can see a president is in no peril except that he may be killed by the superabundant kindness of his people. [Laughter and applause. There seems to be an impression that his strength and capacity for speech are measured by his arm, and that his arm is a hickory limb, but it is very kind of all these good people of Vermont to have looked to me on this journey to-day so pleasantly by your cheers and much more by your kindly faces the memory of which will have for those institutions with which the suffrage of the people has for the time been entrusted me.

The Bellows Falls speech is one which has been much written about, much discussed, and I think that even those who have found points of criticism in the platform have not adopted the Yankee method of averaged concluded that the influences emanating from Plymouth Rock and 167 fifteenths thereof in the form of New Hampshire grants and then the western reserve of Ohio and so scattering and diffusing liberty throughout the land, have been good for the whole country. I am glad that I stand as a man with his eyes open everywhere.

The President on Plowing.

I have sometimes thought that habit of attention and of right habit of mind to the best uses in hand, had its very natural origin and development in New England agriculture. The farmer who holds the plow straight or stony field learns the lesson that he had better give his mind to the business in hand [laughter] adhering to the ranges and landmarks for inattention are so prompt and severe that he is quickly called back from any mental wandering into which he may have fallen. The mountain regions of the world have always furnished the truest exemplars of liberty and the most strenuous defenders of the faith. This was possibly owing to the fact that their horizon was so limited that they wanted of all they were compelled to look up. [Laughter and applause.]

At Montpelier.

MONTPELIER, Vt., Aug. 27.—The president was received here by Governor Page and escorted into the hall of the house of representatives, where the legislature of Vermont was gathered in joint assembly. The members of the legislature remained standing as the president entered and proceeded to the rostrum of the presiding officer, where Lieutenant Governor Fletcher assigned him. Then, at the tap of the gavel, the members resumed their seats and quiet had been restored Lieutenant Governor Fletcher in a few sentences introduced the president, who was greeted with applause. The president said:

To the Vermont Legislature.

MR. PRESIDENT AND GENTLEMEN OF THE LEGISLATURE OF THE STATE OF VERMONT: In the great variety of the duties of my position, which crowds a series of friendly demonstrations which began with my entry into this good state at the town of Vernon and continued to the towns of Vermont. The wisdom of your fathers devised that system of government and of local law for the general government which has found adoption and adaptation in all the states, the division of the powers of the general government into three just coordinate departments each independent and yet each having some power of control over the other, and each adapted to the highest degree to secure the liberty of the individual, the welfare of free communities and of the nation's honor and prosperity. [Applause.] It has been fortunate for us as a people that no serious shock has come to this great system of our

Rule of the Majority.

The compact of our government is a rule by the majority, and the method by which it is put in the expression by popular election of the will of the majority of the people. Law has no other sanction that that with us. If we shall err or anywhere allow a doubt to settle into the minds of our people whether the results of elections shall be honestly ascertained then all sanction is withdrawn from law and all respect from the rulers, who by false ballot are placed in public office. [Applause.]

Before the Capitol.

In front of the state capitol the president said:

A statesman of one of the southern states said to me with tears in his eyes shortly after my inauguration: Mr. President, I hope you will live long to give the people a fair election chance." I said in reply "A chance to do what? To cheat? To steal? That will have a chance to nullify any laws, and that I will not wink at the nullification of it, you ask that I should give a chance to do what is wrong? I cannot consider [Applause.] If you mean that obeying every public law and giving to every other man his full rights at the law and the constitution, they shall abide in my respect and in the peace and security of our institutions, then I shall have no fear so far as my power has, or equal chance with all our people. [Applause.] My duty is to choose what laws we will obey. The choice is made for us when a majority have, by lawful methods, made a law by which I am to be guided. We endeavor to repeal it. We may challenge its wisdom, but while it is the law it challenges our obedience. [Applause.]

A Tribute to the Flag.

At St. Johnsonbury the president paid an eloquent tribute to the flag and told the following story:

When Hood was investing Nashville, and when that gallant, unostentatious but always brave soldier, General Thomas—[applause]—was gathering the remnants of an army that he might confront his foe and defeat him, he was compelled to retrench through the beautiful grounds of a suburban resident of Nashville. The proprietor of these possessions remained. While I was tearing up the sod of his beautiful lawn he was removing his library and other valuables from his house, so that there might be no danger of the rebel fire. Happening into his library while he was thus engaged, I noticed that he had below the book shelf and taking out a handsome bunting flag sacked me if I had a garrison flag. I told him that I had not, but that I would. I have never been without the American flag in my house. [Applause.]

It would be useful if that could be said by every one of our homes. [Applause.] There is in the flag which we have all grown accustomed to folds untold every thread has some lesson to tell of sacrifice and heroism.

Hung from Heaven's Battlements.

I have it in my mind as I saw it one night in Newport harbor. Going out of the harbor one night about midnight, when the heavens were darkened with clouds, I saw a sight that will always live in my memory. The officers of the torpedo station had run up the starry banner and turned upon it, as we moved out of the harbor, two great electric search lights. It revealed the banner. While the staff and halliards below it were all hidden in blackness. It seemed to be gathered as if it had been by angel hands, the folds of heaven. Higher its folds in the darkness of night, an emblem of the hope of the free people. [Applause.]

No Place for the Red Flag.

Let us keep it then in our hearts, let it always be borne in our marching processions. [Applause.] We have no place here for the red flag [applause.] Applause.] Our patriotism combines stands for a free people, who have voluntarily placed themselves under the restraints of law, who have ordained a government which shall cease where it intrudes upon the rights or property of others. This is our compact; to these principles we offer to those who have cast in their lots with us—Not a liberty to destroy, but allberty to conserve and perpetuate. [Applause.]

WHO WILL SUCCEED PROCTOR?

Veazey, Stewart and Cheney are all Talked of.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 27.—If indications here can be depended upon, the successor of Secretary Proctor in the cabinet will be taken from New England, possibly from the Green Mountain state. It has been reported, with some show of authenticity, that the position was offered some time ago to Judge Veazey of the interstate commerce commission, contingent upon Secretary Proctor's apointment to the senate.

Failing Judge Veazey, the president's eye may turn to ex-Governor J. W. Stewart, of Vermont, to whom he made such a flattering reference in his speech at Vergennes.

It is believed by high officials in the war department that the most probable selection is ex-Governor Cheney, of New Hampshire, who was offered the place two years ago, but declined it for business reasons.

THE MALLEY CASE SETTLED.

Mrs. Reinhart Said to Have Withdrawn Her Suit for Breach of Promise.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—It is announced that the suit brought by Mrs. Marie Reinhart, of New York, against Edward Malley, of this city, for breach of promise of marriage, laying damages at $25,000, has been settled.

It is also alleged that Mrs. Reinhart was within reach of her friends at the time of her alleged mysterious disappearance from New York, and that her legal adviser was aware of her whereabouts.

It is intimated that the case will never come to trial and that Mrs. Reinhart has accepted a sum considerably less than one-fifth of her original claim. It will be remembered that she was employed as a governess in the family of Mr. Malley for about two years. She alleges that Malley betrayed her under promise of marriage.

A BEAR MAD FOR WHISKY.

The Beast in Quest of Drink Kills Four Persons.

ST. PETERSBURG, Aug. 27.—At Vilna, Russian Poland, the servants of a wealthy man had left open a cask of beer which belonged to him to drink whisky. The brute was taken into a tavern and while there stove in a keg of whisky in its anxiety to get at the liquor.

The owner with his children tried to prevent the animal from doing the damage, whereupon the beast turned furiously upon him and killed him and his three children.

Lawyers Meet at Boston.

BOSTON, Aug. 27.—The American Bar association held its fourteenth annual meeting—the first in New England—in Boston. Nearly 200 members were present, the meeting being presided over by President Baldwin. J. B. Curtis was nominated by the general council to represent Connecticut, F. C. Guiff, Delaware; R. Parker, New Jersey; G. A. Peabody, New York, and R. Vaux, Pennsylvania.

Testing the Big Gun.

SANDY HOOK, N. J., Aug. 27.—The first tests of the new 13-inch steel gun were unsatisfactory on account of the poor quality of the powder. With 440 pounds of powder (the largest charge ever used in this country) the velocity was 1,800 miles; pressure, 35,000 pounds, weight of shell, 1,000 pounds.

Flushing's Baby Firebugs.

FLUSHING, L. I., Aug. 27.—The burning of the barn of Hubert Williams on July 17 is no longer a mystery. The police have arrested George Skillen and Abraham Voorhies, aged seven and eight years respectively. They said they fired the barn because Williams drove them out of his orchard.

Counterfeiters Caught.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—Michael Porrotti, forty-five, Marguerite Porrotti, forty-four, and Josephine Porrotti, twelve, have been arrested on a charge of passing counterfeit coin. Crucibles and metals resembling silver were found at their rooms, 127 West Twenty-seventh street.

Bessie Reports too Late.

MILLER'S TRIPLE CRIME.

He Shoots His Wife, Her Mother and Himself.

SAD END OF DOMESTIC TROUBLE.

A Great Rock (R. I.) Man's Heiplessness Leaves Him, Refuses to Return and Is Nearly Shot and Kicked to Death by Her Infuriated Husband.

THOMASTON, L. I., Aug. 27.—A triple shooting affray, in which a husband attempted to shoot his wife, his mother-in-law and then himself, took place at Great Neck. None of the three injured is dead, but two of them are in a critical condition. Henry Miller, twenty-three years old, a jack of all trades and the husband of Mrs. Christine Miller, was the assailant in the case. Miller married his wife, who was then a Miss Nelson, four years ago. After their marriage the pair took up their residence at Flushing. Family jars were frequent from one cause or another. Mrs. Miller left her husband on several occasions, but Miller, with his loving ways and persuasive tongue, always induced her to return.

She Left Him.

At length a child was added to the household, and that seemed to cement more firmly the affections of the pair. Last June, however, the child died, and then Mrs. Miller left her husband. She took up her residence with her mother, Mrs. Lillie Nelson, at Great Neck, and persistently refused to return to Miller.

Miller, who asserts that the trouble is all due to the interference of his mother-in-law, decided that he would visit his wife at her mother's house and endeavor to obtain a reconciliation, but he met with a humiliating repulse. He left the house thoroughly dissatisfied. During Monday and Tuesday he considered the situation and at length came to the conclusion that his wife should either live with him or he would shoot her.

Peace or War.

He purchased a twenty-two caliber revolver and a bunch of bananas. The revolver he intended to use in case his wife should refuse his request. The bananas were intended as a peace offering in case she should consent. It was after o'clock when Miller arrived at the Nelson house. He found the front door barred and his wife and mother-in-law in bed. He pounded at the door and in reply to his summons Mrs. Miller came to the upper window and demanded to know who was there and what was wanted.

"It's me—Henry. I want you to come down and talk with me about the new job I've got."

But Broke Down the Door.

Mrs. Miller refused positively to come downstairs. This roused Miller's anger, and searching around the premises he soon found an ax, with which he began battering down the door. With quick strides he entered the room where the two thoroughly frightened women were clasped in each other's arms. Then Miller made his demand that his wife should return to his home. She firmly refused to do so, when Miller seized her by the arm and dragged her toward the stairway, telling her that he intended to take her life.

Mrs. Nelson, the mother of the girl, came to the rescue, and seizing her daughter by the arm attempted to prevent Miller from pulling her down stairs.

Shot Mother-in-Law and Wife.

Miller, losing all control of his temper at this move on the part of his mother-in-law, fired one shot at his mother-in-law, which took effect in her head, inflicting a painful but not serious wound. Mrs. Nelson ran away and Miller succeeded in forcing his wife down three or four steps. He then seized her by the throat with his left hand while with his right he leveled the revolver at her face and fired four shots in quick succession.

Two of the bullets took effect in her temple. One entered at the base of the nose and penetrated through the roof of the mouth. A fourth entered the mouth from the side. Mrs. Miller broke from her husband's grasp and with the blood streaming from the wounds in her head, reached the lower hall, where her husband overtook her, knocked her down and began kicking her.

"I'll Hang for You," He Said.

The more dead than alive woman managed to moan, "Henry, I'm dying."

The only response made by Miller was "I'll hang for you."

By some means Mrs. Miller managed to escape from the house. She hid in a corn field and then fled for the house of Mr. Fogakey. She fainted twice before reaching her destination. Here she remained all night, and in the morning she was sufficiently recovered to have a warrant issued for Miller's arrest.

Then Shot Himself.

As soon as he found that his wife had escaped his vengeance, Miller left the house and started down the road toward Manhasett. After walking about a mile, according to his ante-mortem statement, he reloaded his revolver very deliberately and fired four more shots—two in his temple and two in his mouth. He rolled over into the road, where he remained unconscious for four hours. On regaining consciousness he got up and walked four miles to the house of his mother at Great Neck Dr. Rogers, of Great Neck, Mr. Hoag and were called to attend him, said that his condition was a critical one.

Gored to Death by a Bull.

FARMINGDALE, N. J., Aug. 27.—William E. Conover, one of the best known Monmouth county farmers, was viciously attacked by a bull. The enraged animal knocked Mr. Conover down and gored him in the abdomen. Mr. Conover stabbed the animal repeatedly in the nose with a pocketknife. Conover died of his wounds.

SAN FRANCISCO, Aug. 27.—A California State Manufacturers' association has been formed by 800 employers for the purpose of resisting the alleged encroachments of the trades unions.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

The Pennsylvania Prohibitionists Nominate a State Ticket.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 27.—At the State Prohibition convention W. W. Hague, of Warren, was nominated for auditor general by acclamation and George Drayton, of Delaware, was nominated for state treasurer.

Chairman Stevens reported the platform, which, besides the usual planks against the saloon, declares for no license in licensing liquors, denounces the Baker ballot law; condemns the act providing for a convention to amend the state constitution; declares for local option; favors anti-contract labor laws; declares against monopolies and demands that the money circulation of the country shall be on a par; favors its trading interests and should be increased adequately to the growth of business and population.

After a brief discussion the platform, with the exception of the paragraph relating to the constitutional convention, which was stricken out, was adopted. The platform was supplemented by a resolution opposing the opening of the World's fair on Sunday.

When the convention reached the paragraph with resolutions which recognized almighty God, John J. S. McKee, of Butler, offered an amendment by recognizing the Lord Jesus Christ as the king of nations, and the Word of God as the source of all rightful authority. Loud cries of "No," and "Lay it on the table" followed and one delegate threatened to leave the convention if it was adopted. The amendment was finally tabled.

The state committee last evening organized by re-electing Professor H. D. Patton, of Lancaster, chairman, and William S. Essick, of Royer's Ford, secretary.

Block Wants a Convention.

WILLIAMS GROVE, Pa., Aug. 27.—The attendance at the third day's assembly of the Patrons of Husbandry is estimated at 16,000. Lieutenant Governor Black spoke in favor of a constitutional convention. Pennsylvania not having had, he asserted, an honest election in twenty-five years. The expense of holding it, he declared, would be but a million dollars more than Bardsley stole from the treasury. Congressman Belshoover opposed silver coinage. In the afternoon the new Grange hall was dedicated.

FROM THE PIT OF DEATH

Sixty-one Bodies Recovered and the Work Finished.

SEVENTEEN PERSONS ARE MISSING

It Is Thought That Their Mangled Remains May Have Been Consumed in the Intense Heat That Followed the Collapse of the Pearl Place Building.

NEW YORK, Aug. 27.—At last the weary search for bodies in the Park place ruins is over, but curious crowds still linger about the spot gazing at the huge pile of debris in the street and at the black hole from which sixty-one blackened and battered lifeless human beings were taken, as if held at the scene by some horrible fascination. The sixty-first body, that of a woman, was the last in the awful pit of death. At 2 o'clock Acting Fire Chief Reilly said that the search for the dead in the ruins was completed and that no more bodies remained there. Work was at once stopped and the laborers employed in clearing out the debris were discharged.

Seventeen Still Missing.

The verified list of the missing shows thirty-five persons unaccounted for. The number of unidentified dead taken from the ruins is eighteen. Allowing that eighteen of the missing persons are represented by the unknown dead, it will be seen that there are still seventeen unaccounted for. They are not in the ruins. And if not, comes the natural query from every side, "Where are they?" The theory is advanced that owing to the fierceness of the flames, which raged several hours, some of the bodies were entirely consumed. The list as identified up to the present time is as follows:

The Identified Dead.

Charles Brettner, Gustav Carry, Leonard B. Cole, Ad Dodenhoff, Harris A. Fleming, John Gillis, Lottie Gillis, John Hyland, Arthur Kittle, George Lester, Robert H. Marks, Sarah McMahon, Annie Muller, Peter Miller, Albert Middleton, Andrew Peterson, Maggie Quinn, Mary Reddin, Gustave Reiter, Wilhelm Schell, — Schmidlapp, Conrad Schmidt, M. H. Shadduck, John Steinke, Michael Slattery, Gustave Steinet, George Sullivan, Ferdinand Tripp, Annie Tully, Otto Walter, Henry Williams, Mary Williams, Lizzie Wood, Gustave Zeckert.

The Inquest.

Coroner Hanley will empanel a jury today to hold an inquest in the case of the victims of the collapsed building. He intends to select architects, builders, practical men and at least one chemist or engineer. He intends to hold the inquest next Tuesday. At noon the mayor appointed a relief committee to look after the sufferers from the disaster. It is composed of the following gentlemen: Elbridge T. Gerry, J. Edward Simmons, Watson B. Dickerman, Charles Stewart Smith, D. Willis James, John S. Crimmins, Henry Hilton, Theodore Havemeyer, Henry R. Hyde, Morris K. Jesup, Charles G. Wilson, Evan Thomas, Theodore Moss, David H. King, Samuel Sampson, George H. Hendrick, John W. Cockcroft, W. L. Davis, William M. Laffan, W. L. Brown, W. Bradford Merrill, George L. Spinney, Arthur L. Rogers and Oswald Ottendorfer. The subscriptions already reach $1,430. Mrs. D. Jones Crain, owner of the collapsed building, subscribed $1,000 of this amount.

All Accounted for Here.

The Herald claims that forty-six bodies have been identified, that fifteen remain unknown, and that the remaining alleged missing ones are alive or never did actually exist. Some of the names that have appeared were found to be entirely mythical and given by supposedly anxious inquirers as a subterfuge to obtain admission to the morgue for the gratification of personal curiosity.

The Herald says several tenants moved out of the collapsed building years ago because they considered it unsafe. The explosion theory of the accident has been itself exploded.

Burying the Victims.

The funeral services over the victims of the Park place disaster went on throughout this city and Brooklyn yesterday and today, and almost a third of the total number of poor scorched bodies so far recovered are now resting in God's acre.

A SHAM NAVAL ENGAGEMENT.

Eleven Yankee Warships in Battle Array at Bar Harbor.

BAR HARBOR, Me., Aug. 27.—Secretary Tracy and a number of guests, among whom were Mrs. Blaine, Charles Godwin, Colonel Codman, Senator Lispenard Stewart, George Alger and Senator Cameron, viewed the manoeuvres of the white squadron from the Despatch. At 10:15 the Despatch led the way out of the harbor, followed by the Philadelphia, Newark, Petrel, Vesuvius and Enterprise in line through the channel inside the Bald Porcupine, and the Chicago, Cushing, Atlanta, Yorktown and Boston outside. Many steamers crowded with sightseers followed in the fleet.

When outside Egg Rock each flagship fired a secretary's salute of nineteen guns, then, steaming out to sea, the fleet formed in line with the Despatch with Secretary Tracy in the center, the Philadelphia, Admiral Gherardi, on the right, and the Chicago, Admiral Walker, on the left. After this the ships went through the various evolutions while the Cushing and Vesuvius dropped targets for practice with heavy guns. The manoeuvres ended with a sham battle. Everything passed off in a very satisfactory manner. The fleet returned to the harbor shortly before 2 o'clock. The squadron will go to Belfast, Me., on Monday and remain there until Wednesday morning, when it will sail for Bath. It will leave Bath for Portland Sept. 4.

The Treasurer's Office All Right.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 27.—The legislative committee charged with the investigation of the state treasury and the auditor general's department met and examined the named officers and found everything correct. John A. Glenn, corporation clerk in the auditor general's department, explained that thousands of dollars of taxes are tied up in Hungdon. State Treasurer Boyer says he had no written or other evidence of indebtedness due any of his predecessors, and Corporation Clerk Glenn stated that he knew nothing whatever of the Bardsley matter. Auditor General McCamant being absent, the committee adjourned to meet on Sept. 4 and 5.

Inspector Tolman's Marriage.

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Aug. 27.—Dr. Herbert C. Tolman, who has been instructor at Yale and who is now professor at Madison, Wis., and Miss Mary B., daughter of Mrs. J. F. Wells, were married yesterday in the College street church.

OUR "Y. S. F"

BLACK HOSIERY is undoubtedly the BEST and CHEAPEST sold anywhere. They wear Better and keep their color Longer than any other.

This is the experience of many ladies who have tried all the different makes.

If you will give them one trial you will surely be convinced that every word of the above is true.

OUR 25c. grade is as good as those sold for 30c. elsewhere. And all the other grades are likewise as cheap.

IF YOU are not using them if will pay you to look into the matter.

WE offer Special Inducements now to any who wish to furnish with Carpets, Mattings, Oil Cloth, Lace and Chenille Curtains, Shades, Etc.

WOMAN'S HOME

THE VALUE OF SUNLIGHT.

Children Should Have Plenty of It and Sleeping Rooms Need Windows.

There are very few people who appreciate properly the hygienic powers of sunlight. It is true of people, as it is true of plants, that they cannot thrive without abundance of sunlight as well as abundance of fresh air. The necessity for sunlight is so well recognized that in all the recent lectures to nurses of the sick they are ordered to admit the sunlight freely to the sickroom in all cases, except where the strong light is specially prohibited by the physician. Not long ago sun baths were frequently recommended for certain diseases, and this treatment has since proved exceedingly valuable. The orientals, who have gardens on the tops of their houses, appreciate the value of sunlight as a tonic and health giver.

The cases of persons who suffer from actual sunstroke are much fewer than of those who suffer from the want of vitalized air and want of sunshine. The mass of cases reported as sunstroke in the cities are the result of prostration from heat, and occur in close rooms within doors as frequently as out of doors. In most such cases the deteriorated condition of the system of the individual, caused by confinement in rooms insufficiently aired and lighted, is at the bottom of the trouble.

It is especially necessary that children should have an abundance of freedom to romp out of doors in the sunshine, so that they will acquire an abundance of red blood, and with it strength and life. Pale, sallow complexion is always a watery condition of the blood that can only be remedied by an abundance of outdoor exercise. In winter it is always best to give a little child its exercise in the middle of the day, but as the season changes the time for exercise changes. In summer the best time is usually early in the morning before 10 o'clock and after 3 in the afternoon.

In the morning a rubber sheet, if the ground is damp, should be spread in a shaded place over the grass, and a blanket spread over this, and the little one taken out of his carriage and allowed to frolic about in the mild morning sun. The baby will gain marvelously from such exercise, and it will be all the better off if it is kept under the trees to take its midday nap instead of being taken into the house. Where is there such health as that found among the sturdy peasant children of Germany, who are allowed to roam about in the sunshine instead of cap or hat all the time, their hair bleaches line white and their cheeks turn rosy red?

No room in any house is fit for a living or a sleeping room which has not windows through which sunshine and air can be freely admitted. The family rooms of a house should be built on the south and east sides, so as to receive the health giving effects of the morning sun, which carry away the malaria and miasmic vapors than all the drugs in the world can. —New York Tribune.

Use the Odds and Ends.

"There! I know that is at least the twenty-seventh time I have told that girl not to throw away half worn towels!" exclaimed a prudent and practical housekeeper, as she stood on the back porch and saw the second time a pair of ragged towels of old linen over the fence into the back yard. "I see you look surprised," she continued; "but I don't think you would after you had gone through with what I have undertaken. Sometimes I have to do my own work, and then one of my first talks is the search for cloths. New linen, or, indeed, any other new fabric, is not at all agreeable to use, especially for floor or pantry cloths; and when I get into the kitchen I find that every scrap of old material I have either been thrown away, burned up or put out of reach in some way or other, and I must sometimes take quite good towels for such purposes.

"After towels are worn in holes, I take two or three of them, fold the ends over to the middle, and baste each one carefully so that the whole places may overlap those which are badly worn. Then place two such prepared pieces together and baste them again. Then stitch them crosswise, lengthwise, bias and in all directions. This makes a rather thick soft cloth which is worth more as an absorbent than any other I has can be found. I have made some of my most useful house cloths from pieces of old towels, tablecloths, napkins and the like. The smaller soft bits worn pieces were placed inside, and with better pieces as covers the whole was quilted together either by machine or by hand. When I do my own work I never go without an abundance of excellent articles of this sort. Sometimes I make various grades of them for the numberless purposes for which such cloths are required."—New York Ledger.

When Children Try and Obey.

"I told you once," writes a mother in a personal letter, which I feel sure she will forgive my using in this way, "of my difficulty in commanding obedience, and you cautioned me not to fail to govern freely and fully when they were genuine. I have no trouble with that, for they are too independent to ever ask to be governed. I have to be satisfied with a cessation of hostilities—and slight efforts the next time to do better. This, I find, means more than it seems to, and although it has been very hard to understand and be patient with, I see that some things improve as time goes on."

While I read down to "cessation of hostilities," I held my breath, but the next sentence brought a sigh of relief—"and slight efforts next time to do better." "It has been hard to understand," O mother heart! that does understand even the slight efforts to do better. Take courage! You cannot know (who can?) what an awful effort, what a subduing of self will is necessary for the outward evidence of "slight efforts." Can any one of what is called "a good disposition" imagine, for one moment the fight with self which is necessary to some of the less favored before even a semblance of good behavior can be accomplished? Be patient! try so hard that the single desire to do right means more with many, often though they fail from grace, than the constant, even, willing of a naturally sweet, amiable disposition.—Home Magazine.

What a Healthy Woman Says.

I sat for half an hour and talked, the other day, with a woman who seemed to glory in the delicacy and frailty of her own health. She stated almost with pride that she descanted upon her torpid liver and her weak head. She exulted in the fact that her doctor's bills were something enormous, and the amount reaped by the corner druggist from the fat meadow lands of her husband's farm not one a good harvest for a rainy day.

I longed to say to her: "Madam, this is all wrong. You are grossly offending God by allowing yourself to become the resident of so many drugs. He meant you to be a jewel casket, and you have turned yourself into a pill box and a potion bottle. What would you think of an apple that should find speech on some radiant September morning and challenge the orchard with the cry, 'I am the wormiest apple of the lot! I defy you to produce a more perfect case of premature and all pervading decay!' If you are sick, keep quiet about it. You have either ignored the laws of health yourself or you are the poor, irresponsible product of a hereditary cursed vine, and in either case you had better keep quiet and 'lay low.' To be forever ailing is a disgrace to some one, either to yourself or to your ancestors.

"Nature never yet turned out an imperfect specimen from her workshop. The pianomaker is no more careful that each instrument sent out from the shop should be without fault or blemish than nature is in regard to her handiwork. But if you pound on the piano with a mast ax, and stuff it full of sand, no wonder the delicacy of the original tone becomes impaired. Take care of your piano, if you have one, and it will last for years. Take care of your body, and it will stand you in need until you put on a new one in the robing room of the tomb."—Chicago Herald.

To Carry Money Safely.

You are going away; you have a large sum of money to take with you, and you are just the least little bit worried as to the best way to carry it. If you put the money in your pocket your pockets might be picked. Such things have happened. A bag is not to be thought of; that is lawful prey. While if the precious parcel is hidden away in your trunk there is the possibility of the trunk getting lost or destroyed in some way. Here is a suggestion: Have a small chamois bag to carry your money and your valuables in. This is a pretty and sensible way to make it. Take for a model one of your eyeglasses. It is not quite large enough to answer your purpose it will be very little trouble to cut the chamois envelope a little larger. Line it with silk of your favorite color and bind the edges with narrow ribbon.

For the sake of security have the flap large and square. This is fastened with buttons and eyes hidden by small bows. A loop of narrow ribbon is fastened to the upper corners of the envelope. Let the loop be long enough to go over the head. This little envelope bag can be worn under the clothing, or even under the corset. The plain face of the bag can be decorated with half moons, disks, irregular lines and an appropriate motto, if you wish it. But if the bag is intended to see much service it is better to have it as plain as possible and without ornamentation.—New York Advertiser.

Women's Wraps in 1866.

At the beginning of 1866 the black silk paletot was in fashion. The back was much longer than the front, and bows. A part of the way up. The trimming was a conglomerate assortment of silk cords, fancy buttons and bugle fringes. At this time the ugly loose sacque was in favor, and certainly there never was a more shapeless and unbecoming garment than this. Its wearers looked alike when hidden under its disfiguring folds. For summer wear it was frequently of white mohair, with a trimming of black ribbon velvet or of jet beads and fringe.

A few years later one of the leading dry goods houses advertised the orcolan, which seems to have been a short talma cape, the back of which was drawn in at the waist by an invisible under belt. A fancy braid and button trimming which simulated a hood covered the space between the shoulders, and a ruffle of fringe finished the bottom. In 1874 a rather more sightly wrap was introduced. It was on the mantilla order, with square scarf fronts cut in scallops all around. Next, in 1875, came the "dolman" wraps of the cape variety, slashed up the middle, and a deep, pointed hood fell from neck to waist and ended in a big tassel. This cloak was bordered with a design in braiding or embroidery.—Mercer.

New Yorkers' Diamonds.

Mrs. Astor has the famous bowknot of diamonds presented in 1645 by Louis XIII to Cardinal Richelieu. This was purchased by Mrs. Astor at the sale of the French crown jewels. She owns, too, a stomacher composed of thirteen rows of first water gems, which was once the property of Marie Antoinette. Mrs. Astor also owns the finest collection of emeralds in this country, and she has a famous tiara of diamonds.

In 1884 W. K. Vanderbilt's jewel case there is a pearl necklace which was once worn by Catharine of Russia. Mrs. W. K. Vanderbilt owns, too, a string of dia monds which is unique in design and of enormous value. It is so long that she sometimes wears it wound like a rope over her corsage. It is composed of large diamonds pierced with pigeon blood rubies set between them.

Mrs. Cornelius Vanderbilt's pet fancy in jewels is the ruby. She owns some of the finest rubies in the country.

Mrs. W. Waldorf Astor has what is reputed to be the finest collection of black pearls. She inherited them from her mother-in-law, the late Mrs. John Jacob Astor.—New York Sun.

The First Woman Preachers.

Olympia Brown, or, as she has since become, the Rev. Olympia Brown Willis, was not by any means the first woman ordained in this country, that distinction being possessed by the Rev. Antoinette Brown Blackwell, who entered the theological class of Oberlin college somewhere about 1847. She, too, her first sermon was preached in a school house in Henrietta, O., on a Sunday afternoon, and she found the people "if a little more alert than usual, splendidly at fixing their attentive and orderly as any sober minded congregation."

At the time Mrs. Black well was ordained she was pastor of the church of South Butler and Savannah, in Ohio, which accordingly departed from precedent in a manner somewhat revolutionary.

Olympia Brown has probably the longest record of service of any woman minister, as, although not ordained until 1863, she has been in the pulpit ever since, while Mrs. Black well has retired from pastoral duty.—Chicago Tribune.

Thyme Cure for Whooping Cough.

Common thyme, which was recommended in whooping cough three or four years ago by S. B. Johnson, is regarded by Dr. Newton, who writes a paper on the subject in a Finnish medical journal, as almost worthy the title of a specific. Dr. Newton says he has thoroughly tested it, and certainly there never was a more shapeless and unbecoming garment than this. Its wearers looked alike when hidden under its disfiguring folds. For summer wear it was frequently of white mohair, cuts short the disease in a fortnight, the symptoms generally vanishing in two or three days. They are, he finds, liable to return, if the thyme is not regularly taken for at least two weeks.

Regarding the dose, he advises that a large quantity than Dr. Johnson prescribed be taken. He gives from one ounce and a half to six ounces per diem combined with a little marshmallow syrup. He never saw an undesirable effect produced, except slight diarrhea. It is important that the drug should be used quite fresh.

Women Who Have Swallowed Pins.

In an old newspaper appears an account of a man who swallowed eggs whole with shells on. Needles and pins without number have been swallowed. It is recorded by a French doctor that a female patient of his had swallowed so many needles that after her death 1,500 were extracted from various parts of her body. Her death was not caused by the presence of the needles in her body, nor did they appear to have any effect upon her general health; but in another case which was brought before a society in Dublin, a woman in Belfast had swallowed 300 needles owned her death to their presence.

Another woman had at various times swallowed 200 pins, and these behaved in a most extraordinary manner, coming out head first from various parts of her body. There are several other cases of this kind on record, but it is curious to note that all the people who have swallowed needles or pins have been women.—London Tit-Bits.

Little Things to Observe.

When you invite any one to come to your house don't say "Come any time," particularly if you invite them to take dinner or luncheon with you. Appoint an hour then they know you wish them to come.

When any one asks you for a photograph of yourself don't say you will give it if you "have any left." This was well enough in the early days of the photograph album, but pictures are so common now that when you are asked for one you are really compli mented.

When some one makes a pretty speech to you don't say, "You are kind to say so." "You are kind to think so" is more short legs, called into use by means of a spring. When not in use the legs fold close under the tray.

England's census will strike dismay to the hearts of womankind, for there are now 100.4 women to every 100 men, remembering how many Englishmen marry American wives and how many never marry at all, the outlook is not promising.

Lime water may be made cheaply by adding a fresh piece of lime as large as an egg, pouring two quarts of soft water on it and allowing it to stand two or three hours, shaking it occasionally. Bottle and keep for use.

If any housekeeper finds it imperative to clean window panes on icy cold day she can accomplish it safely by using a cloth dampened with alcohol, which never freezes.

Sarah Bernhardt says that she is always nervous before the curtain goes up. This is an unexpected confession from one who has faced many exacting audiences.

Any one can add strength and weight to his body by rubbing well with cloth oil after a warm bath. Oil baths are peculiarly beneficial to weak children.

FASHIONS

FASHIONABLE DAY DRESS.

Two Attractive Costumes Illustrated and Described.

Lace in the deep flouncing width has been a great deal used in trimming crepons and cottons. It sounds incongruous to trim a simple spotted or figured print with a flounce of deep lace round the skirt and basque, but so fashion dictates. On a tall figure the effect is good, and on some cottons the lace appears in good taste. Lately there is a tendency to use as trimming creamy white lace in place of the black that is so fashionable.

Undoubtedly pink and black are a favorite color combination. Many black morning gowns are worn with pink linen cuffs and collar. The pink corresponds in shade with the roses in the hat or bonnet. Pink ties are pretty and stylish. A soft or rose pink is a becoming shade to almost every body.

TWO ATTRACTIVE TOILETS.

One figure of the cut illustrates a day costume of rose colored striped crepon; the bodice is trimmed with black lace and jet. It has a lace flounce as a basque in front and is cut full to the back at the back; the skirt has a black lace flounce with jet heading; bonnet of black net, three pink roses in front, two gold wings and a band of black velvet ribbon.

The other figure shows a dress of sky blue bengaline trimmed with cream imitation Irish point lace and gold and silver mixed embroidery.

The Inventor of Pillow Lace.

The airy network of the spider's web may have first suggested to Barbara Uttman, the wife of a German burgess, the idea of pillow lace, which was invented by her about the middle of the fifteenth century at St. Annaberg, in Saxony, where she lived. It was at first called bone lace, from the bone pins which were used to twist the thread round in forming the pattern, and becoming exceedingly popular it soon spread into the Netherlands and thence to France.—Chambers' Journal.

YESTERDAY'S RE-UNION

INTERESTING EXERCISES AT THE CRESCENT RINK.

Mayor Gilbert's Address Brought Forth Considerable Applause. — Lawyer McSherry's Sarcastic Sayings.—The Ball Last. Evening.

Yesterday's News gave an account of the re-union of the Twenty-eighth Regiment up to the time of going to press, when Mayor Gilbert began to address the assemblage. His remarks were in substance as follows:

"It gives me great pleasure to be here to-day. I favor re-unions. I think they should be held more frequently. To men like yourselves who stood shoulder to shoulder and marched step by step, this must be a glorious event. What recollections you can tell of your battles. How many of your comrades have you seen fall! Oh; you know. I do not. You have survived the perils. To-day as you gather around this festive board your minds recall the trials you underwent. The defeats you met with and the victories that are yours. It was a glorious termination and I trust indeed that it was a pleasant event to you. You can recall the battle of Fredricksburg. It was the greatest crisis in your lives. It was the first time you were called to duty, and how well you did it, let your fully decimated ranks tell. Your record is a good one. The defeat was not your fault, however—it was the fault of a sad mistake. Yesterday your comrades stemmed the tide of defeat until after four of five days you got into a place of safety. I love to follow the line of march of true and patriotic men. During the war I can recall two very important incidents of my life. The first was on the morning of the sixth of April, when I was standing on Broadway watching the Massachusetts pass. Tramp, tramp, tramp. It meant that the war had begun. We did not until then realize it. We thought not of the forlorn debates in Congress. We could not believe it. If was only and only then that we realized it. The other event was the death of President Lincoln. He that had guided us through the terrible struggle. One morning when I arose I found the paper on our table. Every double-headed and the column rules printed very black. What did it mean? Why it meant that Lincoln had been shot by the cruel hand of an assassin! What did that mean? Oh; it was something terrible to realize. To think that we were on the verge of the childhood of his glory he should be taken away from us! I have often thought it was an example. We now revere his memory! We revere his actions! Millions in the past, millions in the future will honor Lincoln's memory. Gentlemen of the Twenty-eighth Regiment I extend to you a cordial welcome to our city. When I received your invitation to take part in this re-union I could not but feel a tinge of sadness in my heart. I opened "You are invited to attend the re-union of the surviving members of the Twenty-eighth Regiment. Oh! my friends, what does that mean? Where are the 980 men who left Freehold? Where are your great leader? Where are all young men when they enlisted. Grant was only thirty-eight years old. Sherman forty-one years, McPherson 45, Meade 46, McClellan 35. All young men. You are the survivors. Your time also will soon come. You are all marching to the mysterious realm, but we must not grow faint hearted. We must keep up courage."

During his address Mayor Gilbert was continually interrupted by applause and as one of the veterans said, his every word touched your heart. During his remarks the mayor also quoted two poems which were heartily received.

The Misses Manning then sang "Marching through Georgia" and were encored.

The Rev. Mr. Stewart followed with a stirring address. He reviewed the history of the regiment, told of their famous history. He also lauded the Women's Relief Corps for their efforts in behalf of the Grand Army.

A quartette then rendered a selection.

Lawyer Howard McSherry followed. His remarks from the beginning to the end were very sarcastic. He started off by saying that he had attended a number of re-unions, but this one was the first one that he had attended that he had not heard the orators express their regret that they were not soldiers.? Continuing, he said: "I wish the councilmen of New Brunswick and Perth Amboy were here. I want to show them what it is to ride on good roads. Plainfield has the best roads of any city in the State. You also have good cigars here. I know because I smoked some of them. If you were over in New Brunswick I could show you the public park with the fountain spraying. I could show you the electric lights in the public library and I could show you the soldiers' monument if it has not dropped out of sight since I left."

The day's festivities concluded with a grand ball last evening which was well attended.

BOROUGH IMPROVEMENTS.

What is Being Done, What is Also Needed.

Grandview avenue, North Plainfield, is being graded preparatory to macadamizing.

A water pipe, a much-needed improvement, was put in at the corner of Grandview avenue and Somerset street, Wednesday, by Street Commissioner Conover.

A pipe for the carrying off water is also greatly needed at the corner of Somerset street and Summit avenue.

Manning avenue should be macadamized. It is one of the most populous avenues in the borough, and, as far as the condition of the roadway, one of the poorest.

MR. KREWSON'S STATEMENT.

About Some Charges That He Struck a Woman.

In the case of Joseph Levy, whose property by due process of law was seized for non-payment of rent, last Wednesday, and held subject to the claim of Chief Carey, for the rent, there was no assault and battery and no breaking and entering, Mr. Krewson says. He adds: "I was engaged as a truckman to remove the goods under a warrant from Justice Nodgrie. I called at the house in company with Mr. G. R. Musgrave, who was deputized to act in the matter by Constable Amos Moffett. Mr. Moffett said he would attend to the matter himself, but for the fact that he had to go to Cranford to attend to a case there. Mr. Musgrave exhibited the warrant and demanded the money or goods. Mrs. Levy said she had a receipt showing that she had paid the rent due. Mr. Musgrave asked her to show it, which she would not do. He said he would not touch anything there if she showed the receipt. I then went to Mr. Carey and told him that Mrs. Levy claimed to have a receipt. Mr. Carey said the August rent was not paid and her statement was not true, and went with us back to the store. The door had been locked after my departure. Levy's son unlocked it and admitted us without the slightest objection. The goods had been all packed up preparatory to removing them to New York, and Mr. Musgrave as constable, and myself proceeded to put the boxes of goods on the truck. Mrs. Levy took a seat on the truck to prevent our doing so. I told her she must get off, as the truck belonged to me. She said she wouldn't, and I thereupon picked her up as gently as possible and placed her on her feet on the sidewalk. She then stood on the sidewalk and swore at us. When we started to remove the goods, she flew at me, saying, 'I fight you! I fight you?' She struck at me five or six times, and tried with both hands to scratch me. I simply warded off her blows with one hand, while helping load the boxes on the truck with the other. Then her brother caught hold of her and pushed her out of the way. She fell on one of the boxes, and was not injured in the slightest. She was greatly excited. Her brother said with an oath, 'Get inside. I can attend to this matter.' As to the story that I touched her at all, except to ward off her blows and prevent her scratching me, it is absolutely out of the whole cloth. No one struck her in my presence, and I was present all the time of the occurrence."

Mr. Levy saw a NEWS reporter to-day. He claims to have two receipts showing that he paid the rent twice for July, the last time on the 12th of August. He says he did not intend to do this, and did not notice that the receipt read "for July," when, he says, it should have read "for August." It is claimed that one payment was to Mr. Carey himself and the other to Mr. Carey's son, a young man, who is his father's bookkeeper, and it is believed that Mr. Carey had inadvertently omitted to make the entry. The mistake would be of course quite excusable. If this be the case, there were evidently blunders on both sides, Mr. Levy having no receipt on its face for the August rent, and Mr. Carey having been over paid for July, which is denied.

Some months ago Levy's property was sold under judgment, obtained by a New York creditor for a small amount. This was after Levy had obtained the lease until next April from Mr. Carey. Levy then resumed business in his wife's name, and she stocked up the store with about $1,000 worth of goods. These goods would of course be liable for the rent in case it was not paid. Mr. Levy has admitted that he and his wife intended to remove the goods which were the only security Mr. Carey had for the rent, and the natural presumption is that the removal was intended to evade payment and defraud Mr. Carey, and hence his excuse for invoking the aid of the law to prevent the goods being spirited away. The payments were due monthly in advance, but the liability was for the term of the lease.

IT WAS ALL A STORY.

Westfield Citizens Did Not Lynch the Accused Pfeiffer.

John Pfeiffer, the Westfield man who is accused of throwing poison in Lawrence Clark's well, will be taken from the County Jail to Westfield to-day for a hearing.

A story was printed in a Newark paper yesterday that a mob from Westfield had marched to Elizabeth, battered down the jail and hanged Pfeiffer to the nearest tree. There was not the slightest foundation for such a fake. No threats have been made against the prisoner since he was put in jail.

There is considerable feeling against him in Westfield, but not to such an extent that any attempt at lynching is feared by the authorities.

THE AUTOCRAT'S BIRTHDAY.

Observations by a Plainfield Literateur.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—In the gambrell-roofed house in Cambridge, "not one of those old Tory, Episcopal church-goer's strongholds," now used by Harvard College as a home for Edward Everett's library, Oliver Wendell Holmes was born eighty-two years ago to-morrow. There, in childhood, he received his mental training, his religious catechumen, — there he passed odd moments in his father's "Library Hospital," and gathered passages of ro, those scribes bequeathed "their lingering legends to the after time." "It was a great happiness to have been born in an old house haunted by such recollections, with harmless ghosts walking its corridors, with fields of waving grass and trees and singing birds, and that vast territory of four or five acres around it to give a child the sense that he was born to a noble principality." This sense of being born to a noble principality is the characteristic which brings Montaigne to mind when we think of Holmes. Both have told the world of themselves with so much confidence that the world feels it has a share in the birthright of either.

As Don Quixote is distinctly Spanish, so is Holmes distinctly Yankee. The wit which could call the Boston State House the Hub of the solar system is the typical New England wit which has its component expenditure through the treasury of Lowell's and Holmes' brains. Wit has served him in place of a robust body, for cheerfulness has prolonged his days. The old Scottish proverb,

"Birth's gude but breath's better" is exemplified in his useful and interesting life, and that he has jested with reason,—

"In a measure so kindly, you doubt if the That are trodden upon are your own or your foes,"—

we are sure, for jesting lies bring secret aches, but the Holmes' old age is cheerful not sorrowful.

Born in the same year with Tennyson, Lincoln, Lord Houghton, Mrs. Browning, Gladstone, Poe, Darwin, Fanny Kemble and Oliver Johnson,—nine individuals whose genius has won for them the applause of the thoughtful world, none of them has given so much personality to impart to others a happy mode of life as the autocrat. When first he appeared at the breakfast table, the audience was assured—for a good physician has a fame for geniality which assures him of a large amount of applause, and the autocrat has never grown aweary of praise. It is doubtful, however if he then foresaw how sincere was the interest manifested in every action of his life and brain. A merry old gentleman is invariably made a pet of, but Dr. Holmes has lost little by adulation.

He is still youthful and brilliant,—may he ever remain so! How prophetic his verse—

"And if I should live to be
The last leaf upon the tree,
In the Spring—
Let them laugh as I do now
At the old forsaken bow
While I sing."

may become, is not known, but of the old coterie of scholars and companions of the Saturday Club,—the finest fibre of New England stock,—only Holmes and Whittier are left. We can spare neither of them from the annals of the century's growth, but yet we must echo that gracious prayer of the Quaker bard,

"Long be it ere the table shall be set
For the last breakfast of the autocrat.
And love repeat, with smiles and tears,
His own sweet songs, that time shall not forget."

Doctor Holmes' iron constitution buckled with his indomitable cheerfulness, will spare him to us many years, no doubt, and though his voice will be seldom heard, yet he will be dear to us as a singer who never made us gloomy. His ridicule does not promote a victory, for he jests from both sides of the question, and his wit is an inward satisfaction of mind, not conscious even of ecclesiastical restraint, for he reverences nothing, inasmuch as nothing is too sacred for his wit; yet it is the foundation of his jests with, not the truth of Heaven. If a sigh is needed, or a tear come forth, he will not stop them, for after the rain the sunshine; and as a physician, knowing the woes of men, he must drop a sigh for their sufferings, but his heart is seldom counsels "Be full of cheer." He is now

"Our Patriarch; hence whoever doth follow him as he commands can see
That to be happy you've got merchandise."

Mrs. Steadman has placed his poetry beneath his prose writings, but without discredit to the poems. In his youth there was a lightness mingled with graceful thought, which made his poems spirited, often full of pictures done with the freedom of the aquarellists. In "The Meeting of the Dryads" he showed his master-hand as a poet, though there is an ease,—with which it would seem all his poems are written,—which is his only short-coming. "La Grisette" is one of the cleverest of his picture-poems; and the ballad of "Agnes"

"With her golden beads
And nought beside as dower," has many a charm of romance, gleaned from a poet's brain. All of his lyrics have the gift of song in them; but in his occasional poems he is most happy,—when he is pronouncing his in memoriam over departed friends, or brightly paying tribute to the brilliant guest or gala occasion. In his age, his muse has grown mellower, tenderer of the ties which have made his life eventful,—it has the bright essence of love for all things, a love which has been the root and essence of his success and popularity. It is the love for the past, now, the love for old days, old friends, old thoughts, old times, for

"There is no time like the old time when you and I were young.
When the buds of April blossomed, and the birds of Springtime sung!
The gardens brighter glories by Summer
sun are burning,
But oh! the sweet, sweet violets, the flowers that open'd first."

Doctor Holmes represents a survival of the olden time that our grand-mothers delight to relate about, the days of reverence and courtly breeding, and useful scholarship, the days when Love was master. Can Holmes die of old age having once sung this song?—

"Old time his rusty scythe may whet,
The unmowed grass is growing yet
Beneath the sheltering snow, my boys;
And if the worst at last befall
Is love worn out? Is life a task?
We'll bravely answer No! my boys,
We'll bravely answer No!

Why Are Old Cars Used?

TO THE EDITOR OF THE NEWS:—It seems that, as a general thing, old cars are used for excursion trains. They are frequently out of repair, and some day a terrible accident may result from it. Almost every excursion that has left this city has been delayed by hot boxes, or non-working brakes. The train this morning, containing the Warren Mission excursionists, was in two sections of seven cars each. Every car was crowded and a pleasant day will doubtless be enjoyed. A brisk rain fell for a few moments as the sections were starting, but the excursionists had come prepared to go to the sea-shore, rain or shine, and they went. A little trouble was had starting the first section. The brakes on the front of the third car refused to work. OBSERVER.

PERSONAL.

Mr. and Mrs. C. S. Orr of Buffalo, N. Y., are visiting friends on West Second street.

Mrs. Miles of New York is visiting her mother, Mrs. Hudson, of Somerset street, North Plainfield.

Mr. E. S. Rogers, of the firm of Rogers Bros., has gone to Barnegat bay for a four days' fishing trip.

Mr. R. R. Fairchild, formerly of this city, but now of Yonkers, N. Y., is on a short visit to friends here.

Mr. B. A. Hegeman of Sycamore avenue is stopping at the Pocono Mountain House, Mt. Pocono, Pa., for a few weeks.

Mr. Chas. Ward of Evona has accepted an engagement with a theatrical Company. He will leave Plainfield Monday next.

Capt. Frank L. C. Martin of the Plainfield Bicycle Club started this morning to attend the Wheelmen's Encampment at Asbury Park, N. J.

Mrs. Cousseu and her daughter, Miss Lillie, have again removed to this city after a few years' stay at Jersey City. They will reside on West Second street.

THAT NEW STREET.

This Fall It Will Probably be Commenced.

The continuation of Broadway through the borough, as projected, is an improvement which has been discussed for about twenty years. Discussing the question, sometimes without the first syllable, is all that has been done until 1891.

This year, the proposed Young Men's Christian Association building on East Front street, rendered some decided movement necessary, or else the entire failure of the plan.

This decided move has been taken at the recent meetings of property-holders, and as the last meeting, not later than September 3d, that the committee may know how many to arrange for.

It is proposed to go by rail to High Bridge, N. J., thence by wagons several miles through a picturesque region.

The expenses will be about three dollars each. Train leave 8:07.

The Outing Committee are, J. E. Stewart, Harold Serrell and J. B. Platt.

Those who promise to go will be expected to bear their proportionate share of wagon hire.

Thieves in Union.

The little village of Union, midway between this city and Springfield, is at present in a fury, caused by the disappearance of a quantity of poultry and fruit and vegetables ready to be taken to market. The place is infested by a gang of tramps.

The Largest Cast Yet.

This Morning's Storm.

NEW BRUNSWICK, N. J., Aug. 28th, (Special.)—A heavy thunder-storm raged here at about eight o'clock this morning. Lightning struck and set fire to several hay-stacks, and the wind up-rooted trees and unroofed two barns.

—The United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association's new advertisement to-day is an invitation. Read it.

—The Bee Hive is much improved in appearance, and is considered the prettiest and lightest store in Plainfield.

—The hay fever season is now at hand and all who can afford this night-toned ailment should get in their supply or they will be out of style.—Ex.

—Peter Doerenger, desires us to that he is Mr. McCutchen's head gardener and not Peter Brunn as reported recently. He says that Mr. Brunn is the assistant gardener.

—Patrick McCouri and Howard Wilson, the two youngmen who were so seriously injured on the afternoon of July 4th, by the premature discharge of a cannon, were discharged from the Muhlenberg Hospital yesterday entirely cured.

—An exchange says: A victim of hay fever claims that he has found a solution of olive oil and camphor very effective. Prepare it by gently warming some olive and a small lump of camphor together for several hours. Apply it by oiling the inside of the lower part of the nose.

—The Second street nine was again defeated yesterday by the Front street boys by the score of ten to eleven. The winning run was made by W. Kreitling in the eighth inning out. Batteries for Front street, J. Voehl and E. Sebring, for Second street, C. Sutphen and W. Thorne.

—The Plainfield Bicycle Club's base ball team will play a game of ball with the Alerts of this city to-morrow afternoon on the Park avenue grounds. Among the attractions that will be on hand such well-known players as Walker, Mc-Murray, Cory and Young, and the Bi boys say if you want to witness a good game visit their grounds.

—About two weeks ago Mr. Brittain Higgins, an employe of the Potter Printing Press Works ran a small sliver of iron into his hand. He thought nothing of the matter at the time. A few days ago the hand and arm became very painful. Mr. Higgins was alarmed and when he visited a physician he was surprised to learn that blood poisoning had set in.

—Those who are addicted to a careful and life-long observance and recollection of some particular day in each month, no August of the past two decades has this part of the country presented such a magnificent appearance as now. The freshness of the tree foliage is remarkable, while grass and plants, shrubs and flowers give evidence of extraordinary vigor.

—There was a large and appreciative audience at Reform Hall last evening to listen to the address of the Rev. E. H. Stewart, which was an able and enthusiastic one. At the close President Spencer recommended a vote of thanks be tendered the speaker. A motion to that effect was unanimously adopted. The speaker also made a stirring appeal for signers to the pledge, which was responded to by a number.

—Councilman Hetfield, the spokesman for the combine, is trying to make it appear now that the combine has not got an alleged franchise to Mr. Low and his six unknown associates—who may be the combine themselves for aught we know to the contrary—is to break up an oppressive monopoly, which, however, exists only in Hetfield's imagination. Strange! —especially when it is remembered thatever since the combine which by treachery to the public came into power it has devoted nearly all its time scheming how to give a monopoly of the worst kind to Mr. Low—a stranger, whose ability to carry out any contract with the city the people here seem to know nothing of, and to be unable to find out. But while the monopoly the combine would create would be bad enough if they are not content with this, but seek to saddle on the tax-payers an entirely unnecessary liability of nearly $100,000. It is something like Mr. Hetfield's scheme a few months ago to have city bonds issued for $40,000 to buy for a City Hall what is now Miller's concert saloon,—a scheme which was completely frustrated by the indignation of the people aroused by THE NEWS exposures.

California Fruits.

"The time is not distant when fruit of some kind upon the table will be deemed as essential to good living as sugar," writes ex-Governor Lionel A. Sheldon in The Forum. Of the fruits in California he says:

The fruits that are successfully grown in California are the apple, the apricot, the peach, the pear, the plum, the prune, the nectarine, the cherry, the fig, the olive, the guava, the loquat, the orange, the lemon, the lime, all the berries, grapes for the table, for raisins and for wines, the English walnut and the almond. These fruits do not grow equally well in every locality, and some of them are confined to particular sections. In common parlance, fruits in California are divided into two classes, the deciduous and the citrous.

Deciduous fruits flourish in the middle portion of the state, that which in the beginning had "San Francisco for a shipping point and the Sacramento river for transportation." What is called the citrous belt is in southern California, and is embraced in the six counties of Santa Barbara, Ventura, Los Angeles, Orange, San Bernardino and San Diego. It has been found lately, however, that the "deciduous fruits," such as the peach, pear and plum, will grow equally well among the oranges and lemons of the citrous belt.

The deciduous fruit gardens are rarely enriched by fertilizers and require no irrigation. Citrous growths, on the other hand, require constant irrigation and a deep rich soil. But a "young man of twenty-one who plants an orange orchard will have a comfortable income after six or eight years, and thereafter it will be princely during his life and the life of his children." The fig tree is an abundant bearer and needs little attention.

As to present profits of fruit culture, Mr. Sheldon says the raisin grape in the neighborhood of Fresno yields, when the vines are in full bearing, a profit of from $150 to $400 an acre. Thirty-eight acres of peaches netted $8,294 at Pasadena. In San Diego county last season five and a half acres of prunes netted $2,300, while one acre of oranges in their fourth bearing year brought a clear profit of over $300. Orchards of the English walnut do not bear fully till the trees are fifteen to eighteen years old, but they net $200 to $400 an acre. Seventy-two fig trees, less than an acre, yielded $600 net.

It is not probable that these enormous profits will continue; still there will always be a sure and sufficient gain connected with this culture of fruit in California, particularly as every year Americans are becoming, to their credit, more and more a fruit eating people.

The Rainmakers.

"We can flood the country at an hour's notice," is what the United States government rainmakers claim and they claim it exultingly. If they can, they there never need be any more drought or failures of crops anywhere. Well, it is no longer safe to say any thing is impossible.

It was near Midland, Tex., in a district where rain is unusual at this time of year, that the experimenters got it their work. It was accomplished by a huge balloon filled with explosives, a large number of kites having their tails loaded with dynamite and many charges of ordinary powder scattered in various places upon the ground over an area of some two miles. First the huge balloon was set off by electricity. Ten minutes later the dynamite tails of the kites were shot away by the same means. Last of all the powder was touched off. In ten minutes the barometer fell rapidly and a rainstorm of six hours followed. The explosions were heard forty miles away and made a noise like artillery. The rain covered an estimated area of 1,000 square miles, and the cost of it is put at one cent and a half to the acre—dirt cheap.

Still, until further experimenting proves beyond a doubt that the explosions brought the rain, there will linger in most minds the question. Wouldn't it have rained anyway? If the explosions did really produce the refreshing showers, however, then they mark the beginning of an era in civilization, and constitute an achievement no less great than the invention of the steam engine.

Now comes the scheme to colonize our negro population in Mexico. The only laborers in many parts of that country are Indians who will only work till they get enough to fill their stomachs with food; then they lie by till they are hungry again. Trained colored laborers from the United States could step in and reap a harvest in building Mexican railroads and otherwise developing this old, new country. The promoters of the Mexican colored colonization scheme declare they have already the names of 6,000 men who wish to migrate to the republic south of us, but they are opposed by the colored politicians who wish to stay in the United States and build offices.

NEW FORTS AND CANNON

The President Says They Are Peace's Silent Arguments.

SUBSIDY SHIPS AND RECIPROCITY

These Are a Few of the Subjects Touched Upon by the Nation's Chief Executive in His Tour—Entertained by Ex-Secretary Evarts and Secretary Proctor.

WINDSOR, Vt., Aug. 28.—The president's train arrived here a few minutes after 1 o'clock. It was welcomed with booming of cannon and the music of a brass band. Ex-Secretary Evarts was in waiting at the station with carriages, and the president and his party were driven to Mr. Evarts' home. They were welcomed by Mrs. Evarts. An hour was spent at luncheon, and the president was then escorted to the town hall. It had been intended originally to have an outdoor meeting, but the state house was found to be more available. The town hall was crowded and the president was greeted with cheers. He made a brief speech, in which he said that he did not attribute to himself personally but the institutions and the government the warm welcome he received in Vermont.

Evarts as a Farmer.

Continuing, the president said that he was glad that Mr. Evarts had introduced model farming in Vermont. Mr. Evarts had told him that his farm yielded a net income, but Mr. Evarts reputation as a book keeper was not of the best. Concluding, the president paid a pleasant tribute to Mr. Evarts, and the crowd gave three cheers for the president.

The president and his party were then taken to the station, and at 2:45 the train left for Rutland and Proctor. At White River Junction a stop was made and the president attended the fair of the Vermont Association of Road and Horse Breeders, where he made a humorous speech from the grand stand.

New Hampshire Has Gone Wet.

RUTLAND, Vt., Aug. 28.—When the train left Windsor the rain was still falling steadily. When Charlestown, N. H., was reached half an hour later the downpour had increased materially, but in spite of it there was a large crowd at the station waiting for the train. When it stopped the president said:

MY FELLOW CITIZENS—I think that it might be said today that New Hampshire has gone wet as they say when the election returns come in on a vote against prohibition. I am very much obliged to you for this extraordinary manifestation of your interest, for standing in the downpour of rain. It certainly is an evidence that you have a most friendly interest in this little party of tourists who touch in a journey through Vermont and the eastern part of New Hampshire. I have been talking about Vermont for the last two or three days, and if you will take the pains to go to the comfort of your own homesteads to read all the good things I have said about Vermont and then understand that they will all said of New Hampshire it will abbreviate my speech and will not prevent my own opinion of that stately, enterprising, masterful state of England character which you share alike with them. [Applause.]

Farming and Manufacturing.

At Bellow Falls the president spoke in the Opera House. He said:

MY FRIENDS—I will wait a moment until they turn out these footlights; they put a barrier between us, and I always prefer to get my light that way. [Applause.] I greatly appreciate the value and importance of these manufacturing centers which are now, fortunately for the whole prosperity of New England alone, but are found west of the Ohio and Mississippi and of the Missouri. I am one of those who believe that the diversification of pursuits we make most rapid increase in wealth and attain the best results from the same investment. I am one of those who believe that Providence did not set apart the United States as a purely agricultural region, furnishing its argosies to supply the lack of other people of the world while they do all the manufacturing for us. I would not introduce politics. I do not intend to cross any lines of division; but I think we shall agree though we may differ as to the means by which it is to be done, that the nearer together the producer and consumer can be brought the less waste there is in transportation and the greater is the profit. [Applause.]

It is known to you all that our 65,000,000 people furnish per capita a larger market than any other like number of people. This grows out of the fact that our capacity for purchasing is larger than is found in those countries where poverty holds a larger sway. The workmen here receive a less money and a less than in any other land in the world. [Applause.]

The Battle for a Market.

I mentioned the other day at St. Albans that this was the era for the battle for a market. The whole world is engaged in it. The thought was suggested to me by the presence in the audience of President Bartlett at the observance of the battle of Bennington in 1877. He said truly that Manchester furnished the munitions to Burgoyne to conquer a market. The foreign policy of the United States has never been selfish. There has never been a time when it has not stood through the struggle of Greece and of our South American neighbors for independence and free political institutions, a hearty token of sympathy with struggling people the world round in our diplomatic policy. I think we can challenge the record with that of any foreign policy of any other great government in the world in the past.

It has never been our policy to push our trade forward at the point of the bayonet. We have always maintained the most friendly attitude of peaceful, natural progress. We have always believed that it should be urged upon the commands of mutual advantage, and upon that ground alone are we now endeavoring by every means in our power to open the markets of our sister republics in Central and South America to the products of American shops and farms. [Applause.] We do not covet their territory or the day of filibustering aggression has gone by in the United States.

Reciprocity and Subsidy.

We covet their trade. We wish for them settled institutions of government and we desire those exchanges that are mutually profitable.

If our own laws or any aggressive movement we are making for a larger share in the commerce of the world should excite the commercial jealousy and rivalry of other countries, we will meet competition in a manner which will find proper expression. We have come to a time in our development as a nation when I believe we should have a merchant marine enough for us to turn some of our accumulated capital from the railways into steam transportation on the seas, and to that end we should be willing to give a full participation in the carrying trade of the world, when under the American flag steamships shall carry our products to neighboring markets and bring back their exchanges to our harbors. Larger foreign markets for the products of our farms and of our factories, and a larger share in the carrying trade of the world, should be maintained with all mankind, with naval and coast defenses that will silently make an argument on the side of peace, are the policies that I would pursue. [Applause.]

Received at Brattleboro.

BRATTLEBORO, Vt., Aug. 28.—At Brattleboro the president was met by Frederick Holbrook, the war governor of Vermont; Judge Wheeler, of the United States district court, and Colonel Esty. On the way to the house of Colonel Esty a circuitous route was covered to give the president an opportunity to see the town and its decorations. Many of the decorations were unique. In one doorway, on a pedestal, sat a little girl dressed as the Goddess of Liberty waving a flag to the president. In another, a beautiful young woman representing Liberty in statuesque pose. There were banners on all the houses and pictures of the president were displayed in prominent places.

At the beautiful home of Colonel Esty the members of the Esty guards, commanded by Captain Childs, were drawn up along the roadway to keep it clear. On the lawn in front of the house two one armed Grand Army veterans stood at salute on each side of a comrade who held aloft an American flag. Veterans were drawn up along the roadway. At the entrance to the mansion Mrs. Esty welcomed her guests. A hush of people gathered on the lawn to hear the president. Speaking rather hoarsely, as though the exposure and the strain of constant speaking had affected his voice, the president said:

The Way a President Rests.

MY FELLOW CITIZENS—Governor Proctor held out to me the suggestion that this trip to Vermont would be a very restful one to me. [Laughter.] He has about as little appreciation of what rest is as any man I know. [Laughter.] What I regarded the pantomimic demonstration of the inauguration of Washington in New York I spent part of one day on the bridge of the Dispatch, bowing to the fleet in the bay as we moved down to the Battery and the balance of the day shaking hands in the city hall, attending a ball at night; ten hours the next day reviewing a procession, with a request at the end of it that I go across the bay reviewing the civic procession, and when released from the stand at about 5 o'clock in the evening I hurried to the Jersey City depot to take a train, scarcely able to stand upon my feet. One of the gentlemen of the committee said to me, "Mr. President, I hope you have enjoyed those three days of rest in New York." [Laughter.]

I wish I could see you more satisfactorily than I am able to on a hurried trip like this, but Governor Proctor has given me a very late last night and was himself the last man down to so early breakfast this morning. All that I have seen by my state has but increased the interest I have always entertained for your people. In my recent tour I was impressed by the great variety of products of the different states. I know that the south is being obliterated; that all that made is distinctive in the sense of separation of section is gradually being worn out. The prejudice of generations are not like the mark upon the blackboard. They cannot be rubbed off with a sponge; they are more like those deep lines which the glacier has left in the rock, but the water when the surface is exposed to the gentle influences of centuries wears out the evidence of alterations and marks. And so influences at work in your midst are going to obliterate the divisions of the past and to give assurances of its future.

At Secretary Proctor's Home.

PROCTOR, Vt., Aug. 28.—When the president's train reached Proctor the president entered a carriage with Secretary Proctor and they drove to Mr. Proctor's home. The president went to bed early. He was very tired. This morning the president spent at Secretary Proctor's. At noon he came into Rutland by train and held a public reception. He will take luncheon with President Clements, of the Rutland road, at his country home, a mile from Rutland, and will then go back to Proctor. This evening there will be a reception of a semi-public character at Secretary Proctor's, and at 11 p. m. the president will leave Proctor for the south, going to Cape May Point via New York.

NINETY MILES AN HOUR.

Remarkable Speed of a Train on the Bound Brook Railroad.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—A mile in thirty-nine and two-fifth seconds, or at the rate of ninety miles an hour, is the unparalleled feat that was accomplished on the Bound Brook railroad, between Neshaming Falls and Langhorn, by engine 306, drawing two ordinary coaches and President McLeod's private car Reading, which is equal to two coaches in weight. The fastest mile was scored in the fifth, the slowest the ninth in 1m. 39 4-5s., the fastest ten miles in 7m. 12s., averaging 83s. per mile.

The race against time grew out of some good natured chaffing that took place at Judge Green's dinner to the Farmers' club Thursday, Aug. 20. Mr. William M. Singerly, president of the West Jersey, president of the Reading Railroad company, that for thirteen years he had been making it a diversion to time fast railroad trains, and that he had rarely traveled faster than fifty seconds. Mr. Singerly said that the published records failed to show a mile better than fifty and one-quarter seconds, and that the best he had timed was forty-eight seconds.

Mr. Singerly said he would give any engineer twenty-five dollars for a mile better than forty-eight seconds.

Mr. McLeod quietly replied that he could do better than forty-eight seconds. A wager was made, the track was cleared, and three heavy coaches was made up. When Neshaming Falls was left behind the engineer was signaled to let her go for a mile. President McLeod feels greatly pleased that his road has so triumphantly beaten the best railroad record.

A Double Philadelphia Poisoning.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—Lizzie Wilson, thirty-two years of age, living at 1,827 North Fifth street, poisoned herself and her illegitimate child. When found the babe was dead, but the mother lingered several hours before death ensued. The woman said a man named Kantz was the father of the child, and his persistent refusal to marry her caused her to commit the terrible deed. Kantz has been arrested.

Pennsylvania Firemen to Meet.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—The Pennsylvania State Firemen's convention is to meet at Lock Haven on Sept. 15 to 18, and excursion rates will be made by the Philadelphia and Reading Railroad company that it will issue tickets good for the going and return trip, and until Sept. 21, returning, at the price of a single fare for the round trip from any of the stations.

A Big Day at Williams' Grove.

WILLIAMS' GROVE, Pa., Aug. 28.—Thursday was the banner day at the Patrons of Husbandry assembly. The crowd numbered fully 70,000 persons. Addresses were made by Dr. John Trimble, W. C. Gifford, R. S. Dowling, Mortimer Whitehead, Rev. James Golder, J. T. Allman and State Senator Lloyd.

The Pennsylvania Exhibit.

HARRISBURG, Aug. 28.—A sub-committee of the World's fair executive committee will go to Chicago next week to confer with the national managers regarding the allotment of space and other matters concerning the Pennsylvania exhibit.

Captain Andrews Gave It Up.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Andrews, captain of the Sea Serpent, the little boat in which he was running a race against the Margaret across the Atlantic, became exhausted in midocean, and abandoned the contest.

A BIG CRISIS IN CHILI.

Reports Indicate That No Decisive Battle Occurred.

BALMACEDA NOT YET VICTORIOUS.

President Vicuna's Haciends Burned by the Insurgents—Interesting Facts About the First Use of Smokeless Powder in Warfare.

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—Dispatches from Valparaiso indicate that the government forces under Balmaceda have won the battle which began on Sunday. Some reports say that the insurgents were caught between two divisions and have been, or will be, compelled to surrender unconditionally. Each of these stories, however, though bearing the impress of genuineness, comes from government headquarters to a sympathizer with the government party.

They Are Still in It.

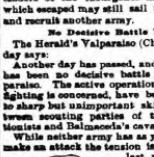
The insurgent agents have received no news from the vicinity of Valparaiso and in their hopes to a dispatch from Iquique which expresses a belief in the ultimate triumph of their army. Even though the claims of Balmaceda be justified by the facts, there is no reason to believe that the result of this battle ends the war. The leaders of the insurgents in their ships which escaped may still sail to the north and recruit another army.

No Decisive Battle Yet.

The Herald's Valparaiso (Chili) cable today says:

Another day has passed, and still there has been no decisive battle about Valparaiso. The active operations, so far as fighting is concerned, have been confined to sharp but unimportant skirmishes between scouting parties of the insurrectionists and Balmaceda's cavalry.

While neither army has as yet seen fit to make an attack the tension is too great to last many hours. The long telegraph lines have been cut and other movements which have been made by the insurgents have, it is thought, led President Balmaceda to the conclusion that perhaps the capital has been left with insufficient protection and that General Canto might be tempted to make a dash for Santiago [illegible] rather than risk an attack on the strong defenses at Valparaiso.



BALMACEDA.

Hence a division of 2,000 soldiers were sent to Talcahuano, on Concepcion bay, where they could be quickly hurried by rail to Santiago and re enforce the weakened garrison there to a degree which would make it impossible for a sudden raid to be successful, should General Canto attempt it.

Valparaiso's Good Defenses.

President Balmaceda still has command of the forces about Valparaiso in person. He has as his chiefs of staff Generals Alarreca and Barbosa, both able and experienced soldiers. They have made an almost impregnable line of defense about this city, reaching from Vina del Mar to Placilla. Batteries of heavy guns have been placed in advantageous positions all along the lines, and they are supported by veteran soldiers.

The Insurgent's Haciends Burned.

Word was received here that a raiding party from the opposition army set fire to the haciends of President-elect Vicuna, situated about thirty miles from Valparaiso. All the buildings were destroyed, and the stores and supplies were taken away.

The rebel cruiser Esmeralda and O'Higgins have been steaming about off the entrance to the bay all day today, but they have shown no disposition to come inside and make an attack from the rear. Both Condell and Lynch or the fire of the big guns in the forts. In fact it has come to be the opinion here that the bay of Valparaiso will not be bombarded. Leading insurgents have too great a property interest here.

Deadly Work of Smokeless Powder.

Such of the insurgents as left the regular army at the start of the rebellion are armed with the small bore Mannlicher rifles, and the ammunition is prepared with smokeless powder.

This is the first time this style of arm has been used in general warfare. Sir Lumley Graham has also been determining the wounds made by the Mannlicher rifles on account of the smallness of the bullets, the guns being .315 caliber. In every case but one the wounds made by the jacketed bullets from the rifles make a clean wound and that they have great penetration. It is said that many men in the rear ranks have been wounded and killed by the same bullet which had gone through the man in front of them.

Longstreet May Not Go.

LACONIA, N. H., Aug. 28.—General James Longstreet, who was expected to attend the encampment of the New Hampshire veterans at Weirs this week, has not yet appeared, swing, it is said, to certain newspaper articles tending to arouse prejudice against the confederate general. Resolutions were adopted by the veterans cordially inviting General Longstreet to visit the encampment of 1892.

His Whiskers Saved Her.

ROCHESTER, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Gabriel Kuhn was arrested on the charge of shooting his wife at 119 North Goodman street. Kuhn was drunk at the time. He rescued his wife of stealing $6.20. The $6.20 was found in his left boot. Mrs. Kuhn says he tried to kill her. In the scuffle she caught hold of his whiskers and this saved her. Mrs. Kuhn's injuries are serious.

The Rainmakers Still at Work.

MIDLAND, Tex., Aug. 28.—General Dyrenforth, Professor Carl Myers and others of the rain experimental party left for Washington yesterday. Mr. John Ellis and George L. Cauley, the balloonist, will remain in charge of the operations. They will shortly proceed to El Paso and there continue the experiments on a grand scale.

They Struck for Fresh Air.

NEW HAVEN, Aug. 28.—Two hundred bootmakers have struck in the big rubber factory of L. Candee & Co. because the superintendent ordered the windows closed, claiming that the air damaged the material. The atmosphere was half choking. The strike is virtually one for fresh air.

LAWRENCE HAS CONFESSED.

He Tells What He Knows About the Keystone Bank Wrecking.

PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.—Charles Lawrence, the assistant cashier of the Keystone National bank, who is undergoing a sentence of seven years, has made a full confession as to the frauds that were perpetrated in the Keystone bank. Lawrence placed the confession in the hands of his counsel, who, by request of the prisoner, turned it over to Bank Examiner Drew. It reads as follows:

"PHILADELPHIA, Aug. 28.

"Colonel William P. Drew:

"DEAR SIR—I beg to submit to you the following circumstances as to the manner in which you, as national bank examiner, was deceived in your examination of the Keystone National bank. In the first place every means possible were used to both swell the assets of the bank and to diminish the liabilities.

The original ledgers were altered at least twice every year—about the time you were looked for. This was done by me since 1880, and the methods pursued were various. Sometimes whole pages were abstracted. Mostly false balances were made by altering the pencil figures. Large balances were decreased and overdrafts carried out. Sometimes false credits were posted to an overdrawn account, so that your attention would not be drawn to the ledger more minutely by finding an overdrawn account then might possibly see something else to excite your suspicion."

"Sometimes false checks were posted to account to balance the ledger, so as to reduce liabilities. This, you can readily see, required alterations and realterations to a very large extent, because, if a check had been posted falsely to an account and then that party drew on the account himself in the regular course of business, you will see that it necessitated a rearrangement of his account and a corresponding change in some other account. This was done to the extent of probably $500,000, more or less.

Now, I know that on the letters side there were memoranda carried as cash which represented the amount Mr. Luoss would call for. These were replaced at the time of your examination by real cash which was temporarily borrowed, sometimes by means of a due bill taken from the bank of this city, sometimes by means of a certificate of deposit or by the president obtaining a loan.

"The bills discounted were swelled by the fictitious names of fictitious notes which were intended both to swell the assets and to take the place of other bills discounted, which it was thought best not to let you see. I trust that you will find this sufficient to show you how difficult it was for you or any one else to discover the true condition of the bank. With sincere regrets for the part I took in deceiving you in the above matter, and with the assurance that it was not with the petty desire to deceive you, but with a desire to carry out the instructions of my superior officers, I am respectfully yours,

"CHARLES LAWRENCE."

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

The Ticket Placed in the Field by Maryland Republicans.

OCEAN CITY, Md., Aug. 28.—The Maryland Republican state convention nominated the following ticket: For governor, William G. Vannort; for controller, J. MacDonald; for attorney general, George M. Sharp; for clerk of the court of appeals, Enoch B. Abell.

The platform indorsed the acts of the Fifty-first congress, congratulated President Harrison on the vigor of his administration, paid a high compliment to the head of the state department on the brilliancy of his diplomacy and denounced the free coinage of silver. The parable, head and bust of Abraham Lincoln was adopted as the party emblem.

Sherman and Free Coinage.

PAULDING, O., Aug. 28.—In a campaign speech here Senator Sherman said that unlimited coinage of silver would rob the treasury of millions. Free coinage was impracticable. The experience of the world, the speaker said, belies the statement that free coinage will raise the price of silver to the ratio of gold. In no country in the world where free coinage exists is sixteen ounces of silver equal to one ounce of gold. Free coinage would not give more money for our labor and products. The farmer would not be benefited with a cheaper dollar. It would make more dollars necessary for his wants.

DOWN TO SUDDEN DEATH

Twenty-three Persons Killed Near Statesville, N. C.

MANGLED, CRUSHED AND DROWNED

The Doomed Train Plunged from a Trestle and Few of the Many Passengers Escaped Alive or Without Injuries. Senator Ransom's Son Injured.

STATESVILLE, N. C., Aug. 28.—The most disastrous railroad accident known in the history of North Carolina occurred on the Western North Carolina railroad, two miles west of this place at 2 a. m. Twenty-three persons have been taken from the wreck dead or have died since and twenty-five are wounded. The dead are as follows:

A List of the Dead.

Engineer William West, Salisbury; Fireman Warren Fry, Salisbury; Baggage master Hugh E. Linster, Statesville; W. M. Houston, merchant, Greensboro; Perry Barnett, Asheville; Samuel Gorman, Asheville; Charles Barnett, Asheville; Jas. Miller traveling salesman; W. J. Mishel Campbellu; W. E. Winslow, Asheville — Davies, Statesville; an unknown one legged man; J. S. Austin, Hickory; Mrs. George McCorkick, Elmwood; Mrs. White Memphis, Tenn.; unknown lady, ring on finger, inside of which is engraved "Mrs. H. W. to I. B. P." an unknown colored man Mrs. Pool, Williamston, drowned; T. Brodie, New York, traveling for a glove house; Rev. James M. Sikes, Clarkesville Tenn.; Dick Wells, colored porter; Miss Ophelia Moore, Helena, Ark.

The Injured.

The following were injured: George O. Bowles, Atlanta, injured, but walked to town; Conductor Spaugh, will live; Conductor H. C. Clipper, head cut, arm and ankle sprained; Colored Sleeping Car Porter O. W. Lawson, Louisburg; Miss Louise Pool, Williamston, N. C.; Mrs. R. C. Moore, Helena, Ark.; A. L. Sink and wife Lexington, seriously injured; R. M. Estes Jr., Memphis, will live; Flagman Shoaf, Lexington, will live; State Auditor George W. Sanderlin, painfully, but not danger ously; Patrick Ransom, of Northampton county, son of Senator M. W. Ransom cut on head, not dangerously.

How the Accident Occurred.

The train fell from the north side of the track. The engine lies partly up the embankment, on the east side. The first class coach lies on top of the second class It is supposed that as the engine was making twenty-five to thirty miles an hour on a down grade, as it struck the bridge the track spread. Engineer West was found pinioned under his cab. Within arm's reach of him were the bodies of two female passengers. How their bodies got from the first class coach to the engine will never be known.

Miss Pool's Heroism.

Miss Lucellen Pool held the head of her mother one of the water until her strength was exhausted, when the head dropped and the mother was drowned. Parts of the sleeper and of the first class coach are in the water. Superintendent Bridges was not aboard. His car was being hauled empty to Asheville.

Twenty-eight Reported Killed.

Another report says twenty-eight were killed. The disaster was caused by the spreading of the rails on the viaduct, but as yet there is no evidence that the spread ing was the result of accident or design An eastbound train had passed safely over the structure only an hour and a half be fore. The body of the engineer of the train was caused by some one for the purpose of robbery.

The first news of the disaster was received here by Governor Holt in a telegram from Colonel Cameron, who notified the governor that he had gone to Statesville after aid and clothing for the survivors. Governor Holt telegraphed:

"I am deeply pained at disaster. Extend my sympathies to bereaved and injured."

SENATOR W. M. STEWART SUED.

Lynn Wants $2,000,000 Damages and Stewart Says "Blackmail."

NEW YORK, Aug. 28.—James K. Lynn has brought an action in the supreme court against Senator William M. Stewart, of Nevada, for $1,000,000 damages. The suit grows out of complications over mines, among them the Emma mine, of Utah. Lynn claims that Stewart, while acting as his attorney, conspired with Trevor W. Park and others to deprive him of his mining rights. Stewart, he alleges, made statements to him regarding the property which led him to dispose of his holdings for $200,000. Stewart, he claims, received $600,000 by the deal.

Senator Stewart says the mining claim of Lynn was considered "pure blackmail." He went to Lynn and told him he thought it was a case of blackmail and asked him his price. This Lynn name. gave the money and gave a release.

A motion was made to strike out the allegations of blackmail and other alleged irrelevant matter from the answer and decision was reserved.

TEN PHOTOGRAPHS

Facts Which They Recall to W. I. Harris' Memory.

THE MEN WHO SAT FOR THEM.

Interesting Reminiscences About Well Known Baseball Players—Kelly and the Prince—A "Has Been" Who Is Now a Farmer—Gil Hatfield's Work.

Ten pictures I pulled from a dusty pigeonhole. The first, W. A. Nimick, of Pittsburg—former out of baseball by nerve and assurance—a man with a history now "out of the swim."

The next two, Mike Kelly and Sam Wise, have histories that everybody knows. The two names suggest an interesting story. In 1887 the Boston Globe gave as prize a handsome solid silver bat to the best batsman and a diamond medal to the best base runner. When Kelly saw the prizes—they cost $1,000—he said, "I want 'em both." "I'll not drink a drop this season until I've won that bat," said Wise, on seeing it.

Eighteen hundred and eighty seven was the year of ghost hits (base on balls a hit), and it cost us a good deal to get the actual hits. Those prizes divided the team and demoralized it completely. Kelly's effective ambition to win the prize. He was big and luck during the last games of the season. Wise won with an average of .334 actual base hits. Kelly's was .326. In the last game of the season Wise won four times at bat and made three hits, while Kelly got only one. There are good grounds for believing that Jim Whitney, who pitched for Washington, favored his old comrade. Kelly won the base running medal easily. The prizes were awarded at a banquet which the Boston triumvirs refused to attend. That insult to The Globe cost the triumvirs thousands of dollars.

The next picture is Charley Bridgy, in a Detroit uniform. What has since become of him I do not know. He gave me the picture while traveling from Detroit to Boston. Bridgy was a great catcher before he began to grow fat. He was one of the first contract jumpers of whom there is any record.

The next photograph is one of Dan Brouthers, in citizens' dress, and a handsome man it makes of him. Dan always was a fine specimen of manly beauty, and this picture is the best he ever had taken to show it off. Brouthers is still lining out base hits with as great frequency as ever. The ability to do so made his fortune and his reputation. Dan is exemplary in his habits, and must have a good-sized bank account.

The next picture, Daley, a left hand pitcher with Boston, a young player too easily influenced to be always in shape. He went from Jersey City to New York and was released by the latter for $2,500. He was worth the money, as the afterward did some very good work for them.

And then comes a photograph of McGunnigle, a player who in his time stands high. McGunnigle is a man I have known for many years, and who has never been friendly to me. Still candor bids me call the honest commentation. McGunnigle was for years a great ball player. In 1885 he managed a club in Brooklyn, which I think was a pennant, and he has always been a winning manager. While with Brooklyn his team won the American association championship—and the National league championship. He is now managing a team in the Eastern association.

Shades of the past! Here is a "has been" truly, and a "good old has been" too. Ezra Sutton, still in his prime, one of the greatest third basemen and batsmen who ever walked the diamond, now a farmer. Ezra is not a rich man, because he did not flourish in the days of big salaries. I doubt if he ever got over $2,500 in any one season. Before his eyesight became impaired, and his arm began to fail him, Sutton was one of the stars of the profession, and there were but a few so called in those days. Who is there, having seen him play, will forget how Sutton used to line the ball across from third base, retiring the swiftest runners, or how he used to line out base hits about every other time he came to the bat. A friend who has just come in informs me that Sutton owns a saw mill in connection with his farm.

Next, Mike Madden. One of the first of the successful left hand "phenoms." Won the New England championship for Portland. Signed with Boston for $1,000. Making a fair success his value increased, but his salary was not increased. When it was his turn to pitch Madden was promised twenty-five dollars bonus if he won. After a while he became more effective against the Detroit left handers. One of the directors, who took a great fancy to the boy—for he was only a boy then—used to give $100 extra for winning. The boy's head became swelled and he became spoiled. He did not have the physique or strength necessary to make him a great pitcher. He is still playing ball and doing fairly well, but is, I am told, not in robust health. Not having seen him this year I cannot answer for this. He is with the Boston association team.

And the last, Gil Hatfield, sometimes called the "colt," why I do not know. A ball player after fifteen years' service ceases to be collish. Gil has always been a great star in minor leagues, and that is how he came to New York. His brilliant work for Portland caused great competition, but Mutrie bagged the prize. He never filled the bill at third base for the Giants — not because he could not play good enough ball, but because he never could conquer the extreme nervousness which is a part of his temperament and was brought out by the knowledge that if he failed another was ready and anxious to take his place. Gil Hatfield is playing in Washington this season, where his work seems to be appreciated.

W. I. HARRIS.

BASEBALL BREVITIES.

In the death of James G. Fogarty the baseball world loses a notable figure. Fogarty died at Philadelphia, May 29, of consumption, at the age of twenty-seven. In the winter of 1888 he was a member of Spalding's famous American team that went around the world. Fogarty's remarkable feat on the diamond were numerous. In 1889 he stole the greatest number of bases of any man in the National league.

Poole, the Yale catcher, is a wonder, and puts up a much better game than many old-time professionals.

Washington is making an effort to get Jerry Denny away from the Giants.

Governor Hill, of New York, has been a frequent visitor at the Eastern association games in Albany, and is said to be very fond of the national game.

The Western association teams are very well matched, judging from their work thus far.

INSTRUCTION AND ENTERTAINMENT FOR GIRL AND BOY READERS.

Some Facts About the Inhabitants of Arabia—The Settled Tribes of Arabs. The Bedouins or Wandering Tribes. Their Good and Bad Qualities.

Few nations have changed so little as the Arabs. As their fathers were, so they are. Yet even in the desert the children are taught, generally by the mother, to read and write. The Arab is of medium height, muscular make, and brown complexion; he is by nature quick, sharp witted and fond of poetry, while earnestness and pride look out of his keen and glowing eyes. The best of them are noted for courage, temperance and hospitality, although these good qualities are often marred by a spirit of sanguinary revenge. Most of the Arabs lead settled lives, but many of them are wanderers, living in tents with their horses and camels, and holding very loose notions as to the rights of property.

These Bedouins, as wandering Arabs are called, despise the settled tribes, scorning as they do to be tied down to the soil, even where such bondage would make them wealthy. The Arab is generally kind to and his wife and children, although some of them, it may be, love their beautiful horses almost more than their little ones. An Arab girl of the better class is, as a rule, gentle and thoughtful in appearance, but with her full share of the prejudices and peculiarities of her people.

A Memory Contest.

The game here described sharpens the wits and induces habits of observation. The Home Queen tells how to play it. Let a table be prepared in an adjoining room, or fix a hall, with a number of small articles placed upon it—books, pocket knives, cards, ornaments, knitting needles, pens and pencils—all the paraphernalia that goes to make up the living room. Let the players pass into the room, one by one, slowly and taking a good look at the table and its contents; then let them pass into the other room, and, in five minutes, write down the names of all the things that they can remember. The person who has charge calls "Time!" and then each one tells how many things he has remembered. After that each one reads the list, and amusement and amazement are the result. One person will remember something that no one else noticed, while almost every one will have been struck with some one thing, and include that in his or her list.

Care should be taken that only familiar objects should be used, and not less than twenty-five articles should be shown. No one, to my knowledge, has ever remembered more than twenty or twenty-two, while the majority remember even less.

Our Birthday.

I've a secret to tell you, Dolly;
Let me whisper it in your ear;
Tomorrow will be my birthday—
Your birthday and mine, my dear!
As soon as the sun peeps over
The hill from the Blackberries grow,
I'll be eight years old, my Dolly,
And you'll be one, you know.

DOLLY AND I.

Don't you remember, Dolly—
I'm perfectly sure you do—
When I woke last Monday morning
The first thing I saw was you?
You sat on the edge of my washbox,
Waiting for my little child,
And when you saw I was looking
You stretched out your arms and smiled.

And you're just as lovely as ever,
Though your curls are very thin,
And your poor legs wobble sadly,
And your left eye's fallen in;
And if tomorrow morning
Another doll comes here
We'll be kind to her, but she shall not Supplant you, Dolly dear!

A California Bear Story.

"I never fooled a bear but once in my life," said an old California hunter. "I was hunting quail with a light shotgun one day when I suddenly met a very large bear. I was willing to pass without speaking, but bruin was mad about something and intended to fight. So I let him have both barrels and then cut for a tree. The shot dazed him for a minute, and then he gave chase, and pretty soon came clawing up after me. There was a long, projecting limb on one side, and when I saw him coming I got out to the extreme end, slung the gun over my back and crawled under my weight. Out came the bear after me, slowly and carefully, and with every step the branch bent lower. When the bear got within two yards of me I was within ten feet of the ground. Then I dropped down, and as the bear shot up twenty feet in the air I made for home as fast as I could run."

Her Little Shetland Shawl.

I know a little maiden,
And winter, spring, and fall,
She wears about her shoulders
A little Shetland shawl!

She says if all the birds staid north—
The sensible, wise little dear—
That some would soon wear tiny shawls
Tucked underneath their wings!

NATHAN HALE COMMEMORATED AT LAST

The Statue to be Erected on the Spot Where he Was Executed.

Nathan Hale was hanged as a spy in New York by the British on Sept. 22, 1776. The location of the gallows was between where the corner of Chamber's street crosses Broadway and here is to be erected a statute of which we give a representative shape. The sculptor is Frederick MacMonnies and he was given the second medal in the Paris salon for his work. This was the greatest honor ever given an American Sculptor and speaks highly for the artistic excellence of the statue. It has been said of it: This statue awakens not sympathy, nor mere pity, but reverence. No difficult analysis was necessary. There was no allegory to be solved. There stood a man with arms pinioned, his feet tethered. He was clad as were the men of a century or more ago. He was a prisoner. It was a man doomed to death. The grand pose of the head, that look of tempered defiance, not of scorn, that calm determination of the face, at once touched all hearts.

NATHAN HALE.

The commission for the Nathan Hale was given two years ago and as soon as possible the figure will be cast in bronze and sent to New York. Plans for the pedestal have been already suggested by Mr. Stanford White. The statue will be some eight feet high, and there is no question but that an appropriate setting would be forthcoming. It is fortunate that New York is to have such a noble work, for it it will not alone impart higher art instruction, but will bring to the minds of those who see if those immortal last words of Nathan Hale "I only regret that I have but one life to lose for my country."

"Our Mary In Private Life."

MRS. Antonio de Navarro is as successful in living the quiet life—to which she seems permanently addicted—at Tunbridge Wells as she was in eluding the vigilance of the curious on her wedding day. Every Sunday she may be seen with her husband at church—the Roman Catholic Church, of course—but beyond that, but little is seen of her. Those so fortunate as to overtake or meet her in some of the country lanes about the rural district where she is staying report her looking in splendid condition and fresh and handsome as in her palmiest days. Evidently her health is completely restored.

As usual in the summer the White House has again been closed for repairs, not to be reopened to the public until October.

Citizen George Francis Train has just arrived at New York by the Majestic. He is on his fifth trip around the world. The first was made thirty-five years ago, and it took him two years to make it. This one began at New Whatcom, Wash., on May 9, and he set out to complete it in fifty-five days. He won't succeed, but it will be the quickest trip he has made.

NATIONAL PROHIBITION PARK.

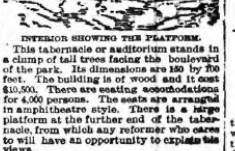
A Mammoth Auditorium of Rustic Work.

The National School of Methods for Reform just opened at the National Prohibition Park at Port Richmond, Staten Island, on July 4. It is to continue in session daily for six weeks. The school is to be held under direction of the National Prohibition Camp Ground Association. This association was formed about a year ago by the late Clinton B. Fiske, Charles F. Deems, D. D., Col. R. S. Chew, Dr. Funk, D. D., William T. Wardwell, Horace Waters, W. Jennings Demorest, John P. St. John, William H. Boole, George B. Scott, Joseph A. Bogardus, W. A. Van Cott, Freeborn G. Smith, Green Clay Smith and J. C. Ross.

THE GREAT AUDITORIUM.

Next in order to deciding upon a name was the formulation of a platform. That was made as broad as the universe, one of its leaders says. Any one with a grievance or a plan for reforming something now going wrong is entitled to a hearing.

The promoters of the scheme subscribed money and purchased the old John Vanderbilt farm near Port Richmond. A year ago last May the work of transforming the 120 acres into a park was begun under the personal supervision of Col. Chew. The land was laid out in 600 building lots. Streets were graded, and building operations begun. Of the 600 lots 200 were sold almost immediately. In this way about $70,000 was obtained.



INTERIOR SHOWING THE PLATFORM.

This tabernacle or auditorium stands in a clump of tall trees facing the boulevard of the park. Its dimensions are 180 by 100 feet. The building is of wood and it cost $10,500. There are seating accomodations for 4,000 people. The platform is arranged in amphitheatre style. There is a large platform at the further end of the tabernacle, from which any reformer who cares so will have an opportunity to explain his views.

It has been calculated that the electromotive force of a bolt of lightning is about 3,500,000 volts, the current about 14,000,000 amperes, and the time to be about 1-20,000 part of a second. In such a bolt there is an energy of 2,450,000,000 watts, or 3,284,189 horse-power.

FASHIONS

Fashionable Lingerie.

Embroidery and laces are the trimmings on fine lingerie. All undergarments are more nearly fitted to the figure than they ever have been. Drawers are worn short, reaching only to the knee, and are made extra wide. French garments have no belts, not even those of yoke shape. The top of the wide drawers is faced or hemmed an inch deep, the front curved as a yoke, and drawing strings are put through the facing to draw the ample width about the waist. The chemise most used suggests a combination of the corset cover and short underpetticoat.

White muslin petticoats are seldom worn in the street. They have given place to colored skirts of silk or of the less expensive zephyr cottons, Chambery or mohair. When worn in the house they are of domestic muslin or cambric, or of French percale, and are laundered entirely without starch to avoid the noisy rustle of stiffened cotton. They are two yards and a quarter wide at the foot, and are close gored at the top to fit the figure smoothly in front and on the hips, all the fullness being adjusted at the back by a drawing string. They are trimmed with one or two small ruffles of scalloped embroidery or of cambric with tucks and insertion above a hem. Short underpetticoats of muslin or cambric are closed in the back, the front being faced like a yoke, and the back furnished with a drawing string.

Underwaists of ribbed silk in lightweight for summer wear come in flesh pink, cream and lilac tints. Mixed wool and silk vests are apt to shrink; those of Lisle thread are cool and wear well.—Harper's Bazar.

The New Inclosed Skirt.

A clever English invention, the "inclosed skirt," is here illustrated. The full length block represents a lady's outing costume, with "inclosed skirt" (but does not show the inclosed part of the skirt), as suitable in season. The costume is brown mixed Scotch cheviot, the waistcoat of a check vesting.

The three small blocks show, in section, the inclosed part of the skirt. As will be seen, it is made like a sack with holes for the feet, with the addition of leggings, which are either attached or unattached to these holes. The skirt gives perfect freedom of movement.

The principle of the inclosed skirt can be applied to almost any dress, and is much liked, not only for costumes for sporting, but for general purposes.

STOLE A SUIT OF CLOTHES.

Charles Williams, an Old Offender Again Arrested.

Charles Williams, a well-known character of this city was arrested yesterday afternoon by Policeman McGee on a charge of stealing a suit of clothes from Charles Cook. Williams had sold some of the garments and was endeavoring to sell the others when arrested. He is an old offender, having been arrested for drunkenness and disorderly conduct about twenty-five times. About a year and a half ago he was arrested for stealing chairs from the Crescent rink. Of that offense he was convicted and was sentenced to the State Prison for one year. Two months ago he was arrested at the instance of Mr. J. C. Dyer on the charge of stealing flowers from his yard on Craig place. After serving about thirty days in the Somerset county jail he was released.

When arraigned in court this morning Williams waived examination and was sent to the Union county jail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

—The Westfield Athletic Club's base ball team is contesting a game of ball with the Crescents of this city this afternoon. The game is being played at Westfield.

—A man named Riley was arrested last evening for drunkenness and disorderly conduct. This morning Police Judge Codington sentenced him to the county jail for thirty days.

—It has been stated by several exchanges that the Royal Blue Line service of the Central, Reading and Baltimore and Ohio Railroads will be extended to Chicago with a complete a train service as they now have between New York and Washington. The terminal facilities of the B. and O. in Chicago are being enlarged with the idea of doing a big business during the World's Fair.

—The committee appointed by Winfield Post, No. 75, G. A. R., to entertain the survivors of the 26th N. J. Vol., wish to say to the public who contributed so liberally and cheerfully that the veterans went away the happiest lot of men that ever visited Plainfield. Many of them shed tears of thankfulness at the warm reception, and were overcome by the Mayor's address of welcome. They were delighted with the singing by Misses, Manning and the Runyon quartette. All united in saying that it was the best re-union they ever had.

PERSONAL.

Mr. H. T. Brink of Chicago, has been visiting friends in Fanwood.

Mr. J. D. Carr of this city is registered at the Berkeley House, Asbury Park.

Mr. Charles Leitheuser of East Second street is a happy father. It is a girl.

Mr. Lewis Waring of Park avenue returned yesterday from Lake George.

Mr. A. J. White of this city is making a tour of the Eastern States on his bicycle.

The only child of John and Annie Tracy of South Plainfield was buried in St. Mary's Cemetery yesterday afternoon.

Mr. Lucas of Connecticut is visiting his daughter, Mrs. A. K. Gardener, of Fanwood.

Mr. W. F. Fulper, of the United Tea and Coffee Growers' Association, was on Thursday registered at the Tremont House, Long Branch.

Mrs. Susan Chambettas and her nieces the Misses Nettie and Minnie Allison of Somerset street are at the Osborne House, Ocean Grove.

Miss E. Lawson has returned to New York after a long visit to her sister, Mrs. J. C. MacClymont, of Washington avenue, North Plainfield.

Miss Nellie and Master Ferdinand Rockafellow have returned to their home on West Third street from a two weeks' stay at Newton, N. J.

It is announced that Mr. Charles D. Wheeler and Miss S. Lena Squier, of North Plainfield, will be united in marriage on Tuesday evening, Sept. 8th.

Miss Georgia Smalley of Miss Sadie Ervin's, of Jackson avenue, North Plainfield, are spending a week's vacation with Mr. and Mrs. Simeon W. Lambert of Willow Grove.

Mr. Barry Thompson, a well-known comedian, is visiting friends here. Mr. Thompson said to-day that he will go to one of the American stage. He usually plays with Denman Thompson in the "Old Homestead."

Mr. W. A. Hudson (the base of Dr. Storr's Church in Brooklyn) and Mrs. Wm. B. Boyt and daughter, Lillie, of Bridgeport, Conn., are visiting at the residence of their sister, Mrs. J. T. Vegiard, 332 West Third street.

Indemnity Refused.

When Rev. T. E. Davis, pastor of the Presbyterian church at Bound Brook, sneezed and fractured a rib several weeks ago he had an accident policy in the Preferred Mutual Accident Association of New York. He naturally supposed that he would be indemnified for his loss of time by the accident, but he has received word from the company that payment is refused on the ground that the fracture of his rib was not caused by external or accidental means.

This company holds quite a number of policies in this vicinity and it is probable that many of them will be allowed to lapse when this ruling becomes known. —Bound Brook Chronicle.

PFEIFFER PLEADS HIS CASE.

The Charge was Poisoning a Well at Westfield.

John Pfeiffer, the notorious Westfield man who has been fretting behind the bars of the county jail, charged with threatening to poison the well on the premises of John D. Hill, at Magnetville, a suburb of Westfield, and with threatening to kill Mrs. Hill's boy, was arraigned before Justice of the Peace E. R. Collins, at Westfield, last night.

The upshot of the matter was that Justice Collins decided upon a sentence of ninety days in the county jail, but suspended sentence on the promise by Pfeiffer that he would leave the town.

It is the general opinion among the village folks that the last has not been heard of the trouble between the Hill family and Pfeiffer.

Pfeiffer acted as his own counsel, and it was admitted that he did not have a fool to plead his case.

The testimony brought out at the examination indicated that Pfeiffer had threatened to fix the well-water so that the Hills could not use it, and the water was, in fact, so bad after that threat that the cattle could not drink it.

Ann Pfeiffer, John's wife, testified on behalf of her husband; but she gave no important evidence, as the trial would permit to being interrupted, for, she said, if she "didn't testify she would go crazy."

The "court," which was held in the editorial rooms of the Leader, one of the local papers, was packed, and a part of the audience was on the sidewalk. It was expected that there would be a repetition of the Wild West court scenes that were enacted at Judge Collins's house last Sunday morning, when the prisoner was arraigned, and when Hill wanted to fight the complainants and the complainants wanted to fight him. Hill was willing to pay $30 for the privilege of having a set-to with Pfeiffer then and there.

When the court interfered the prisoner told him to go to the place of unquenchable fire. Constable Marsh threatened to club the prisoner into "kingdom come" if he didn't respect the court. So it was supposed that Pfeiffer would come back to town prepared to give the court and constables trouble. Hence the assembling of the multitude.

The Hill and Pfeiffer families lived in peace and good fellowship, and drank of the same well water until Pfeiffer was arrested upon a charge preferred by Lawrence Clark of stealing blackberries. Pfeiffer then asked Hill to go on his bail bond. When Hill declined to do so, John's blood was up and he declared war.

"Big John" Pfeiffer, "Little Johnny" Pfeiffer, his son, and Anna Pfeiger, John's wife, left the court room together, a happy trio. Pfeiffer threatened to have Hill arrested for the alleged stealing of some of his chickens, and Hill dared John to have him arrested.

John Pfeiffer has been a prisoner in the county jail at Elizabeth eight times, either awaiting an examination or serving a sentence. He used to like to board there, but now, he says, "things are not like they used to be," and he was very anxious not to be sent back to jail. As he said to Judge Collins, he is all right except when he "talks to much with his mouth." He has a bad record of threatening to kill people and to do other awful things, but has never been known to hurt anybody. He makes his threats when he is drunk. Some years ago he went to the public school to complain to the principal about some of the scholars, when the boys set upon him and gave him such a trouncing that he cried for mercy, but they did not cease beating him until the principal came to his rescue.

Judge Collins declares that he will enforce the ninety days' sentence if Pfeiffer does not keep his promise to leave the town within a reasonable time.

Reedy Held for the Grand Jury.

John Reedy of Bound Brook who was recently discharged from Muhlenburg Hospital, had a hearing before Justice Brampton a few days ago for interfering with a conductor. The case was conducted by Counsellor Suydam for the State and by William A. Coddington of this city for the defendant. Marshals Wm. Sharp Anderson and Nicholas Teeter were sworn and examined, both testifying that the escape of Dorn after he had been arrested was due to the interference of Reedy. The latter by advice of counsel, declined to make any statement, and the justice bound him in the sum of $300 to await the action of the grand jury in the fourth Tuesday in September. James S. Cawley becoming his surety. The statutory penalty for interence with an officer in the performance of his duty, resisting arrest or assisting a prisoner to escape is $500 fine, or two years in State prison, or both. Reedy it will be remembered was shot in the knee by the officer.

New Market Notes.

Miss Nellie Hart has accepted the position of organists at the Baptist church during the absence of Miss Emma Nelson, who has gone to spend a few weeks at Asbury Park.

D. C. Frazeur has invented, after years of study, a patent gear wheel or pully, for which he claims great merit. It is a wheel within a wheel, and has great possibilities. The inventor is looking for capitalists to manufacture the wheel and place them on the market. His invention has received recognition from Paris.

WETUMPKA LODGE.

Entertainments for The Winter Months.

"Wetumpka" 3401 Knights of Honor will give a series of entertainments in Music Hall the coming Winter and for this purpose have hired Music Hall for October, January and April and engaged the leading members of the Amaranth Society of Brooklyn who so successfully produced "Confusion" at the lodge's last anniversary. They will appear in "Our Boys," "Young Mrs. Winthrop" and Champagn and Oysters." The Committee of Arrangements organized Wetumpka Lodge rooms, Stillman building, on Monday evening last and stands as follows: C. J. Feytel, chairman; L. I. VanAylstine, secretary; F. P. Haffner, treasurer; E. S. Rogers, Geo. H. Neal.

The Smith Family Re-union.

From far and near the members of the Smith family and their friends gathered in the beautiful little grove on the banks of the North Branch, in Bernards Township, near Peapack, Wednesday. There were about a thousand present and they had an eventful day. Mr. Smith and his wife, Daughter Smith and her beau, Son Smith and his best girl and grand-son and grand-daughter Smith were all present.

The grove where the picnic was held is one of the prettiest spots in Somerset county. Surrounded by green - clad hills on every side, it is the centre of a magnificent valley. In the centre of the grove the house occupied by the original Smith stood and a portion of the remains can yet be seen. In this building seventeen children were reared and from these descended the innumerable Smiths of the present decade. The grove was bedecked with flags, and the Clinton Band discoursed music from a stand erected for that purpose.

The event of the day was the arrival of Governor Abbett which event occurred about 2:30 o'clock. His excellency was brought to the grove in Senator Keys' carriage accompanied by the Senator, ex-Sheriff McMurtrie and J. H. Mattison. He was lunched and then made a speech. He thought this picnic the most unique he had ever attended and expressed his great pleasure at meeting with so many members of the Smith family. He concluded by alluding to the wonderful scenery of Jersey, and thought those who were seeking quiet homes away from city turmoil could find no more delightful place than Somerset county. Isaiah Smith presided at the speaker's stand.

His Life Dispaired Of.

Mr. Mahlon Titus, the man who fell from a wagon at Scotch Plains Wednesday afternoon, still lies in an unconscious condition at the Muhlenberg Hospital and there is little hope of his recovery. It is said that his skull is fractured. Some months ago Mr. Titus, while returning to his home at Washington Valley on a dark night drove his team into Stony brook near Wetumpka Falls and had it not been for the timely arrival of some friends he would have drowned.

The Red Men Will Celebrate.

The members of Miantonomo Tribe, Improved Order of Red Men, will celebrate their second anniversary in Wetumpka Hall on Oct. 9th. It has been the custom of the Red Men since the Order was instituted to give their friends a pleasant time once a year and Miantonomo Tribe of this city proposes to uphold that custom. Since the Order was instituted here it has grown very rapidly. Admission to the entertainment will be by invitation.

FOOD ADULTERATION IN JERSEY.

Plenty of Bogus Butter, Clay "Coffee" and Watered Milk Discovered.

Dairy Commissioner McGuire states that the report of his deputies shows that oleomargarine was universally used at Asbury Park, Ocean Grove, Atlantic City and Long Branch. The most interesting feature of the crusade was the character of the packages in which the goods were shipped to these places, particularly to Ocean Grove and Asbury Park. Trunks and washhampers were frequently laden with bogus butter. There was no end to the cracker barrels, soap boxes and hat boxes used. Some of the larger hotels used it, but where it was found and a promise given to use no more, unless purchased regularly, the prosecution was suspended. It is estimated that more than one cottages in these watering places served up bogus butter. The supply was from New York and Philadelphia.

The commissioner announces that New Jersey grocery stores are flooded with chicory and clay coffee. The moulded beans of clay and flour paste which were discovered about a year ago were successfully driven from the market. The publicity given the market made it dangerous to sell it, because people were informed that clay coffee would not be ground. Now a new trick has been discovered, and it works well. It is called "cracked coffee," or "broken coffee," and is prepared to sell at twenty-five cents a pound. The impression is given that this is the genuine article of first-class roaster and the stock is good. The dealer can grind it in the presence of the buyer. It is nothing more or less than burnt bits of corn, beans, rye, oats and chickering, with some good coffee mixed with it. It contains less than twenty per cent. of good coffee. Forty-eight samples have been secured in different cities in the State, principally in Newark, Jersey City and Paterson. Some few have promised to send the article back to the jobbers, but others who persisted in selling it are to be prosecuted.

The recent warm weather has caused *a big demand for milk, and the tempta*tion to water the milk was too much. Deputy Inspector Vandegrift has gathered enough suspicious samples too keep the State analyist busy for a month. Discovery of adulteration will lead to many arrests.

Base Ball Notes.

[From the Somerset Democrat.]

Hammill fooled the West Ends until they felt like kicking themselves. At no time in the game could they size up Mister Hammill. Every time they hit the ball it seemed to go straight for the fielders' hands. And it was only on errors that they scored at all. During eight long innings Hammill twirled a wonderful game, only one little hit being secured off his delivery, and that by Andy Elder in the fourth.

That Hammill tired himself all out in pitching the game last Saturday is shown by the fact that the next day he pitched against the Acmes, and they pounded him all over the lot, securing seventeen hits in nine innings.

There were twelve hundred people at the Plainfield game on Saturday, and a more beautiful day has seldom been known. Cooling breezes tempered the warm rays of the sun, and everybody was comfortable. The grounds had been freshly dyed an attractive green, and the foul lines had been newly chalked. The grounds presented an air of gaiety and cheerfulness that was refreshing. The Crescents had two three-straight games, and the majority of those present entertained bright anticipations of a victory, and they were not disappointed either, as the Crescents won hands down.

Jones, who dropped Harkins' long fly to centre field after it had run, is not deserving all the censure he gets. Jones has always acted in the capacity of a back-stop, and therefore can scarcely be expected to play the field as well if he had been there for a long time, and while mourning Freddy for his errors, it would be wise to remember that Jones was used to playing behind the pitcher, and although he is young, still when a hit is needed Freddy can most generally supply the demand.

The claim which the people of the Crescent city always have made that the West Ends are afraid to play should now cease, as they have shown by their actions in last Saturday's game, that they are most decidedly capable of doing anything which may prove advantageous to the home club. Two balks were used during the game, two for the Crescents and two for the West Ends. The old soiled balls were passed by at the first opportunity and were in the field, and the new lively ones when the Crescents were at the bat. It was easy to hide the new balls until they were needed, and it was done, and all the kicking of Harkins, when the new ball was thrown in, was unjustifiable. The only answer he received was to "play ball," from Berriman, and, in speaking of the umpire's act, he say right that some of Mr. Berriman's decisions would turn a blind man green with envy, and at one time he even went so far as to completely take the authority out of Mr. Jones's hands, and declare a man out on third.

The Plainfield people are a queer lot. Along as their base runners are having a winning streak, they will go to the games, cheer their favorites and vote them royal fellows, but the least bit of bad luck in the paddle," but let them lose a game or two—the unfortunate for two or three days—then see how the people of Plainfield act. Base ball is a dead game to them, and forsake the grounds; they call every player a blackleg; revile him for not putting up a perfect game; curse the umpire and in many other odd ways fail to support what everyone knows is a first-class team.

—Last evening at the close of the performance of Primrose and West's minstrels at Wilkesbarre, Pa., Sheriff Robinson, of Scranton, went into the dressing rooms and served a capias upon Messrs. Primrose and West in a suit for damages sustained by Mr. Fotheringham of Scranton. The company was in that city last evening and during the performance got off some local "gags" on Mr. Fotheringham which he claims were libellous and calculated to injure him before the public. The minstrel men were very desirous of settling the case, but they could not and had to furnish security for their appearance in Scranton this morning.

WEALTH OF THE UNITED STATES.

Estimated by the Census Bureau at $62,610,000,000 in 1890.

The Census Bureau at Washington recently issued a bulletin on the assessed valuation of real and personal property of the several States and Territories.

The valuations are shown for the years of 1880 and 1890. The bulletin shows that the assessed value of all property has increased from $16,902,908,543 in 1880 to $24,-084,804 in 1890, an increase during the decade of $7,181,896,261, an amount equivalent to the true value of all property as returned by the United States census in 1850 ($7,135,780,228). Should it be found, upon the completion of the inquiry in relation to the true value of all property in the United States, that the same relation exists in 1890 between assessed valuation and true valuation as existed in 1880, the absolute wealth of the United States, according to the eleventh census, would be estimated at $62,610,000,000, or nearly $1,000 per capita, as against $514 per capita in 1860.

The final returns showing the absolute wealth of the country will necessarily be among the last publications of the Census Office. It is thought, however, that the calculation is not available until after the inquiries relating to agriculture and manufactures have been finished. The tables show the assessed valuation in Pennsylvania for the years 1880 and 1890 as follows: In 1890, $1,698,459,616; in 1880, $8,553,841,092; increase, $990,382,016. In New York—In 1880: $2,651,940,006; in 1890, $3,775,825,988; increase, $1,123,885,982. In New Jersey—In 1880: $672,518,881; in 1890, $838,309,187; increase, $165,790,836. In Delaware—In 1880: $87,751,64—; in 1890, $74,134,401; increase, $14,182,758.

AMUSING TRICKS.

The Simple Solution of Mysteries.

When ordinary games grow wearysome, the knowledge of tricks often proves a boon. Then again, you tell one of those present that he or she may hold above the head either hand and count fifteen while you are out of the room or with your back turned. You can then when you return tell correctly back if you either were out, or turn around if you had your back to the one selected and tell her or him which hand was up.

The solution is simple. When the hand is raised the blood rushes from it. When forced a marked paleness is noticeable. Compare the two hands.

The ring trick or "catch." Selects an ordinary ring or a curtain ring and offer to push a large head through it.

Solution—Put the first finger of your right hand through the ring.

THE HOUSEHOLD

ALL READ THE EVENING NEWS.

The states ought to pass laws prohibiting parachute descents, though perhaps it is a pity to prevent persons who are fool enough to attempt them from getting out of the world.

This year's crops of grain will figure away up in the billions. Nothing less than that will suit America, the land of magnificent destiny. An agricultural paper has been making an estimate of forthcoming crops in which the corn product is put at 2,000,000,000 bushels, the wheat at half a billion and oats at 622,000,000. This will make the sum total of these three grain crops 3,122,000,000. There is not only increase in quantity of agricultural products, but also advance in price, so that the profits of agriculture for 1891 are expected to reach $1,000,000,000.

Put Him Out.

Lucien Saniel, a foreigner, is editor of a little socialist sheet in New York city. He is also a delegate from America to the international socialist congress at Brussels. So far as our information extends, Mr. Saniel never did an honest month's work with his hands in his life, though he calls his paper a workingman's advocate. He gets his living by howling at society.

He professed to speak for the people of America in an oration delivered at the socialist congress. He told his auditors that in the great nation of the United States $70,000,000 was yearly stolen from the persons who produced it. He also enlarged on the enormous wealth of this country. Then he made this stupendous statement: "And of this wealth, this misery increases so fast that the land of the free and home of the brave is in reality a hell."

Now, it is altogether probable that if Mr. Saniel was forced to make choice between going to the place he mentions or continuing to sponge his living off his fellow men in America, he would elect to stay in the United States awhile longer. Such a test would show his estimate of his own truthfulness. But it is a pity such fellows as this should be allowed to land in America. As a nation we are not perfect, and there is suffering among the poor—partly through their own fault, mostly through their own ignorance; but it is a fact that there is less suffering from poverty here than in any other country. It is a fixed fact, too, that in this republic every body who is willing to work honestly can in time "catch on" and make a living if he tries faithfully. This country is very much what people make it for themselves. If Mr. Saniel thinks it is a hell he ought not to come back to it. We can certainly spare him from our midst.

A Remarkable Letter.

A letter from which we clip the following extracts was read at the funeral of Colonel S. N. Wood, killed some time since in the county seat war in Kansas. Away back in the Kansas border troubles Wood was a fighter and a free state man, as determined and desperate as the band led by old John Brown himself. After those troubles were settled Colonel Wood remained a fighter. It was in the blood of the daring frontiersman. Local quarrels stirred his soul after state and national ones were stilled. There were not many years of his eventful life in which he was not mixed up in some kind of squabble.

Being a man of such character the letter read at his funeral seems strange. It breathes throughout a spirit of peace, gentleness and good will that one might expect from a cloistered priest or preacher living apart from the world and rapt in spiritual meditation; but from a stormy fighter and a lawyer, never. It was written five years ago, when Colonel Wood believed himself on his death bed:

TO MY FAMILY—Let my funeral be as quiet as possible. I do not want any show or parade. Would prefer if no show were made of my body. Don't wear any mourning. I am not dead. That one of me is only my body, and for which I no longer have any use, and I cast it off as I would a suit of old clothes. I wish there was a furnace where it could be reduced to ashes and thus dissolve itself into its original elements and not have to be buried, filling the earth with noxious gases, endangering the lives of the living. You can bury only my body. I have deserted it, and from it, as life always departs from death, I am with you. I witness your every act. Cheer up; "death is only transitory." Grieve not, "death is only dead, still lives;" lives as a conscious, distinct entity. I feel as I write this no concern for the future. I am perfectly satisfied that the change that life in the spiritual world commences where it ends here. Some take advantage of well spent lives, full of good works.

Since God sentenced mankind to "eat bread in the sweat of his face," it has been a hard struggle to make somebody else do the sweating. Heaven and hell are conditions, not localities. My aim in a sincere desire to do right—to do the most possible good in this world. I believe sincerely in the "fatherhood of God and the brotherhood of man." As I have lived, so I am willing to die. For these reasons I want no religious ceremonies over my body. Let ministers and churches quit preying themselves about the after life and go to work and earn their professions of this life. If possible, prepare the people to live here teach us our duty to each other and to mankind.

I contend I come of the noblest element of this world. I cannot conceive its end. Generations may come and go, but the earth will continue forever.

Mother and spirit may change their form, but there is no such thing as annihilation.

I believe firmly in a future life, or rather I know there is a future life.

I must quit. I hail the separation from the body, called death, as a joyful change.

Read this, if you will, as the reason for requesting all ceremonies at my funeral.

I realize the hardship in parting with friends here, but I have hosts on the other side waiting for me. I am, beloved, yours,

S. N. WOOD.

BALMACEDA WAS BEATEN

Valparaiso Has Been Captured by the Insurgents.

AUTHENTIC ADVICES AT LAST.

United States Consul McCreary Has Confirmed the Report of the Congressionalists' Success—Heavy Losses on Both Sides.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 29.—Acting Secretary Wharton, of the state department, received the following cablegram last night from United States Consul McCreary at Valparaiso:

VALPARAISO, Aug. 28.—Battle fought near city this morning. Government forces badly beaten. Heavy loss both sides. City surrendered to opposition, but in hands of admirals Montt, Germain, Hotham and English fleets for good order. No communication with Santiago. Opposition forces now entering the city.

Balmaceda Held the Cable.

The official news of the insurgent victory in Chili settles beyond doubt the conflicting reports of the past few days concerning the condition of affairs at the seat of war. The receipt of dispatches from Valparaiso telling of a victory for the Balmacedists is accepted by state and navy officials as resulting from Balmaceda's control of the cable line from that city.

Delivered to Germany.

The following cablegram has also received by the Congressional envoys here last night:

IQUIQUE, Chili, Aug. 28.—Balmaceda defeated for the second time today. After the victory the Congressional forces remained outside of the city. Valparaiso was delivered up to the Germans and Americans. Iquique was peacefully delivered it to the orders of the Congressional government. Communicate this to the government of the United States. EBRAZURIS.

Chili's Future Settled.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—The Herald's Valparaiso cable says: "The future of Chili for the time has been settled, and settled conclusively on the hills to the east of this city today by grim arbitrament of war. With Balmaceda practically a fugitive without resources in men or money; with the principal seaports of the country in the hands of the Congressionalists and a consequent shutting off of all income from customs receipts; with President-elect Vicuna a refugee on board a German warship and the country flooding in the tide of the standard of the invaders, it is a matter of only a few days when the capital will fall into the hands of the revolutionary leaders.

Balmaceda's Generals Killed.

A new government, with possibly Judge Bellesario Prata, head of the last parliamentary cabinet of Balmaceda, or Manuel de Jose Irarrazaval, one of the ablest, at its head, will be formed, and things will go along in about the same way in Chili as they did before Jan. 7, when hostilities were formally begun.

General Canto and his army won today's battle by superior generalship, good hard fighting, assisted by good fortune in the killing of Balmaceda's generals and the consequent demoralization of the army and the desertion of entire regiments.

The Story of the Battle.

Early in the morning the booms of cannon announced to the people of Valparaiso that a movement beyond the ordinary skirmishes had begun. The occasional spurt-spurt of the hand to hand guns swelled into one continuous roar and then it was known that the final decisive struggle had begun. At the end of twenty days, perhaps, was to decide whether Balmaceda or the Junta was to be the ruling power in Chili had begun.

The insurgent leader, General Canto's, position was on the hills above the race track at Vina del Mar, outside of the city. His raiders have been getting bolder and bolder. He had absolute control of the railroad to Santiago and commanded the ordinary roads. Affairs had come to such a pass that it was necessary for President Balmaceda to make some move, and a little after daylight the word was given to attack the position held by the revolutionists. The government troops left Vina and Alcerreca, the government troops left their breastworks and advanced on the enemy under cover of a heavy fire from their batteries.

Deadly Work of Smokeless Powder.

The insurgents were generally armed with Mannlicher rifles and used smokeless powder, and consequently were hard to see and so well armed. As soon as the approaching column got within range of the Mannlichers they poured a destructive fire from the revolutionists. Shot and shell, grape and canister and rifle bullets tore through the ranks of the advancing troops and in a short time it was necessary for President Balmaceda to make some move, and a little after daylight the word was given to attack the position held by the revolutionists. The troops left the breastworks and Alcerreca, the government troops left their breastworks and advanced on the enemy under cover of a heavy fire from their batteries.

A CITY CYCLONE SWEPT.

Ravage of the Wind's Wrath at Newark, N. J.

MANY BUILDINGS ARE WRECKED

A Path of Devastation Across the City — Houses and Factories Unroofed, Trees Blown Down and Several Persons Injured.

NEWARK, N. J., Aug. 29.—A hurricane passed through Newark and did great damage to McCormick, Connolly & Co.'s big leather factory, tearing off the roof and crushing in the walls. Reuben Trier's factory was also damaged. It took the roof off Cashion's tannery and Alderman Heinkel's big double house. Three persons were badly cut and bruised. The damage will be more than $50,000.

Leaving Ruin Behind.

The cyclone swept across the eastern part of Newark and left behind it a wake of wrecked buildings. It rolled along sometimes near the ground and sometimes above the roofs, whirling with it a dense cloud of black dust of spherical shape and about fifty feet in diameter. The roaring sound that preceded it was worthless as a warning, for the cyclone itself was whirling along at lightning speed.

In less than two minutes it had wrenched off a dozen roofs, thrown walls, fences trees and telegraph poles, snatched up and tossed afar off the weekly wash of many a family, filled the electric wires with sky lights and rubbish of all kinds and thoroughly frightened human beings and beasts.

Names of the Injured.

Thomas Slavin, who lives on the Plank road, was struck on the head by a falling skylight as he was driving on the Bowery street. The two-year-old daughter of John White, of No. 158 Bowery street, was cut on the head and arm by falling glass.

The whirling ball of destruction came from the southwest. Entering the city with a shriek it first struck the Tomlin son Engine Co.'s factory. It started in the glass in the skylight which is two inches thick and lifted a heavy gate out of the yard and hurled it a hundred yards away. The black ball was seen to roll over the roof and then rise higher in the air. It crossed Oliver street without doing any damage and then hurled itself against the leather factory of McCormack Connelly & Co. This building is of brick and three stories high.

The storm struck it and bore the wall down before it, lifted the roof and threw it upon an adjoining factory owned by Reuben Trier.

In the Whirling Ball's Path.

Trees and telegraph poles, garments hung out on clotheslines, skylights and fences fell before the strength of the blast in its dash from the place to Chapel street. Cashion's factory stood in its path.

Away went its roof up a hundred feet in the air, and landed with a crash a hundred yards away. Down Bowery street went the whirling ball. The roof of a three story tenement at the corner of Bowery and Lexington streets was lifted off as if it were a feather. The double tenement, 111 and 113 Bowery street, lost its roof and had its windows shattered.

The Flood Near Troy.

TROY, N. Y., Aug. 29.—The work of the storm in this region was far more destructive than first reported. On every side are evidences of the fearful destruction. The streams are still raging torrents and lit-tered with great beams, planks and personal effects from residences, stores and factories along its banks. Carcasses of horses, cattle and hogs are no rare sight.

The storm, too, swept over a much wider area than at first supposed, and it was not unaccompanied by loss of human life, as it was hoped was the case.

The loss of life has been in the Poesten kill. A remarkable coincidence is that on Aug. 27, 1856, the same territory was flooded in just the same way. No damage of any consequence appears to have been done over Glenmore House lake. It was here that the storm burst in all its fury Of the thirty bridges along the Wynantskill only two remain.

There was intense excitement in Petersburg. That portion of the village known as mill yard was submerged and thirty-one persons, mostly women and children, were rescued from second story windows by means of ropes. The loss in this locality alone is placed at about $200,000.

Swept Into the Water.

At Poestenkill village a number of persons gathered on a bridge to watch the surging waters. The structure was supposed to be safe. Soon an ominous creaking was heard. William McChesney, William Castle, Mrs. Garret Ives and Robert Morrison were carried with the bridge into the torrent. Mrs. Ives and Morrison were speedily rescued. McChesney was drowned and Castle was found alive, but unconscious, several hours later in the top of a tree.

Fire Bells Sound the Warning.

BENNINGTON, Vt., Aug. 29.—The rains have raised Walloomsac river so that at midnight Bennington people were called out of bed by the fire alarm bells, to find the streets flooded and danger threatening on every hand.

An exciting night ensued, but fortunately no dams gave way and but one bridge was carried off. Cellars were flooded and the streets badly washed.

Twenty-Two Were Killed.

STATESVILLE, N. C., Aug. 29.—There is yet still great excitement here over the railroad accident at Third creek. It is a source of wonderment to those who saw the wreck that a single life was saved. The total dead now number twenty-two and the injured twenty-six. Charles Webber, Pittsburg, was one of the killed.

Glendale's Mystery Unsolved.

GLENDALE, L. I., Aug. 29.—Coroner Homeyer and his jury last night finished the inquest in the case of Hannah Robinson, who was found murdered in the woods near Glendale about a month ago. The verdict was that Hannah came to her death through strangulation by hands unknown to the jury.

Young Blaine Will Fight.

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., Aug. 29.—It is evident that James G. Blaine, Jr., will fight the divorce suit brought by his wife, who now resides in this city. Judge John Carland received instructions as attorney in New York to make an appearance and deny allegations of desertion or adultery.

Carmen Sylvia Very Ill.

VENICE, Aug. 29.—The condition of Carmen Sylvia, queen of Roumania, has become so critical that Dr. Charcot, the celebrated Parisian physician, has been telegraphed for.

The Cuban Giants in Trouble.

TRENTON, Aug. 29.—The Gorhams, better known as the Cuban Giants, were arrested here for rioting. They came to this city, their old home, to play the Trentons, whom they defeated by a score of 8 to 4. After the game a riot broke out, caused by Thomas, the catcher of the visitors, striking a ball thrower to the Trentons. Seldon, Thomas and C. Williams were the ringleaders in the row. Some desperate hand pounding occurred.

Meehans' Great Mile.

INDEPENDENCE, Ia., Aug. 29.—At the Independence track, Meehans, the sensational 3-year-old, with a record of 2:21¾, was brought out to beat the 3-year stallion record of 2:23¾. Driven by Budd Doble, he trotted the mile without a skip, a record breaker in 2:20, first. Direct, he had his record of 2:10¼, paced the mile with ease with skip in 2:09¾.

Corbett Will Fight Mitchell.

NEW YORK, Aug. 29.—Jim Corbett telegraphed from Baltimore that he has $1,000 posted with the New York Herald and he is prepared to meet Charley Mitchell at once and arrange a match with him for a fight to a finish with gloves for $10,000 a side. He adds that it is the desire of his heart to meet Mitchell.

THE CRIES OF BIRDS.

Legendary Tales and Quaint Fancies Connected with Their Notes.

There is a never failing charm in the many musical and plaintive cries of birds, wafted from one quarter and then another, around which, in our own and other countries, so many pretty and legendary tales have at different times been told. Indeed, long ago, fancy has given an interpretation to the notes of birds, and the sweet song of the skylark, as heard at "heaven's gate," has been said to be a repetition of the word "sirra-lyra," a combination of sounds borrowed from the French tire-lire. Shakespeare in the "Winter's Tale" speaks of "the lark that tira-lirra chants," and Browne, in his "Britannia's Pastorals" makes it "teery-leery." The woodlark's note reminds Mr. Tabory, author of "Ter in," and the plaintive cry of the chaffinch, which is generally considered a forerunner of wet weather, is rhymingly imitated by the English peasantry who cry out when they see the bird, "Wet-weet! Deep-deep."

The cry of the wood pigeon, which has been interpreted as meaning "Take tuo-o coo, Taffy! take tuo-o coo, Taffy!" forms the subject of an old Suffolk legend. The magpie, runs the story, one day undertook to teach the pigeon how to build a more substantial and commodious nest; but instead of being a docile pupil the pigeon kept on her old cry of "Take tuo, Taffy! take tuo!" The magpie insisted that one stick at a time was as much as could be managed to advantage; but the pigeon, heedless of the advice, kept on crying out as before, "Tuo, take tuo." Thereupon the magpie in a passion gave up the task, exclaiming, "I say take one at a time's enough; and if you think otherwise you may set about the work yourself, for I will have no more to do with it." Since that unhappy quarrel the two, otherwise pet and told, "has built her slight platform of sticks, which certainly suffers much in comparison with the strong, substantial structure of the female. Thus the pigeon's nest, it may be remembered, merely a layer of cross twigs, through which the eggs can be seen from below.

As might be imagined, the song of the nightingale forms the subject of many legendary tales, and according to one popular story in the Tyrol interest in olden times this favorite bird had a dog to which it was very much attached, but one day he tied it to a tree while he went out for a walk. During his absence, however, the animal in his struggle to get loose and regain his liberty, pulled up the stump and escaped. The nightingale on returning and finding the dog gone, has ever since lamented its loss thus:

Kale ya, kale ya!
Futs, futs! ya-ee, ya-ee!

Divorce Statistics.

Le Journal Officiel publishes some remarkable statistics relative to the divorces and separations decreed in France during a period of twelve months. The divorces granted after less than one year's connubial happiness amount to 6 per cent. Then comes a tremendous jump to 23 per cent. in the case of unions having lasted from one to five years. The heaviest proportion of all is that for the period extending from the fifth to the tenth year, the number reached being 40 per cent. After that the figures drop rapidly. Only 23 per cent. of couples seek divorce between their tenth and twentieth years of union; between twenty and thirty the proportion is only 6 per cent., and finally only one pair in a hundred seeks to cut the knot after sailing through life together for over thirty and under forty years. After more than forty thousand of wedded happiness there is no instance of the French equivalent for "a decree nisi." Conjugal infidelity is only the cause of just one-fifth of the divorces granted.

Observations on Bats.

It seems extraordinary, says The Illustrated American, to observe a number of bats in the evening flying back and forth through the trees with remarkable rapidity, but without ever coming in contact with the branches or hurting themselves. Spallanzani, the Italian naturalist, placed a bat in a dark inclosure, across which were stretched a number of threads, crossing and recrossing each other. The bat flew rapidly back and forth, trying to effect its escape, but avoided the threads with as much ease as if they had not been in the way in the least. Whether this curious power was the result of a sixth and unknown sense was long a puzzle to naturalists. To decide the knotty point, Spallanzani resorted to the cruel expedient of blinding a bat, and found that it still flew among the threads without hurting, to all appearances, any more inconvenienced than if it still had its eyesight.

A Remarkable Occurrence.

A remarkable occurrence is narrated in telegrams received from Southern California, namely, the recent and sudden appearance of a shallow but extensive lake in the so called Colorado desert to the southwest of Salton, in San Diego county, in Lower California. The lake at last accounts ranged from fourteen inches to three feet in depth, but was about thirty miles long and twelve miles wide. It is apparently the result of an overflow, and it has been shown that the water comes from the Colorado river. The Southern Pacific Railroad company, whose tracks run through the district, has sent out investigating parties to locate, if possible, the point at which the water comes into the desert. The appearance of the lake has recalled a number of schemes of irrigation, which contemplated in part what has now taken place by accident.

A Characteristic Letter from Carlyle.

A short but characteristic letter from Carlyle has recently been published. A Wesleyan minister at Northampton discovered it the other day in an old book which he picked up at a bookstall. The letter, which is very clean and beautifully written, is dated "Chelsea, 19 Nov., 1852." It reads as follows: "Very well! Be diligent in business, fervent in spirit, therefore, and let me have credit of you as a pupil! Remember always 'The end of man is not a thought, but an action;' a series of manful, faithful actions (and of manful, silent, steadfast endurances withal), which make up worthily man's life here below! With many good wishes and friendly regards, I remain always, yours truly, T. Carlyle."

Dog Watch.

The phrase, "dog watch," has really nothing to do with dogs. It is a corruption of dodge watch—two short watches, one from 4 to 6, and the other from 6 to 8, in the evening, introduced to dodge the routine or prevent the same men always keeping watch at the same time.

Good Health

MORNING COLD BATHS.

Unpleasant Symptoms Which They Sometimes Cause in Weak People.

In the past few years several patients have come to me complaining that they from time to time, especially in winter, in the early part of the day, have expectorated mucus tinged with blood, writes a physician in the London Lancet. In each case there was no family history of phthisis, the temperature was normal, there were no harsh dry crackles in the spots, there was no loss of strength or weight and the chest sounds were healthy. The men, however, were not of a vigorous type, and they were all accustomed to have a cold bath summer and winter. It seemed likely, especially in winter, that the sudden application of intensely cold water to the whole surface of the skin too suddenly raised the internal blood pressure, and hence the oozing of the blood through the walls of the capillary vessels lying beneath the lining membrane of the throat or larynx, or possibly the lungs. In any case, whatever the true explanation may be, the fact stands out that the unpleasant symptoms disappeared as soon as the temperature of the icy cold water was reasonably increased. The practice of taking cold baths is so universal nowadays that it is perhaps as well to know that, although the strong man may indulge in it with unmixed benefit, it may cause in the weak man a symptom which fills him with anxiety.

A Hot Weather Mistake.

A mistake many men make is not to drink until they are thirsty, and not to drink anything at all cool until they are hot. A man may get up in the morning and feel fairly comfortable, he will eat his breakfast and drink but little. When he gets to his work it will be warmer and he will be warmer; he will then drink beer, soda water, lemonade or ice water. In a little while he will be thirstier and will drink some more of the same. From this time on, as the thermometer rises, he will drink more and more frequently. The Journal of Health explains this state of things as follows:

Thirst is a local feeling, but it means that there is not enough water in the system. Pouring water down the throat puts water into the stomach, but not into the system for some time afterward, particularly if the water is cold. Coffee and tea quench thirst more rapidly when they are hot than when they are cold, because they are assimilated more quickly.

After the victim of the heat is loaded up with cold water he begins to perspire more freely. This means that he has put into himself more water than his system demands, that the best and his overloaded system combined are working it off. As the perspiration trickles down his face, he goes and drinks more drinks, and so keeps the uncomfortable round until night, when he tosses around damp and uncomfortable.

In the same way that a short run exhausts a man's breath, and makes him sweat more than a long, leisurely walk, so a number of iced drinks poured in rapidly into a man's stomach will make him sweat more than a moderate amount of fluids taken at long intervals of time. The best time to drink is in the morning. The stomach is empty and the fluids will be clarified through the system and into the blood more speedily. A pint of moderately cool water then will be more to relieve thirst during the day than ten glasses of beer or soda water in the afternoon.

Rest for the Eye.

When you feel the pricking pain on the eyelid that announces the coming of a stye use as an application very strong black tea, or simply the tea leaves, moistened with a little water, for a few hours at night and laid over the eyelid. Moisten again as it dries. This, if used before the sty gets well under way, will, it is said, cure it.

Etiquette

THE GARDEN PARTY.

A Landmark of the Social Season and How It Is Observed.

The garden party season is now well on its way, both in town and country. It is a paradox perhaps to say that the town garden parties are the most brilliant as regards fashion, number of guests, music and amusements, while those of the country are almost as much in demand as the former. In the country it is more than satisfied to play tennis or croquet or both. At town garden parties one has to dance.

The regulation garden party hours vary—3:30 to 6:30 and 4 to 7 country hours; 4:30 to 7 and 5 to 7:30 town hours; but both in town and country the arrival is made as near to the hour mentioned on the card as possible. It is no proof of fashion to be fashionably late on the scene, only that something prevented an earlier appearance. The charm of a garden party is sunshine blended with shade, and the hostess who prefers the shadows of evening and the gloom of the trees give shade without sunshine and a chilly atmosphere not bargained for. The debutante's garden party is an affair of almost simultaneous one among the guests. They do not leave by twos and threes and so disappear by degrees, as at an at home, but every one seems to go at the same moment. The guests walk to their carriages rather than wait to have them called up in turn, so eager are they to get away; but this needs no advice, as it is necessary on account of the long drive in prospect.

The length of invitations is from weeks to three months, and there may be convenience having a great deal to do with it, also space and refusals. If any special amusement is intended, it should be conspicuously mentioned on the invitation card.

An answer should be sent to a garden party invitation, if only, to take it on no higher ground, as any hostess may do in the quantity of refreshments required, and also enabling others to be asked in the stead of those who are prevented accepting. Refreshments at garden parties are plentifully with good things—jellies, creams, babas with jam and cherries, grapes, peaches and a plentiful supply of cream, sandwiches of various kinds, cakes of every shape, make and color; tea, coffee, iced coffee, and claret cup. Sometimes ices are served and a dainty "dew and a maidens plenty" are required when the company is numerous.

Black enamel pins in intricate interlacings and showing a faint glimmer of the gold at the edge are suitable for second mourning.

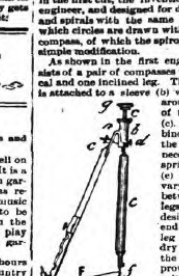
AN INGENIOUS INSTRUMENT.

Designed for the Accurate Drawing of Curves and Spirals.

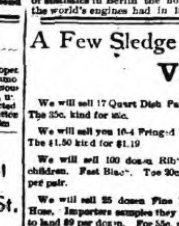
Popular Science News calls attention to the ingenious little instrument illustrated in the first cut, the invention of a French engineer, and designed for drawing curves and spirals with the same accuracy with which circles are drawn with the ordinary compass, of which the spirograph is only a simple modification.

As shown in the first engraving, it consists of a pair of compasses with one vertical and one inclined leg. The inclined leg is attached to a sleeve (b) which revolves around the shaft of the vertical leg (c). A screw (d) binds it firmly to the shaft when necessary, and a spring (a) and nut (e) enable one to vary the distance between the two legs as may be desired. In the end of the vertical leg is inserted a dry point (f), and the inclined leg is provided with any suitable marking apparatus, such as a pencil point, a drawing pen or a pen for making dotted or irregular lines. The two legs are connected together by a thread (F).



THE SPIROGRAPH.

In operation the instrument is held by the knob (g) at the top by one hand, and the inclined leg revolved around the vertical one with the other. As it revolves the thread is wound upon the dry point (f), and the distance between the two is constantly and regularly diminished. As a consequence the marking point describes a perfectly regular spiral, the form of which may be varied by using different sizes of dry points and varying the character of the marking point.



FIGURES DRAWN WITH THE SPIROGRAPH.

In the second cut some illustrations are given of the possibilities of this simple but useful instrument, which can easily be improvised from the contents of an ordinary box of drawing instruments.

The Steam Engines of the World.

The number of steam engines in the world is an everchanging and rapidly increasing figure, keeping pace with the extension of the world's trade. Mulhall gave the horse power of the world's engines in 1840 as 2,356,000; in 1880 as 11,400,000, and in 1889 as 28,934,000. According to the bureau of statistics in Berlin the horse power of the world's engines had in 1887 increased to no less than 48,000,000, and allowing for even a moderate increase since that time the horse power cannot now be less than 50,000,000, says an English exchange, which furnishes the following statistics: France owns 60,500 stationary and locomotive boilers, 7,000 locomotives and 1,850 ship boilers; Germany has 80,000 boilers, 10,000 locomotives and 1,700 ship boilers; Austria, 12,000 boilers and 2,600 locomotives. The force equivalent to the working steam engines represents in United States, 7,500,000 horse power; in Great Britain, 7,000,000 horse power; in Germany, 4,500,000; in France, 3,000,000, and in Austria, 1,500,000.

To the Foot of the Matterhorn.

It may interest the increased army of tourists who intend to pour upon Zermatt, now that the railway is complete, to know that the new line has not only been inaugurated, but episcopally blessed. The latter function was thought all the more desirable because of the not unnatural prejudices of the large class of guides, porters and owners of quadrupeds who fear that their livelihood will be endangered by the competition of the locomotive. Dr. Jardinier, the bishop of Sion, with a great company of his clergy, appeared at Visp, and the prelate gave his solemn benediction to the steam horse before it ascended to Zermatt. This is a great change since the demonstration of the Capuchin Fathers at Entlebuch about twenty years ago, when the invasion of their valley by the railway which joins Lucerne with Berne was preached against as a moral catastrophe.

Tanning Elephants' Hides.

The tanning of elephants' hides is, comparatively speaking, a new industry. The method employed according to the Boston Journal of Commerce is practically the same as in the tanning of cattle hides, except that a stronger combination of the tannic ingredients is required, and greater length of time—about six months—is necessary to perfect the work. When the hide is taken out of the vat it is an inch and a half thick. Among the articles made of elephant leather are pocketbooks, small satchels, cigar cases, card cases and similar articles, and they are said to be expensive luxuries. In finishing the hide no attempt is made to glaze or polish it, everything being done to preserve its natural color and appearance.

News and Notes.

Papier mache oil cans which are now being made, are very durable, and impervious to any spirit or oil likely to be used in a machine room.

A light and compact form of rolled steel or iron columns has been placed on the market. They consist of two I beams bent longitudinally at right angles and bolted together with a small I beam between them.

A late invention, the cushion car wheel, is described as being a thick rubber band placed between the tire and center of the wheel, which gives a very elevated surface, absorbing all vibrations. The rubber is so attached as to make any danger from a hot box or from corrosive action an improbability.

Ball bearings are applied to castors on heavy furniture. A cup containing a large or main ball made of a suitable material rests upon three bearing balls, which are made to revolve in an annular groove. These bearing balls are kept at a uniform distance apart by aid of antifriction balls placed in equal numbers between them. They are kept in place by a cap screwed on to the edge of the cup.—Manufacturers' Gazette.

FLORAL BEDROOMS.

Charming Schemes of Color for Paper, Paint and Furniture.

Floral bedrooms have been an English craze and have recently been adopted in this country. The Decorator and Furnisher gives the following suggestions in regard to them:

The best decorative houses and wall paper stores keep paper and cretonne en suite, and toilet ware can also be had to match.

A yellow poppy paper on a satin ground, with a cretonne dado to harmonize, makes a pretty arrangement. The cretonne dado should be run around the room in order to make a break in the wall. All the paint should be cream. The curtains and bedspread should be of cretonne. The ceiling paper should be yellow and white. All the furniture should be covered with the cretonne, and a pale blue "frill" around it gives an appropriate finish to the decoration.

Another bedroom might have a wild rose paper, with the wild rose cretonne, and a dull green "frill" around it. There are beautiful rose papers with cretonne to match in yellows, pinks and reds. A yellow and white ceiling paper goes with either of the above schemes.

Other schemes are blue and white poppies, sweet peas and forgetmenots, in all of which cases cretonnes, paper, carpet and chinaware may be obtained. To make the rooms complete, small embroidered flowers in washing silks should be in the corner of all sheets, pillowcases, towels and toilet covers.

To Make Wall Paper Stick.

A dealer in wall papers gives the following directions for making paper stick to rough walls: First, take a block of wood or corrugated iron and hang it against the wall all over. This will take off all the rough plaster. Then, if you have very heavy paper to put on, dissolve one pound of good glue in a pail of boiling water and apply with a brush to the whole surface to be papered, being especially careful to cover the edges or corners next to woodwork. A thin paste applied in the same way will be sufficient if ordinary paper is to be used, always taking care to cover the edges and corners.

Tongue Loaf.

Tongue loaf is a good dish to serve hot at luncheon or tea. Mix a quart of finely chopped boiled tongue with a cupful of bread crumbs, add half a teaspoonful of dried mustard, a little chopped parsley and pepper and salt to taste. Moisten the whole with half a teacupful of beef stock or milk, and two well beaten eggs. Pack down solidly in a buttered baking dish and bake about three-quarters of an hour in a moderate oven. When cooked and nicely browned turn it from the dish on a pretty platter and garnish with parsley.

Picnic Cake.

Beat up half a cup of butter to a fine cream, add two cups of powdered sugar, then whisk the yolks of four eggs and add them to the cream with half a glass of good sherry. Beat for two minutes, then stir in a pint of sifted flour, the whites of four eggs and three and a half cupfuls of prepared flour. Bake in one loaf.

Garden Umbrellas.

Garden umbrellas are made of Turkey red twill or striped awning, edged with cord and Nottingham lace fringe, and when erected over a table having a pretty cover and a rug at one's feet, under a comfortable Shaker rocker, one can enjoy the air, sunshine and comfort at a small outlay.

Walz, Jr., and Mr. Howard Beebe.

Mrs. Samuel S. Guion of Carlton avenue will receive the guests of the Club at the Tea on Saturday next. The remaining Teas of the season will be held on September 19th, October 3d and 17th.

—New Jersey is to get $17,000 from the general government because she has a State Agricultural College. This will help to give the farmers a great deal of very valuable information. It is money well expended.

A GHASTLY FIND

OF THE DECOMPOSED BODY OF A MAN, AT HOLLY'S.

Murder Suspected.—Mr. Holly Thinks the Victim Was Killed Somewhere Else and the Body Dragged to Where it was Found.—But it is Probably a Case of Drowning or Suicide.—Who is Michael Hoffman?

The body of a man was found in a lake near Mr. John I. Holly's country seat, three miles from this city, Saturday afternoon, by some boys playing in the vicinity.

Some girls saw the body several days ago, but supposed it was a log. Others like it about the same time and mistook it for a dead dog. The head was wedged among some roots, and the limbs were below the surface of the water so that only the trunk was visible—hence the mistake. The boys Saturday promptly gave the alarm and soon farmers flocked from all directions. The body was not disturbed, however, for some time, pending the arrival of the coroner.

Notice was sent to New Brunswick, but the coroner was away on his vacation. Finally a justice of the peace was notified.

Watchers guarded the remains all Saturday night as it floated in Spring Lake, in the rear of Mr. Holly's Summer Villa, and early yesterday the body was towed ashore and wrapped up in a piece of canvas and laid upon the green meadow. Mr. Holly allowed this to be done with reluctance. From the first he has been impressed with the idea that the man was murdered some distance from the spot where the body was found, and he was anxious that every clue leading to the solving of the mystery should be retained until the arrival of the coroner and detectives. As the body was drawn from under the bridge without Mr. Holly's permission he decided that nothing could be gained by preventing its removal from the water.

Although the belief that murder has been committed is generally expressed in that vicinity, yet the authorities in Middlesex county had not taken the first step toward sending home the coroner up to last evening. No coroner could be found although Mr. Holly telegraphed to all persons with authority, within the county limits. Yesterday afternoon Justice Wood of the Metuchen district, who resides near Bonhamtown went to the Holly place and at the earnest solicitation of the farmers, consented to do something toward clearing up the mystery. The body was uncovered in his presence and a ghastly sight it presented.

It is probable that the body was in the water under the rustic bridge about ten days or two weeks. The catfish which abound in the lake had eaten away the exposed flesh, leaving the bare bones of the face, skull and hands. Nothing remains of the countenance by which the man could be recognized. The body was cheaply dressed in a suit of black cork-screw, a collar, cuffs, four-in-hand necktie and congress gaiters. In the pockets of the clothing about twenty dollars in small bills and coins were found. Also a highly-polished briar-wood pipe, cigars, a hem-stitched handkerchief, and a watch.

The watch was jewelled with cylinder movement. It was numbered 149,574. The hands were stopped at ten o'clock. The watch-case was also found. The clothes were thought to have been thoroughly searched and still no papers leading to the man's identity could be found.

At the last moment and deep down in the inside pocket was found a slip of paper which may help to establish the unfortunate man's identity. Upon it was written in a hurried hand with a lead-pencil "Michael Hoffman worked for Francis Engel six years, behavior good." This may have been thrust into the pocket for a purpose, however. All sorts of theories regarding the finding of the slip of paper have been advanced by those who have interested themselves in the affair. Some are inclined to believe that the man was a working man and that the paper found was a recommendation from his employer.

The belief is borne out by the story told by J. Bergen, a Brooklyn man, who is visiting on George Smith's farm near South Plainfield. Mr. Bergen says that about two weeks ago a man resembling the one found called at Smith's place and asked for assistance. He walked with a lameness in one leg. Bergen told him to apply to some of the neighboring farmers for work, but the man replied that he was too feeble to do such heavy work. He went down the road in the direction of the Holly place. Bergen says the man he saw was apparently about fifty-five years. The dead man may have been that age, as he had some scattering gray hairs on his neck. The clothes and the money found on the person would tend to prove that he was not a man who would apply for assistance.

Some think a crime has been committed. The theory being that the man was killed some distance from the Holly farm and the body thrust among the roots under the bridge. One peculiar fact noted is that the man's hat has not been found, although close search has been made for it in every direction.

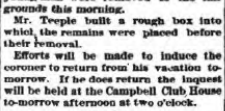
If it is the person referred to by Mr. Bergen, it is probable that he fell into the pond and was drowned, or, disheartened, drowned himself.

Late yesterday afternoon Constable Soper of Metuchen empanelled a jury comprising David L. Dandolph, foreman, Chas. Brower, Percy C. Ohl, John Teeple, Bethine Dunham, Lebbeus Ayres, Chas. Compton, Robert Kyle, Manly Giles, John Munson, James Steers and Cornelius Teeple. The jury viewed the remains after which an adjournment was taken until this a.m. at noon at two o'clock, when a coroner's inquest will be held. No action has as yet been taken toward removing the body which is in an advanced state of decomposition.

LATER—The remains of the unfortunate young man were removed to the fair grounds this morning.

Mr. Teeple built a rough box into which the remains were placed before their removal.

Efforts will be made to induce the coroner to return from his vacation tomorrow. If he does return the inquest will be held at the Campbell Club House to-morrow afternoon at two o'clock.



—Next Monday will be Labor Day.

—The Music Hall will be thrown open to the public next Tuesday evening.

—The City Common Council will meet in regular session one week from to-night.

—The Plainfield Reform Club will hold its regular mid-week meeting next Thursday evening at eight o'clock.

—Golden rod is beginning to come into bloom, which is one of the signs that the warm waves of dog days are nearly over.

—Ruffled grouse, quail and rabbits are reported as being plentiful this year throughout the State. Last Fall's heavy shooting does not appear to have diminished their numbers.

—The public schools of Plainfield will re-open Tuesday, Sept. 8th. The Bryant addition is not yet finished. The fourth grammar classes will all report as usual at the Franklin building.

—Griff Williams' All Star Specialty Company will appear at the Elkwood to-night and every evening this week. This company is advertised as "one of the best in the country."

—The members of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the Warren Mission chapel will hold a meeting in the parlors of the chapel tomorrow evening at eight o'clock.

—The Grocers will go on their annual excursion to Boynton Beach next Monday. There will be a Rhode Island clam bake at the beach at twelve o'clock. The price of tickets have been placed at 50 cents.

—The sixth annual re-union of the Ninth New Jersey Volunteers will be held at Flemington, on Thursday, September 17th. The command will be entertained by the veterans and Ladies' Relief Corps.

—The Holy Cross Choir boys will meet for rehearsal next Thursday afternoon at 4:30. Any new boys wishing to join the choir will be received on Wednesdays at 5 p. m. Full choir meets on Friday evening at 7:30.

—Sherwin advertises a bargain sale to commence to-morrow and to run all through September. He says he has cut the prices on his entire stock of boots and shoes and rubbers, preparatory to getting ready for Fall trade.

—Some of our exchanges are advocating the adoption here of the postal card in use in Canada. The Canadian card consists of two portions, one of which is used for the original message and the other for the reply, and both are carried for a cent.

—The West End crowd seem to have been guilty of the same breach of good manners in Plainfield as that which made their conduct so distasteful to the Westfielders on the occasion of their ball tossing. There is no authoritive management.—Westfield Leader.

—Patrick McMahon of Dunellen visited Plainfield Saturday night and consumed too much "Jersey lightning." Early yesterday morning Policeman Fredrickson found him asleep near the Peace street railroad bridge. He arrested him and this morning City Judge Codington fined McMahon $5.

—The University Magazine for August contains a most excellent paper on college Greek letter fraternities by Chauncey B. Ripley. Full recognition by the Faculties and trustees of American colleges is claimed for these fraternities, and much else is said of interest to college men.—Morning Advertiser.

—The important things in poultry keeping are a supply of pure water, a variety of food, including green food and meat scraps, as well as grains, raw and cooked, comfortable quarters, free from all vermin, plenty of road dust to wallow in, and, in Winter, a room with large window spaces in which to sun themselves. A supply of cracked shells or bone is also essential.

—A decision has just been rendered by a United States District Court Judge, Hammond, of Tennessee, in which he says that not only may the State pass what are ordinarily known as Sunday laws, on moral grounds, but there is no provision in the United States Constitution that forbids a State to legislate as wildly as it pleases upon the subject of religion, or even establish a creed and a church, the prohibition, Judge Hammond contends, being not upon the States but upon the Federal Government. It is all very well to have such a decision, but of what utility or advantage is there in having laws in favor of morality unless they are enforced? Our State's statute books teem with laws in favor of morality, but they are more often treated as obsolete.—New Brunswick Home News.

BASE BALL.

ANOTHER VICTORY FOR PLAINFIELD'S CRACK TEAM.

They Defeated the Westfield Athletic Club Saturday by a score of 9 to 8. An Interesting Contest. Another Over the Peace Hill. Keeler's Fine Work. Other Features of the Game.

The Crescent Base Ball team of this city went to Westfield Saturday afternoon and played the second game of the series with the Westfield Athletic Club's team. A large crowd of Plainfielders accompanied the team to that village and an interesting game of ball was looked for. The crowd was not disappointed neither as the contest was full of interest from the beginning to the end. It resulted in a victory for the Crescents. There had been much talk about the Crescents being easily defeated when they visited Westfield.

When the Plainfield contingent arrived at the place glaring posters met their gaze announcing that the game would be for the championship of New Jersey and that it would be one of the most interesting games of the season. They also stated that the other game had been won by luck and that Saturday's contest would result differently.

Well, it didn't. The Crescents went into the field and the Westfields were retired in one, two, three order. In the Crescents' half of the first inning they succeeded in making one run. Neither side made a run until the third inning when the Crescents added three runs to their credit. In the fourth inning the Westfields made their first run. In the fifth the Crescents made two more runs and one in the sixth and two in the seventh, respectively. The Westfield team scored two runs in the eighth but that is all they made. The score was nine to three. The Plainfield contingent was happy and they showed their appreciation by cheering, throwing their hats in the air and blowing horns. It was like bedlam let loose.

Mcindoe, the Crescent's left fielder, again accomplished the feat of knocking the ball over the fence, bringing in two runs and getting home himself. The applause which greeted him was deafening and it was not until he doffed his cap that the crowd would cease the noise. In fact the noise interrupted the the game for several minutes so that the umpirer's decision as to balls or strikes could not be heard. Keeler, the short stop, is a little wonder. He went to the bat five times and secured five hits, one of them being for two bases. Hamrill, the Crescent's pitcher, pitched an excellent game of ball. In the seventh inning he only pitched four balls before he retired the side. Conover caught him in his usual good style. The Plainfielders succeeded in securing fifteen hits off of the Westfield pitchers for a total of twenty basis.

Before the sixth inning had been concluded the manager of the Westfield team (as Hamrill, the pitcher, out of the box, claiming that the Crescents were hitting too hard. A number of persons present did not approve of this action as they thought he should have been allowed to have finished the inning. Diven was substituted in his stead. The decision of the umpire takes all in all, were considered fair.

The score by innings was as follows:

	1	2	3	4	5	6	7	8	9
Westfields.....	0	0	1	1	0	0	0	0	0	—3
Crescents.....	1	0	3	0	2	1	2	0	*	—9

Base Ball Notes.

A base ball nine picked from the Emerald Beneficial Association and one picked from the members of the Catholic Young Men's association played in a game of base ball Friday afternoon. The game was an exciting one throughout but the young men eventually came out victorious by a score of 24 to 15. During the game a young man named Day from Scotch Plains was struck in the eye by a foul tip and painfully injured.

The Crescents of this city will cross bats with the New York Athletic Club next Saturday afternoon.

The West Ends of Somerville defeated the Alerts of Phillipsburg in a game of base ball Saturday afternoon. The game was played at Somerville.

The Engineer Killed at His Post.

W. H. Seery, an engineer on the Pennsylvania Railroad, was leaning out of the cab window Saturday near Monmouth Junction looking for a hot box. His head was struck by the iron stand pipe at the water tank. He lay in the window unconscious fifteen minutes before he was discovered by his fireman. He died soon afterwards. He leaves a widow and four children in Philadelphia.

How to Send Postage Stamps.

Send postage stamps in a letter by slitting the paper in two slits, a quarter inch apart, and put the stamp in the place thus made for it.

If the weather is damp only oiled paper will prevent stickiness.

Never lick the corner of a stamp and attach it to the paper. It won't come off and it is vulgar to lick what another must relick.

Collided With a Bicycle.

Saturday afternoon Mr. Lewis of Netherwood, while out for a ride in the vicinity of Fanwood, attempted to pass a wagon going in the same direction. As he did so he collided with a tandem bicycle on which was seated a gentleman and lady. Both were thrown to the ground with great force but escaped serious injury. The wheel was damaged.

THE FIRST ELECTRIC LAMP.

Inventor Edison Tells of the Difficulty of Putting it Together.

The following concerning Mr. Thomas Edison, the electrician, who formerly resided on the outskirts of this city will be of interest to Plainfielders:

"Won't you tell me about the first carbon lamp you ever made?" Edison was asked.

"Ah, that is a story. The carbon of the first lamp was made of a spool of Clark's thread. All night Batchellor, my assistant—the greatest and best of my assistants, the man of infinite patience and indefatigable persistence—worked beside me. The next day we worked all day and then all night again, and at the end of that time we had produced one carbon out of a spool of Clark's thread.

Having made it, it was necessary to take it to the glassblower's house. With the utmost precaution Batchellor took up the precious carbon, and I marched after him, as if guarding a mighty treasure to the glassblower's house. To our consternation, just as we reached the glassblower's bench the wretched carbon broke.

BATCHELLOR'S PERPETUAL PHRASE.

"Batchellor turned around and looked at me and said: 'Edison, we won't sleep till we get one.'

At the recollection Edison lay back in his chair and laughed heartily. When he had recovered from the fit he said:

"That was one of Batchellor's perpetual phrases, which he had said to me a hundred times before, and which I had said to him. We finished back to the main laboratory and set to work again.

"It was late in the afternoon before we had produced another perfect carbon. The same procession as in the morning proceeded to the glassblower's door. It was safely deposited on a bench, where Batchelor laid it down, when a jewelers' screwdriver—my little utensil, as you know—rolled down and broke the carbon again.

"But we turned back again, and before night a carbon was completed and inserted in the lamp. The lamp was exhausted of air and the current was turned on and the light that is to be light of the world met our eyes for the first time in all its beauty."

Boys' Club Notes.

The Club rooms will be opened to-morrow evening for the season. All boys, members or not members, are invited to come and enjoy the evenings.

Entertainments will be given three a month, commencing Oct. 1. The programme for each entertainment will be prepared with great care to please the boys.

The Edwards' Zouaves will meet for drill Wednesday evenings beginning Oct. 7.

Following will play on the team: M. Sutphen, Bolsterli, Conway, Sutphen, Sheridan, Van Liew, McGuinley, Doyle and Melvin.

Evening classes will probably begin about Oct. 1. All members will be invited to join.

Several papers have been added to the reading room which was opened in July last.

Injured While Drunk.

John Gray, a wood peddler on a small scale, indulged to freely in intoxicants Saturday night and while driving along Plainfield avenue he fell from the wagon in which he was seated and dislocated his shoulder. A number of boys later on found the man wandering around the streets in that vicinity, but could obtain no trace of Gray. At about one o'clock yesterday morning Policeman Fredrickson heard an unusual noise on the porch of Mr. George W. Brown's residence on West Second street. When he investigated he found Gray lying on the stoop wrapped up in a horse blanket. Not knowing the man was injured he locked him up in the station house over night, but released him. Gray was released yesterday to have his wounds dressed.

Another Bicycle Stolen.

Saturday evening at about eleven o'clock some sneak thief stole an 1891 cushioned tire bicycle from Laing's Hotel. The machine was number 17,779, and belonged to Mr. Wallace V. Miller. Several persons saw a suspicious looking character examining the wheel but thought nothing of the matter at the time. In another column Mr. Miller offers a liberal reward for the return of the wheel.

The Benefit of Advertising.

Mr. Moffitt, the well-known auctioneer, who has been conducting the sale of lots at Netherwood as advertertised in THE NEWS informs us that he has sold 67 lots already. In Tuesday's NEWS he will have a large advertisement informing the public how many lots he has left to sell.

—There was a progressive euchre party at Hotel Netherwood Saturday evening which was enjoyed by a large number of the guests and proved a great success. The game was held in the grand parlor. The prizes were given to Mrs. M. Bonsey, Mrs. H. C. Swain, Miss Richardson; Mrs. J. M. Donald, consolation prize; Mr. Harry Martin, Mr. J. D. Whitney, Mr. J. E. Spencer and Mr. M. O. Ogden, consolation prize. At the close of the game a vote of thanks was tendered to Mr. Harry Martin and Miss Cullen for the exquisite taste displayed by them in the purchase of the beautiful prizes. The summer season at the Netherwood fully ranks with former seasons. A large number of guests are sojourning here and the booking for this month and September is remarkably good. From present indications the Fall season will fully compare with other years. Through a system of steam boilers the hotel is heated throughout whenever it is necessary. A number of enjoyable events is held in abeyance and will be duly published. The Netherwood will remain open until about the 25th of September.

How Miracle Workers Are Made.

Prentice Mulford was a shy, quiet, sensitive man of genius. He was one of the ablest journalists in New York city until he became interested in the philosophy he afterward put before the world in the publications of the White Cross Library. From this time, although still doing occasional newspaper work as ably as ever, his main life task, until his sudden death from apoplexy, was thinking out and writing out his metaphysical doctrines. As this work engaged him he withdrew to himself more and more, and gave himself up to it. Most of all he loved to be alone with nature under the trees or upon the water.

He was a Spiritualist, and believed he held communication with departed ones. But he was in no sense whatever a crank or a long haired prophet. He was a neatly dressed, quiet gentleman, with nothing at all extraordinary in his appearance or manners. He himself would have been the last man to claim that he could work miracles or that he had as yet attained any weird occult power that would enable him to kill by a flash of will, like the child in Bulwer's "Coming Race." Such was Prentice Mulford, as his best friends knew him.

But no sooner was he out of the body than most extravagant fairy tales began to cluster about his memory. Stories that would strain to the cracking point the credulity of the most gullible began to be told. We hear how he would be walking along the street and suddenly turn into somebody else—a withered up old man, a child with a piping voice and of course a big Injun who said "ugh," in bloodcurdling tones. Most tremendous of all, long documents are poured into the newspapers purporting to be dictated by the disembodied spirit of Mr. Mulford.

That these documents, however able, have not a trace of Mulford's style or methods of thought are nothing at all to the point. That the crazy things, such as losing himself and turning into somebody else on the public street and asking his way over pavements his feet trod daily, were never witnessed by those who saw him familiarly and often during the last years of his life is nothing to the point either. Still less is it to the point to say that these extraordinary stories are true, why did not the persons who knew them tell them during his lifetime, instead of waiting till after he was dead?

All the same, the stories grow like a soft snowball rolling down hill. In a little while the sensitive, gifted man, with not a speck of humbug or claptrap about him, will stand before the world as a Blavatsky, a Paracelsus or perhaps one of those old hermits who could raise a thunderstorm or cure a case of measles at will. Very good. Go on. Prentice Mulford will make as good a miracle worker as any of them.

The imperial government of China is in a dilemma of a kind that would not make anybody want to be emperor of a celestial kingdom. If the imperial government redresses the wrongs of the foreigners who suffered at the hands of a Chinese mob, then its subjects threaten to rise in revolution. On the other hand, if China does not give satisfaction for these injuries, then European and American men-of-war loom up on the horizon, ready to batter down all the Chinese cities along the coast and only too glad of the pretext to make a raid inland. Thus China has a first class object lesson on the old saying about being between the devil and the deep sea.

It has been found that epidemics follow one another in waves around the globe from east to west. This is notably true of cholera and the grip. First appearing in Asia, they move successively to Europe and thence to America. A weather observer declares the same is true of wet and dry seasons. The droughts in the northwestern part of the United States have passed off over the Pacific ocean and are reappearing again in Asia. The same authority says there are apt to be in succession three dry seasons and three wet ones. It has been observed that during the prevalence of epidemics the atmosphere is in a negative electric condition.

"We don't want to fight," but if it must come to that it is a satisfaction to know that the young men of our National Guard are ready to become magnificent soldiers. On general principles, if there is no fighting to be done in America ever again the military drill of the National Guard, faithfully kept up, will tend to make our young men erect and graceful in bearing.

The English sparrow becomes more and more a pest throughout the country. Flocks of these birds have seriously interfered with the profits of grain fields in many cases. The Illinois sparrow law, which fixes a bounty of two cents a head on all these birds killed in December, January and February, is recommended to the attention of legislatures generally.

It used to be the speculators that held the wheat back for high prices. This year it will be the farmers.

STATE SECRETS SOLVED

True Story of Austria's Double Suicide.

PRINCE RUDOLPH'S FATAL AFFAIR.

How He and the Young Baroness Marie de Vetsera Loved Not Wisely but Too Well and Then Died Together—The Statement of the Girl's Mother.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—On Jan. 30, 1889, the whole world was startled to learn that the Crown Prince Rudolph, heir apparent to the dual throne of Austria-Hungary, and Baroness Marie Vetsera had been found dead in one of the rooms in his shooting lodge at Mayerling, in the beautiful Wiener Wald. The first news given to the public was to the effect that the prince had succumbed to an attack of apoplexy, but within twenty-four hours all kinds of rumors were abroad. A terrible drama had been enacted in the quiet little sylvan retreat. Too many there were who knew something about it to keep the matter hushed up. But, for state reasons, the truth had to be kept back. The crown prince had either shot the lady who was with him, and then shot himself, or both had together committed suicide. The mysterious affair was said to be one of poisoning, the unfortunate lady being charged with having willfully committed the double deed. But all this was not satisfactory, as several had seen the two corpses covered with blood—the girl lying on the bed and the prince on his knees by the bedside—and both plainly showing the marks of bullet holes.

A Dramatic and Shameful Tragedy.

Many other stories followed, but until the present time the true story of the tragedy has never been told. To set at rest the contradictory stories and make known the truth, which, bad as it was, could not compare with the scandalous stories afloat, the dead girl's family prepared a pamphlet for circulation among its intimate friends. Copies were printed, but the Emperor Francis Joseph of Austria seized and destroyed them because they reflected severely upon his dead son. The dictated statements, written by the Baroness Vetsera's mother, escaped destruction, however, and has just been made public by the London Times. The document was written as a vindication of her daughter's memory and partly, it may be said, of her own reputation, assailed apparently through the efforts of the Austrian royal family. The vindication by the mother of her daughter's memory is in showing the infatuation of a mere child for a man old enough to be her father, needed in accomplishing her ruin—the consequences of the act changing the succession to an imperial throne.

The statements of fact are that the abduction of Marie, who was only seventeen, by the middle aged prince occurred about Jan. 25, and that from then on to this event and the double suicide which followed two days later, she had no suspicion of any intimacy between the prince and Marie.

It Had Long Been in Progress.

It appears, however, that the affair between the married prince and the unmarried young girl had been in progress a long time. The chivalric character and the good looks of the heir apparent had developed in Marie a kind of worship for him before she really met him. She did not conceal her feelings on this point, but she was considered so young that no notice was taken of what her family regarded as a juvenile infatuation. During the summer of 1888 they met frequently at the races, and what had been admiration until then on the part of Marie soon shaped itself into love.

At this time she wrote an intimate friend that she thought the prince had taken a great deal of notice of her, but the following month of the course of her infatuation was interrupted by a trip her family took to England, where they remained for several months. The change of scene had the effect of somewhat subduing Marie's ardor, but on her return her violent passion for him made her blind to the risks she was running, and fatally, irredeemably, she was led to sacrifice on the shrine of love all she possessed—youth, honor, life itself—in exchange for a few moments of bliss in his company. Cunningly concealing her feelings from her family, and being overcome to the prince in public places, races, theaters, etc., she so controlled the incidents of her life that they passed without the slightest apparent importance to her friends.

Their First Meeting.

Inasmuch as Marie and the prince gave no evidence of any considerable personal acquaintance, her actions never laid her open to censure or suspicion until the beginning of January, 1889, when certain steps were taken to bring about the first meeting occurred. The pair had been aided in their stolen love by the Countess Larisch, a near relative of the prince, who acted as a go-between, apparently to get money out of the prince. Toward the end of October, 1888, Marie received a registered letter from the prince. In this letter, as Marie afterward told her friend, the prince admitted a strong desire to meet her.

She Could Not Live Without Him.

The Countess Larish then very speedily arranged an interview between the two at the Sacher. The secret was to be told in a letter addressed by Marie to her intimate friend, and immediately followed by one in which Marie would tell these terms regarding her attachment: "I cannot live without seeing him. I must speak to him. Do not be anxious on my account, my dear Hermine. I know all that you would say to me would be good and just, but I have two good friends, you and the Countess Larish; you work for the salvation of my soul, Larish is leading me to perdition." In a pathetic letter in response to this her friend entreated her not to pursue a course in which would inevitably lead to great trouble. Too late, however, for the Countess Larish had begun her nefarious work, and Marie, overjoyed by the results of her first rendezvous, wrote as follows to her friend:

This letter which you receive from me today, impregnated with joy, for I have been to see my beloved, I will tell you all. Larish took me with her shopping. We went to Adel's and had our photographs taken for him. Then we hid our faces in our muffs and started at a round gallop for the burg. An old servant had been told to meet us at the back door, after wending our way through endless number passages, we at length came to a room door. We tried to push open the door, and a voice from the next room excitedly said: "I beg you, ladies, to come in here. I am this way."

The Tales of Suicide.

We went in and Countess Larish presented me to the prince. Soon we were in deep conversation, and presently the prince remarked: "I have something to say to Countess Larish in private." He and the countess left the room, and how long they were away I had time to take note of my surroundings.

On the bureau was a revolver and a skull. I took the latter in my hands and while examining it the prince entered suddenly and took it from me, smiling as he did so, when I told him I did not know it was real. In taking leave of the prince he in person conducted us through several dark rooms and down several flights of stairs, and on parting remarked to the countess: "Bring her back soon. I beg of you. Promise me that you will not mention this incident to anyone." The reasons, for if either came to know about it I should be obliged to commit suicide.

She Tells of Her Fall.

From the correspondence exchanged between Marie and her friend, there is no doubt that from this moment frequent meetings between the prince and herself took place either between 11 in the morning and 1 in the afternoon, or between 7 and 9 p. m. at the palace. In her letters the prince was her all pervading subject. She wrote that without him she could not live, for he was her god, her all. She sent to her friend a copy of a letter the prince had written her, in which he said he could not live without her, and he would be driven mad if anything occurred to prevent him seeing her.

The second week in January she wrote:

DEAR HERMINE—I must today make a confession which will doubtless make you very angry. I was at his rendezvous yesterday from 7 until 9. We both lost our heads and now we belong to one another body and soul.

She Would Die for Him.

The prince gave her an engagement ring which bore the inscription, "United in love until death." Around her neck he placed a locket, in which the latter found containing a small piece of linen stained with a drop of his own blood. She never took it off and it was buried with her. On another occasion she wrote:

If we could live together in a hut how happy we would be. We are continually talking of this, but I fear it will make us too happy; but this unfortunately cannot be done. If I could die to make him happy I would do it with pleasure, for what is life? If you reveal anything we must both seek refuge in death, after which we will be united forever. Perhaps must not die, he must live for his people. If you, Hermine, write one word to mamma or Hanna, it will ruin the whole affair completely.

The Fortune Teller's Prophecy.

On Jan. 26 Marie visted a fortune teller who told her she would commit suicide. She had a great fear of death at that time. On Jan. 28 Marie gave the Countess Larish the slip and fled with the prince to his hunting seat at Wiener Wold, leaving this note:

I cannot live any longer. I have the start of you today. Before you can reach me I shall lie in the Danube.

Larish then partly confessed to the girl's mother, the police were informed and soon the news of the double suicide was known to all of the world. The emperor immediately took charge of the affair, and the grief stricken mother charges that her daughter's body was treated with the greatest disrespect.

Thirty-eight hours after her soul had taken flight the unfortunate girl was found cold and stiff in a pool of blood, her eyes open, flung on a bed, her head hanging down over its side. At midnight the body was carried, sitting bolt upright and alive, in a carriage to Heligen Kruz cemetery, where it was placed in a common coffin and dumped into the ground. To her sister she died 27 years ago.

We are both full of enthusiasm. We are about to enter the uncertainty of another world. Think of me now and then and be happy. I could not do this, and as I could not resist my love I die with him. Farewell! I will watch over you from above. Adieu for I love you dearly.

It is believed Prince Rudolph had long contemplated suicide. He and his wife Stephanie were not congenial.

An Austrian's Startling Theory.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—A prominent Austrian who was a former member of Emperor Francis Joseph's court says in The World that the Baroness de Vetsera will knew that her daughter was intimate with Prince Rudolph. The writer advances the theory that the dead girl was an illegitimate child of the Emperor Francis Joseph and Mme. de Vetsera, and that Prince Rudolph committed suicide because he learned that he had disgraced his own half sister.

Austria's Empress Reported Insane.

THE WORLD OF POLITICS.

Senor Washburne Says the Northwest Wants James G. Blaine.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—Senator Washburn, of Minnesota, who has just returned from Europe, has expressed himself quite freely in reference to the next presidential campaign. The senator characterizes the recent reports of Secretary Blaine's ill health as a conspiracy to kill Mr. Blaine politically and physically. In reference to Mr. Blaine's candidacy for the presidency in 1892, Mr. Washburne said:

"I don't believe that he is a candidate in the ordinary sense of candidacy. I do believe that he sees as plainly as everybody else sees that the people of this country are going to nominate him and elect him to the presidency in 1892.

"Harrison will not be a candidate before the convention either. He sees the unanimous drift towards Blaine next spring. He will cordially support Blaine. I know that the entire northwest is for Blaine, and has been for years. I want to declare myself strongly for Blaine."

With Sub-Treasury Schemes Out.

PERLEY SPRINGS, Mo., Aug. 31.—The result of the Farmers' Alliance convention is that the Ocala platform is indorsed with the sub-treasury scheme left out. All the officers of the state alliance are pronounced advocates of the third party, sub-treasury and land loan ideas, while the platform is silent on the whole business.

JUDGE SCHOFIELD DEAD.

He Was Register of the Treasury Under Hayes.

WARREN, Pa., Aug. 31.—Judge G. W. Schofield died at 5 a. m. Sunday from heart disease. His health had been failing several months. Judge Schofield was one of the best known citizens of Pennsylvania, and held many positions of honor and trust.

He served two terms as a member of the state legislature; was a member of the Thirty-eighth, Thirty-ninth, Fortieth, Forty-first and Forty-third congresses; was register of the treasury under President Hayes, and was appointed judge of the court of claims by President Garfield, which position he filled until July last. Judge Schofield was born at De Wittville, N. Y., on March 11, 1817. The funeral will be held at 9:30 o'clock next Tuesday.

Want Political Prisoners Released.

DUBLIN, Aug. 31.—An immense amnesty meeting was held Sunday in Phœnix park with the object of obtaining the pardon of Irish prisoners under sentence for alleged dynamiting and other crimes partly of a political character. The meeting resolved that whatever error the prisoners had committed in seeking to achieve the right by wrongful methods had been sufficiently atoned for by their sufferings. It was voted that copies of the resolutions should be sent to Lord Salisbury.

The Bishop Preached at Parnell.

LONDON, Aug. 31.—Mr. Parnell intends to speak next Sunday at Taum, and yesterday the bishop of Taum took occasion to anticipate his utterances and prejudice the people against him by delivering a scathing sermon on the wickedness of adultery. No direct allusion was made to Mr. Parnell and his Sheas case, however, but the congregation understood what was meant. The prospects are that Mr. Parnell will have an enthusiastic reception.

TENNESSEE'S BIG FIGHT

The Scene Changed from Briceville to the Capitol.

CONVICT LABOR LAWS CONSIDERED.

The Miners Are Patiently Waiting the Legislature's Action—If It Is Unfavorable, Which Seems Very Likely to Be the Case, There Will Be More Trouble.

NASHVILLE, Aug. 31.—The extra session of general assembly of Tennessee convened at noon today. The chief business to come before the body is the settling of the questions that have grown out of the recent trouble between the miners and convicts at Briceville, referring to the abolition of the lease system and to the rebuilding and enlarging of the state prison. The lease system, as now operated, yields the state $100,000 per annum, and if it is abolished the tax rate of the state must be increased. There is a strong sentiment among the members of the assembly against a change. The military laws are to be changed so as give the executive more power in emergencies like that at Briceville.

The body will be in session twenty days, but it is not thought the work before it can be attended to in that time. If not, an extraordinary session will be called. A committee representing the miners of the state will be in constant attendance during the session, their object being the abolition of the lease system, as the pardons of such laws as will keep convicts from being subleased to any mining company that will pay for their services.

The Men Are Patiently Waiting.

The present situation at Briceville is peculiar. If the legislature fails to take action there will be another outbreak. The miners are patiently waiting for action, for in the hope that the legislature is going to forbid the convicts going to work. If they become convinced that they are to have no relief from that source they will take the matter in their own hands again. They are determined that the convicts shall go, and threaten to set every convict free if the mines are not vacated by them. Those who best understand the situation believe the present strained condition is but the precursor of a long series of troubles in the mining regions and cannot see the end.

The miners are silent, but they regard the recent increase in the number of convicts as a menace, and they are but keeping the letter of their promise to wait until the legislature has acted.

Legislators Probably Against It.

How the counties will employ the convicts is a question which the counties must settle. The legislature is in no mood for taking any radical steps at present. As for abolishing the lease and losing the $100,000 annual rental, besides adding say $150,000 a year to take care of the unemployed convicts—well, the legislator who does it would not be a candidate for re election in many counties.

Ex-Congressman Scott's Case Hopeless.

ERIE, Pa., Aug. 31.—Ex-Congressman William L. Scott is rapidly sinking. Dr William Pepper, of Philadelphia, has decided that Mr. Scott must be taken to Newport if his life is to be saved. He will be removed this afternoon in the private car of President Newell, of the Lake Shore railroad. For the past two weeks Mr. Scott has been growing steadily worse and seems to have given up all hope of recovery.

BALMACEDA'S RESIDENCE BURNED.

The Crowd Would Have Speedily Killed Chili's Late Ruler if He had Been Found—Nearly $2,000,000 Worth of Property Was Destroyed.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 31.—The following dispatch, dated Valparaiso, Aug. 29, has been received at the navy department from Rear Admiral Brown.

"The insurgents have taken possession of the city of Valparaiso; was taken yesterday morning after a very sanguinary engagement. The insurgents had advantage; good position, artillery and ammunition. Troops disaffected. Infantry and cavalry were not present. Forts not engaged. Forts with guns were not served. Forts not captured. The foreign admirals demand of insurgents in protecting lives and property of foreign subjects. I have 160 men at the consulate. Many refugees on board. Provisional president here.

Ready to Begin Business.

Since Montt, the envoy of the Chilian Congressionalists, received the following telegram this afternoon:

IQUIQUE, Chili, Aug. 30.

Don Pedro Montt, Washington:

The Junta of the Congressional government is ready for Santiago today.

EBANARIE.

Since Montt explained that this meant that the Congressionalists were about to transfer their headquarters to the capital instead of remaining at Iquique. The triumph of the insurgents is complete.

Santiago Sacked by a Mob.

NEW YORK, Aug. 31.—The Herald's Valparaiso cable says: The Chamaral regiments of the Congressional army took formal possession of Santiago Sunday night, and practically the last act in the bloody drama of revolution which has torn Chili to pieces for the past seven months is closed. The capital city was in the hands of a bloodthirsty mob, and while it was unable to satisfy its murderous instincts, it did destroy a vast amount of property.

As soon as the news reached Santiago of the overwhelming defeat of the government troops, the people knew that Balmaceda's power was gone, and they had nothing to fear from his wrath, their enmity to his government broke forth.

They Wanted to Kill Balmaceda.

The cry was raised that the president should be killed, and a mob started for his house. It grew in numbers and fury and by the time it reached the executive mansion was ripe for any bloody deed. Short shrift would have been allowed to the president had he been caught.

Soon Balmaceda's house was a mass of flames. Before it had been destroyed the mob marched off to the house of Senor Godoy, the ex-minister of the interior, and set it on fire. Then the residences of Balmaceda's mother; General Barbosa, who was killed at the battle of Placilla; Senors McKenna and Eastman, the government newspaper offices and the houses of seven prominent officials were burned to the ground. The city was panic stricken. The police, the fire department and the army was demoralized and made not the semblance of an attempt to maintain order.

Balmaceda Will Get Away.

In addition to the destruction by a mob the city is threatened by an irruption of all the desperate characters, robbers and outlaws in the surrounding country. General Baquedano has posted the imperial regiment in a cordon about the city to prevent robbers and other dangerous people from coming into the capital. He is doing everything in his power to prevent disorder, but his task is almost hopeless.

There are all sorts of rumors about the movements of Balmaceda. He is said to have it on good authority that he went by a special train to Talcahuano, on Concepcion bay, and that there he will make connection with the Condell and Imeplain and in one of those vessels, probably the former, make for Buenos Ayres or Montevideo. If this is so he will in all probability escape.

Rioters Shot Out of Hand.

Comparative order has at last been restored in this city. It took drastic measures to do it. Rioters who were caught in the work were summarily dealt with and many of them were shot out of hand.

These prompt measures have cooled the ardor of the law breakers at last, but rioting was not stopped until property estimated to be worth $1,800,000 had been destroyed. Admiral Brown has had a long consultation with the leaders of the Junta and his explanations have had the effect of putting an end to the irritation against the Americans. The Junta are exceedingly anxious to secure recognition from the United States government, and are now hopeful that it will be accorded them.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have been repairing my lawn mowers for a number of years past. What returned they cost as good as when new. WM. MARSH, Head gardener for J. T. Clarke.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have sharpened and repaired our lawn mowers to our entire satisfaction. W. MORLAND, Head gardener for J. T. Johnson.

My experience has shown that Messrs. Carney Bros. have no superiors in sharpening and repairing lawn mowers.
ERNEST LOUIS CONRAD,
Head gardener for ex-Mayor Cooley.

There is no need to send your mower to any factory while Carney Bro., do the repairing. They understand the mower.
HENRY GIBB, Landscape gardener.

Messrs. Carney Bros. have for several years repaired and sharpened my mowers always to my entire satisfaction.
FREDERICK CLARK, Landscape gardener

They made as good a job of our mower as any one could wish. PATRICK KELLEY, Head gardener for Mr. Lawrence Myers.

The above are but a few of the pleasant words we get for our efforts to please our friends who have entrusted their mowers to our care, and it shall be our endeavor to send each and every mower home as near right and perfect as can be. Believing We can satisfy the most particular owner of a lawn, as for as sharpening and repairing goes, we remain the public's obedient servants,

CAPE MAY WHITE HOUSE.

THE OFFICIAL RESIDENCE OF THE PRESIDENT BY THE SEA.

The Plain Brown Cottage in Which His Official Duties are Transacted—Secretary Wanamaker's Cottage—The President's Household.

CAPE MAY LIGHT.

THE PRESIDENT has removed his official residence to his brown cottage at Cape May. So the White House is now a brown one.

You must drive two miles along the beach road to the southward before you reach the Brown House of government—a small and insignificant affair to have caused so much comment and criticism. The Brown House is plain to a degree, but sufficiently cool and comfortable for a plain man. An electric bell on the porch summons the steward of the chambers, a shrewd looking little Irishman who is also butler, steward, gardener and general factotum. He sees you up before you are even produced your card. One day he will invite you in while you await permission for an audience, another he will leave you standing without; but whether you get in or not he will always allow you a glimpse of the interior of the seat of government. Through the screen door you see the unexpected hall running through the centre of the house. To the left is a long, narrow parlor; to call it drawing room would be base flattery. There are no curtains in the windows, nor a sign of a book, a magazine, a picture or an ornament of any description. There is a marble topped table, a dozen straw chairs, a matting on the floor and the walls are finished in rough white plaster. This is the official audience chamber. To the right of the door is the President's small private office, furnished with a desk, a table and three or four chairs. This is the Cabinet room. The dining room is back of this, with eight chairs around a table and a small sideboard ornamented with *Cuspi*dor.

PRESIDENT HARRISON'S COTTAGE.

Besides the President and Mrs. Harrison the official household is composed of the famous baby McKee and Miss Mary Lodge McKee, the President's grandchildren; Mrs. Dimmick, the widowed niece of Mrs. Harrison, and Lieutenant and Mrs. Parker, the latter a sister of Mrs. Dimmick.

The President's cottage is perhaps too far from the hotels to suit the Chief Magistrate is too much immersed in affairs of State to care what the fate of Cape May may be so long as he gets the rest and recreation he has justly earned.

The President looks much better than at any time since his election. The wanderlust which has been so noticeable since the prolonged session of Congress has almost entirely disappeared and a tolerably healthy tan reigns in its stead. The President's summer outfit could not become him a moment's thought nor the tailor's bill a dollar's. His favorite costume consists of a pepper and salt suit, the double breasted coat long and elerical in cut, a white linen shirt and a black slouch hat, not of the G. A. R. pattern, but a regular squash.

But it is in his bathing suit, bare legged, armed and headed, that Mr. Harrison shows his improvement in physique to the best advantage, with his back turned to an approaching surfer, the President presents a power of obstruction which might well be the envy of an opposition in any Congress.

Mr. Wanamaker's cottage, more pretentious, better furnished and equipped than the President's, is about a quarter of a mile further down the ocean drive.

But any sketch of the executive force of this summer public service would be incomplete, indeed, without mention of Miss Saeger, the President's official stenographer, and, in the lamented absence of "Elgo" Halford, the President's official mouthpiece to the press.

One naturally supposes that those people employed all their lives in transcribing the thoughts and transacting the business of others have more confidence or shrewdways through which affairs of grave import may sweep without leaving a trace or sediment of curiosity.

It is quite the contrary with Miss Saeger. Her trim, compact little person is rather a storehouse crammed full of useful information which she has acquired and assimilated in her capacity of amanuensis. There is no department of the government, no public question, no political moves which she is not thoroughly familiar. She is as able to impart proper information as she is diplomatic in avoiding too pointed questions. Her big brown eyes suggest anything but the automaton, and if her head is bursting with State secrets they don't rumple her pretty brown hair a bit.

MR. WANAMAKER'S COTTAGE.

This young lady is, of course, a mark of special favor from the corps of special correspondents who infest the neighborhood of the President's cottage. They are pretty slick, some of them, but they have never so wisely not one of them has yet succeeded in getting Miss Saeger to take a friendly stroll on the board walk or to depart an inch from the dignity of official communication.

And, oh! goodness, how that woman could talk if she wanted to!

In the interior of South America chocolate, cocoa-nuts, and eggs are used as currency.

DON'T DO IT.

Remember she who tells tales of other women will presently tell tales of you, and supply as little material as possible.

Never forget that a betrayed confidence is a two-edged sword cutting both ways, wounding the heart of one, slaying the honor of the other.

Do not feel there is no obligation where no promise of silence has been exacted. An implied confidence is over the most binding to the upright soul.

Don't receive a confidence unless you know your heart is deep enough, your mind broad enough and your brain sufficiently steady to keep it honestly.

Don't confide in any one if you can help it. If you can't, speak to someone whose honor you have proved to be above peddling stories of her friends to enliven her conversation.

Don't be scrupulous about accepting the charge of your friend's diamond's or her purse, while hesitating not to drop hints of her inner life, stories of her private history, which were meant for your ear only, all along your conversation with men and women. Perhaps you think by this means to lessen their regard for her; but don't forget that you are cheapening yourself at the same time.

SOUTHERN CURIOS.

At Albion, Ela., there are 600 colored laborers working in the phosphate mines.

An immense deposit of yellow ochre has been unearthed near Gainesville, Fla., on the property of Dr. T. F. Thomas.

Cordele, Ga., has a two-legged billy goat that walks upright like a human, sits down like a dog, is very intelligent and a great pet among the children.

Teh thousand barrels of potatoes and 8,000 boxes of beans were shipped from Newberne, N. C., one day recently, and every carrying company was taxed to its utmost capacity.

W. G. M. Thomas, son of a prominent lawyer at Shelbyville, Ind., listened to an amusing story told him by a friend and then laughed so hard that he actually broke one of his ribs.

"Rhett Goode," one of the oldest hands in the service of the Fire Department at Mobile, died recently of lung fever. "Rhett Goode" was nineteen years old and had been in the service of the department twelve years.

The Savannah News, says Mrs. Hodgins of Milton County killed a snake in her yard that had just run off a setting hen and appropriated fifteen eggs. The snake was so gorged that locomotion was difficult, so he was easily dispatched. The reptile measured 4 feet 4 inches from tip to tip.

Andrew Jenkins (colored), of Parkville, Ga., captured a live rattlesnake the other day. The snake was about five feet long, and was just finishing the job of swallowing a full grown squirrel when captured. He was kept some days and viewed by several as a curiosity, but they neglected to feed him and finally it committed suicide by biting itself.

WE STRUCK A BARGAIN.

And we are going to give YOU the benefit of it. We bought 240 pair of Ladies' Hand Turned Kid Shoes, in all sizes and widths, from AA to D, that were made to sell at $4.00, and every one shoe at that price. We also bought 180 pair of Ladies' Hand sewed Oxford Ties that were made to sell at $3.00. We will put the shoes on sale to-day at $2.75, the Oxford Ties at $2.25.

The above goods were made for Dorsey & Co., of Springfield, Ohio, and through some misunderstanding they didn't take them, and as we deal quite largely with this House they wrote us what we could have the whole lot for, and we jumped at the chance, and when you see the shoes you will do the same. A FAMILY SKELETON

UNDER THE DE PEYSTER'S ROOF FOR THIRTY-FIVE YEARS.

Gen. De Peyster's Aged Wife Charges Him With Great Cruelty, After Fifty Years of Married Life the Explosive Cause.

A De Peyster in the divorce court! The traditions of the Delanceys, the Livingstons, the Schuylers, and indeed of all the memorable names in the history of social and political New York, cluster about the honored name now stained for the first time. For two centuries the De Peyster and Livingston families have prided themselves upon an untarnished escutcheon.

Mrs. Estelle Livingston De Peyster has summoned her husband, Gen. John Watts De Peyster, to appear in the divorce court of Dutchess County and defend himself against her suit for a separation. For fifty years they have lived together and now, when each has more gray than dark hair, and when the great majority of their children are in the grave, they have decided that life is unendurable under the same roof. In her action for separation, Mrs. De Peyster has summarily alleged cruel and inhuman treatment. Her complaint has not yet been drawn and no specific allegations have yet been made. The lawyers say that there is no doubt that their client has determined to obtain a separation from her husband, and they assert that there is no likelihood that any compromise will be affected.

General De Peyster's cruelty is alleged to have extended over a period of the last thirty-five years, and, besides having treated his wife in a tyrannical and dictatorial manner, he is also said to have called her ev-rything but an angel. One of his pet ways of referring to her, says Mr. Hackett, was:—"You gray headed old fool." What such treatment as this meant to her, who had been Estelle Livingston, the petted daughter of one of New York's oldest, proudest families, could be better imagined than described.

Mrs. De Peyster has borne with her husband for years and put up with his chauvinistic disposition for the sake of her daughter Lily, who married Lieut. Toler, of New York. Lily Toler, by the way, was the apple of the old General's eye, and had more influence with him than any one else alive. A year ago last winter both Mrs. Toler and her husband were attacked by the grip and died within a few weeks of each other.

A resident of Tivoli says that Gen. De Peyster has a dog cemetery, where he buries his dogs and erects tombstones over them with inscriptions on the stones.

Gen. De Peyster's attention was called to the published reports, he absolutely refused to say a word on the subject. Later he sent a line to the reporters which read: "Don't care a sou, now the lies have gone forth. What may be added is of no moment, for the past cannot be recalled."

Gen. De Peyster is said to be worth between two and three millions, but Mrs. De Peyster owns the house in which she now resides. It is thought that the case will be ready for trial in October.

John Watts De Peyster, LL. D., brevet major general, N. G. S. N. Y., son of the late Frederick De Peyster, was born on March 9, 1821, in the First ward of New York. On both sides he is descended from several of the leading colonial families who were distinguished in the work of di-

GEN. JOHN WATTS DE PEYSTER.

veloping the Dutch and English province of New York into the "Empire State."

Three of his ancestors—De Peyster, De Lancey and Caldwallader Colden—were prominent as Lieutenant Governors or acting Governors in the administration of the affairs of the Province, the first named as early as 1700. His great grandfather, John Watts, Sr., was to have succeeded Governor Tryon. Another relative, John Hamilton, succeeded Morris, in 1756, in the government of the province of New Jersey. His maternal grandfather, John Watts, Jr., the last Royal Recorder of the city of New York, after the Revolution a member of Congress, and later in life a Speaker of the State Assembly.

The General's early education was received at the Lafayette Institute. Heatterward entered Columbia College, from which institution he received the degree of Master of Arts. At an early age he joined the State militia, and in 1846 attained the rank as colonel. In 1851 he was appointed Brigadier General by Governor Washington Hunt, and was the first officer in New York thus raised to that rank, which heretofore had been elective.

He was prevented by ill health from taking the field during the outbreak of hostilities with the seceding States in 1861, but he was constantly active with tongue and pen in upholding the Union cause.

His writings on military subjects during this momentuous epoch attracted widespread attention, and President Lincoln at one time contemplated calling him to Washington as chief of his personal staff. In consideration of "meritorious service tendered to the United States during the Rebellion," he was created a Brevet Major General of the National Guard, S. N. Y., by a special act of the State Legislature.

In 1867 he began the publication of "Decisive Conflicts of the Last Great Civil War." He is also the author of a work on "Practical Strategy," and of one on "Secession of Switzerland and the United States compared." In 1869 he issued his "Personal and Military History of Major General Philip Kearny." In 1872 appeared "La Royale; or, the Grand Hunt of the Army of the Potomac."

His works on historical subjects have won him honorary and corresponding membership in some twenty or thirty historical and literary societies, both European and American. He has donated largely in books to prominent literary institutions, particularly to the New York Society library. He is prominently connected with a number of the principal religious, philanthropic and scientific associations, and is a member of several local clubs.

He was married in 1841, to Miss Estelle Livingston, whose father, John Swift Livingston, was a scion in the second generation of the historic family, of that name.

Jewel Embroidery.

The employment of imitation stones in connection with embroidery and their use upon fancy knick-knacks is very popular among skillful workers in decorative arts, as they impart to such articles a sparkling effect which is very good if carefully managed so as to glisten out unexpectedly and in unlooked for places. The jewels are in a great variety of tints, and represent topaze, both pink and yellow, emeralds, rubies, sapphires, diamonds, opals and aqua marines. Two holes are ready pierced in each gem, by which it is sewed on. A very fine needle should be used for this purpose, but so tiny are the holes that it is often necessary to pass the silk through them without any needle at all. The stitches which hold down the gems should be as invisible as possible, and for this reason it is advisable to choose fine sewing silk which matches the color of the stone as nearly as can be.

A mistake readily made is the mixing of half a dozen colors and kinds of stones upon the same piece of embroidery. As a general rule, the result is better when only two sorts, or at most three, are employed, and the uncut gems should not be used indiscriminately with the cut jewels. The former are generally considered more suited to linen, satteen and oatmeal cloth, the latter being better adapted to use upon plush, silk, satin or velvet.

JEWELED WORKBAG.

The purse shaped workbag, illustrated, is a good example of this way of using gems. One end is drawn up tightly and finished with a pair of large silk tassels, the other is left straight and ornamented with a row of tiny fancy tassels of various colors. The bag itself is of rich crimson velvet, lined with cream colored silk and closed with two large ivory rings; the straight end is decorated with four rows of jeweled stars; at the bottom the jewels are of two shapes, oval and round; they are like pale aqua marines in color, and are arranged somewhat irregularly, but with three in the center of the star, the first and third rows are alike, and in these the rays of the star are formed by eight long stitches of yellowish cream chenille, radiating from a yellow topaz; the second row is similar, but the chenille is pale blue instead of yellow; the stars in each row alternate with those in the preceding row.
